the Prophete, he toke courage & put awaye the abhominations oute of al the lande of Juda and Ben Jamin, & out of the cyties whych he wanne in mounte Ephraim, & renewed the aulter of the Lorde that was before the porche of the Lord. And he gathered al Juda & Ben Jamin, and the straun gers with them out of Ephraim, Manasseh & Simeon. For ther fel many to hym out of Israel, whē they sawe that god was wyth hym. And they assembled at Jerusa C lem the thyrde moneth of the fyftene yeare of the raygne of Asa. And they offred vnto the Lorde that same tyme of the spoyle whych they had brought, vii. hūdred oxen and. vii. thousand shepe.

And they made a couenaunt to seke the Lord God of theyr fathers, wyth all theyr hertes and all theyr soules: so that all that sought not the Lorde God of Israel, shul be dye for it, whether he were smal or great man or woman. And they a sware vnto ye Lorde wyth a loude voyce and showtinge and wyth troumpettes and hornes. And all D Juda reioysed in thee othe, for they hadde sworne wyth all theyr hartes, and sought hym wyth al theyr luste, and he was foūd of them. And the Lorde gaue them reste rounde aboute.

And therto kynge Asa putte Maacah hys mother oute of auctorite, because she had made an ydole in a groue: and brake downe her ydole & stampte it & burnt it by the broke Cedrō. But they put not the hyl aulters oute of Israell: neuerthelesse ther herte of Asa was pure al hys lyfe. And he brought into the house of God the dedicat gyftes which he & his father had dedicate in gould, syluer and other Jewelles. And there was nomore warre vnto thee. xxxv. yeare of the raygne of Asa.

The Notes

a ¶ To sweare vnto the Lorde, is to bende thy self wholly to hym wyth a pure herte: which thyng true worshyppers do, as is sayde of Dauid. Psa. cxxxiii.
But to sweare by ther Lorde, is to call on the name of the Lorde as a wytnesse and Judge, as it is sayd ¶ Asa, for feare of Baasa king of Israel maketh a couenaunt wyth Benhadad king of Siria.

The. xvi. Chapter.

In the. xxxvi. yere of the rayg ne of Asa, came Baasa kinge A of Israel agaynst Juda and buylt Ramah, to the entent ye he wolde let none that pertay ned to Asa king of Juda, haue passage in and out. Wher vpon Asa set out syluer & gould out of the treasures of the house of the Lorde and of the kinges house, & sent it to Benhadad king of Siria, that dwelt at Damasco, and sayde. There is a confe deration betwene me and the, & so was be-twene my father and thyne, wherfore I ha ue sent the syluer and gould, that thou go and breake thyne apoyntmēt with Baasa king

B kinge of Israell, y he may depart frō me.
And Behadad graūted vnto king Asa, & sent the captaynes of his armie agaynst y cyties of Israel. And they bet Aion, Dan, Abelmaim & al the store cities of Nephtha li. And whē Baasa heard that, he left buil ding of Ramah & let his worke cease. And then Asa the kyng toke all Juda & caryed awaye y stones & tymber of Ramah wher wyth Baasa was a buyldyng: & he buylte therwyth Gabaa and Mazphah.
C At that same tyme Hanani y sear, came to Asa king of Juda & said to him: becau se y trustest in y king of Siria, & trustest not in the Lord thy god, therfore is y hoste of the king of Siria escaped out of thine hand. Were not the blacke mores & they of Libia a great hoste with excedyng manye charettes and horsemen? And yet because thou trustedest in the Lorde, he delyuered thē into thyne hādes. For y eyes of y Lord behold al the erth, to strength the hertes of thē that ar hole wyth him. Herin thou hast done folyshly, & therfore from henceforth y shalt haue warre. Wherupon Asa was D wroth wt the sear & put him in the conuer ting house, for he was displesed wyth hym because of that. Moreouer Asa oppressed certayne of the people the same ceason.
The dedes of Asa both fyrst & last, are writē in the boke of the kinges of Juda and Israel. And the. xxxix. yere of his raig ne Asa fel sicke of his fete, & that his disea se encreased. And therto in hys sicknesse he asked no councel of the Lord, but of Phi sycions. And at the last Asa fel on slepe wt hys fathers and dyed when he had rayg ned. xli. yeare. And they buryed hym in his owne sepulchre whiche he had made in the cytie of Dauid, and layed hym in the bed whych he had fylled wyth the swete odoures of diuerse kindes, made by the craft of the potticaryes. And they dyd excedyng greate coste aboute buriynge of hym.

¶ Josaphat succedeth after Asa, whyche causeth the feare of the Lord to be renued amōg the people.

The. xvii. Chapter.

A And Jehosaphat his sōne rai gned in his stede, & was mygh tier thē Israell. And he putte souldioures in al the stronge cities of Juda, & sette rulers both in the land of Juda, & also in the cy ties of Ephraim which Asa his father had wonne. And the Lorde was with Jehosa phat, because he walked in the olde wayes of his father Dauid, & sought not Baals But sought the Lord god of hys father & walked in his commaundementes & not af ter the doynges of Israell. Therfore the Lord stablished the kingdō in his hand, & al Juda brought him presentes, that he be B came excedyng riche & gloriouse. And his herte was corageous in thee wayes of the Lord, & he put downe yet more of the hyl aulters and groues out of Juda.
And the thyrde yeare of hys raygne he sent of his Lordes: Benhail, Abdiah, Za chariah, Nathanael & Michaah to teache in the cities of Juda: & with thē Semeiah Nathaniah, Zabadiah, Asahel, Semira moth, Jehonathan, Adoniah, Thobiah & Thobodoniah Leuites: & wyth them Eli sama & Jozam Priestes. And they taught in Juda, & had the boke of the lawe wyth thē, & wēt about thorowoute al the cytyes of Juda and taught the people.
C And the feare of the Lord fel vpō al the kingdōs of landes that were roūde about Juda, that thei durst not warre with Jeho saphat. And y Philistines brought Jeho saphat giftes & tribute siluer. And therto the Arabiens brought him of shepe, seuen thousand & vii. C. rāmes, & seuē thousand and. vii. C. he gootes. And so Jehosaphat prospered & grue vp on hye. And he buylte in Juda, castels & store cyties. And he had great substāce in y cities of Juda, & figh tinge men & men of myghte in Jerusalem.
D And thys is thee ordre in the houses of theyr fathers, of the captaynes ouer thou sandes in Juda: Ednah the captayne and with him of fightinge men. iii. hūdred thou sand. And next to him Jehohanan a capi tayne and with him. ii. hūdred & lxxx. thou sand. And by his syde Amasiah the sonne of Zechri willinge vnto the Lord, & with him. ii. hūdred thousand mightie men. And of the children of BēJamin, Eliada was a man of myght, and had with him armed with bowes and shildes. ii. hundred thou sande. And by hys syde Jehosabad wyth whō were an hundred and lxxx. M. arym med for warre. These wayted on the king besydes those which the kyng had putt in stronge cyties thorowout al Juda.

And Jehosaphat became very A rych and gloriouse, & ioyned iii. Re. xxii. a affinite wyth Ahab. And after certayne yeares he wente downe to Ahab to Samaria And Ahab slue shepe & oxē plenteously for hym & for the people that came wyth him, and entreated him to go up unto Ramoth in Galaad. And Ahab kynge of Israell sayd to Jehosaphat kyng of Juda: wylte thou go wyth me to Ramoth in Galaad?
And he answered hym, I wylbe as thou, and my people shalbe as thine and we wil be with the in the warre.
But Jehosaphat sayd unto the king of Israell: aske I praye the, the worde of the B Lord. And the kinge of Israel geathered together of the Prophetes foure hundred mē, & said unto thē: shal we go to Ramoth in Galaad to fyghte, or shal I cease? And they sayd, go: the Lord shal deliuer it into the kinges hāde. And Jehosaphat sayd, is ther yet here neuer a Prophete more of the Lordes, that we mighte aske of hym? And the kyng of Israell sayde to Jehosaphat, there is yet one, to aske the Lord by hym:
But I hate hym, for he neuer prophesieth me good, but alwaye euel, one Micheah ẏ sonne of Jemla. And Jehosaphat said: let let not the kyng saye so.
Then the kinge of Israel called one of hys chābrelaynes & sayd: fetch hether quic kely Micheah the sōne of Jemla. And the kinge of Israell & Jehosaphat kynge of Juda sate ether of thē on his seate in their C apparell, in a threshinge flowre beside the gate of Samaria, & al the Prophetes pro phesienge before thē. And one Zedekiah the sonne of Chanaanah made him hornes of yron and sayde, thus sayeth the Lorde: wyth these thou shalt wynowe Siria un-tyll thou hast brought thē to nought. And all the Prophetes prophesyed euen so sayinge: Go up to Ramoth in Galaad & pros pere, for the Lord shall delyuer it into the hande of the kynge.
And the messenger that wēt to cal Micheah, spake to him saying: behold, ẏ wor-des of the Prophetes are pleasaunt to the kynge wyth one assent, lette thy wordes I praye the, be lyke one of theyrs, & speake ẏ which is pleasaunt. And Micheah sayde: as truly as the Lord lyueth, euē what my God sayth, that wyl I speake. And whē he was come to the kynge, the kinge sayde to him: Micheah, shal we goo to Ramoth in Galaad to fyght, or shal I be in rest? And he answered: ye go ye & prosper, for ẏ Lord shal deliuer it into youre handes. But the king sayd to him: how often tymes shal I D adiure ẏ that thou saye nothing but truth to me, in the name of the Lorde.
Thē he sayd: I se al Israel skatered in ẏ moūtaines, as shepe ẏ haue no shepard:
And the Lord sayd: these haue no mayster lett thē returne euery man to hys house in peace. Thē sayd the king of Israel to Je-hosaphat, did I not tel the, that he woulde not prophecye good unto me, but euel?
And he answered: therfore heare ye the word of the Lord. I saw the Lord syt upō his seat, & all the cōpanye of heauen standing on his ryght hand & on his left. And the lord sayd: who shal deceaue Ahab kyn ge of Israel, that he may go & be ouerthro E wē at Ramoth in Galaad. And whyle one sayd thus & another that, there came out a spirite & stode before the Lord & sayde: I wyl deceaue him. And ẏ Lord said to him, how? And he said: I will go out & wylbe a lyinge spirite in the mouthes of al his pro phetes. And the Lord sayd, ẏ shalt deceaue him & shalt preuayle, go out & do euē so And now behold ẏ Lord hath put a lying spirite in the mouthes of all these thy prophetes, & yet ẏ lord hath spokē euel agaīst the. And Zedekiah ẏ sōne of Chanaanah, F wēt to & smote Micheah upō the cheke, & sayd: by what way wēt ẏ spirit of the lord frō me, to speake in ẏ? And Micheah sayd thou shalt se the day whē ẏ shalt rūne frō chābre to chābre, for to hyd thy self. Then sayd the king of Israel, take ye Micheah & deliuer hym to Amō the gouernour of citie, & to Joas the kinges sōne & say, thus sayth the king: put this felow in prison, fede him with bread & water of tribulaciō untyl I come agayne in peace. And Micheah sayd: yf thou come agayne in peace, thē hath not ẏ Lord spokē in me. And Micheah said moreouer, hearkē to ye people e-uery one of you. And so ẏ king of Israel & Jehosaphat the king of Juda wēt up to Ramoth

to Ramoth in Galaad. Thē sayd the king of Israel to Iehosaphat: chaūge the & get the to battel, but se ẏ thou haue thine owne G apparel vpon the. And the king of Israel chaūged him self, & thei wēt to battel. But the kinge of Siria cōmaunded the captaynes of hys charettes sayinge: se that ye fyght not agaynst small or great, saue a-gaynst the kyng of Israel onely.

And whē the captaynes of the charettes saw Iehosaphat, they had wēt he had ben ẏ king of Israel, & therfore cōpased about him, to fight. But Iehosaphat cryed out, & the Lord holpe him, & God tysed them a way frō him. For whē the captaynes of ẏ charettes perceaued ẏ it was not the king of Israel, they turned backe agayne from him. And a certē mā drew hys bowe ignorauntly & smote the king of Israel betwene the ioyntes of his habergyne. And he said to the charet mā, turne thine hand & carye me out of the hoste, for I am hurt. And the battel arose that day. Howbeit the king of Israel cōtinued standing in hys charet a-gaynst the Siriens vntyl euē. And about the sunne goinge downe he dyed.

a3 Thys speaketh the Prophete by an Ironye, that is, in derision or mockage: and therby taunteth all were the false Prophetes whych hadde falsely prophecyed vnto that kynge, as ye se here and iii. Regum. xxii. c.

¶ After Iehosaphat was rebuked by the prophete Iehu, he called agayne the people to the honorynge of the Lorde God.

The. xix. Chapter.

And Iehosaphat king of Iu-A da returned to his house safe & sound to Ierusalē. And Iehu the sōne of Hanani ẏ sear wēt out agaynst him & sayde to king Iehosaphat: oughtest thou to help the wicked, & to loue thē that hate the Lord In this verely is the wrath of ẏ Lord vpō the. Neuerthelater there are good thinges found in the, in ẏ thou hast put away gro ues out of the land, & hast prepared thyne B hert to seke god. And as Iehosaphat dwel te at Ierusalē, he wēt to agayne & went amōge the people frō Bersabe to mouūt Ephraim, & brought thē agayne vnto ẏ lord God of theyr fathers. And he sett iudges in the land, thorowout al the strōge cyties of Iuda, citie by citie, & said to the iudges C take hede what ye do for ye be not iudges in the kinges stid, but of god, which is with you in the wordes of the lawe. Wherfore let the feare of the Lord be with you, & take hede & do it. For there is no vnrightwis- C nesse in the Lord our God, nor regarding ☞ of persones, nor taking of rewardes. Roma. ii. b. Actuū. x. e. Ephe. vi. b. Colos. iii. d.

Moreouer in Ierusalē did Iehosaphat set of the Leuites & of the priestes & of the aūciēt heades of Israel, ouer the customes of the lord & causes of strife. And thē they returned agayne to Ierusalē. And he char ged thē saying: do euē so in the feare of the lord wt truth & pure hert. And whatsoeuer D come to you of your brethrē ẏ dwel in their cities, betwene bloud & bloud, law, cōmaū demēt, ordinaūces & customes: se ẏ ye war ne thē, ẏ they trespace not against the lord lest wrath come vpon you & on youre brethrē. Thus do & ye shal not offend. And se here Amariah the preste which is head ouer you in al matters of the Lord, & Zaba diah the sōne of Ismael a ruler in ẏ house of Iuda, he is ouer al causes concernynge the kyng, wyth officers of the Leuites before you. Take courage to you & go vpon it, and the Lord shalbe wyth the good.

¶ The meruelouse victorye ẏ the Lord gaue Iehosaphat kinge of Iuda agaynste the Moabites, & the chyldren of Ammon, and them of Seir.

The. xx. Chapter.

After that came the childrē of Moab & the chyldren of Am A mō & wt them of the Ammo-nites agaynst Iehosaphat to battel. And ther came ẏ toldē Iehosaphat sayinge: ther cometh a greate multitude against the frō the other syde ẏ see out of Siria. And se they be in Hasasō Thamar which is Engadi. And Iehosa-phat feared & set him self to seke the lord, & proclaymed fasting thorowout al Iuda And Iuda gathered thē selues together for to aske coūcel of the Lord. And therto ther came oute of al the cyties of Iuda to seke the lord. And Iehosaphat stode in the cōgregatiō of Iuda & Ierusalē in ẏ house of the Lord before the new court & sayde: Lord god of our fathers, art not ẏ god in B heauen, & raygnest not ẏ on al ẏ kingdōs of the hethen? And in thine hand is power & might, ẏ no mā cā stand before ẏ. Art not thou our god which didest cast out the en-habiters of this lād before thy people Israel, & gauest it to the sede of Abrahā thy louer for euer. And they dwelt therin & habuylt þ a tẽple therin vnto thi name, & sayd whẽ euel cometh vpõ vs, as the swerde of iudgemẽt, pestilẽce or hõgre: thẽ yf we stãd before this house & before þ (for thy name is in this house) & shal crye vnto the in our tribulation, thou shalt heare and helpe.

And now beholde, the childrẽ of Ammõ & Moab & mou͂te Seir, by which thou wol-dest not let Israel go: whẽ thei came out of C Egipt: but thei departed frõ thẽ & destroy ed thẽ not. And se, how they reward vs, to come for to caste vs oute of thy possessiõ which þ hast possessed vs withall. O oure god, wilt thou not iudge thẽ? for we haue no might agaynst this great cõpanye that cometh agaynst vs. Nether wot we what to do: but our eyes be vnto the.
And as al Iuda stode before the lord wt their yoũge ones, their wyues & their chyldrẽ: the spirite of the lord came vpõ Iahasiel the sonne of Zachariah þ sonne of Ba naiah þ sonne of Ieiel the sõne of Matha niah a Leuite of þ sõnes of Asaph, euẽ as he was in þ myddes of þ cõgregatiõ. And he sayd, herkẽ al Iuda & the enhabiters of Ierusalẽ, & also king Iehosaphat. Thus sayth the Lorde vnto you be not afrayde or faynt herted by reason of this great multi tude. For þ warre is not youres, but gods D And to morowe ye shal go downe to thẽ: se they come vp at Ziz, & ye shall mete thẽ in the flagges of þ broke before þ wildernes of Ieruel. Morouer it belongeth not to you for to fight i this quarel: but step for-the & stand & behold þ help of þ lord which is wt you: feare not, nor let youre hertz faile you, O ye of Iuda & of Ierusalẽ. To mo rowe go out to thẽ: for the Lord is wt you.
And Iehosaphat bowed him selfe wyth his face to the erthe, & al Iuda & the enhabi ters of Ierusalem fel before the Lorde, to bowe them selues vnto the lord. And þ Le uites & the children of the Cahathites & of the Corahites stode vp, to prayse the lorde E god of Israel wt a loude voice on hie. And so thei arose erly in þ mornyng & gat them out vnto the wildernesse of Thekua. And as they wẽt out Iehosaphat stode & sayde heare me Iuda & ye enhabiters of Ierusa ☞ lẽ. Beleue in the lord youre god & so shal ye cõtinue: & beleue his Prophetz & so shal ye prospere. And he gaue the people coũcel, & set the syngers of the lord & them þ praysed in holy apparel, to go out before the armie & to saie: prayse the Lord for hys mercy la steth euer. And what tyme thei begã to lau de & prayse, then the lord set layers awaye agaynst the children of Ammõ & Moab & mount Seir, to destroye them vtterly and to wype them out. And when they had ma de an ende of the enhabiters of Seir, then they holpe to destroye eche other.
And when Iuda came to Mizphah in the wildernes, thei loked vnto the multitu de. And beholde, they were dead carcases F fallen to the erth, & none escaped. And Ie-hosaphat & his people went to robbe away the spoyle of them & foũd amõg thẽ abou͂ daũce of goodes & rayment & of pleasau͂t Iewelles, & caught frõ thẽ more then they could cary away: so þ they were thre dayes in gathering of the spoyle, it was so moch And the fourth day they assembled in the valeye of blessing, for ther they blessed the Lorde. And therfore they called the name of the sayd place the valey of blessing vnto this daye. And so al the men of Iuda & Ierusalem returned & Iehosaphat amõg the thickeste of them, for to goo agayne to Ierusalem with gladnes: for the lord had made thẽ to reioyse of theyr enemies. And they came to Ierusalẽ wt psalteries & har pes and trõpettes, euen vnto the house of the Lord. And the feare of God fell in the kingdõs of al lãdes, when they had heard that the Lord fought against the enemies of Israel. And so the reaulme of Iehosa-phat was in tranquilite: for hys god had geuen hym rest on euery syde.
And Iehosaphat raygned vpõ Iuda, & was.xxxv.yere olde when he begã to rayg ne & raygned.xxv.yere in Ierusalem. And G his mothers name was Azuba the daugh ter of Silhi. And he walked in the way of Asa hys father & bowed not therfrõ, to do that was pleasaũt in the syght of the lord.
Howbeit they putt not downe the hyaulters, nether dyd þ people yet prepare theyr hertes vnto the god of theyr fathers. The rest of the actes of Iehosaphat fyrst & last are written in the workes of Iehu the son ne of Hanani, whych noted them in the bo ke of the kynges of Israel.
After this Iehosaphat king of Iuda ioy ned hym selfe with Ohoziah kyng of Israel whyche was a wicked doar. And he coupled

[illegible]oziah coupled him selfe with him, to make ship-pes to goo to Tharsis. And they made the shyppes in Azion Gaber. And Eliezer the sone of Dodanah of Maresa prophesyed against Jehosaphat: saying: because thou hast ioyned thy self wt Oboziah the Lord hath broken thi workz. And y shyppz were broke y they were not able to go to tharsis.

¶ Jehosaphat dyeth & Jehorā succedeth him which putteth to death his brethrē, and is oppressed of the Philistines, and dyeth of the flyx.

A I Ehosaphat layd hi to rest wt his fathers, & was buried wt his fathers in y cytie of Da-uid & Jehorā his sone rayg-ned in his rowme: which Jehorā had other brethrē, sonz of Jehosaphat Azariah Jehiel Zachariah Azariah Michael & Sephatiah. Al these were y sonz of Jehosaphat king of Juda. And their father gaue thē many great giftes in siluer, gould & other preciouse thingz wt stronge cyties in Juda: but the kingdō he gaue to Jehorā, because he was y eldest. And whē Jehorā was vp vpō the kingdō of his father & setelde he slue al his other brethrē wt y swerde, & diuerse of the lordes of Israel [illegible] therto. * Jehorā was .xxxii. yere old whē he begā to raigne, & he raigned .viii. yere i Je-B rusalē. And he walked in y wayes of y kin ges of Israel, like as did y house of Ahab (for a daughter of Ahab was hys wife) & he wrought euel in y eyes of y Lord. How beit y Lord wold not destroy the house of Dauid, because of the couenaūt y he had made wt Dauid, & as he promised to geue a light to him & to his sonnes for euer.
In his dayes y Edomites departed frō vnder y hād of Juda & made thē a kinge.
And Jehorā wēt forth wt his Lordes & all his charets wt him & rose by night & layde on y Edomites. Which cōpased hym in & y captaines of his charets. And so Edō de parted frō vnder y hād of Juda vnto this C day. That same tyme also dyd lobnah depart frō vnder his power, because he lefte the lord god of his fathers. Moreouer he made hilaulters in y mountainz of Juda, & caused y enhabiters of Jerusalē to comit [illegible] adultrie, & he * thrust Juda out of y way.
And ther came a writing to him frō Eliah y prophet of this tenour. Thus saith the Lord god of Dauid thy father: becau se thou walkedest not in the wayes of Je-hosaphat thy father & in the wayes of Asa king of Juda, but walkedst in the wayes of the kingz of Israel & hast made Juda & the dwellers of Jerusalē go a whoring like to the whoring of the house of Ahab, & hast therto slaine thi brethrē y were thy fathers house, which were better thē thou: Therfo re beholde the Lorde wil smyte the wyth a mightie plage in thy folke, in thy chyldrē, in thy wyues & in thy goodes. And y shalt haue moche disease thorowe infirmitie in thy bowelles, vntyll thy bowelles fall out by reason of thy syckenesse, daye by daye.
And the Lord stered vp agaynst Jehorā the spirite of the Philistines & the Ara- D biās y border on the black mores. Whych came agaynst Juda & al to tare the lande, & caried away al the substaūce y was foūd in the kinges house, & therto hys sonnes, & his wiues: so y ther was neuer a sone lefte him saue Jehoahaz his yōgest sone. And after al y, the Lorde smote him in hys bo-welles wt an incurable disease. And in pro cesse of tyme, euē about the ende of .ii. yere his guttes fel out by reason of his sicknes and so he dyed of euell diseases. But they ¶ Oboziah raigneth in the rowme of Jehorā. Jehu king of Israel killeth Oboziah. Athaliā putteth to death al the kynges lynage, onely Joas escapeth.

The .xxii. Chapter.

A And the enhabiters of Jerusa lē made Oboziah hys yōgest sonne king in his sted. For y mē of warre y came wt the A rabiās in the host, had slayne all hys elder sonnes. And so Oboziah thee sone of Jehorā kyng of Juda, was made king. Two & fourtie yere old was he whē he began to raygne, & raygned one yere in B Jerusalē. His mothers name was Athali ah the daughter of Amri. And he walcked also in the wayes of y house of Ahab, for his mother was his coūceler for to do euel Wherfore he did y displesed y lord like to the house of Ahab for they were his coūce-lers after the death of hys fathers, to hys destructiō. And he also walked after theire counsel. And Jehorā sonne of Ahab king of Israel went to fyght with Hazael king of Siria at Ramoth in Galaad: & they of Ramoth woūded him. Wherfore he retur-ned to be healed in Jezrael of the woūdes which were geuē him at Ramoth, when he fought with Hazael kinge of Siria. And

C Ohoziah the sonne of Jehorā king of Juda wēt downe to se Jehorā the sonne of Ahab at Jezraell, because he was diseased.

For it was thrust &c. of God understāde, to this intent that he cominge to Jehoram might be destroyed of Jehu

*For it was thrust into Ohoziah of God to go to Jehorā, & that whē he was come, he shuld go out with Jehorā against Jehu the sonne of Namsi whō the Lord had anoynted to destroye the house of Ahab.

And as Jehu was executing iustice vpō the house of Ahab. He found the Lordes of Juda & the sonnes of the brethrē of Ohoziah that wayted on Ohoziah, and he slue them. And he sought Ohoziah, & they caught him wher he was hid in Samaria and broughte him to Jehu. And whē they had slayne hym they buried hym: because (sayd they) he was ye sonne of Jehosaphat which sought the Lorde wyth al his herte. And ther was none of the house of Ohozi-

D ah, that could obtayne to be kinge.

iiii.reg.xi.a

*For Athaliah the mother of Ohoziah, whē she sawe her sonne was dead, arose & spake with al the sede of the kingdō of the house of Juda. But Jehosabeath ye daughter of the kinge toke *Jehoas the sōne of Ohoziah and stale him frō among the kinges sonnes that were slayne, & put him & his nource in a sleppyng chambre. And so Jehosabeath ye daughter of king Jehorā & wife of Jehoiada the preste (because she was the sister of Ohoziah) hid him frō Athaliah ye she slue hym not. And he was wt them hyd in the house of God syxe yeare. And Athaliah raygned ouer the lande.

Or Joas.

C Jehoas the sonne of Ohoziah is made king Athaliah is put to death.

iiii.Re.xi.a

And in the.vii.yere Jehoiada toke hert, & made a bond with thee captaynes of hundredes Azariah the sonne of Jerobā Ismael the sonne of Johanā Azariah the sonne of Obed, Maasiah the sonne of Adaiah and Elisaphat the sonne of Zechri. And they wente aboute in Juda and geathered thee Leuites oute of all the cities of Juda & the auncient heades of Israel: & they came to Jerusalem. And al the congregatiō made a bonde wyth the kyng in the house of God. And Jehoiada sayde to them: beholde, thee kynges sonne must raygne ouer the chyldren of Dauid, as the Lord hath sayd.

This it is therfore that ye shal do. The third part of you prestes & Leuites which B come in the Saboth day, shal kepe the dores & another thyrd part shalbe in the kinges house & another third part shalbe in ye gate of the foundatiō, & al the people shal be in the *courtes of the house of the lord. And ther shal none come into the house of the Lord, saue the prestes & the Leuites ye minister. They shal go in, for they ar holy. and al the people shal kepe the watch of ye Lord. And the Leuites shall compasse the kyng round about, & euery man his wepō in his hand: & whatsoeuer other man come into the house of the Lord, he shall dye for it. & they shalbe with ye king, as he cometh in and as he goeth out.

And the Leuites and al Juda dyd in al things as Jehoiada the prest cōmaūded, C and toke euery man his men: both the that came in & the that wēt out the saboth day: for Jehoiada the prest dyd let none of the cōpanies depart. And Jehoiada the prest deliuered to thee captaynes of hundredes speares & shildes & bouklars ye pertained to king Dauid & were in the house of god And he set al the people & euery mā his wepō in his hand, frō ye right corner of ye house to ye lefte corner of the house, alonge by the aulter and the house rounde about the kynge. And they brought out the kynges sonne and put vpon hym the crowne & the *testymonie, and made him king. And Jehoiada and his sonnes anoynted him and sayde: God saue the kynge.

When Athaliah hearde the noyse of the people rūninge & praysinge the kinge: she wēt amōge the people into the house of the Lord. And when she sawe the kinge stand at hys pyller in the enterynge, and the Lordes and trompettes about the kynge, and all the people of the lande reioysynge and blowing with trompettes, and the singers wyth instrumentes of musyke teachynge to prayse. Then she rente her clothes and cryed: treason, treason. And Jehoiada the prest went out wyth the captaynes of hundredes that were apointed to gouerne the hoste and sayde to them: haue her oute withoute the arayes and whosoeuer folo= weth her, let him be slayne with the swerd.

For the prest said: sley her not in the house of the Lorde. And they layde handes on her, and when she was come oute to the en tringe of the horsgate in the kynges hou= D se, they slue her there.
*And Jehoiada made a bōd betwene hī and al the people and the kynge, to be the Lordes people. And al the people went to ꝧ house of Baal and destroyed it, ⁊ brake hys aulters and hys ymages, ⁊ slue Ma= than the prest of Baal before the aulters.
And Jehoiada put ꝧ offices of ꝧ house of the Lorde in the handes of the prestes the leuites, which Dauid had deuyded in cō= panyes for the house of the Lord, to offer burntofferynges vnto the Lorde, as it is wrytten in the law of Moses, wyth reioy syng and syngyng, as it was ordeyned by Dauid. And he set porters vnto the gates of ꝧ house of the lorde, that none that was vncleane in any poynte shuld entre in.
And he toke the captaynes of hundre= des and thee nobles, and the gouernoures of the people ⁊ all the folke of the lande, ⁊ brought the king downe out of the house of the Lord, and they went thorow the hye gate in the kynges house, and set the king vpon the seate of the kyngdome. And all the people of the lande reioysed, ⁊ the cytie was in tranquilite: but they slue Athaliah wyth the swerde.

The .xxiiii. Chapter.

IEhoas was seuen yere olde whē he begāne to raygne, ⁊ he raigned fourtie yere ī Jeru salē. His mothers name was Zebiah of Bersabe. And Je= hoas did ꝧ pleased the Lorde al the dayes of Jehoiada the preaste. And Jehoiada gaue hym two wyues, and he begatte sō= nes and daughters.
It chaunched after that, that Jehoas was mynded to mende the house of the Lorde.
And vpon that he geathered to gether the prestes and the Leuites and said to them:
*go out thorowe the cytyes of Juda and geather of all Israel syluer, to strength ꝧ house of youre God yere by yere, ⁊ se that ye haste the thynge: howe be it the Leuites were slacke. Then the kynge called Jeho B iada that was the chefest, and said to him: Why requyrest thou not of the Leuytes to brynge in, out of Juda and Jerusalem thee summe appoynted by Moses the ser uaūte of the Lorde, and by the congrega= ciō of Israel, for the tabernacle of witnes.
For wycked Athaliah ⁊ her chyldren had broke the house of god, ⁊ had therto besto wed al the dedicat giftes of the house of ꝧ Lorde, aboute Baals.
Wherfore at the kynges cōmaūdement, they made a cofer, ⁊ set it at the gate of the house of the Lorde: ⁊ made proclamacion thorow Juda ⁊ Jerusalem to bryng in to ꝧ Lord the taxaciō of Moses the seruaūt Exo.xxx.d of god, which he set vpō Israel in the wyl dernesse. And the Lordes and al the people C reioysed ⁊ brought in and cast into the co= fer vntil it was ful. And whē ꝧ time came that the chest shulde be brought in by the hādes of the Leuites at the apoyntmēt of the king, whē they saw ꝧ ther was moche money: then came the kinges scrybe ⁊ one apointed by the hye prest, and powred out that was in ꝧ cofer, ⁊ thē toke it ⁊ caryed it to his place againe, ⁊ thus they did day by daye, and geathered moche moneye.
And the kynge ⁊ Jehoiada gaue it to workmē that wrought vpō the house of the Lorde, ⁊ hyred Masons ⁊ carpenters D to redresse the house of the Lorde, ⁊ so did they artyficers in yron ⁊ brasse, to repayre the house of the Lord. And the workmen wrought ⁊ ꝧ worck mended thorowe there hādes: and they made the house of god as it ought to be, and strengthed it. And whē they had finisshed it, they brought the rest of the money to the kynge and Jehoiada, ⁊ therwyth were made vessels for ꝧ house of the Lorde: euen vessels to minister with al and to serue for burntofferynges as la delles and vessels of goulde ⁊ siluer. And they offered burntofferinges in ꝧ house of the lord contynuallye all the dayes of Je hoiada. And Jehoiada waxed olde ⁊ full E of yeres ⁊ died. And hūdred ⁊ .xxx. yere olde was he whē he died. And they buried him in the citie of Dauid amōg ꝧ kynges because

because he had done good i Israel, and on god & on his house. And after the deeth of Jehoiada, came ye lordes of Juda & made obeysaunce to the kynge. And then he herkened unto them. And so they lefte the house of the lord god of their fathers, and serued groues and Images. And then came there wrath vpon Juda & Jerusalem, for this their trespaces sake. Notwithstandyng yet God sent Prophetes to them, to bring them agayne unto the lord. And they testified unto them. But they wolde not heare.

And ye spirite of God came vpon Zacha riah the sonne of Jehoiada the preste, & he stept vp aboue the people & sayde to them.
F Thus saith god: why transgresse ye the commaundementes of ye Lorde, ye shal therfore not prospere, but as ye haue forsaken him, so shal he forsake you. * Wherupon they con-Mat.xxiii.d spired agaynst hym & stoned him with stones, at the commaundement of the kynge: euen in the court of ye house of the lord. And so Je hoas the king remembred not the kyndenes which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slue his sonne. And when he died, he sayde: the Lord se and require a recompynge.

And when the yere was out, the hoste of ye Siriens came agaynste hym: & they came to Juda & Jerusalem, and destroied al the lordes of the people from amonge the people and sent al the spoile of them unto ye king G to Damasco. And though ye armie of Siria came with a small companye of men, yet the lord deliuered a very greate hoste into their handes, because they had forsaken the lord god of their fathers. And therto they serued Jehoas accordynge.

And as sone as they were departed from him, though they left him in great diseases: yet his owne seruauntes conspyred agaynst him for ye bloud of ye chyldren of Jehoiada the prest, & slue him on his bedd. And when he was deed, they buried him in the citie of Dauid: but not in ye sepulchres of ye kinges And these are they ye conspired agaynst him: Zabad ye sonne of Samaath an Ammonite & Jehosabad ye sonne of Simrith a Moa bite. And his sonnes and the summe of the taxe that came to him, and the foundacion of the house of God, are written in the storye of the booke of kinges. And Amaziah his sonne raygned in his steade.

Juda together and made captaynes ouer thousandes & ouer hundredes in the houses of their fathers thorowout all Juda & Beniamin. And he numbred them from.xx. yere and aboue, & found them thre hundred thousand lustie men abel to go to battell, & that coulde handle speare and shild. And he hyred thereto an hundred thousand fighting men oute of Israell, for an hundred talentes of syluer.

But ther came a man of God to hym & sayde: kynge, let not the armye of Israell go wyth the: for the Lorde is not with Is rael nether with any of the house of Ephraim Or elles yf thou neades wylt, then go C & do it, & make thy selfe stronge to battell: & thou shalt se, ye God shall make the fall before thine enemies. For god hath power to help or to cast downe. And Amaziah sai de againe to ye man of god, what shal we do then, for ye hundred talentes which I haue geuen unto ye host of Israel? And the man of God sayde: the Lorde is able to geue the moche more then that.

And then Amaziah seuered the armie ye was come to hym out of Ephraim, to go whom againe. Wherfore they were exceadyng wrothe with Juda, & returned to their owne whome in great angre.

And Amaziah toke herte & caryed oute his host & went to saltdale. * Wher he slue [illegible]

And it chaunced, after ye Amaziah was come from the slaughter of ye Edomites, & had brought ye gods of the childrẽ of Seir, he set thẽ vp to be his Gods, and bowed him self beforethẽ & burned cẽse vnto thẽ.
Wherfore ye Lorde was wroth wt Amazi ah & sent to him a prophete, & said to hym: why sekest thou ye Gods of ye people whiche were not able to deliuer their owne peo ple out of thine hãdes? And as ye prophete E spake to him, he said to ye prophet: haue mẽ made the of the kynges councel? cease, lest thou be beaten. And the prophete ceased & sayde I am sure that God hath takẽ coũcel to destroy ye, because ye hast done thys, and obeyest not my councell.
Then Amaziah king of Juda toke ad uise & sent to Joas the sonne of Jehoahaz ye sõne of Jehu kyng of Israel & sayd: come, & let vs se ether other. And Joas king of Israel sent againe to Amaziah king of Juda saying: a thistell in Libanon sẽt to thou perishe and Juda with the.

But Amaziah rested not: for it came of god, euen to deliuer them into ye hãdes of their enemies: and that because they had sought the Gods of the Edomites. And Joas king of Israel came vp: & they saw ether other, both he & Amaziah king of Ju da at Bethsames i Juda. And Juda was put to the worse before Israel, & fled euery mã to hys tent. And Joas king of Isramothers name was Jecaliah of Jerusalẽ.

And he dyd that pleased the Lorde, in all poyntes as dyd hys father Amaziah. And he sought god while zachariah the teacher to se God lyued: & as longe as he soughte the Lorde, God made him prospere.
And he went to battel against the Phili stines & brake downe the walles of Geth, B & the walles of Jabneh & the walles of As dod, & built cities about Asdod & among the philistines. And god holpe him agaist the philistines & agaynste the Arabiens ye dwelt in Gurbaal, & agaynste the Meuni-tes. And the Ammonites gaue trybute to Oziah, and his name sprede abroade euen to Egipte for he played the man & exceaded. Moreouer Oziah buylt towres in Je rusalem ouer the corner gate, and ouer the valeye gate, and ouer other corners, and made them strong. And he built towres in the wildernes & digged many welles. For he had moch catell, both in the valeye and also in the playne: and plowmen and vine dressers in the mountaynes and in Char-mel, for he loued husbandrye.
And Oziah had an host of fightig men that went out to warre in the army & were towres & corners, to shote arowes & great stones wyth al. And hys name spreade farre abroade, for he was wonderfulle holpe, vn-tyl he was become myghtye.

And in his greatnesse hys hert arose, yͤ he was marred: & transgressed agaynst yͤ Lorde hys God. For he wente into the tēple of the Lorde to burne cense vpon the aulter of incense. But Azariah the preaste went in after him withe foure skore prea-Lorde, euen besyde the incense aulter. And Azariah the chefe preste wyth al the other pre stes loked vpō hi: & behold he was a leper in hys forehead, & they vexed hym thence.

And therto he was fayne to go out, becau se the Lord had plaged hym. And Oziah the kyng contynued a lepre vnto the daye of his deeth & dwelt in an house at libertie howe be it, he was cast out of the house of the Lorde. And Joatham his sonne had yͤ gouernaūce of the kynges house and iud ged the people of the lande.

The rest of the actes of Oziah both first and last, did Isaiah the prophete the sōne of Amos wryte. And whē Oziah was lay de to rest with his fathers, they buried him with his fathers in yͤ feld of yͤ buriall of yͤ kinges. For they sayde: he is a leper. And Joatham his sonne raigned in hys stead.

C Joatham raigneth & ouercometh the Ammonites. Ahaz hys sonne raygneth after hym.

The .xxvii. Chapter.

IOatham was .xxv. yere olde A fyre after the abhominacion of the nacions which the lord cast out before the children of Israell. And he offered burnte sense in hilaulters and on mountaines and vnder euery grene tre.

Wherfore the Lorde hys God deliue-red him into the hād of the king of the Si riés: whych bet him & caryed away a grea te multitude of hys captiue into Damas-con. And therto he was delyuered into ẏ his a mighty slaughter. For Pekah ẏ sō ne of Romeliah slue in Juda an hūdred & twētye thousand in one daye, & al fightin-ge mē: & that because they had forsaken ẏ Lorde God of theyr fathers. And zechri a mightie mā in mount Ephraim slue Maa-siah ẏ kinges sōne, & Azricā the lord stuar de of houshold, and Elcanah ẏ was nexte B to ẏ kyng. And the chyldrē of Israel toke presoners of theyr brethren two hundred thousād wiues, sōnes & daughters, & ther to caried away moche spoyle of them, and brought it to Samaria.

But ther was a prophete of the lordes named Obed which went out to the host that came to Samaria & sayde to thē: se, because ẏ Lord god of your fathers was wroth wt Juda, he deliuered thē into your handes. And ye haue slayne thē with cruel-zekiah the sonne of Sellum & Amasa ẏ sō ne of Hadalai stode vp against them that came from warre, and sayde vnto them: C ye shal not bringe in the captyues hyther.

For where we haue offended the Lorde al readye, ye attend to adde more to oure syn nes & trespace. For oure trespace is greate all readye, & there is fearce wrath vpō Is rael. And vpō ẏ ẏ mē of armes left ẏ cap-tyues & the spoyle before the Lordes & all the congregacyon.
And there arose certayne apoynted ther to by name, & toke the presoners & clothed al ẏ were naked among them, of the spoy le, & arayed thē & shoed them & gaue them to eate & to drynke & anoynted thē, & caried al that were feble of them vpon asses and brought thē to Jericho ẏ citye of Paulme trees fast by their brethrē: and then returned to Samaria agayne.
And at ẏ same tyme king Ahaz sent vn to the kinges of Assur to haue help. And ẏ Edomites came yet agayne & slue of Juda & caried away some captyues. And the Philistines inuaded ẏ cities in ẏ low coū trey & the south of Juda: and toke Bethsa mes, Aialon, Gaderoth & Socoh with the townes longyng therto, & Thimna wt ẏ townes of the same, & Gilso wher townes, & dwelt therin. For the Lord brought Ju da lowe, because of Ahaz kynge of Juda which made Juda naked & trāsgressed against ẏ lord. And Theglath palneser kin-ge of Assur came vpō him & besieged him, but preuailed not against him. For Ahaz toke away out of ẏ house of ẏ lord & out of D the kinges house & out of the lordes houses, & gaue vnto ẏ kīg of Assur, though it holpe him not. And therto in ẏ verye tyme of his tribulaciō did kinge Ahaz trespace yet more against the lorde. For he offered vnto the gods of thē of Damasco which bet him & said, because the gods of ẏ Siriens help thē, therfore wil I offer to them, ẏ they may helpe me also. But they were his destructiō & the destructiō of al Israel. And Ahaz gathered together ẏ vessels of the house of god & brake thē, & shut vp the dores of the house of ẏ lord, & made hī aulters in all corners of Jerusalē. And in al ẏ cities of Juda citie by citie he made hil aulters to burne incense vnto other gods, & angred the lord god of his fathers. The rest of his actes & al his waies both first & last are writtē in ẏ boke of the kīges of Ju da & Israel. And whē Ahaz was layde to rest wt his fathers, they buried hī in the cy tie of Jerusalē: but brought him not vnto the sepulchres of the kinges of Juda. And * Hezekiah his sonne raigned in his stead. Or, [illegible]

The xxix. Chapter.

Hezekiah began to raigne whē A

his mothers name was Abiah the daughter of Zacharmb. And he dyd that was right in the sight of the Lorde in all pointes as did Dauid his father. He opened ẏ dores of ẏ house of the Lorde in the fyrste yere & first moneth of his raygne, & he repaired thē. And he brought in ẏ prestes & ẏ Leuites & gethered thē together into the eeststrete: & sayde vnto thē.
Heare me ye Leuites: purifye youre sel-ues & halow the house of the Lorde God of youre fathers, & bringe out ẏ filthinesse B out of the holy place. For oure fathers ha ue trespaced & done euel fauoredly in ẏ eyes of ẏ lord our God: & haue forsakē him, and turned away their faces frō ẏ habita tiō of ẏ lord & turned to their backes. And besyde ẏ they haue shutt vp ẏ dores of the porch & quēched ẏ lāpes & haue nether bur ned cēse nor offered burntofferinges in the holy place vnto the god of Jsrael.
Wherfore the wrath of ẏ lord fel on Ju da & Jerusalē: & he skatered them & made thē so thynne that men hisse at it, euē as ye se withe youre eyes. For se, oure fathers were ouerthrowen with the swerde & oure sonnes, oure daughters & our wiues were caryed awaye captyue for the same cause.
Now haue J i my hert to strike a couenaū te ẇ the Lord God of Jsrael: ẏ his wrath maye cease. Nowe therfore my sonnes be not necligent: for the lorde had chosen you to stand before him, and for to mynystre & burne offerynges to him.
Thē the Leuites arose: Mahath ẏ sōne C of Amasai & Joel the sōne of Azariah beyng of the childrē of the Cahathites: & the sōnes of Merari, Kis the sōne of Abdi & Azariah the sōne of Jehaleleel: & of ẏ Ger sonites, Joah the sōne of Simma & Edē ẏ sōne of Joah: & of ẏ sōnes of Elizaphā, Simri & Jeiel: & of the sōnes of Asaph, Za chariah and Mathaniah: & of the sonnes of Heman, Jehiel & Semei: & of the son-nes of Jeduthū, Semaiah & Oziel. And they geathered their brethrē & purified thē selues, & then wēt at ẏ cōmaūdement of the kinge by the word of the lord, for to clense the house of the lord. And the prestes went in to the house of the lorde to clense it, and brought out al the vnclenesse ẏ they fou de in ẏ tēple of the lorde, & in the courte of the house of the lord. And the leuites toke D it and caried it out in to the broke Cedrō.
They begāne the fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth to purify, and came the eight day to the porche of the lord so ẏ they had pur ged the house of the lord in eyght dayes & the .xvi. daye of the fyrste moneth they ma de an ende.
And then they wēt into Hezekiah ẏ kig & said: we haue clensed all the house of the lord, & the aulter of burntofferinges ẇ all his vessels, & the shewbreed table with all his aparel: and therto al the vessels which king Ahaz did cast a side when he raigned & trāsgressed, them we haue repaired & sāc tyfied: & se, they are before the aulter of the E Lorde. And * Hezekiah the kyng rose erlie and geathered the Lordes of the cytye & went vp to the house of the lord. And ther were broughte seuen oxen, seuen rammes, seuē lambes & seuen kyddes to be a synne offerynge for the kyngdom, for the sāctua rye & for Juda. And he cōmaūded the pre stes the sōnes of Aaron to offer them on the aulter of the Lorde.
And they slue the oxē: & the prestes recei ued the bloud & sprinkled it on the aulter: and they slue the rāmes and sprinkled the bloud vpō the aulter: and they slue the lā-bes and sprynkled the bloud vpō the aulter. And thē they brought forth the kiddes of the synneofferyng before the king & the cōgregacion which put their hādes vpon thē. And the prestes slue them and offered the bloud of them vpō the aulter, to make F satisfactiō for al Jsrael: for the kyng sayde: ẏ the burntofferyng and ẏ synneoffryng shuld serue for al Jsrael. And they sett the Leuites in the house of the lord ẇ simbales, psalteries and harpes accordynge to the cōmaūdemētes of Dauid and of gad the kinges sear of visiōs and of Nathā ẏ prophet. For so was the cōmaundemēt of the lord thorow the hād of his prophetes.
And so the Leuites stode ẇ the instrumē tes of Dauid, and the prestes ẇ trūpets.
And Hezekiah cōmaūded to offer ẏ burnt offeringe vpon the aulter. And when the burntofferyng begāne, the sōg of the lord beganne, & the trompettes with the instrumentes of Dauid king of Jsrael. And al the cōgregacion bowed them selues, & the singers sāg, & the trōpets blew, and cōti-nued vntil the burntofferīg was finished.

And whē they had made an ende of the burntoffring, the king & al that were with him kneled downe & bowed them selues & gaue prayse & thankes. And Hezekiah the kyng and the Lordes bade the Leuites to prayse the lord wt the wordes of Dauid & of Asaph the sear of visiōs. And the Leui tes praised that thei reioysed agayne, & the other stowped & bowed them selues.
G And Hezekiah answered & sayd: nowe ye ye haue fylled your hādes to the Lord, go to & bring in the sacrifices & thankeoffrin ges into the house of the Lord. And the cō gregatiō brought in the sacrifices & thāke offringes, & al that were willing broughte burntoffringes. And ye nūbre of ye burntof fringes which the cōgregatiō broughte in was .lxx. oxē & an hūdred rāmes & two hū dred lābes: & al for burntofferinges to the Lord. And besyde that they dedicated sixe hundred oxē & thre thousande shepe.

But the prestes were to few, & were not able to fley al the burntoffringes. Wherfore their brethrē the Leuites holpe them tyl the worke was ended, & vntyll the prestes were sanctified. For the Leuites were purer herted to sanctifie thē selues thē the prestes. And therto ye burntoffringes were many with the fatte of the peaceoffringes & the drinkeoffringes that belōgeth to the burntoffringes. And so the seruice pertay ning to the house of the Lorde wente forward. And Hezekiah reioysed & al the peo ple, that god had made the folke so ready: for the thyng was sodenlye done.

¶ Hezekiah renueth the feast of passeouer.

The .xxx. Chapter.

a And Hezekiah sent to al Israel & Juda: & therto wrote letters to Ephraim & Manasseh that they shoulde come to the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, to offer passeouer vnto the Lord god of Israell. And the kynge helde a councel wyth hys Lordes and all the congregatyon at Jerusalem to kepe the feast of passe ouer in the seconde moneth. For they coul de not kepe it at that tyme: for there were not prestes ynoughe sanctified, neyther was the people gathered together to Jerusalem. And the thynge pleased the king and all the congregatiō. And they decreed that it shulde be proclaymed thorowe out all Israell frō Bersabe to Dan, that they shulde come and holde the feast of passeo-uer vnto the Lord God of Israel at Jeru salē: for they had not often done it, as it is wrytten how they shulde.

And the messengers wēt wyth letters of the hand of the king & of his Lordes tho-rowe out al Israel & Juda at the cōmaun-demēt of the king which sayd: chyldren of Israel, turne agayne vnto the Lord God of Abrahā, Isaac & Israel, and so wyll he turne to the remnaūt of you that are escaped out of the hādes of the king of Assur.
And be ye not like your fathers & your bre D threē which trespased agaynst the Lord of your fathers, whych therfore gaue thē vp that they are wasted as ye se. Wherfore be B not stifnecked like vnto your fathers, but yelde your selues vnto the lord, & come to his holy place which he hath sanctified for euer, & serue the Lord your God, that hys wrath may turne frō you. For yf ye turne vnto the Lorde, then your brethren & your chyldren shal fynd cōpassiō in the presence of thē that holde them captyue, that they maye come agayne vnto this land: for the Lord your God is full of mercy and com passiō, & wyl not turne his face from you, yf ye turne agayne to hym.

And the postes went from cytie to cytie thorow out the land of Ephraim and Ma nasseh & euē vnto Zabulō. But they laughed them to skorne & mocked thē. Neuer thelesse yet dyuerse of Asser, Manasseh & of Zabulon meakened thē selues & came to Jerusalem. And therto the hand of god was in Juda, to make thē of one accorde to do the cōmaundement of the king & the captaynes, which was accordyng to ye wor de of the Lord. And so there assembled to Jerusalē moch people & a myghtie greate congregation, to holde the feaste of swete bread in the seconde monethe.

And they arose & put awaye the aulters C yt were in Jerusalē. And therto all the incense thei dyd a way & cast thē into ye broke Cedron. And they slue passeouer the .xiiii. day of the seconde moneth. And the prestes and Leuites sanctified thē selues for shame, & brought in the burntoffringes into the house of the Lorde. And they stode in their standing after their maner accordig to the lawe of Moses the mā of god. And the prestes sprinkled the bloud receauinge it of the handes of the Leuites. And becau se there were many in the cõgregatiõ that were not sanctified: and therfore dyd thee Leuites sley passeouer for al that were not cleane to sanctifye thẽ to the Lorde.

There was very moche people oute of Ephraim, Manasseh, Isakar and Zabulon that were not cleane, and therfore dyd eate Passeouer otherwyse then wrytynge specyfieth. But Hezekiah prayed for them and sayde: the good Lorde be mercyfull to all that sett theyr hertes to seke the God that is thee Lorde God of theyr fathers, thoughe they doo it not accordinge to thee D clennesse of the holye place. And the Lord hearde Hezekiah & healed the people. And so the chyldren of Israel that were found at Jerusalem, helde thee feaste of swete bread seuen dayes wyth greate gladnesse, and thee Leuites and the Prestes prayised the Lord daye by daye wyth lowde instru mentes.

And Hezekiah spake hertelye vnto thee Leuites that hadde good vnderstandinge of the Lorde. And they dyd eate that feast seuen dayes longe and offered peaceoffe-ringes & thanked the Lorde God of theyr fathers. And the hoale assemble toke coun cell to kepe seuen dayes mo: and they held those seuen dayes wyth gladnesse. For He zekiah kyng of Juda gaue for heaueoffe rynges to the congregatiõ a thousand oxẽ and seuẽ thousande shepe. And the lordes gaue to the congregation for heaueoffringes a thousande oxen & ten thousand shepe And the prestes sanctified thẽ selues, that they were ynoughe.

And al the congregation of Juda with the prestes & Leuites, & al the congregatiõ that came out of Israel & the straungers, both that came out of the land of Israel & that dwelte in Juda, reioysed: & there was great ioye in Jerusalẽ. For sence the tyme of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel it happened not so in Jerusalem And the prestes & the Leuites arose & bles sed the people, and theyr voyce was heard and theyr prayer went vp vnto hys holye dwellyng place heauen.

¶ After Hezekiah had called agayne the people vnto the way of the Lord, he ordeyneth the prestes, vn to whom [illegible] ... to geue tythes.

The .xxxi. Chapter.

And when they had fynisshed al this: thẽ al Israel that were A founde in the cyties of Juda, wẽt out & brake the Images & cut downe the groues, & all to brake the hilaulters & the other aulters thorowout al Juda & BẽJamin, Ephraim and Manasseh, vntyll they had made an ende of thẽ. And afterwarde all the chil dren of Israel returned euerye man to his possession in theyr owne cyties.

And Hezekiah set the prestes & the Le-uites in theyr order to wayte by course, e-uery man accordinge to his office whether preste or Leuite: for the burntofferinges & peaceofferinges, & to minister & to thancke & to pray in the gates of the lodge of þ lord.
And the king gaue a portiõ of his substãce for burntofferinges at mornyng & euẽ, & for burntofferinges on the Saboth dayes and new mones & other solempne feastes, according as it is writtẽ in the law of the B Lord. And he bade the people that dwelte in Jerusalẽ to geue the parte of þ prestes & Leuites, that they myght be maynteined in the lawe of the Lorde. And as sone as þ worde came abroade the chyldrẽ of Israel brought aboundance of first frutes of cor-ne, wyne, oyle & hony, & of al maner of fru tes of the felde: & the tithes of al maner of thinges brought they in plẽteously. And þ chyldrẽ of Israel & Juda that dwelte in þ cyties of Juda, they also brought in the ty thes of oxẽ & shepe, and tythes of dedicate thinges which were dedicated to the Lord theyr God, & put thẽ on heapes. In þ thyr de moneth they begãne to laye the heapes and fynisshed them the seuenth.

And whẽ Hezekiah & the Lordes came & saw the heapes, they blessed the Lorde & his people Israel. And Hezekiah questioned wt the prestes & the Leuites cõcerning the heapes. And Azariah þ chefe preste of the house of Zadock answered him & said sense they began to bring the heaueoffringes into the house of thee Lorde, we haue eatẽ & had ynough, and yet lefte aboundã ce, for the Lorde hathe blessed hys people & therof is this heape lefte. And Hezekiah C bade dresse vp þ store houses about þ hou se of the Lord. And so they dyd, & caried in the heaueofferinges and the tythes and the dedycate gyftes euen of fydelyte.

Ouer

Ouer which Chonaniah ẏ Leuite had the rule wyth Semei hys brother nexte to him. And Jehiel, Asariah, Nahath, Asael, Jerimoth Josabad, Eliel, Jesmachiah, mahath & Banaiah were ouersears order ned by Chonaniah & Semei hys brother, at the appoyntmẽt of Hezekiah the king & Asariah the ruler of the house of god. And Chore the sonne of Jemna ẏ Leuite por ter of the East dore had the ouersyghte of the frewilofferinges of god, to geue heaue offeringes vnto the Lord, & was ouer thyn ges moost holye. And vnder hym were E den, Miniamin, Jesua, Semeiah, Ama riah & Sechaniah in the cyties of the prie stes of theyr fydelyte, to geue to theyr bre thren theyr porcions, as wel to the smal as to the greate.
And to the males also that were rekened from thre yere and aboue amonge all that wẽt into the house of the Lord day by day D to do seruyce & to wayte by course. And to the priestes that were rekened in the hous holdes of theyr fathers frõ twentie yere & aboue, to wayte when theyr courses came.
And to thẽ that were rekened thorowe out al their babes, wiues, sonnes and daugh ters thorow out al the congregation. For to the fydelite of them dyd men committe theyr sanctified gyftes. And therto amõg the chyldren of Aaron the priestes were mẽ named by name in the feldes of the subur bes of all theyr cyties, cytie by cytie, for to geue porcyons to al the males of the prye stes, and to all that were rekened amonge the Leuites.
And of thys maner dyd Hezekiah tho rowe oute all Juda, & dyd that was good ryghte and truthe, before thee Lorde hys God. And in all the workes that he began in the seruyce of the house of God, to seke hys God after the Lawe and commaun demente, that dyd he wythe all hys herte, and prospered.

¶ Sennacherib, which shuld haue beseged Jerusalẽ, is kild of the Aungell. Hezekiah dyeth after whom succedeth Manasseh.

The. xxxii. Chapter.

I After these dedes and truthe, Sennacherib kynge of Assur came & entred into Juda and pytched agaynst the stronge cyties & thought to drawe thẽ to hym. And whẽ Hezekiah saw that Sen naherib was come and that he was purpo sed to fyght agaynst Jerusalẽ: he toke coũ cell wyth hys captaynes and mẽ of might to stoppe the water of the fountaynes that were wythout the cytie: and they were con tent to helpe hym. And so there geathered moche people togeather and stopte all the welles and the broke that ranne thorowe the myddes of the lande, entendynge that the kynges of Assur shuld not fynd moch water when they came. And he went to lu stely and buylt vp the walle where it was broken, and made towres aboue vppon, & yet another walle wythoute, and repayred Melo the citie of Dauid, and made many B dartes and shyldes.
And he sette Captaynes of warre ouer the people & geathered them together into the large strete of the gate of the cytie and spake tenderlye to them, sayinge. Plucke vp youre hertes & be stronge: Be not afrayde or in any wyse discouraged for drede of ẏ king of Assur, & of the great multitude ẏ is with him: * for ther is one greater wyth vs thẽ with hym. With hym is an arme of fleshe: But with vs is the Lorde our God for to helpe vs & to fyghte oure batayles.
And the people were well couraged wythe the wordes of Hezekiah king of Juda.
After that Sennaherib kinge of Assur sent of his seruauntes to Jerusalẽ (he hym selfe lyinge before Lachis & al his kingdõ with him, vnto Hezekiah kyng of Juda, & vnto al Juda ẏ were at Jerusalẽ saying. C Thus sayth Sẽnaherib king of Assur: *
wherin do ye trust, O ye ẏ at beseged in Je rusalẽ? Hezekiah deceaueth you, to dely uer you to death, hõger, & thurst, saying: ẏ Lorde oure God shal rydde vs out of the hand of the king of Assur. Is it not ẏ He zekiah ẏ put downe his hilaulters & his o ther aulters, & cõmaũded Juda and Jeru salẽ saying: before one aulter ye shal bow your selues & vpon that offer also.
Moreouer haue ye not hearde what I & my fathers haue done vnto thee people of al landes? were the Gods of the people of other landes able to saue theyr landes out of my hande? which of al the Gods of those naciõs ẏ my fathers destroyed was it, ẏ could delyuer his people out of myne hãd, ẏ your God shulde be able to delyuer you out of mine hand? Wherfore now let

D not Hezekiah deceaue you ether perswade you of thys facyō, nor yet beleue him. For as no God among so many nacyons and kyngdoms, was able to ryde hys people out of myne hande and the handes of my fathers: euen so moch lesse shal your God kepe you out of myne hand. And yet more dyd his seruaūtes speake agaynst the Lor de God & agaynst his seruaūte Hezekiah.
And therto he wrote a letter to rayle on the Lord God of Israel & spake therin sayig as the Gods of the naciōs of other landes haue not delyuered their people out of my ne hand, no more shal the god of Hezekiah delyuer his people out of myne hand. And they cryed wyth a lowde voyce in the Je-wes speache vnto the people of Jerusalē that were on the walles, to feare them and to dismaye them, that they myght haue ta E ken the cytie. And they spake agaynste the God of Jerusalem, as agaynst the Gods of the nacyons of the earth, whych are the worcke of the handes of men.

But Hezekiah the kyng & the prophete Isaiah sonne of Amoz prayed concernyng the thing and cryed vp to heauen. And the Lord sent an angel & destroyed al the men of warre & the Lordes & captaynes of the hoste of the kinge of Assur, that he turned his face with shame towarde his owne lād And when he was come into thee house of his God, he was ther ouerthrowē with the swerde euē by thē that issued out of his bo welles. And so the Lorde saued Hezekiah & the enhabiters at Jerusalē out of the hā des of Sennaherib king of Assur & of all other, & mayntened thē on al sydes. In so moch that many broughte presentes vnto the Lord to Jerusalem & preciouse gyftes to Hezekiah king of Juda: so that he was magnified in the syghte of all nacions frō thenceforth.

F * In those dayes Hezekiah was syke iiii.re.xx.a. Esa.xxxviii.a. vnto the death & besought the Lord: why-che answered him & shewed him a wonder ful myracle: But Hezekiah dyd not accor dinge to the curtesye shewed hym, for hys herte arose: and therfore came there wrath vpon hym & vpon Juda and Jerusalem.
Notwithstādyng Hezekiah mekened hym selfe for the arysynge of his herte, both he and the enhabiters of Jerusalem. Wherfore the wrath of the Lorde fell not vpon them in the dayes of Hezekiah.

And Hezekiah had exceading moch rychesse and honour. And he gathered hym treasure of syluer, gould, preciouse stones spices, shildes & of al maner pleasāte Je-welles: & made store houses for the frutes of corne, wyne & oyle: & stables for all maner of beastes, & foldes for shepe. And he made hym townes because he had catell G of shepe & oxē great aboūdance. For God had geuen him substaūce exceading moch And the sayd Hezekiah stopped the vpper water sprynges of Gihon & brought them downe to the West syde of the cytie of Da uid. And Hezekiah prospered in al his wor kes. But when the Ambassadours of the Lordes of Babylon were sente to hym to enquyre of the wonder that chaūced in the land, God left hym: to tempte hym that all that was in his hert myght be knowen.

The rest of the dedes of Hezekiah & his goodnesse are wrytē in the visiō of Isaiah the prophete the sonne of Amoz in the boke of the kinges of Juda and Israel. And then Hezekiah layde him to reste wyth his fathers, & they buried him in the hyest sepulchre of the sōnes of Dauid: and Juda and thee enhabiters of Jerusalē dyd hym worshyp at his death. And Manasseh his sonne raigned in hys steade.

Manasseh is take prisoner, and after he cometh out he destroyeth the Idolles & dieth, & after hym succedeth Amō. After Amō was killed of his owne people, Josiah his sonne raygneth for him.

The .xxxiii. Chapter.

Manasseh was .xii. yeare olde whē he was made kinge, and I raygned .lv. yere in Jerusalē And he dyd wyckedlye in the syght of the Lord, lyke vnto the abhominaciōs of the hethen which the Lord cast out before the chyldren of Israell. For he went to & buylt agayne the hyl-aulters which Hezekiah his father hadde broke downe. And he rered vp aulters vn to Baal s & made groues & bowed him sel fe vnto al the host of heauē & serued them And he buylte aulters in thee house of the Lord: Of whych the Lorde had sayde in Jerusalē shall my name be for euer. And he made aulters vnto all the hoste of heue in the two courtes of the house of the lord.
And he burnte his chyldren in fyre in the valeye of the sonnes of Hennō. And he obserued serued dismall dayes, & occupyed wytche-crafte & sorsery, and maynteined worckers wyth spretes & seres of fortunes: & wroughte moch euel in the syghte of the Lorde, to angre hym wyth all.

B And he put ye kerued Image of an Idol whyche he had made, in the house of God.
Of which house God sayd to Dauid & to Salomon his sonne, in this house here in Jerusalē which I haue chosen oute of all the trybes, * I wyl put my name for euer, and no more bring the feat of Israel from of the lād which I haue ordeined for your fathers. Yf so be they shall be diligente to do al I haue cōmaunded by Moses in all the lawe ordinaūces & maners. But Manasseh made Juda and the enhabiters of Jerusalem to erre and to do worse thē the heaten whiche the Lorde destroyed before the chyldren of Israel. And when the Lor de spake to Manasseh & to his people, thei attended not to hym.

Wherfore the Lord brought vpon the the captaynes of the hoste of the kynge of Assur, which toke Manasseh in an holde & bound him wt chaynes & caried him to Ba bilon. And when he was in tribulation he C besought the Lord his god, & hūbled hym selfe exceadingly before the God of his fathers, & made intercessiō to hym: & he was entreated of him and hearde hys prayer & brought hym agayne to Jerusalē into his kingdō. And then Manasseh knew how ye the Lord was the very God.

After that he buylt a wall withoute the cytie of Dauid on the west syde of Gihon in the broke & so forth to fysh gate & round about Ophel & broughte it vp of a verye great heyghte, & put captaynes of warre in al the strong cyties of Juda. And he toke away straunge Gods & the Idole oute of the house of God, & all the aulters that he had buylt in the mount of the house of god and in Jerusalē, & cast thē out of the cytie And he made an aulter vnto the Lord & sa crifyced theron peaceoffringes & thanke-offringes, & charged Juda to serue ye lord God of Israell. Neuerthelesse the people dyd offre styll in the hylaulters, howe be it vnto the Lord theyr God onelye.

The rest of the actes of Manasseh and D his prayer vnto his God, & the wordes of the sears of visiōs that spake to him in the name of the Lord God of Israel, are wrytten among the dedes of the kinges of Israel. And his prayer & how ye he was hear-de, & al his synne & trespace, and the places where he made hilaulters & set vp groues and kerued Images before he was mekened, are wrytē amōg the dedes of the sears of visions. And whē Manasseh was layd to rest with his fathers, they buried him in hys owne house: & Amon his sonne rayg-ned in hys rowme. Amon was. xxii. yeare olde, when he began to raygne, & raygned two yere in Jerusalē. And he dyd that displeased the Lord like vnto Manasseh his father, for Amō sacrificed to al the kerued ymages which Manasseh his father made & serued thē, & mekened not him selfe before the Lordes as Manasseh hys father had mekened hym selfe: But Amon trespaced greatly. Wherfore his owne seruaūtes cō spired agaynst him & slue him in his owne house. And the people of the land slue al ye had conspired agaynst kyng Amon. And therto the people of the land made Josiah hys sonne kynge in hys rowme.

¶ Josiah destroyeth the Idoles & restoreth the tēple in which is founde the boke of the law. He sendeth to Huldah the prophetisse for councel.

A raigned in Jerusalē. xxxi. yere iiii. Re. xxii. a And he dyd ye pleased the lord & walked in the wayes of Da uid his father bowing nether to the righte hande or to the lefte. In so moche that the eyght yere of his raygne, when he was yet a lad, he begā to seke after the god of Da-uid his father. And in the twelueth yere he began to pourge Juda & Jerusalē of hyl-aulters, groues, kerued Images, & Images of metal: so that they brake downe the aulters of Baals euē in his presence, & the Idoles that were vpō thē, he caused to be destroyed. And the groues, kerued Images, & Images of metall he brake & made dust of thē, & strawed it vpō the graues of thē that had offred to thē. And he burnte ye B bones of the prestes vpō the aulters, & clesed Juda & Jerusalē. And euen so dyd he in the cyties of Manasseh, Ephraim, Simeon & of Nephthali therto. And in ye wildernesses of thē rounde about he plucked a sondre the aulters & the groues & did beat them & slaye them to powdre, & bete down the ydols thorowout al the lande of Israell: & then returned to Jerusalem agayne.

And in the .xviii. yere of his raygne whē he had purged the land and the temple, he sent Saphan the sonne of Azaliah, & Ma asiah the gouernour of thee cytie, & Joah the sonne of Joahas the recorder, to repay-re the house of the Lord his god. And whē they came to Helkiah the hie preste, they de lyuered them the money that was brough te into the house of God, which the Leui-tes that kepte the entries had gathered of the handes of Manasseh and Ephraim and of all that yet remayned in Israel and of all Juda and Ben Jamin and of the en habiters of Jerusalem. And they put it in thee handes of the worckemen that hadde ỹ ouer syght of ỹ house of ỹ Lorde, which C gaue it to the labourers that wroughte on the house of the Lord, to repayre and men de it, and to masons and carpenters to hie hewed stone and tymber for to make couples and beames for the houses which the kinges of Juda hadde destroyed: And the men wrought in the worke of fidelite.
And the ouerseers of thē to courage thē forward, were Jahath & Obadiah Leui-tes of the childrē of Merari: & Secha-ria & Mesulam of the childrē of the Caha thites, & as manye other of the Leuites as could skylle of instrumentes of Musyck.
And ouer the bearers of burthens & ouer al that wrought, in whatsoeuer workemā shipp it were, were there scribes, officers & porters of the Leuites.
And as they brought out the moneye ỹ was broughte into the house, Helkiah the prieste foūd the boke of the law of the lord geuē by Moyses. And Helkiah answered and sayd to Saphan the Scribe: I haue found the boke of the lawe in the house of the Lorde, and gaue the boke to Saphan.
D And Saphā caried the boke to the king, & brought the king worde agayn saying: al that was cōmitted to thy seruātes that do they. And they haue powred out ỹ moneye that was founde in the house of the Lorde and haue delyuered into the handes of the ouerseers of the workemen. And then Saphan the scribe shewed the kyng, sayinge: Helkiah the preste hath geuen me a boke, and he redde it before the kyng.

And whē the king had heard ỹ wordes of the lawe, he tare his clothes, & cōmāded Helkiah & Ahikam the sonne of Saphan & Abadon the sonne of Micah & the sayde Saphā the scribe & Asaia a seruaūt of the kinges, saying: go & enquire of ỹ lord for me & for thē that are left in Israel & Juda cōcerning ỹ wordes of the boke ỹ is foūde For great is the wrath of the Lord that is fallē vpō vs, because our fathers kept not D the word of the Lord, to do after al that is wrytten in this boke.
And Helkiah with them ỹ pertayned to the king wēt to Holdah a prophetisse wife E of Selū the sonne of Thekohath ỹ sonne of Hasarah keper of the wardrope (which prophetisse dwelt in Jerusalē in the secōd warde) & they communed so with her. And she sayd vnto thē: thus sayth the lord god of Israel, tel ye the mā that sent you to me Euen thus saith the Lorde: se, I wyl bring euel vpō this place & vpon the enhabiters thereof, eue al the cursses ỹ are writtē in the boke which they haue rede before the king of Juda, because they haue forsakē me & haue offered vnto other gods to anger me wythe all maner workes of theyr handes, therfore is my wrath set on fyre agaynste thys place & shal not be quenched.
And as for ỹ king of Juda which sent F you to enquire of the Lord, so shal ye saye vnto him: thus saith ỹ lord god of Israel cōcerning the wordes which ỹ hast hearde Because thine hert dyd melt & thou dydest meke thy selfe before god, whē ỹ heardest his wordes agaynst this place & agaynste the enhabiters therof: & humbledest thy selfe before me, & tarest thy clothes and wepest before me, that haue I heard also saith the Lord. Behold I wyl take ỹ to thy fathers & thou shalt be putt in thy graue in peace, & thine eyes shal not se al the mischeue ỹ I wyl bring vpō this place & vpō the enhabiters of the same. ✠ And they brought the king word agayne. Thē the king sent and gathered together all the elders of Juda & Jerusalē. And the kinge wēt vp into the house of the Lord, & al the men of Juda & the enhabiters of Jerusalē & the Priestes and Leuites & al the people great & small: and reade al the wordes of the boke of the G couenaunt that was founde in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge stode at hys standing

standynge and made a couenaũt before ye Lorde, to folow the Lord and to kepe his cõmaundementes, his wytnesses and hys statutes with all his herte and wt all hys soule & to fulfil the wordes of ye apointmẽt it wrytten in the sayde boke.

And he made to come forth al that were found in Jerusalem and Beniamin, & the enhabyters of Jerusalẽ promised to kepe the couenaunt of ye God which was ye god of theyr fathers. And Josiah put awaye al maner of abhominacyons out of al lã-des that pertayned to the chyldren of Israel, and brought all yt were foũde in Israel to serue the lord theyr god. And they tur ned not a syde frõ after ye lord god of their fathers as long as he lyued.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

A ND Josiah held the feaste of passeouer vnto the lord in Je rusalẽ, & they slue passeouer in the. xiiii. daye of the fyrste moneth. And he sett the prea-stes in their offyces & ayded them in ye seruice of the house of the Lorde. And he say de to the Leuites that taught thorow out all Israell and were sanctified vnto ye lor de: put the holy arcke in the house whyche Salomon ye sonne of Dauid kyng of Is rael did buylde, ye nede not to beare it vpõ youre shoulders. Wherefore now serue ye Lord your God & his people Israel. And prepare youre selues by youre auncyente housholdes & companyes, accordyng to ye wrytynge of Dauid kynge of Israell, & the wrytynge of Salomon hys sõne. And stande in the holy place accordynge to the deuysions of the auncient housholdes of your brethrẽ the chyldren of the people, & after the deuysyon of the auncyente hou-sholdes of the Leuites, & kil passeouer, sãc tifie & prepare your brethrẽ that they may do accordynge to the worde of the lord by the hande of Moses.

And Josiah gaue to the comen people in lambes & kiddes, for passeouer offerin-ges only, vnto al yt were present. xxx. thou sande by tale, & thre thousande oxen, euen of ye kinges substaunce. And hys Lordes B gaue willingly both vnto ye people & also vnto ye prestes & vnto ye Leuites. Helkiah, Zachariah & Jehiel, rulers of the house of god gaue vnto the preastes for passeouer offeringes. ii. thousand & syxe hundred lã-bes & kiddes, & thre hũdred oxen. And Co naniah with Semeiah & Nathaneell his brethren, and Hasabiah and Jaiel and Jo sabad Lordes of the Leuites, gaue vnto ye Leuites fyue thousand passeouer offerin ges, and fyue hundred oxen.

And so the seruice went forwarde: and the prestes stode in theyr places, & the Leui tes in theyr cõpanyes at the kynges commaundement. And they slewe passeouer: & the prestes sprinckled the bloude receauin ge it of the Leuites, and the Leuites stripe the beastes. And they sett awaye the burnt offeryng, to geue them vnto the comẽ people as they were deuyded by auncient hou ses, for to offer vnto the lorde, lyke as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses. And so dyd they wt the oxen to. And they dressed the C passeouer with fyre as ye maner was. But the other halowed dedycate beastes they sodde in pottes, cauldrens & pãnes & deui ded them quickly amonge al the comẽ peo ple. And afterwarde they made readye for them selues & for the preastes and for the chyldren of Aaron, whiche were busied in offerynge of burntofferynges & the fatte vntyll nyghte. And therfore the Leuites prepared for the selues and for ye preestes the sonnes of Aaron. And the syngers the children of Asaph stode in their standyng accordyng to the cõmaundement of Da-uid & Asaph, Heman & Jeduthun the kynges sear of visions: & ye porters waited at euery gate, & might not depart from theyr seruice: But their brethrẽ the Leuites prepared for thẽ. And so al ye seruice of ye lorde wẽt forward the saide daye, in offeryn-ge passeouer of burntofferynges vpõ the aulter of the Lorde, according to the cõ-maundement of kynge Josiah.

And so the chyldren of Israel yt coulde be founde, offered passeouer the seme tyme and kepte the feaste of swete bredde seuen dales. And ther was no passeouer like to yt kept i Israel frõ ye tyme of Samuel ye pro phete: nether dyd anye of the kynges of Is

* After all this, whē Josiah had finished the temple, Necho kyng of Egypt came vp to fight agaynste Carcamis vpon Euphrates, & Josiah wēt out agaynst hī. And the other sent messengers to him sayinge: what haue I to do with the thou kinge of Juda? I came not agaynste ÿ now at this tyme, but against an house ỽ whō I haue warre, and god bade me hast. And the people of the land take Jehoahaz ÿ sonne of Josiah & made him king for his father in Jerusalem. And Jehoahaz was .xxiii. yere olde whē he beganne to raigne, and he raigned thre monethes in Jerusalē. For the kyng of Egypte put hym downe at Jerusalē & merced the lande in an hundred talentes of syluer & a talent of goulde. And ÿ king of Egipt made Eliakim hys brother kig vpō Juda & Jerusalē, & turned his name vnto Jehoakim, but Jehoahaz his brother Necho toke & caryed him to Egipt. And Jehoakim was .xxv. yere olde when he beganne to raigne, & he raigned .xi. yere in Jerusalē: & he dyd ÿ displeased ÿ lord his god. Against him came Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon & bounde hym in fetters to carye him to Babilon. Therto the king Nabuchodonosor caried of the vessels of the house of the Lord to Babilon and put them in his temple at Babilon. B The rest of the actes of Jehoakim, & hys abhominacyons, and that was layd to his charge, are wryttē in the boke of the kinges of Israel: and Jehoacin hys sonne raygned in his stead. Jehoacin was .viii. yere old whē he beganne to raygne, and he raigned thre monethes and tē dayes in Jerusalē: & did ÿ displeased ÿ Lord. And whē ÿ yere was out, king Nabuchodonosor sent & fet him to Babilon ỽ ÿ goodlye vessels of ÿ house of the lord, & made Zedekiah his brother kyng ouer Juda and Jerusalem.

And Zedekiah was .xxi. yere old when he beganne to raigne, & raygned .xi. yere in Jerusalem. And he dyd that displeased the Lord his god, & humbled not him self before Jeremiah the prophete at ÿ mouth of the Lord. And therto he rebelled agaist Nabuchodonosor which had receaued an othe of him by god, & was to styfe necked & to harde herted to turne vnto the Lorde god of Israel. C Therto al the rulers of the prestes ỽ ÿ people trespaced a pace after al maner of abhominacyons of the hethē & poluted ÿ house of ÿ lorde which he had halowed in Jerusalem.

And ÿ Lord God of their fathers sent to thē by his messengers, sendynge thē betymes: for he had compassyon on hys people and on hys dwellyng place. But they mocked the messengers of God and despised their wordes & mysse vsed his prophetes, vntyll ÿ wrath of the Lord so arose against hys people that it was past remedie. And so he brought vpō them the king of Caldeye & slue their young men ỽ the swerd in their holy temple, & nether spared younge man or mayden, nether olde man, nether so moch as him ÿ stowped for age: But gaue all into his hande.

Then gatt up ye pryncypall fathers of C Juda and BenJamin, & the preastes and Leuites, & all they whose spryte God had raysed to go up, and to buylde the house of ye Lord at Jerusalem. And al they that were about them strengthed their hand wt vessels of syluer and golde, withe good & catel, and Jewels, besyde that whych they gaue of theyr own frewyl. And king Cyrus broughte forth of the vessells of the house of the lorde, which Nabuchodonozor had takē oute of Jerusalē, & put in the house of his god. But Cirus the kinge of D

Hagab, the childrẽ of Samlai, the childrẽ of Hanan, the chyldren of Gadel, the chyldrẽ of Gahar, ẏ childrẽ of Reaiah, the chil dren of Razin, the chyldren of Necuba, ẏ chyldren of Gazan, ẏ chyldren of Usa, the childrẽ of Phaseah, ẏ childrẽ of Besai, ẏ chyldren of Asena, the chyldrẽ of Meuni, the children of Nephussim, the children of Bacbuc, the chyldren of Hacupha, the chil dren of Harhur, ẏ children of Bezluth, ẏ childrẽ of Mahira, ẏ childrẽ of Harsa, the childrẽ of Barcom, the childrẽ of Sisara, the childrẽ of Thamah, ẏ chyldren of Ne-ziah, the children of Hatipha.

The chyldren of Salomõs seruaũtes, The children of Sotai, ẏ children of So dren of Iaalah, ẏ children of Darcon, the chyldrẽ of Gedel, the chyldren of Sapha tiah, the chyldren of Hattil, the children of Pochereth of Zebaim, ẏ children of Ami.

All the Nethinims & the chyldren of Salomõs seruaũtes were all to geather, thre hundred and two and nynetye.

And these wente vp also, Thelmelah, Thelharsa, Cherub, Addon and Emer.
But they coulde not shewe their fathers house nor their sede, whether they were of Israel. The chyldren of Delaiah, the chil dren of Tobiah, the chyldren of Necoda, D syxe hundred and two & fiftye. And of the children of the prestes. The childrẽ of Hobaiah, ẏ childrẽ of Hakoz, ẏ childrẽ of Ber zilai, whyche toke one of the daughters of Berzilai ẏ Galaadite to wyfe, & was coũ ted amonge the same names: these sought the regyster of their byrthe, and found no ne, therfore were they put frõ ẏ presthode.
And Athirsatha sayde vnto them, that they shulde not eate of the most holye, tyl there rose vp a preast with the lyght and perfectnesse.

The whole congregacion as one man, was two and fourtye thousand, thre hundred and thre score: beside their seruauntes and maydens, of whome there were seuen thousande, thre hundred and seuē and thirtye. And they had two hundred syngynge men and wemen, seuen hundred and sixe & thyrtye horses, two hundred and fyue and fourtye Mules, foure hundred and fyue and thirtye Camels, and syxe thousand, seuen hundred and twentye Asses. And certaine of ẏ chefe fathers, whē they came to the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, they offered wyllingly vnto the house of God, ẏ it shulde be set in his place, and gaue after their abilite vnto ẏ treasure of ẏ worck, one and thre score thousand drāmes, & .v. thousande pounde of syluer, and an hundred prestes garmentes. So the prestes & the Leuites, and certayne of ẏ people and the syngers, and the porters, and the Nethinims dwelte in their cytyes, and all Israell in theyr cytyes.

A 3. Esd. v. f. And when the seuenth moneth came & the chyldren of Israel were now in theyr cities, the people came together euē as one man, vnto Jerusalē. And there stode vp Jesua the sonne of Josedec and his brethren the prestes, and Zorobabel the sōne of Salathiel & hys brethren, and buylded the aultare of the God of Israel, to offer burntofferynges theron, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moses the man of God, & the aultar set they vpon hys fotestes (for there was a fearfulnes among them because of the nacions and landes) & offered burntofferynges theron vnto the Lord* in the mornyng & at euē. And held Numeri. B the feast of Tabernacles as it is wrytten, and offered burnte sacrifices daylye in order, accordynge to the custome, daye by daye. Afterwarde the daylye burntofferynges also, and of the new Mones & of all the feast dayes of the Lorde that were halowed, and all maner of frewill offerynges, which they dyd of their owne fre wyl vnto the Lorde.

Upon the fyrste daye of the seuenth moneth begane they to offer burntsacryfices vnto the Lorde. But the foundacion of ẏ temple of the Lorde was not yet layd. Neuertheles they gaue money vnto thee masons and carpenters, and meate and drincke and oyle vnto them of Zidō & of Tire, to brynge them Cedre tymbre from Libanus by See vnto *Joppa, accordynge to the commaundement of Cyrus the kyng of Persia. *Otherwyse Japho.

C In the seconde yere of their commynge vnto the house of God at Jerusalem in ẏ second monethe, begane Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua thee sonne of Josedec, & the remnaūt of their brethrē the prestes and Leuites, and al they that were come out of the captyuite vnto Jerusalem, & appoynted the Leuites from twētie yere olde and aboue, to se that the worcke of the house of the Lorde went forward. And Jesua stode wyth his sonnes and brethren, & Cadmiel wyth his sonnes, and the chyldren of Juda, to forther the worckmen of the house of God, namely the chyldren of Henadad wyth their chyldren and their brethren the Leuites.

And when the buylders layde the foundacion of the temple of the Lord, the prestes stode in their araye, wyth trompettes, And the Leuites the children of Asaph wyth cymbales, to prayse the Lorde* after the maner of Dauid kynge of Israell. *1 pa. xvi. b D And they sange to geather, geuynge prayse & thankes vnto the Lorde, because he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for euer vpon Israel. And all ẏ people shouted loude in praysinge the Lorde, because the foundacion of ẏ house of the lord was layde. Manye also of the olde prestes and Leuites and auncient fathers, whiche had sene ẏ first house: whē the foūdaciō of this house was layed before their eyes, wept wyth a loude voyce. And manye shouted wyth ioye, so that the noyse gaue a great sound, in so moch ẏ the people coulde not knowe the ioyfull sounde for the noyse of the wepynge amonge the people: for the people shouted with a loude crye, so that the noyse was herde farre of.

The .iiii. Chapter.

But when the aduersaryes of Juda and Ben Jamin heard, ẏ the chyldre of the captyuite buylde A buylde the temple vnto the Lorde God of Israel, they came to Zorobabell and to the pryncypall fathers, and sayde vnto them: We wyll buylde wyth you: for we seke ÿ Lorde youre God lyke as ye do. And we haue done sacryfyce vnto him, sence the ty me that Asor Hadon the kynge of Assur broughte vs vp hyther. But Zorobabel and Jesua and the other auncient fathers of Israell answered them: It belongeth not to you, but to vs to buyld ÿ house vn to oure God: for we oure selues wyl buyl de alone vnto the Lord our God of Israel, *as Cyrus the kynge of Persia hathe commaunded vs.

Then the folcke of the lande hyndered B the people of Juda, and made them afray de to buylde, and hyred councelers against them and hyndered theyr deuyce, as longe as Cyrus the kynge of Persia lyued, vn tyl the raygne of Darius king of Persia.
But when Ahasuerus was kynge, in the begynnynge of hys raygne wrote they vn to hym a complaynte agaynst them of Ju da and Jerusalem.

And in the tyme of Artharcerses, wrote Bisellam, Mithridates, Thabeel and the other of their councell vnto Artharcerses the kynge of Persia. But the scripture of the letter was wrytten in the Syrians spea che, and was interpreted in the langage of the Syrians.. Rehum the chaunceler, and Samsai the scrybe, wrote thys letter agaynste Jerusalem to Artharcerses the kynge.

We Rehum the *chaunceler, and Sam sai the scrybe, and other of the councell of Dina of Arphasath, of Tarpilat, of Persia, of Arach, of Babilon, of Susan, of Deha and of Elam, and other of the people, whome greate and noble Asnaphar broughte ouer, and set in the cytics of Sa maria, and other on thys syde the water, a in Ceneeth. And thys is the summe of the letter that they sente vnto kynge Ar-tharcerses.

C Thy seruauntes the men on this syde the water a in Ceneeth. Be it knowne vnto ÿ kyng, that the Jewes are come vp from to vs into Jerusalem a cytie sedicious [illegible] [illegible] and buylde the same, and lay ÿ foundacion of the walles therof, a repaire them. Be it knowne now therfore vnto the king, that yf this cytie be buylded and the walles made vp agayne, thê shal not they geue tribute, tolle, and yearly custome, a 3 cue vnto ÿ kynges shal thus hurt redounde. But nowe what we all are therby why the destroyed thee temple, we wolde no lôger se the kynges dyshonoure. Therfore sent we out, a caused the kynge to be certy fyed therof: That it maye be soughte in ÿ Chronycles of thy progenitoures, and so shalt thou fynde in the same Chronicles, a perceaue, that this citie is sedicious a noy some vnto kynges a landes, a ÿ they cause other also to rebel of olde, a for ÿ same cause was thys citie destroyed. Therfore do we certifye ÿ kyng, that yf thys citie be buylded, and the walles therof made vp, thou shalt kepe nothyng on this syde ÿ wa ter by the reason of it.

Thê sêt the kynge an âswere vnto Re-D hum the chaunceler, a Samsai the Scribe, a to ÿ other of their councel ÿ dwelt in Samaria, a vnto ÿ other beyond the water. Peace a salutaciô. The letter which ye sêt vnto vs, hath bene opêly red before me, and I haue cômaûded to make searche: a it is foûd, ÿ this citie of olde hath made in surrecciô against kinges, a how ÿ vprore a rebelliô hath bene cômitted therî. There haue bene myghtie kinges also at Jerusa-lê which haue raygned ouer all that is beyonde the water, a tolle, trybute a yearlye custome was geuê vnto them. Do ye now after thys commaundement, forbid the same men, that the citie be not buylded, til I haue geuê cômaûdement. Take hede nowe that ye be not negligent here in, lest the kin ges haue harme there thorowe.

Nowe when kynge Artharcerses letter was red before Rehum the chaûceler and Samsai the Scrybe and their councell, they wêt vp in all the haste to Jerusalem vnto the Jewes, a forbad them with violence and power. Then ceassed the worke of the house of God at Jerusalê, a conty-nued so vnto the seconde yere of Darius kynge of Persia.

The .v. Chapter.

The Prophetes, Aggeus and Zachary ÿ sonne of Addo, pro phecied vnto ÿ Jewes ÿ were in Iuda & Ierusalē, in the name of ye God of Israel. Thē gat vp Zorobabel the son ne of Salathiel, & Iesua the sonne of Io-sedec, & began to buylde the house of God at Ierusalem, and wyth them the Prophe tes of God whiche helped thē. At the same tyme came to thē Thathanai the captayne on thys syde the water, & Stharbuzanai, & their councelers, & sayd thus vnto thē. Who hath cōmaunded you to buylde this house and to make vp thee walles therof? Then B tolde we thē the names of the men, ye made thys buyldyng. But the eye of theyr God came vpon the Elders of the Iewes, that they coulde not cause them to ceasse, tyl the matter was brought before Darius, & tyl they had answered by letters ther vnto.

Thys is the copie of the letter that Tha thanai the captayne on this syde the water and Starbuzanai, and theyr councellers of Apharsach (which were on this syde the water) sent vnto kinge Darius. And thys is the entent of the wordes that they sente vnto him: Unto Darius the king, al pea ce. Be it knowē vnto the king, that we came into Iewry to the house of ye great god which is buylded with rough stone, and beames are layed in the walles, & ye worcke goeth fast forth, & prospereth in their hān-des. We asked therfore the elders & sayde C vnto them: Who hath cōmaunded you to buyld this house, & to make vp the walles therof? We asked theyr names also, ye we mighte certyfie thē, & haue wrytten the nāmes of the men that were theyr rulers.

But they answered vs wyth these wor des, & sayd: We are the seruauntes of the God of heauen & earth, & buyld the house that was byllded many yeres a go, which a great kyng of Israel buylded & sett vp.
And after oure fathers had prouoked the God of heauē vnto wrath, & he gaue them ouer in the hande of Nabuchodonozor thee kyng of Babilon the Caldee, which brake downe thys house, and caryed thee people awaye vnto Babilon.

But in ye fyrst yere of Cyrus the king D of Babilō, the same kynge Cirus cōmaū-ded to buylde thys house of God, for thee vessilles of gould & syluer in the house of God, which Nabuchodonozor toke oute of the temple at Ierusalem, and broughte them into the temple at Babilō, those dyd Cyrus the king take oute of the temple at Babilon, & he delyuered thē vnto Sasbazar by name, whō he made captaine, & said vnto him. Take these vessels, go thy way and bringe them vnto the tēple at Ierusā lem, & let the house of God be buylded in hys place. Then came the same Sasbazar and layde thee foundation of the house of God at Ierusalē. Sence that tyme hath it bene in buylding, & yet is it not fynisshed.
Yf it please the kyng now, let ther be serch made in the kynges treasure house which is at Babilon, whether it haue bene kyng Cyrus commaundemente, that the house of God at Ierusalem shulde be buylded: and sende vs thee kynges mynde concernyng the same.

The commaundemēt of Darius king of Persia after the tēple was buylded and dedycat, the childrē of Israel kepe the feast of vnleuened bread.

The. vi. Chapter.

Then cōmaunded king Darius, ye search shuld be made in A the library of the kinges trea sure house, which laye at Ba-bilon. And at Egbathanis in a castel that lyeth in the lād of the Me-des, ther was foūd a boke, & in it was ther an acte wryttē after this maner: In ye first yere of king Cirus, commaūded the same king Cirus to buylde the house of God at Ierusalē, in the place where the sacrifices is made, & to laye the foundation to beare thre skore cubites heyght, & thre score cubi tes bredth, & thre walles of rough stones, and one walle of timber, and the expences shalbe geuē of the kinges house. And thee gould & siluer vessell of the house of God (which Nabuchodonozor toke out of ye tē ple at Ierusalē, & brought vnto Babilō) shalbe restored agayne, that they maye be brought vnto the temple at Ierusalem to theyr place into the house of God.

Get you farre frō thē therfore, ye Tha-B thanai captaine beyond ye water, & Sethar buzanai, & your councelers which are beyond the water, get ye away frō them. Let the worke in ye house of God, that the captayne of the Iewes and theyr elders maye buyld the house of god in his place. I haue cōmaunded also what shalbe done to ye elders of Iuda for the buylding of ye hou se of God, that ther shall diligently be taken of ye kinges goodes, euen of the tentes beyond the water, ⁊ geuen vnto the men, ŷ that they be not hindred. And yf they haue neade of calues, lambes or goates, for the burntoffring vnto the god of heauē, whea te, salt, wine ⁊ oyle, after the custome of the priestes at Ierusalē, there shalbe geuen thē dayly as is according: and se that thys be done wyth out faute, that they maye offre swete sauoures vnto the God of heauē, ⁊ praye for the kinges lyfe, ⁊ for his childrē This cōmaundement haue I geuen. And what mā soeuer he be ŷ altereth these wor des, ther shal a beame be takē frō his hou se ⁊ set vp, ⁊ he shalbe hanged theron, and his house shalbe prayled for the dede.

But the God that dwelleth in heauē, de C stroye al kinges ⁊ people, that put to their hand to alter ⁊ to breake downe the house of God at Ierusalem. I Darius haue cō maunded, that this be diligently done.

Thē Tharthanai the captayne beyond ŷ water, ⁊ Setharbuzanai with their counce lers (to whom king Darius had sent) dyd theyr diligence. And the Elders of the Ie wes buylded, ⁊ they prospered thorow the Prophecienge of Aggeus the prophet and Zacharye the sonne of Addo: ⁊ they bylded and set vp the worke, accordyng to the com maundemēt of the God of Israel, ⁊ after the cōmaundemēt of Cyrus, Darius and Artharerses kynges of Persia. And they perfourmed the house vnto the thyrd day of the moneth Adar, that was in the syxte yere of the raygne of king Darius.

ii.Pa.xx.b * And the childrē of Israel, the priestes, ŷ Leuites, ⁊ the other chyldrē of the captiuy te helde the dedication of the house of god wyth ioye, ⁊ offred at the dedication of the house of God, an hundred calues, two hū dred lambes foure hundred goates: ⁊ for the synneoffrynge for all Israel twelue he goates, according to the noumbre of the try bes of Israel, ⁊ set the priestes in their cour ses, ⁊ the Leuites in theyr offices to mynı ster vnto God which is at Ierusalem as it is wrytten in the boke of Moyses.

D And the chyldren of the captiuite helde Passeouer vpō the fourtenth daye of thee first moneth: for the priestes ⁊ Leuites had puryfied them selues, so that they were all cleane as one man, ⁊ kylled Passeouer for al the chyldren of the captiuite, ⁊ for there brethren the Priestes, and for them selues.

And the chyldren of Israel which were to me agayne out of captiuite, and al soch as had separated thē selues vnto them from the fylthynesse of the Hethen in the lande, to seke the Lord God of Israel, ate ⁊ held the feast of vnleuended bred seuen dayes with ioye: for the Lord had made thē glad and turned the hert of the kynge of Assur vnto them, so that theyr hādes were streng thed in the worke of the house of God, whi che is the God of Israell.

The Notes.

* I Some reade. And ther was founde in a coffe (that was in the palace in the lād of Medes) a vo lume: and therin was wrytten soche a memoryal, ⁊c.

¶ By the commaundement of Artharerses, Esdras taketh his cōpanyons the chyldrē of Israel, and re turneth to Ierusalem.

The.vii. Chapter.

After these actes in the raygne A of Artharerses king of Per- [illegible] sia, ther went vp frō Babilon Esdras the sōne of Saraiah the sonne of Asariah, the sōne of Helkiah, the sonne of Selum, the sonne of Zadoc, the sonne of Ahitob, thee sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Asariah, the sōne of Maraioth, thee sonne of Zarahiah, thee sonne of Ozi, the sōne of Boki, the sōne of Abisua, the sonne of Phinehes, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron thee chefe preste. This Esdras was a quicke scrybe in the lawe of Moyses, * which the Lorde [illegible] god of Israel dyd geue. And the king ga ue him al that he requyred, according to ŷ hāde of the Lord his God vppō him. And ther wēt vp certayne of the childrē of Isra el, ⁊ of the prestes, ⁊ of the Leuites, of thee singers, of ŷ porters, ⁊ of thee Nethinims vnto Ierusalē, in the seuenth yere of king Artharerses. And they came to Ierusalem in ŷ fyfth moneth, that is the seuenth yere of the king. For vpon the first daye of the fyrst moneth, deuysed he to go vp frō Ba bilon: ⁊ on the fyrst daye of the fyfth mo neth came he to Ierusalem, accordinge to the good hand of God vpō him. For Es dras prepared his hert to seke the lawe of the Lorde and to do it, ⁊ to teache the pre- B cepte and iudgemente in Israell.

And thys is the coppye of the letter, that kyng Artharerses gaue vnto Esdras the Preiste, the scrybe, which was a teacher in the wordes of the Lorde and of hys statu tes ouer Israell. Unto Esdras the Priest and Scrybe in the lawe of the God of hea uē, peace & salutaciō. I haue cōmaūded, y al they of the people of Israel, & of the prestes & Leuites in my realme, whyche are mynded of theyr owne good wil to go vp to Ierusalē, that they go with the, beynge sent of the kinge & of the seuen Lordes of the coūcel, to vyset Iuda & Ierusalem, accordyng to the law of God, which is in thy hand: And that thou shuldest take with y siluer & gould, which the king & the lordes of his coūcel geue of their owne good wyl vnto the God of Israell (whose habitaciō is at Ierusalem) & al the syluer and gould that thou canst fynd in al the coūtre of Babilon: wyth it that the people & prestes geue of theyr owne good wyl vnto the house of God at Ierusalem.

C Take thou the same, & bye dylygentely with the same moneye, calues, lābes, goates, & meatoffringes & drinkoffringes: to be offered vppon the aultare of the house of your God at Ierusalē. And loke what it lyketh the and thy brethrē to do with the remnaunt of the moneye, that do after the wyll of youre God. And the vesselles that are geuē the for the ministraciō in the house of thy God, those delyuer thou before God at Ierusalem.

And whatsoeuer thing more shal be nedeful for the house of thy God, which is necessary for the to spende, let the same be geue out of the kinges chamber. I king Arthaxerses haue cōmaūded al the treasures beyonde thee water, that loke whatsoeuer Esdras the preste and scrybe in the law of the God of heauen, requyreth of you, that ye fulfyl the same deligently, vntil an hundred Talentes of syluer, vntyll an hundred Quarters of wheate, and tyll an hundred Batthes of wyne, and tyll an hundred Batthes of oyle, and salte withoute

D measure. Whatsoeuer belōgeth to the law of the God of heauen, let the same be done with diligence for the house of the God of heauē, that there come no wrath vpon the kynges realme and his chyldren.

And knowē be it vnto you, that ye shal haue no auctoryte to requyre taringe & custome, & yearly rentes vpō any of the prestes, Leuites, singers, porters, Nethinims and mynisters in thee house of thys God. But thou Esdras (after the wysdō of the God that is in thy hand) set thou iudges & arbiters, to iudge al the people that is beyonde Iordan, eue all soche as knowe the lawe of thy God: and thē that know it not those se that ye teache. And whosoeuer wil not diligently fulfyll the lawe of thy God and the kinges lawe, shal haue hys iudgmēt for the dead whether it be vnto death or to be banisshed, or too be condemned in goodes, or to be put in preson.

*Prayseed be the Lord God of oure fathers, which so hathe inspired the kynges hert to garnish the house of God at Ierusalē: & hath enclyned his mercy vnto me in the presence of the king, & his councelers, and before all the kinges hye estates. And I was conforted (according to the hāde of the Lord my God ouer me) & so geathered I the heades of Israel to gether, that they myght go vp with me.

C The nomber of thē that returned to Ierusalem wyth Esdras

The. viii. Chapter.

These are thee heades of theyr fathers that were named, whiche went vp with me frō Babilō, what tyme as kinge Arthaxerses raigned. Of y chyldren of Phinehes, Gersom: of the chyldrē of Ithamar, Daniel: of the childrē of Dauid, Hatus: of the childrē of Zecaniah, of the chyldrē of Pharos, Zachary, & wythe hym were nōbred an hundred & fyftie mē. Of the children of Pahath Moab, Elioenai the sonne of Zarahiah and wyth him two hundred men. Of the chyldren of Zechaniah the sonne of Iahasiel, & with him thre hūdred men. Of the chyldren of Adin Abed the sonne of Ionathan, & with hym fyftie men. Of the chyldren of Elam, Isaiah the sonne of Athaliah, & with him seuentie men. Of the children of Saphatia Zabadiah the sonne of Michael, & wythe hym foure score men.

B Of y childrē of Ioab, Obadiah y sōne of Iehiel, & wyth hym two hundred and xviii. men. Of the chyldren of Selomith, the sonne of Iosphiah, & with him an hundred and thre men.

Of the chyldrē of Bebai, Zachary the sonne of Bebai, & with him eyght & twentie mē. Of the childrē of Azgad, Iohanā, the sonne of Hakatan, & wyth him an hundred &

dred & ten men. Of the last childrē of Ado nicam, & these were theyr names: Eliphe-let, Jehiell & Samaiah, and with the thre score men. Of the childrē of Begui, Uthai and Zabud & with thē seuentie men. And I gathered thē to geather by the water y renneth towarde Ahaua, & there abode we C thre dayes. And whē I loked amonge the people and the prestes, I founde no Leui-tes there. Then sent I Elieser, Ariel, Se-meiah, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathā, Nathā Zachary & Mosolam the rulers, & Joia-rib and Elnathan the teachers, & those sent I vnto Edo the cheefeste at Casphia, that they shuld fetch vs ministers for the house of oure God, & I told thē what they shuld saye vnto Edo and to his brethrē the Ne-thinims at Casphia.

And (according to the good hand of our God vpō vs) they brought vs a wyse mā from among the chyldren of Moholi the sonne of Leui the sōne of Israell, euē Sa rabia with his sonnes & brethrē, eyghtene And Hasabia, & with him Isaiah of y chil dren of Merari, wyth his brethre & theyr sonnes, xx. And of the Nethinims, whome D Dauid & y Princes gaue to minister vnto the Leuites, two hundred and twentye, all named by name.

And euē ther at the water besyde Aha-ua caused I a fastīng to be proclamed, that we might hūble our selues before our God, to seke of him a right waye for vs, & oure chyldren and al oure substaunce. For I was ashamed to requyre of y king, sou diers and horsemē, to helpe vs against the enemye in the way. For we had sayd vnto the king: The hand of our God is vpō all thē that seke him in goodnes, and his violence and wrath vpō all them that forsake E him. So we fasted, & sought thys at our God and he hearde vs.

And I toke out twelue of the chefe prestes, Sarabia & Hasabia, and ten of theyr brethren wyth them, and weyed them there the syluer & gould & vesseles for the heueoffring vnto the house of our God, whych the king and the Lordes of his councell & princes, and al Israel that were at hande, had geuē to the heueofferinge: & ther weyed I them vnder theyr hand syxe hūdred and fyftie talentes of syluer, & in syluer vessell an hundred talentes, and in gould an hun dred talentes, twentie cuppes of goulde of a thousande drammes, and two costely or-namētes of good brasse, as cleare as goul de, & sayd vnto them: Ye ar holy vnto the Lorde, therfore are the vesselles holy also, and so is the syluer & gould that is geuen of a good wyl vnto the Lord God of you re fathers: Watch ye therfore and kepe it, F tyll ye weye it downe before the chefe prestes and Leuites, and auncient fathers of Israel at Jerusalem in the chestes of thee house of the Lorde. Then toke the prestes and Leuites that weyed syluer & gould & vessell, to bringe it to Jerusalem vnto the house of our God. So we brake vp from the water of Ahaua on thee twelueth daye of the fyrst moneth, to go vnto Jerusalē: and the hand of our God was vpon vs, & delyuered vs from thee hande of thee enemies and priuye waytinges by the waye.
And we came to Jerusalem, & abode there thre dayes. But on the fourth daye was y G syluer and goulde, and vessell weyed in y house of our God vnder the hand of Me-remoth the sonne of Uriah the preste, and wyth hym Eleazar the sonne of Phinches and wyth them Josabad the sonne of Jesua, and Noadiah the sonne of Benoi the Leuites, according to the nombre & weigh te of euerye one. And the weyghte was all wrytten vp at the same tyme.

And the children of the captiuite, which were come out of preson, offred burntoffe ringes vnto thee God of Israell: xii. bullockes for all Israell, syxe and nyntye rāmes, seuen and seuentie lambes, & twelue goates for a synneoffring, all to the burnt offringe of the Lord. And they delyuered the kynges commyssion vnto thee kinges offycers, & to the captaynes on thys syde y water. And they promoted the people and the house of God.

The ix. Chapter.

VVhē al this was performed I the rulers came to me, & sayd:
The people of Israell, & the prestes prestes, & Leuites are not separated from the nacios in the landes as touching theyr abhominacios, namely of the Cananites, Hethites, Pheresites, Iebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egiptians, and Amorites.

* For they haue take the daughters of the same, & theyr sonnes, and haue myxte thee holy sede wyth the nacios in the lades: and the hand of the princes & rulers hath bene principal in this trespace.
* Whe I heard this, I rent my clothes and my rayment, and plucte of thee hearre of my head and of my beard, & sate mourning. And ther resorted vnto me al soch as feared the word of the Lord God of Israel because of the great transgressio. And I sate mourninge vntyl the euenynge sacry-B fyce. And aboute the euenynge sacryfice I rose vp fro my heuynes, & rete my clothes and my raymet, and fell vpon my knees, & spred oute my handes vnto the Lorde my God, and sayde.
My God, I am a shamed, & darre not lyfte vp myne eyes vnto the my God: for oure wyckednesses are growne ouer oure head, & our trespaces are waxen great vnto the heauen. Sence the tyme of oure fathers haue we bene in great trespace vnto this daye, * & because of our wickednesses haue we & our kinges bene delyuered into the hande of the kinges of the nacios, into the swerde, into captiuite, into spoyle, and into confusio of face, as it is come to passe thys daye.
But now is ther a lyttle & sodayne gra-C ciousnes come fro the Lorde oure God, so y some of vs are escaped, y he maye geue vs a nayle in his holy place, that our God maye lyghte our eyes, and geue vs a lytle lyfe in our bondage. For we ar bondmen, & our god hath not forsake vs in our bondage, & hath enclined mercy vnto vs in the syghte of the kinges of Persia, y he shulde geue vs lyfe, & promote the house of oure God, & to sett vp the desolatio thereof, & to geue vs an hedge in Iuda and Ierusale.
And now O our God, what shal we say after this: for we haue forsake thy comaundementes, whych thou hast comaded by thy seruauntes the Prophetes, and sayde: The lad vnto which ye go to possesse it, is an vnclean lad thorow y filthines of the people of the lades, in theyr abhominacios wherwich they haue made it ful of vnclenes on euery syde. Therfore shal ye not geue your D doughters vnto their sonnes, and theyr daughters shal ye not take vnto youre sonnes & seke not their peace & welth for euer, that ye may be stronge, and enioye y good in the land, & that ye & youre children may haue the inheritaunce of it for euermore.
And after all this that is come vpon vs (because of oure euell dedes, & greate trespace) thou our god hast spared oure wyckednesses, and hast geue vs a deliueraunce as it is come to passe thys daye.
As for vs, we haue turned backe, & haue let go thy comaundementes, to make contracte wyth the people of these abhominacions. Wylt thou then be wroth at vs, tyll we be vtterly consumed, so that nothing remayne, and tyll there be no delyueraunce?
O Lord God of Israel, thou arte righteouse, for we remayne yet escaped as it is thys daye. Beholde in thy presence are we in oure trespace, for because of it is ther no standing before the.

The .x. Chapter.

And whe Esdras prayed after this maner, & knowleged, wep te, & lay before y house of god A ther resorted vnto hym oute of Israel a very great cogregacio of me & wemen, & children: for the people wepte very sore. And Sechaniah the sonne of Iehiel one of the childre of Elam answered, & sayd vnto Esdras: We haue trespaced agaynst the Lord our God, in y we haue taken straunge wyues of all the people of the land. Now there is hope yet in Israel cocerninge this therfore lette vs make a couenaut now with oure god, that we shal put awaye al the wyues (and soche as are borne of them) according to the coucell of the Lord, and of them that feare the commaundemente of oure God, that we maye doo accordinge to the lawe. Gett the vp therfore, for the matter belongeth vnto the. We wyll be wyth the, be of good comforte, and do it.
* The arose Esdras, & toke an othe of y rulers, prestes and Leuites, & of al Israel that they shulde do according to this word and they sware. And Esdras stode vp be- B fore the house of God, & wēte into the chā-ber of Johanā y sōne of Eliasib. And whē he came thither, he ate no bred, nor dranke water: for he mourned because of the trās-gression of thē that had ben in captiuitie.

And thei caused a proclamatiō be made thorow out Juda & Jerusalem, vnto al y childrē which hadde bene in captiuitie, that they shuld geather thē selues together vnto Jerusalē: And that whosoeuer came not within thre dayes according to the deuyce of the rulers and elders, al his substaunce shuld be forfet, & be put out from the congregation of the captiue.

Then al the men of Juda & BēJamin geathered thē selues to geather vnto Jeru salem in thre dayes, that is on the twentye daye of the nyneth moneth: & al the people sate in the strete before the house of god, & trembled because of thee matter, and for y rayne. And Esdras the prest stode vp, and Deut. vii. a Jud. c. iii. a sayd vnto thē: * Ye haue trāsgressed, that ye haue taken straūge wiues, to make the trespace of Israel yet more: confesse nowe therfore vnto the Lorde God of youre fathers, & do hys pleasure, & separate youre selues from the people of the land, & from the straūge wyues. Then answered al the congregation, & sayd with a loude voyce: Let it be done as thou hast sayde, But the people are manye, & it is a raynie wether, & they cannot stand here without, neyther is this a worke of one daye or two, for we are many that haue offended in this trāsgres-sion. Let vs appoynte our rulers therfore in al the cōgregation, y al they which haue taken straunge wyues in our cyties, maye come at that tyme appoynted, & the elders of euery cytie & theyr Judges wyth them, tyll the wrath of our God be turned away from vs for thys offence.

C Then were appoynted Jonathā y sonne of Asahel & Jahasia the sōne of Thekuah ouer thys matter: And Mosolā & Saba-thai y Leuites holpe them. And y children of the captiuitie did euen so. And Esdras y prest, & the aūcient heades thorow y house of theyr fathers, & al that were nowe rehearsed by name, separated them selues, & sate thē downe on the first daye of y tenth moneth to examine this matter. And of y. i.

¶ Nehemiah buttelar to kyng Artharxeses prayeth to God for the people.

The. J. Chapter.

A These are the actes of Nehemi ah the sōne of * Hachalia. It fortuned in the moneth * Cas leu in the twentie yere, that J was in the castell at Susan: and Hanani one of my brethrē came wyth certayne men of Juda, and J asked them how ỹ Jewes dyd that were delyuered & escaped from the captyuite, and how it wē te at Jerusalem. And they sayde unto me: The remnaunt of the captyuyte are there in the lande in greate mysfortune and rebuke. * The walles of Jerusalem ar broken downe, and the gates therof are brent wythe fyre.
Whē J hearde these wordes, J satt me B downe and wepte, & mourned two dayes, & fasted and prayed before the god of hea uen & said: O Lorde God of heauen, thou greate & terryble God, * thou that kepeste couenaunt and mercye for thē that loue ỹ and obserue thy commaundementes: lett thyne eares herken, & thyne eyes be open, ỹ thou maiest heare the praier of thy seruaū te, which J praye now before the day and nyghte for the chyldren of Israel thy seruauntes, and knowledg the sinnes of the chyldren of Israel, whych we haue cōmit-ted agaynst the.
C And J & my fathers house haue sinned al so. We haue bene corrupte unto ỹ, in that we haue not kept the cōmaūdemētes, statutes & lawes, which ỹ commaūdedst thy seruaūt Moses. Yet call to remembraūce the worde ỹ thou cōmaundest thy seruaūt Moses, & saydeste: Yf ye transgresse, then wyl J scatter you abrode amōg ỹ naciōs.
But yf ye turne unto me, & kepe my commaūdemētes and do thē: though ye were cast out unto the uttermost part of heauē yet wil J gather you from thence, & wyll bring you from thēce, euē unto the place, ỹ J haue chose for my name to dwel there D They are thy seruaūtes, & thy people whō ỹ hast delivered thorow thy great power and myghtye hande. O Lorde, lette thyne eares herken to the prayer of thy seruaun-te, and the prayer of thy seruaūtes, whose desyre is to feare thy name, and let thy ser uaunt prospere thys daye, & graunte hym mercy in the syght of this man: for J was the kynges butelar.

¶ After Nehemiah had obtained letters of Artharxeses he cometh to Jerusalem, & buyldethe the walles.

The. ij. Chapter.

In ỹ moneth Nisan in ỹ twē- A tyeth yeare of kyng Artharxerses, when the wyne stode be fore hym, J toke up ỹ wyne, & gaue it unto ỹ kinge and J was heuy in hys presēce. Thē sayd ỹ king unto me: why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sicke, that is not the matter, but ỹ arte heuy herted. Neuertheles J was sore afraied & sayde unto the kyng: god saue ỹ kynges lyfe for euer, shuld J not loke sad ly? the citie of my fathers burial lieth wast & the gates thereof are consumed wt fyre.
Then sayde ỹ kyng unto me: what is then thy request? then made J my prayer to the god of heauē, & sayd unto the kynge: yf it please the king, & yf thy seruaūt be fauou red in thy sighte. J beseke ỹ send me into Juda unto the citie of my fathers burial, that J maye buylde it.
And the kynge sayde unto me, & so dyd the quene that sat by him: how longe shall B thy iourney cōtinue, & whē wilt thou come agayne? And it pleased ỹ king to send me, and J set him a tyme, & sayd unto the kin-ge: yf it please the king, let him geue me let ters to the captaynes beyonde the water, ỹ they maye conueye me ouer, tyl J come in to Juda: & letters unto Asaph the lord of the kinges wood, ỹ he may geue me wood for beames to ỹ gates of the palace, which ar hard on the house & harde on the walles of the cytye, and for the house that J shal entre into. And the kynge gaue me accor dyng to the good hande of God upō me.
And when J came to the captaynes beyō de the water, J gaue them the kynges letters. And the kynge sent captaynes and horsmen wyth me.
But whē Sanabalat the Horonite & Tobiah ỹ seruaūt of ỹ Ammonites heard that, it greued them sore, that ther was come a man which soughte the welthe of the chyldren childre of Israel. And when I came to Je C rusalé, & had bene there thre dayes, I gat me vp in ẏ night seasó, & a fewe mé wᵗ me for I told no man what god had geué me in my hert to do at Jerusalem: & ther was not one beast wᵗ me, saue it that I rode vp on. And I rode by nyght vnto the valley porte before the Dragon well, and to the Dongeport, and considered the walles of Jerusalé that were broké downe, & ẏ portes therof cósumed wyth the fier. And I wét ouer vnto ẏ wellporte, and to the kinges condyte, & ther was no rowme for my beast that it could go vnder me. Thé wét I on in the nyghte by ẏ broke syde, & consydered the wall, and turned back & came home agayne to the valley porte.

And the rulers knew not whither I wé te or what I dyd: for hyther to had I not told ẏ Jewes & the prestes, the councelers D & ẏ rulers, & ẏ other ẏ laboured in ẏ worke. And I sayd vnto them: ye se the myse-ry ẏ we are in, how Jerusalé lyeth waste, & how ẏ gates therof are brét with fyre, come let vs buylde vp the walles of Jerusa salé, ẏ we be no more a rebuke. And I told thé of the good hád of my god which was vpon me: and the kynges wordes that he had spoké vnto me. And they sayde: then let vs gett vp, & buylde: and their handes were strengthed to good.

But when Sanaballat ẏ Horonite, & Tobiah the seruaunt of the Ammonites, and Gesé the Arabiá herd it, they laughed vs to skorne, & dyspysed vs, & sayde: what is thys that ye do? Wyll ye fall awaye a-gayne from the kyng? Then answered I them, and sayde: the God of heauen he it is that causeth vs to prospere: & we be his seruauntes. Let vs get vp and build. As for you, ye haue no portió nor right, nor re membraunce in Jerusalem.

Pahah Moab builded the other pece, and the tower besyde the fornace. Next vnto hym buylded Selum the sonne of Halohes the ruler of the halfe quarter of Jeru salem, and hys daughters.

The valleye gate builded Hanun, & the citesins of Zanoah. They buylded it, and set on the dores, lockes & barres therof, & a thousand cubytes on the wall, vnto the Dongeporte. But the Dongeporte buyl ded Melchiah the sóne of Rechab, the ruler of the fourth part of * the vyneyardes: he builded it, & set on the dores, lockes and barres therof. But the Welgate builded Selú the sóne of Cholhosah, the ruler of D the fourth parte of Maspah. He builded it, & couered it, & set on ẏ dores, lockes and barres therof, & the wall vnto the pole of Siloah by the kinges gardé, vnto ẏ steppes that go downe fró the citie of Dauid.
After hi builded Nehemiah the sonne of Asbok, the ruler of ẏ half quarter of Beth zur, vntyll the other side ouer against the sepulchres of Dauid, & to the pole Asuia

and

and vnto the house of the myghtye.
After hym buylded the Leuites, Rehū the sonne of Bani. Nexte vnto hym buyl-E ded Hasabiah the ruler of ẏ halfe quarter at Keilah in his quarter. After hī buylded their brethrē, Bauai ẏ sonne of Henadad, thee ruler of the halfe quarter of Keilah.
After hym builded Ezer the sonne of Josua ẏ ruler of Maspha the other pece har de ouer agaynst ẏ harnesse corner. After hī buylded Baruch the sōne of zabai ẏ other pece worshypfully & costly, frō the corner vnto ẏ dore of the house of Eliasib the hie prest. After him buylded Marimuth ẏ sō ne of Uriah the sonne of Hacos the other pece, frō the dore of ẏ house of Eliasib euē F as lōg as the house of Eliasib extēded. Af ter hī builded ẏ prestes, ẏ mē of ẏ countre.
After him builded Bēiamin & Hasub ouer agaist their house. After thē Asariah ẏ sonne of Maasiah the sonne of Ananiah nexte vnto hys house. After hym buylded Benui the sonne of Henadad ẏ other pece frō the house of Asariah vnto the turnyn ge, and vnto the corner.
After him builded Phalel the sonne of Usai ouer agaynst the corner and the hye tower, which lieth oute ouer from the kynges house, beside the courte of the preson.
After him Phadaiah the sōne of Pharos (as for ẏ Nethinims they dwelt ī Ophel, vnto the Watergate, towarde the Easte wher ẏ tower lyeth out). After hī buylded they of Thekua the other pece ouer agaist the great tower, that lyeth outward, & vn[illegible] to the wall of * Ophel.
G But from the Horsgate forthe buylded the preastes, euery one ouer agaynste hys house. After thē buylded Zadok the sonne of Emer ouer agaynst his house. After hī buylded Semeiah the sonne of Sechaniah the keper of the eastgate. After hī buyl ded Hananiah the sōne of Selemiah, and Hanun the sonne of zalaph the syxt, the other peace. After him builded Mosolā the sōne of Barachiah ouer against his chest.
After hym buylded Melchiah the goldesmithes sonne, vntill the house of the Ne-thinims, & of the merchaūtes ouer agaiste the coūcel gate, & to the parler ī the corner.
And betwene the parlour of the corner vn to the Shepegate buylded ẏ goldsmithes and the merchauntes.

¶ The buyldyng of Jerusalem is hyndred & let, but the Jewes buylde it beyng ready harnysed i lest their enemyes shuld inuade them.

The.iiii. Chapter.

But when Sanaballat heard A ẏ we builded the wal, he was wroth & toke greate indigna nacion & mocked the Jewes & sayd before his brethrē & the host of Samaria: what do ẏ vnpotēt Je-wes? shal they be thus suffred? shal thei of fre? shall they perfourme it ī one day? shal they make the stones whole agayne ẏ are brought to dust, & brēt? And Tobiah ẏ Am monite beside him said: let thē build on, yf a fore go vp, he shall breake downe theyr stonie wal. Heare O ẏ our God, howe we ar despised, turne their shame vpon theyr owne head, that ẏ mayest geue thē ouer in to despising in the lād of theyr captyuyte.
Couer not their wickednes, & put not out their sine frō thy presēce: for they haue pro uoked the builders. Yet builded we ẏ wal, and ioined it whole together, vnto the halfe heyght. And the people were wel mynded to laboure.
But whē Sanaballat, & Tobiah, & the Arabiās, & Ammonites, & Asdodites hear B de ẏ ẏ walles of Jerusalē were made vp, & that they had begōne to stop vp the gap pes they were very wroth, & cōspired al to gether to come & fight agaist Jerusalē, & to make an hinderaūce theri. Neuertheles we made our praier vnto our god, and set watchmē vpō the wall day & night ouer a gaynst them, And Juda sayd: the strēgth of the bearers is to feble, & ther is to moch dust, we are not able to buylde on the wal.
And our aduersaryes thought: they shal not know nether se, tyl we come in the mid des among them, & slaie them, & hinder the worck. But whē the Jewes that dwelt be side thē came out of al ẏ places wher they dwelt aboute vs, and told vs as good as ten times, then set J the people after theyr kinredes w̄ their swerdes, speares & bowes beneth in the low places behynd the wal, & C loked, & gatme vp, and said vnto the chefe men & rulers, and to the other people: be not ye afraied of thē * think vpō the grea te lord which ought to be feared & fyghte [illegible] for youre brethrē, sōnes, daughters, wy-ues, and houses. Neuerthelesse when our enemies hearde that we had gotten worde

of it. God brought their councel to nought, and we turned all againe to the wall, euery one vnto his laboure. And frō that tyme forth it came to passe, yͭ the halfe parte of the yonge men dyd the laboure, & the other halfe parte helde the spares, shyldes, bowes, and brestplates: and the rulers stode behynde all the house of Juda, whyche buylded on the wall, & bare burthens, frō those that laded them. Wyth one hād dyd they the worke, & with the other helde they D theyr weapē. And euery one that buylded, had hys swerde gyrde by hys syde, and so buylded they. And the trompetters stode besyde me.

And I sayde vnto the pryncypall men, & rulers, and to the other people: yͤ worcke is greate & large, & we are separated vpon the wall one farre from another. Loke in what place now ye heare the noyse of yͤ trompett, resort ye thyther vnto vs. *Our god shal fyght for vs, & we will be labourynge in yͤ worcke. And the halfe parte of thē helde yͤ speares frō yͤ mornyng sprynge, tyll yͤ starres came forthe. And at the same tyme sayd I vnto the people: euerye one abyde with hys seruaunte at Jerusalem, that in the night seasō we may geue attendaunce to the watch, & to laboure on the day tyme. As for me and my brethren, & my seruauntes and the men of the watch behynd me, we putt neuer of oure clothes, so moche as to washe oure selues.

Exo.xiiii.d.

¶ The people is vexed with hōger. Nehemiah forbyddeth vsurye. He requyreth not the lyuynge of a captayne.

The .v. Chapter.

A And ther arose a greate complaīt of yͤ peple, & of their wyues agaīst their brethrē yͤ Jewes. And ther were somethat sayd: our sonnes & daughters are to many, let vs take corne for thē & eate, yͭ we may lyue. Some sayde: let vs sett our lādes, vineyardes and houses to pledge, & take vp corne ī yͤ derth. But some sayde: let vs borowe money of the kinges trybute for oure landes & vyneyardes. Now are our brethrens bodyes as our owne bodies and their chyldrē as our children: els shulde we subdue our sonnes and daughters vnto bōdage, and some of our daughters are subdued already, *and no strength is there in oure handes, & other men shall haue oure landes and vyneyardes.

* Where the Hebrew Text readeth: we haue not wherwith to redeame them.

But when I hearde theyr complaynte and soche wordes, it dyspleased me sore, & I aduysed so in my mynde, that I rebuked the councelers, and the rulers, and sayd
B vnto them: *wyll ye requyre vsury one of another? And I brought a greate congregacion against thē and sayde vnto thē: we (after oure abilyte) haue brought our brethē the Jewes, whych were solde vnto the Heythen. And wyll ye sell youre brethren, whō we haue boughte vnto vs? Then helde they their peace, and could fynd nothinge to answere.

Deu.xxiii.

And I said: It is not good that ye do. Ought ye not to walke in yͤ feare of god, because of the rebuke of the Heythen oure enemyes? I and my brethrē, & my seruauntes haue lent thē money and corne: but as for vsury, let vs leaue it. Therfore this C same daye se that ye restore them their lādes agayne, theyr vyneyardes, oyle gardens and houses, and the hundred part of the money of the corne, wyne and oile that ye haue wonne of them. Then sayde they: we wil restore thē againe and wil requyre nothyng of them, and wil do as thou hast spokē. And I called yͤ prestes, and toke an oothe of them, that they shulde do so. And I shoke my lappe, and sayde: God shake out euery mā after yͤ same maner frō hys house and labour, that maynteyneth not thys worde: euen thus be he shaken out, and voyde. And all the congregaciō sayde: Amen, and praysed the Lorde. And the people dyd so.

And from the time forth that it was cōmitted vnto me to be a captayne in the lāde of Juda, namelye from the twentyeth yeare vnto the two and thyrtyeth yeare of kynge Artharerses (that is twelue yeare) I and my brethrē lyued not of soch sustenaūce as was geuē to a captaine. For the olde captaines yͭ were before me, had bene D chargeable vnto the people, and had takē of thē bred and wyne, and fortie sycles of syluer: yee and their seruaūtes had oppressed yͤ people. But so dyd not I, and yͭ because of yͤ feare of god. I laboured also in the work vpō yͤ wall, and bought no lande. And al my seruaūtes came thither together vnto yͤ worcke. Moreouer there were at my table an hundred and fyftye of the

Jewes

Jewes ⁊ rulers, whiche came vnto me, frō amonge the Heythen, that are aboute vs.
And there was prepared me dayly an oxe, and syxe chosen shepe, and byrdes, ⁊ euer once in ten dayes a greate summe of wine.
Yet requyred not I the lyuynge of a captayne for the bondage was greuous vnto the people. * Thyncke vpō me my God vnto the best, accordyng to all that I haue done for thys people.

¶ The buyldyng is yet agayne hyndred and lett.

The. vi. Chapter.

A AND whē Sanaballat, Tobiah ⁊ Gesem the Arabiā, and ỹ other of our enemies heard ỹ I had buylded ỹ wall, ⁊ that ther were no mo gappes ther in (howbeit at ỹ same time had I not hanged the dores vpon the gates) Sanabalat ⁊ Gesē sent vnto me, sayinge come and let vs mete together * in ỹ villages vpō ỹ playne of the citie Ono. Neuertheles they thought to do me euell. Notwythstandyn ge I sent messengers vnto them, sayinge: I haue a great busines to do, I cānot come downe. The worck shuld stand styll, yf I were neclīgēt, ⁊ came downe to you. How beit they sēt vnto me as good as. iiii times after the same maner. And I gaue ỹ same B answere. Thē sēt Sanaballat his seruaūt vnto me the fifth time, with an open letter in hys hād, wherein was written: it is tolde the Heythen, ⁊ Gesem hathe sayd it, that ỹ ⁊ the Jewes thynke to rebel: for the which cause thou buyldest ỹ wall, ⁊ wyll be their kyng in these matters, ⁊ hast ordeyned the Prophetes to preache of the at Jerusalē, and to saye: he is kynge of Juda.
Now shall this come to the kinges ea-res: come nowe therfore, ⁊ let vs take oure coūcel together. Neuertheles I sēt vnto hī saying ther is no soch thyng done as thou sayest: ỹ hast fayned it out of thine owne C hert. For they were all minded to make vs afrayed ⁊ thought: they shall withdrawe their handes frō ỹ worke, ỹ they shall not laboure. Howbeit I strengthed my hande ỹ more. And I came vnto the house of Se-maiah thee sonne of Delaiah the sonne of Mehetabeel, and he had shut him selfe wt in, ⁊ said: let vs come together into ỹ house of god, euē vnto ỹ myddes of the tēple, ⁊ shutt the dores of the temple: for they wyl come to slaye the, yee euē in the nyght wyl they come to put ỹ to death. But I sayde: shuld any soche mā as I flye? who is ỹ, being as I am, that will go in to the tēple, to saue his life? I wyl not go in.
For I perceaued, ỹ God had sente him: Yet spake he prophecie vpō me, neuerthelesse Tobiah ⁊ Sanaballat had hired him for money. Therfore toke he the money, that through feare I shuld so do: ⁊ synne:
that thei might haue an euel report of me, to blaspheme me. My God think thou vp D on Tobiah ⁊ Sanaballat accordynge vn to these their workes, ⁊ of the prophet No adiah ⁊ of the other Prophetes, that wol-de haue put me in feare.
And the wal was finished on the fiue ⁊ twentye daye of the moneth * Elul, in two and fyftye dayes. And when all oure ene-myes hearde therof, all the Heythē ỹ were aboute vs, were afrayed, ⁊ their courage fayled them: for they perceaued, that thys worke came of God. And at the same time were ther many of ỹ chefe of Juda, whose letters wente vnto Tobiah, ⁊ from Tobi ah vnto thē (for ther were many in Juda ỹ were sworne vnto hym: for he was the sō-ne in law of Sechaniah ỹ sōne of Arah, and his sonne Jehohanan had the daugh ter of Mosolam the sonne of Barachiah ⁊ they spake good of hym before me, and tolde hym my wordes) and Tobiah sēt let ters, to put me in feare.

Elul, is cōpared, to our Juli & part of August ioyned therto, it was theyr sixte mone in order.

¶ After the wall ones buylded is the watch appoyn ted. They that returned from the captyuyte are nombred.

NOw when he had buylded ỹ walle I hanged on the dores, A ⁊ the porters syngers ⁊ Leui tes were appoynted. And I cōmaunded my brother Ha-nani, ⁊ Hananiah the ruler of the palace at Jerusalē: for he was a faithful mā, ⁊ feared God more then did many other) and I sayd vnto them: let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened vntyll the sōne be whote.
And whyle they are yet standynge in the watch, ỹ dores shal be shut ⁊ barred. And ther were certayne citysens of Jerusalē a-poynted to be watchmen euery one in hys watche, ⁊ aboute hys house. As for the cy-tie, it was large of rowme, and greate, but the people were fewe therin, and the houses were not buylded.

And my God gaue me in my hert, y I gathered to gether the pryncypall men & the people to nombre them & I founde a register of the nombre of them, which came vp a-of Habaiah: & children of Hacos, the chyldre of Berssilai, which toke one of ŷ daugh ters of Berssilai thee Galaadite to wyfe, & was named after theyr name. These sou-ghte the register of their generaciō & when they found it not, they were put frō ŷ prest hode. And Hathirsatha sayd unto them, ŷ they shulde not eate of the moost holy, tyll there came up a prieste with the lyght and C perfectnesse.

The whole cōgregation as one mā, was two & fortye thousande thre hundred, and uites, the Porters, the singers, and ŷ other of the people, & the Nethinims, and al Israel dwelt in theyr cyties.

¶ Esdras gathereth together the people & redeth to the the lawe. They kepe the feaste of tabernacles in bothes.

The.viii. Chapter.

Now whē ŷ.vii.monethe was 1 come, & the childre of Israel we re in theyr cities, al the people gathered the selues together as one mā upon the strete before the watergate, & sayd unto Esdras the scribe, that he shulde fetche the boke of the lawe of Moses, which the Lord commaunded to Israel. * And Esdras the prest brought the lawe before the congre gation both of men and women, and of all that could understande it, upon the fyrste daye of the seuenth moneth, & red therin in the strete that is before ŷ watergate (frō the morninge until the noone daye before men and women and soch as could unders tande it: & the eares of all the people were enclyned unto the boke of the lawe. And Esdras the scrybe stode upon an hye pulpyte of wood, which they hadde made for the preaching, & besyde him stode Mathithiah, Sema, Ananiah, Uriah, Helkiah, & Maaseiah, on hys ryghte hande: and on hys lefte hande stode Phadaiah, Misael, Melchiah, Hasum, Hasbadanah, Zachary and Mosolam.
And Esdras opened the boke before al B the people, for he stode aboue al the people And whē he opened it, all the people stode up. And Esdras praysed ŷ Lord the great God. And all the people answered Amen, Amen, with theyr handes up, & bowed thē selues, & worshipped the Lord wyth theyr faces to the grounde. And Iesua, Bani, Serabiah, Iamin, Acuba, Sebathai, Ho daiah, Maasiah, Celita, Azariah Iozabed Hanā Phalaiah, & the Leuites, caused the people to geue hede unto the law, & the peo ple stode in their place. And they red in the boke of the lawe of god distinctly & playn ly, so ŷ mē understode the thing ŷ was red And Nehemiah (which is Hathirsatha) & Esdras the prest & scrybe, & the Leuites ŷ caused the people to take hede, sayde unto all the people: thys daye is holye unto the Lorde your God: be not ye sorye therfore, and wepe not. For al the people wept whē they herde the wordes of the lawe.
Therfore sayd he unto them: * go your C way, & eate the fat, & drinke the swete, and send part unto thē also that haue not prepared the selues: for this day is holy unto our Lorde, be not ye sorye therfore: for the ioye of the Lord is your strength. And the Leuites styled al the people, & sayd: hold your peace for the day is holy, be ye not your selues. And all the people went theyr waye to eate & drincke, & to sende part unto other, & to make greate myrthe, because thei had understande the wordes that were declared unto them.
And on the next daye were gathered together the chefe fathers amōg al ŷ people and the prestes & Leuites, unto Esdras ŷ scrybe, þ he shuld teache the the wordes of the lawe. And they founde wrytten in the Leui.xxiii.f lawe* how that the Lord had cōmaunded by Moyses that þ chyldrē of Israel shuld dwel in bothes in the feast of the seuenthe moneth. And so they caused it be declared and proclaymed in all theyr cyties, & at Jerusalem, sayinge: go vp vnto the mounte and fetch Olive braūches, Pyne braūches D Myrte braūches, Palme braunches, & braū ches of thicke trees, too make bothes as it is wrytten.

And the people went vp, and fet them, & made them bothes, euery one vpō the rofe of hys house, & in theyr courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God, & in the strete by the Watergate, & in the strete by porte Ephraim. And al the cōgregation of thē þ were come agayne, out of the captiuite, ma de bothes, & dwelt therin: for sence the time of Josua the sonne of Nun vnto this day had not the chyldren of Israel done so, and ther was very great gladnesse. And euery daye frō the fyrst daye vnto the last, red he in the boke of the lawe of God. And seuen dayes helde they the feast, and on the eight daye the gatheryng together, acordinge vnto the maner.

¶ The people repent & forsake theyr straūge wiues.
Esdras recyteth the benefytes of God & the synnes of the people.

The .ix. Chapter.

A I N the foure & twentie day of this moneth came the chyldrē Iosue.viii.d of Israel together wyth* fa-2 Esd.[illegible] sting & sack clothes, & erth vpō thē, & separated the sede of Israel frō all the straūge chyldrē & stode & knowleged theyr synnes, and the wycked-nesses of theyr fathers, & stode vp in theyr place, and red in the boke of the law of the Lord theyr God foure tyme on the day, & they knowleged, & worshypped the Lorde theyr God foure tymes on the daye. And the Leuites stode on hye, namelye Jesua, Bani, Cadmiel, Sabaniah, Bani, Sare-biah, Bani & Chanani, & cryed loude vnto the Lord theyr God. And the Leuites, Jesua, Cadmiel, Bani, Hasabniah, Serebiah, Hodiah, Sebaniah, Phathahiah, sayd: stand vp prayse the Lord your God for e-uer: & let thankes be geuen vnto the name of thy glorye, which excelleth al thankesge uing & prayse. Lord, thou alone hast made heauē, & the heauē of all heauens, wyth all B theyr host, the earth & al that is therein, the see & al that is therin: thou geuest life vnto all, & the hoste of heauē bowe them selues vnto the. Thou art the Lord God, þ haste chosen Abrā, & broughtest him out of *Vr in Chaldea, * & calledst hym Abrahā and foundeste his herte faythful before the * & madest a couenaunt wyth him to geue vn to his sede the land of the Canaanites, He-thites, Amorites, Pheresites, Jebusites & Gergesites, & hast made good thy wordes for thou art righteous * & hast consydered the mysery of our fathers in Egipt, & hear de theyr cōplaynt by the reed see, & shewed tokens & wonders vpon Pharao, & on all hys seruaūtes, and on al the people of his land: for thou knewest that they were presumpteous & cruel agaynst them, & so ma dest þ* the a name as it is thys daye. And the reed see dyddest thou deuyde in sunder before thē, so that thei wēt thorow the mid des of þ see drye shod: & their persecuters threwest thou into the depe as a stone, in þ mightie waters, & leddeste thē on the daye tyme in a cloudy pyler, and on the nyghte season in a pyler of fyre, to shew thē lyght in the waye that they wente.

* Thou camest downe also vpō mounte C Sinai, & spakest vnto them frō heauen, & gauest them right iudgemētes, true lawes good cōmaundementes and statutes, and declaredst vnto thē thy holy Saboth, and cōmaundedst them preceptes, ordinaūces, and lawes, by Moses thy seruaūt: & * gauest them bred frō heauen when they were hongrie, & * broughtest forth water for thē oute of the rocke whē they were thyrstye: & promysedst them, that they shulde go in, & take possessiō of the land, ouer which thou haddest lyft vp thine hand for to geue thē.

But our fathers were proud and hard-necked, so that they folowed not the commaundementes, & refused to heare, & were not myndeful of the wōders that thou dyd dest for thē: but became obstinate & heady in so moch that they turned backe to theyr bondage in theyr disobedience. But thou my God forgauest, & wast gracious, mer- D cyful, pacient and of great goodnesse, and forsokest thē not. * And though thei made a moulte calfe (& sayd: Thys is thy God, that brought the out of the lāde of Egypt) and dyd great blasphemyes, yet forsokest thou them not in the wildernes, according to thy great mercy. * And the cloudy pyler departed not from the on the daye time to leade the the waye, nether the pyler of fyre in the nyght season, to shewe them lighte in the waye that they went.

And thou gauest the thy good spirete to enfourme the, * & wythheldest not thy Manna from theyr mouth, * & gauest them water when they were thyrstie. Fortye yeares longe madest thou prouision for the in the wildernesse, so that they lacked nothinge: * theyr clothes waxed not olde, & their fete swelled not. And thou gauest them kyngedoms and nacions, and partedst the accordyng to their porcio͂s, so that they possessed * the land of Sehon kyng of Hesebo͂, and the lande of Og the kinge of Basan. And theyr childre multipliedst thou as the starres of heauen, & broughtest them into the la͂d wherof thou haddest spoke͂ vnto their fathers, that they shulde go into it, & haue it in possession.

And the childre went in, and possessed ye la͂d, * & thou subduedst before the the inhabiters of the land, eue͂ the Cananites, and gauest the into their hand, & theyr kynges and the people of the land, that they might do with the what they wold. And thei wan F theyr strong cities, & a fatt a lande, & toke possion of houses that were ful of all maner goodes, welles dygged out, vyneyardes, oylegardens, & many fruitefull trees: and they ate & were fylled, & became fat, & lyued in welth thorow thy great goodnes. Neuerthelesse they were disobedient, & rebelled agaynst the, and cast thy law behinde theyr backes, and slue thy Prophetes (which exhorted the so earnestly, that they shulde conuerte vnto the) and dyd greate blasphemies. Therfore gauest thou them ouer into the hande of theyr enemyes that vexed them.

And in the tyme of theyr trouble theyr cryed vnto the, & ye heardest them fro͂ heue͂ and thorow thy greate mercy thou gauest the b saluiours, which helped the͂ oute of ye hand of theyr enemies. But whe͂ thei came to rest, they turned back agayn to do euell before the: therfore leftest thou them in the hande of theyr enemies, so that they had ye dominion ouer them. So they conuerted, & cryed vnto the, & thou herdeste them from F heauen, & many tymes hast thou delivered them according to thy great mercy, and testyfyedst vnto them, that they shuld turne agayne vnto thy lawe.

Notwithstanding they were proud, and herkened not vnto thy commaundeme͂tes, but synned in thy lawes * (whyche a man shuld do, & lyue in them) & turned ye shoulder away, & were stifnecked, and wold not heare. And many yeres didest thou forbeare them, & testifiedst vnto them thorow thi spirete, euen by the office of thy prophetes, and yet woulde they not heare. Therfore gauest thou the into the ha͂d of the natio͂s in the landes. But for thy greate mercyes sake thou hast not vtterly consumed them nether forsaken the: for thou arte a gracious and mercyfull God.

* Now our God, thou great god, myghtie & terrible, thou that kepest couenaunte & mercy, regarde not a lytle al ye trauayle that hath happened vnto vs, & our kinges princes, prestes, prophetes, fathers and all thy people, sence the tyme of the kinges of Assur vnto this day. Thou art righteous G in al that thou hast broughte vpon vs: for thou hast done right. As for vs, we haue bene vngodly, & our kinges, princes, prestes & fathers haue not done after thy law nor regarded thy commaundeme͂tes, & thy earnest exhortacio͂s wherwith thou hast exhorted them, & haue not serued the in theyr kingdom, & in thy great goodes that thou gauest them, & in the large & ple͂teous la͂d which thou gauest them, & haue not co͂uerted from theyr wicked workes. Beholde, therfore are we in bondage thys daye: yea eue͂ in the land that thou gauest vnto oure fathers, to enioye the fruytes and goodes therof, beholde there are we bondmen. And great is the increase of it vnto the kinges who͂ thou hast set ouer vs because of oure synnes, and they haue dominion ouer our bodyes and cattel, and we ar in great trouble. And in all thys make we a sure couenaunt, and write it, and let our princes, Leuites and prestes seale it.

These are the heades of the lande that dwelt in Jerusalem ⁊ in the cities of Juda And euery one dwelt in his possession, ⁊ in theyr cyties of Israel, the prestes, Leuites the Nethinims, and the chyldren of Salomons seruauntes. And at Jerusalẽ dwelt certayne of thee chyldren of Juda and of Ben Jamin.

Of the chyldren of Juda: Athaiah the sonne of Usiah the sonne of Zachary, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Saphatiah, the sonne of Mahalaleel, of the chyldrẽ of Phares. And Maasiah the sõne of Baruch, the sonne of Chal Hose, the sonne of Hasaia, the sonne of Adaia, the sõne of Joiarib, the sonne of Zachary, the sõne of Siloni. All the chyldrẽ of Phares that dwelt at Jerusalem, were foure. C. and eyghte ⁊ thre skore valeaunt men.

These are the children of Ben Jamin: Sallu the sonne of Mesullã, the sonne of Joed, the sonne of Phadaiah, the sonne of Colaiah, the sõne of Maasiah, the sonne of Ithiel, the sonne of Isaiah. And after him B Gabai, Selai, nyne hundred and eyght and twentye. And Joell thee sonne of Zechry hadde thee ouersyghte of them: and Juda the sonne of Senuah ouer the second part of the cytie.

[illegible] Of the prestes ther dwelt: Jedaiah the sonne of Joiarib, Jachin. Saraiah ẏ sonne of Helkiah the sonne of Mosolã, ẏ sonne of Zadoc, the sonne of Meraioth, ẏ sonne of Ahitob, was prince in ẏ house of god ⁊ his brethrẽ that perfourmed the worcke in the house: of whõ ther were. viii. C. and xxii. And Adaiah the sonne of Jeroham, ẏ sonne of Plalaliel, the sonne of Amzi, the sonne of Zachary, ẏ sõne of Phashur, the sonne of Melchiah ⁊ hys brethren, chefe amonge the fathers: of whõ there were two hundreth and two ⁊ fortie. And Amasai ẏ sonne of Asarael the sonne of Ahasai thee sonne of Mosolamoth, the sonne of Emer and his brethrẽ were valiaũt men, of whõ there were an hundreth and eyght ⁊ twentye. And theyr ouersear was Zabdiell the sonne of Hagdolim.

C Of the Leuites: Semeiah the sonne of [illegible] Hasub, the sõne of Asrikam, the sonne of Hasabiah the sonne of Boni: ⁊ Sabathai ⁊ Josabad of the chefe of the Leuytes, in the outward busines of the house of God And Mathaniah the sonne of Micha, the sonne of Zabdi, the sõne of Asaph, which was the principal to begynne the thankesgeuing vnto prayer. And Bakbukiah thee seconde amonge hys brethren, ⁊ Abda the sonne of Samua, the sonne of Galall, the sonne of Jedithũ. Al the Leuites in the holy cytie were two hundreth ⁊ foure ⁊ foure skore. * And the porters Acub ⁊ Talmon, [illegible] ⁊ theyr brethrẽ that kepte the portes, were an hundreth ⁊ two and seuentye. As for ẏ resydue of Israell, the priestes ⁊ Leuites, they were in al the cities of Juda, euery one in hys inheritaunce.

And the Nethinims dwelt in Ophel: ⁊ Ziba ⁊ Gaspha belonged vnto the Nethinims. The ouersear of the Leuites at Jerusalẽ, was Usi the sonne of Baani, ẏ sonne of Hasabiah, the sonne of Mathaniah, the sonne of Micha.

Of the chyldren of Asaph there were D syngers aboute the busynesse in the house of God: for it was the Kynges commaundemente concerning them, that the singers shoulde deale faythfully euery daye as acordinge was.

And Pathaiah the sonne of Mesesabel of the children of Zarah the sonne of Juda nexte the kyng in al matters concernig the people ⁊ theyr villages, thorow out al theyr regions. And thee children of Juda that were wythoute in the townes of theyr land, dwelt some at Kariath Arbe, ⁊ in the vyllages therof, and at Dibon, and in the vyllages thereof: ⁊ at Cabzeel, and in the vyllages therof: and at Jesua, Moladah, Bethphalet, Hazersual, Bersabe, ⁊ in their vyllages: and at Sikelag and Mochonah E and in theyr vyllages: And at Enremon, Zarah, Jerimuth, zonoah, Odollam and in theyr vyllages: At Lachis, and in ẏ feldes therof: At Asekah, and in the villages therof: and dwelte from Bersabe vnto the valley of Hennom.

The chyldren of Ben Jamin of Gaba, dwelte at Machmas Aia Bethell and in theyr vyllages. And at Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah, Hazor, Ramah, Gethaim, Hadid, Zeboim, Neballath, Lod, Ono and in the carpenters valleye. And certayne of the Leuites that had porciõs in Juda, dwelte in Ben Jamin.

they shuld not be opened tyll after the Sa-both: & some of my seruauntes set I at the gates, ẏ ther shulde no burthē be brought in on the Saboth day. Then remayned ẏ chapmen and marchauntes once or twyce ouer night without Ierusalē with al maner of wares. Then reproued I thē sore, & said vnto thē: why tary ye al night about the wal? If ye do it once agayne, I wil lay hādes vpō you. Frō that tyme forth came they no more on the Saboth. And I sayd vnto the Leuites which were cleane, that they shulde come and kepe the gates, to ha low ẏ Saboth daye. Thynk vpon me (O my God) cōcernynge this also, & spare me accordynge to thy greate mercy.

And at the same tyme sawe I Iewes, ẏ maried wyues of Asdod, Ammō & of Mo D ab & their childrē spake half in the speache of Asdod, and could not speake in the Ie-wes language, but by the tonge myghte a man perceaue euery people. And I repro-ued them, & cursed them, & smote certayne men of them, & plucked them vp, and toke an ooth of them by god: Ye shal not geue youre daughters vnto their sōnes, nether shal ye take their daughters vnto your sō nes, or for your selues. Dyd not Salomō the kynge of Israel synne therin? and yet amōg many heythen was there no kynge lyke him, and he was deare vnto hys god, and God made him kyng ouer al Israell, & yet neuertheles outlandysh wemen cau sed hym to synne? And shall we then obey vnto you, to do all thys great euel, and to trāsgresse agaynst our God, & mary straū ge wyues?

And one of ẏ children of Ioiada the sōne of Eliasib the hie prest, had made a cō tract with Sanabalat the Horonite: but I chaced hym frō me. O my God, think ẏ vpon thē that are quyte of the presthode, & haue defyled the couenaūt of the presthe-hode & of the Leuites. Thus clensed I thē frō al such as were outlandyshe, & appointed the courses of the preastes & Leuites, euery one to hys offyce, & to offre ẏ wood at tymes apoynted, & ẏ fyrst frutes. Thin-ke ẏ vpon me (O my God) for the best.

¶ Kyg Ahasuerus, which is called Artharersemas keth a royall feast. Wherunto the quene Vasthi wil not come: for which cause she is deuorsed.

The .I. Chapter.

In ẏ tyme of Ahasuerus whiche raygned from India vn-A to Ethiopia, ouer an hun-dreth & seuen & twentye landes, what tyme as he sate on hys seate royall in the castell of Susan in the thirde yeare of his raygne, he made a feaste vnto all hys prynces & seruauntes, namely vnto the myghtye men of Persia & Media, to the captaynes and rulers of hys countrees, that he myghte shewe the noble riches of his kingdome, and the glo rious worshippe of his greatnesse, manye dayes longe, euen an hundreth and foure score dayes.

And when these dayes were expyred, ẏ kyng made a feast vnto al the people that were in the castell of Susan, bothe vnto B great & small, seuen dayes long in ẏ courte of the gardē by the kinges palace: wher there hanged whyte, reed and yalowe clothes, fastened with coardes of lynnen and scarlette in syluer rynges, vpon pylers of Marble stone.

The bēches were of goulde and siluer made vpon a pauemēt of grene, white ya lowe & blacke Marble. And the drynke was caried in vessels of gould, & ther was euer chaūge of vessell. And ẏ kinges wine was moch accordinge to the power of the kinge. And no man was appoynted what he shuld drinck: for ẏ king had cōmaūded al the offycers of his house, that euery one shuld do as it liked him. And the quene Vasthi made a feast also for ẏ wemen in ẏ palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seuenth day whē the king was mery of wyne, he cō maunded Mehuman, Bartha, Harbona, C Bagatha, Abagatha, Sarbar and Carcas, the seuen chamberlaynes (that dyd seruyce in the presence of kynge Ahasuerus) to fetche the quene Vasthi wyth the crowne regal, that he might shewe the people and prynces her fayrnesse: for she was beuty-full. But the quene Vasthi wolde not come at the kynges worde by hys chamberlaynes.

laynes. Thē was the kyng very wrothe, & his indignacion kyndled in him.
And the king spake to y wise men that had understanding in y ordinaunces of y lād for the kīges matters must be hādled before al soch as haue knowledg of y law & iudgemēt: and the next unto hym were, Carsena, Sethar, Admatha, Tharsis, Mares, Marsana & Mamucan, the seuē princes of y Persians, & Medes, whyche saw y kynges face, & sat above in y kingdom, what lawe shulde be execute vpō y quene Vasthi, because she did not acordīg to y word of y kinge by his chāberlaines.
D Then sayd Mamucan before the kyng & y princes: the quene Vasthi hath not only done euel against y king but also against all the princes & all the people in all y landes of kynge Ahasuerus for this dede of y quene shall come abrode unto all wemē so that they shall despyse theyr husbādes before theyr eies, and shall say: the king Ahasuerus cōmaunded Vasthi the quene to come before him, but she wolde not.
B And so shal the princesses in Persia & Media say lykewise unto al y kinges prīces, whē they heare of this dede of y quene, thus shall there aryse despytefulnes and wrath ynoughe. If it please the kyng, let there go a commaundemente from him, & lett it be wrytten accordyng to the lawe of the Persians & Medians (& not to be trāsgressed) y Vasthi come no more before kyng Ahasuerus, & let y king geue the kingdom vnto another that is better then she.
And y thys wrytinge of y king which shalbe made, be publisshed thorow out al his empyre (which is great) that al wyues may hold their husbādes in honour, bothe among greate and smal.
This pleased the kynge & the prynces, & the kyng dyd accordinge to the word of Mamucan. Then were there letters sente forth into al the kynges lādes, into euerye land acordīg to the wrytyng therof, and to euery people after their language that euery mā shuld be lord in his owne house. And this caused he be spoken after the lāguage of hys people.

¶ When the quene put away, certen goodly younge damselles are searched out. ¶ In other wyse (als ...) Esther pleaseth the kynge, & is made quene. Mardocheus openeth unto the kyng those that wold destroye hym.

After these actes whē the dyspleasure of kinge Ahasuerus A was layed he thoughte upon Vasthi, what she had done, & what was concluded concernynge her. Then sayde the kynges seruauntes: Lett there be fayre younge virgins soughte for the kynge, and let y kinge appoynte ouersears in all the landes of hys empyre, that they maye brynge to gether all fayre younge virgyns unto the castell of Susan to y wemens buylding, under the hande of Hegei the kynges chāberlaine, that kepethe the women, and let hym geue them theyr apparell. And loke whych damsell pleaseth y kinge, let her be quene in Vasthis steade. This pleased y kynge, and he dyd so.
In the castel of Susā there was a Iewe, whose name was Mardocheus, y sonne of Iair, the sonne of Semei, y sonne of Cis y sonne of Iemini, which was caryed away frō Ierusalē, when Iechoniah the iiii. re. xxiiii. king of Iuda was led away, (whō Nabuchodonosor y kīg of Babilō caried away) & he norished Hadasah (that is Esther) his uncles daughter: for she had nether father nor mother, and she was a faire and beuti ful damsel. And when her father and mo- B ther died, Mardocheus receaued her as hys owne daughter.
Now when the kynges cōmaundemēt and cōmissyon was publisshed, & many dāsels were brought to gether unto y castel of Susan under y hand of Hegei, Esther was taken also unto the kinges house under the hand of Hegei the keper of the wemē, & the damsell pleased him, & she found grace in his sight. And he caused her oint ment to be geuen her, and her giftes, & gaue her .vii. notable gentil wemē of y kings house, & araved bothe her & her gentyl wemē very trymelie in the house of the wemē. But Esther shewed not her people nor her kinred: for Mardocheus had charged her, y she shulde not tell it. And Mardocheus walked euerye daye before the courte of the wemens buyldynge, that he myghte know how Esther dyd, and what shuld become of her.
And when the appoynted time of euery dāsel came that she shulde come to y kyng

Ahasuerus, after that she had bene .xii. monethes in the deckyng of the women) for their decking must haue so moch tyme, namely syxe monethes wt Balme & Myrre, & .vi. monethes wt good spyces, so were ye wemen beutifyed) thē went there one dāsell vnto ye kyng, & what soeuer she requyred, ye must be geuē her to go with her out of ye wemēs buyldinge vnto ye kynges palace.
And when one came in ye euenyng, ye same wēt frō him on the morowe into ye seconde house of wemen, vnder the hand of Saas-C gas ye kynges chāberlayne, which kept ye cō-cubines. And she must come vnto ye kyng nomore, except it pleased ye kinge, & that he caused her to be called by name.

Now whē the tyme came of Esther the daughter of Abihail Mardocheus vncle) whō he had receaued as hys owne daughter (yt she shuld come to the kynge, she dysyred nothinge but what Hegai the kynges chāberlayne the keper of the wemē sayde.

And Esther found fauour in the syght of al thē that loked vpon her. And Esther was taken vnto king Ahasuerus into the house royal, in the tenth moneth whych is called Tebeth, in the seuenth yeare of hys raygne.

And the kyng loued Esther aboue al the wemen, & she founde grace and mercye in his sight before al the virgins: and he set the quenes croune vpon hir head, & made D her quene in stead of Vasthi. And ye kinge made a great feaste vnto all his princes & seruauntes (whych feaste was because of Esther) and lett the landes be in quietnes, and gaue royall gyftes.

And whā the virgins were gethered together the secōd time, Mardocheus sat in ye kynges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kinred & her people, accordyng as Mardocheus had biddē her: for Esther dyd after the worde of Mardocheus, lyke as whē he was her tutoure. At ye same time whyle Mardocheus sat in ye kinges gate, two of the kinges chāberlaines Bagathā and Thares which kepte the dore, were wroth, & sought to lay their hādes on the kyng Ahasuerus: wherof Mardocheus got knowledg, & told it vnto quene Esther.
& Esther certyfied the king therof in Mar-docheus name. And whē inquisition was made, it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tre: and it was wrytten in the Chronycles before the kynge.

¶ Haman the Macedonian, after he was exalted, obtayneth of the kyng that all the Jewes shulde be put to death, because Mardocheus had not done him worshyp, as other had.

The .iii. Chapter.

After these actes dyd the kyng promote Hamā ye sonne of A-madatha the Agagite, & set hi- A me, & set his seat aboue al the prynces that were wt him. And al the kynges seruauntes that were in ye gate, bowed their knees, & dyd reuerēce vnto Haman: for the kynge had so cōmaunded.
But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, & worshypped him not. Thē the ye kinges seruauntes whiche were in the kynges gate, sayd vnto Mardocheus: why trāsgressest ye the kinges cōmaundement? And when B they spake this dayly vnto him, & he folo-wed thē not, they told Hamā, yt they might se whether Mardocheus matters would endure: for he had tolde them, that he was a Jew. And whē Hamā saw, that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto hym, nor worshypped hym, he was full of indignacyon & thought it to lyttell to laye handes onli on Mardocheus: for thei had shewed hym the nacyon of Mardocheus, but he sought to destroy al the Jewes the nacion of Mardocheus, that were in ye whole empyre of Ahasuerus.

In the first moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in thee twelueth yeare of kynge Ahasuerus they cast Phur (yt is a lott) before Hamā, on what day & what monethe this shuld be done: & it went out the twelueth moneth that is ye moneth Adar. And Haman said vnto king Ahasuerus: Ther C is a people scatered abrode and dyspersed amōge all people in al the landes of thyne empire, & theyr law is cōtrary vnto al people, & they do not after the kynges lawes, nether is it ye kinges profet to suffre thē after this maner. If it please ye king, let him wryte, that they may be destroied, & so wyl I weye downe ten thousande talentes of siluer, vnder the handes of the workmen, to be brought into ye kynges chāber. Thē toke the kyng hys ringe from hys hande, & gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite the Jewes enemie. And the kynge sayde vnto Haman: Lett the syluer be geuen the, & that people also, to do with all what pleaseth the.

Thē were the kynges scrybes called on the thirtenth day of the first moneth, and ther was wrytte (accordinge as Haman cōmaūded) vnto the kynges prynces and to the captynes euery where in the landes, & to ỹ rulars of euery people in ỹ coūtreyes on euery syde, accordīg to the wrytīng of euery nacyon, and after their language in the name of kyng Ahasuerus, and sealed wt the kynges rynge. And the wryttynges were sēt by postes into al the kynges landes, to rote oute, to kyll, and to destroye all Jewes, both yonge and olde, chyldrē and wemen in one day (namely vpon the thirtenth day of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar) & to spoile their goodes.

B Thys was the summe of ỹ wrytyng, ỹ ther shuld be a cōmaundemente geuen in al lādes, to be publisshed vnto all people, that they shulde be ready agaynst ỹ same daye. And the postes wente in all the haste accordyng to the kinges cōmaundemēte. And in the castel of Susan was the commaundement deuysed. And the kyng and Haman sate and dranck. But the cytye of Susan was disquieted.

The.iiii.Chapter.

A Whē Mardocheus perceaued al that was done, he rent hys clothes & put on sackcloth, & ashes, & wēt out in to ỹ myddes of the citie, and cried loude and lamētably, and came before the kynges gate: for there might no man entre within the kynges gate, that had sack cloth on. And in all landes and places, as farre as the kynges worde and commaundement extended, there was great lamentacyon amōg the Jewes and many fasted, wept, mourned, and lay in sackclothes and in asshes. So Esthers damsels, and her chamberlaines, came and tolde it her. Thē was

B the quene exceadinglye astonyed. And she sent raiment, that Mardocheus shuld put them on, and lay the sackclothe from him. But Mardocheus woulde not take them. Thē called Esther Hathach one of the kynges chamberlaynes (whyche stode before her) and gaue hym a commaundement vnto Mardocheus, that he myght knowe what it were, and wherfore he did so. So Hathach went forthe to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the cytye, whyche was before the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde him of al ỹ had happened vnto him, & of the summe of syluer ỹ Hamā had promised to weye downe in the kynges chāber because of ỹ Jewes for to destroye them (& he gaue him the copye of the cōmaūdemēt, that was deuised at Susā to destroye them, that he myghte shewe it vnto Esther, & to speake to her & charge her, that she shulde go in to ỹ king and make her prayer & supplication vnto hym for her people.

And whē Hathach came in, & told Esther ỹ wordes of Mardocheus, Esther spake vnto Hathach, and cōmaūded hym to say vnto Mardocheus: al the kynges seruaūtes, & the people in the landes of the kynge C know, that whosoeuer cōmeth within the courte vnto the king, whether it bē mā or womā, which is not called, the cōmaundemēt is that the same shal dye immedyatly, except the kynge hold out the gouldē septer vnto him, that he may lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come in to ỹ kinge now this thirtie dayes.

And whē Mardocheus was certified of Esthers wordes, Mardocheus bad say agayne vnto Esther: think not to saue thine owne lyfe, whyle thou art in the kynges house before al Jewes: for yf thou holdest D thy peace at this time, then shal the Jewes haue helpe and delyueraunce out of another place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to ỹ kyngdom, for this E tymes sake? Esther bad geue Mardocheus this answere: Go thou thy way then, & geather together al ỹ Jewes that ar foūd at Susan, & fast ye for me, ỹ ye eate not & drīk not in.iii.daies, nether day nor night. I and my dāsels wyll faste lykewise, & so wil I go in to the kyng cōtray to ỹ cōmaūdemēte: yf I perishe, I perishe. So Mardocheus wente hys waye, and dyd all that Esther had commaunded him.

a The Jewes were first called Hebrues, of Heber the eldest sonne of Sale sonne of Arphaxat, as it apeareth, Gene. xi. b. and i Paral. i. after were they called Israel of Jacob, & after Jewes of one of the sonnes of Jacob that is to wete of Juda.

¶ Esther entreth into ye king and byddeth him and Haman to a feast. Haman prepareth a gallowse for Mardocheus.

The .v. Chapter.

A And on the thirde day put Esther on her royall apparel, and stode in ye court of the kinges palace within ouer against ye kynges house. And the kyng sate vpon hys royall seat in the kinges palace ouer agaynste the gate of the house. And when the kinge sawe Esther ye quene standynge in the court, she found grace in his syghte. And the kynge helde out ye golden scepter in hys hande towarde Esther.
B So Esther stepte forthe, and touched the toppe of the scepter. Then sayd the kynge vnto her: What wylt thou quene Esther? and what requyrest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empyre, & it shal be geuen the. Esther said: If it please the king, let ye kinge & Haman come this day vnto ye banket yt I haue prepared. The kyng saide: cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath sayde.

Now whē the kyng & Haman came to ye bāket yt Esther had prepared, ye kyng sayd vnto Esther at ye banket of wyne: Esther, what is thy peticiō? & it shalbe geuen the. And what requyrest thou? If it be euen ye halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done.
C Then answered Esther and sayde: my peticion & desyre is, yf I haue founde grace in the syghte of the kynge, & yf it please the kynge to geue me my peticion, and to fulfyll my request, then let the kynge and Haman come to the bāket that I shal prepare for thē, and so wyl I do to morow as the kinge hath sayde.

Then went Haman forth the same day ioyfull and merye in his mind. And when he sawe Mardocheus in the kinges gate, that he stode not vp and moued before hī, he was full of indignacion at Mardocheus. Neuertheles he refrayned hym selfe: & when he came home, he sent, and called for hys frendes, and Zares hys wyfe, & tolde them of the glorye of his richesse, & ye multitude of his chyldren all to gether how ye kyng had promoted hym so greatlye, and how that he was taken aboue the prynces and seruauntes of the kynge. Haman sayd D moreouer: Yee & Esther the quene lete no man come with the kinge vnto ye banket that she had prepared, excepte me, & to morow am I bidden vnto her also wt ye king. But in all thys am I not satisfyed as lōg as I se Mardocheus ye Iewe sitting at ye kynges gate. Thē sayd Zares his wyfe & all his frendes vnto him: Let thē make a galowes of fiftye cubites hie, & tomorow speake thou vnto ye king, yt Mardocheus may be hāged theron, yf thou cōmest merely wt the kyng vnto the banket. Hamā was wel content wyth al, and caused a galowes to be prepared.

¶ The king turneth ouer the Chronicles & fyndeth the fidelitie of Mardocheus contrary to the cōnsell of Hamā, cōmaūdeth Mardocheus to be had in honour.

The same night coulde not the king slepe, and he cōmaūded A to bring the Chronicles & stories: which whē they were red before ye king, they happened on ye place wher it was written, how Mardocheus had tolde, that the kynges two chāberlaynes (which kepte the threshol-des) sought: to lay handes on kyng Ahasuerus. And the king sayd: what worshyp & good haue we done to Mardocheus therfore? Then sayde the kynges seruauntes that ministred vnto him, Ther is nothing B done for hym. And the kyng sayde: Who is in the courte? (for Haman was gone in to the courte wythoute before the kynges house, that he myghte speake vnto ye kinge to hange Mardocheus on the tre, that he had prepared for him.) And the kinges seruauntes sayde vnto hym: beholde, Haman standeth in the courte. Then kynge sayde: let hym come in. And when Haman came in, the kynge sayde vnto hym: what shall be done vnto the man, whom the kinge wolde fayne brynge vnto worshyppe? But Haman thought in his hert: Whom shulde the kynge els be glad to bryng vnto worshyppe, but me? And Haman sayde vnto the kynge: Lett the man vnto C whome the kynge woulde be glad to do worshyppe, be broughte hyther, that he maye be arayed wyth the royall garmentes whyche the kyng vseth to weare: and the horse that the kynge rydethe vpon, & that the crowne royall maye be sett vpon hys hed. And let thys rayment and horse be delyuered vnder the hande of one of the kynges prynces, that he maye araye the the man wythall (whome the kinge wolde fayne honoure) and carye him vpō the horse thorow the strete of the citie, & cause it to be proclaymed before hym: thus shall it be done to euery man, whom the kynge wold fayne honoure.

The king sayd: make hast, and take as thou hast sayd, the raymēt and the horse: & do euē so wyth Mardocheus ȳ Jewe that sytteth before the kīges gate, & let nothing fayle of al that thou hast spokē. Then to-ke Haman the rayment & the horse, & aray ed him, & brought him on horsebacke tho-rowe the strete of the cytie, & proclaimed be D fore him: Euen thus shall it be done vnto euery man whome the kynge is dysposed to honour. And Mardocheus came agai-ne to ȳ kynges gate, but Haman gat hym home in al the hast mourning wythe heare heade, & tolde Zares his wife & al hys frē des, euery thyng that had happened hym.
Then sayd his wyse mē & Zares his wife vnto him: If it be Mardocheus of ȳ sede of the Jewes, before whom thou hast begōne to fal, thou canste do nothinge vnto him, but shalt fal before hym. Whille they were yet talkinge with him, came the kynges chamberlaynes, and caused Hamā to make haste to come vnto the bancket that Esther had prepared.

¶ The quene biddeth the king and Hamā agayne, & prayeth for her selfe and her people. She accuseth Hamā, and he is hāged on ȳ gallouse, which he had prepared for Mardocheus.

The .vii. Chapter.

A And whē the king and Hamā came to ȳ bancket that quene Esther had prepared, ȳ kinge sayd vnto Esther on ȳ second daye at the bancket of wyne: what is thy peticion quene Esther, that it may be geuen the? And what requirest ȳ?
Yea aske euen halfe of the empyre, and it shalbe done. Esther the quene answered & sayd: Yf I haue found grace in thy syght (O king) & yf it please the kyng thē grauñt me my lyfe at my desyre & my people for my peticions sake: for we are solde I & my people both to be destroyed, to be slayne & B to perysshe. And wold God we were sold to be bondmen & bondewemen, then wolde I holde my tonge, * so shuld not the enemye be so hye to the kynges harme. The kinge Asuerus spake and sayde vnto Quene Esther: what is he that? Or where is he ȳ darre presume in hys mynde to do soche a thinge after that maner? Esther sayde: the enemye and aduersarye is thys wycked Haman.

As for Hamā, he was exceadingly afray ed before the king & the quene. And ȳ kin- C ge arose frō the bancket & frō the wyne in hys displeasure & wēt into the palace garden. And Haman stode vp, and besoughte quene Esther for hys lyfe: for he saw that there was a mischefe prepared for hym of the kynge already.

And whē the kinge came agayne out of the palace gardē into the parler where they had eatē, Haman had layed hym vpon the D bed that Esther sat vpō. Thē sayd ȳ king wil he force the quene also besyde * me in ȳ house? As sone as ȳ worde wēt out of the kinges mouth, they * couered Hamās face And Harbonah one of the chāberlaynes ȳ stode before the king, sayd, Beholde, there stādeth a galowes in Hamās house fyftie cubites hye, which he had made for Mar-docheus, that spake good for ȳ king. The kinge sayde: hange hym thereon. So they hanged Hamā on the galowes that he had made for Mardocheus. Thē was the kinges wrath pacyfyed.

* Or in my presence

To couer his face, is, to shew him worthye of death.

¶ After the death of Haman is Mardocheus exalted, and then are there comfortable letters sent vnto the Jewes.

The .viii. Chapter.

The same daye dyd kyng Asufuerus geue the house of Ha- A man the Jewes enemye, vnto quene Esther. And Mardocheus came before the kinge: for Esther told how that he belōged vnto her. And the king put of his finger ringe, which he had takē from Haman, & gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Esther set Mar-docheus ouer the house of Hamā. And Esther spake yet more before the kinge, & fel downe at hys fete, & besought him, that he wolde put away the wickednes of Haman the Agagite, & his deuice that he had imagined agaynste the Jewes. And the kinge held out the goulden scepter vnto Esther.
Then rose Esther, & stode before the king and sayd: yf it please the king & yf I haue B founde grace in hys syght, and yf it be cōuenient for the kyng, and yf it be accepted in hys syght then let it be written, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha the Agagite, may be called agayne: whych letters he wrote, to destroy the Jewes in all the kynges landes. For how can I se the euell that shall happē vn to my people, & how can I loke vpon thee destruction of my kynrede?

Then sayde the kinge Ahasuerus vnto Quene Esther, & to Mardocheus the Jewe: Beholde, I haue geuē Esther the house
C of Hamā, and him haue they hanged vpō a tree, because he layde hande vpō the Jewes. Wryte ye now therfore for ŷ Jewes, as it liketh you in the kinges name, & seale it with the kinges ringe (for the wrytinges that were written in the kinges name, and sealed with the kinges ring, durst no man disanulle.) Then were the kinges scrybes called at the same tyme in ŷ thyrd moneth, that is the moneth Siuan, on the thre and twentyeth daye.

And it was writtē (as Mardocheus cōmaunded) vnto thee Jewes & to the prynces, to the Debyties and captaynes in the landes frō India vntil Ethiopia, namely an hundred and seuen and twentye landes, vnto euery one according to the wrytynge therof, vnto euery people after their spech and to the Jewes according to theyr wry-D tinge and language.

And it was written in the king Ahasuerus name, & sealed with the kinges ringe. And by postes that rode vpō swyft yonge Mules, sent he the wrytynges, wherin the king graunted the Jewes (in what cytyes soeuer they were) to geather thē selues to gether, & to ✠ I stand for theyr lyfe, and for to rote oute, to slaye, and to destroye all the power of the people & land that wold trouble them, with children and women, and to spoyle their good vpō one daye in al ŷ landes of kinge Ahasuerus namely vpon the thyrtenth day of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar.

The summe of the wrytinge was, howe ther was a cōmaūdemēt geuē in al landes to be published vnto al the people, that the Jewes shuld be ready against that day to auenge the selues on theyr enemyes. And the postes that rode vpō the Mules, made haste with al spede, according to ŷ kinges worde: and the commaundement was deuysed in the castel of Susan.

As for Mardocheus, he wēt oute frō ŷ king in royal apparel of yelow & whyte, & with a great crowne of gould, beyng arayed wyth a garment of lynnē and purple, & the cytie of Susan reioysed & was glad: but vnto the Jewes ther was come light & gladnes, and ioye & worshippe. And in all lādes and cytyes, into what places soeuer the kinges word and commaundemēt reached, there was ioye & myrthe, prosperite & good dayes among the Jewes: in so moch that many of the people in the lād became of ŷ Jewes beleefe, for ŷ feare of ŷ Jewes came vpon them.

The Notes.

✠ I To stande for theyr lyfe is a maner of speakinge famylyar to the Hebrues, for that we saye, to defend their lyues, and ryd them selues frō the cruel persequucyon of theyr enemyes.

C At the cōmaūdement of the kynge the Jewes put their aduersaryes to death. The sōnes of Haman are hāged. The Jewes kepe a feast daye in remembraūce of theyr delyueraunce.

In the twelueth monethe, that is the moneth Adar, vpō the thirtenth day, which the kynges word & cōmaūdemēt had appointed, that it should be A done, euen vpon the same day that the enimyes shulde haue destroyed the Jewes to haue opressed thē, it turned contrary wise, euen that the Jewes should subdue theyr enemyes. Then geathered the Jewes together in their cytyes wyth in all the landes of kynge Ahasuerus, to laye hande on soche as wolde do them euell, and no man coulde wythstande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes, and prynces and Debityes, and officers of the kynge promoted the Jewes: for ŷ feare of Mardocheus came vpon them. For Mardocheus was greate in the kynges house, & the reporte of him was noised in al lādes, how he increased and grewe.

Thus the Jewes smote al their enemies with a sore slaughter, & slew & destroyed, and did after their wil vnto such as were their aduersaries. And at the castel of Susā slew the Jewes and destroied fiue hundreth men: & slew Pharsandatha, Delphō, Aspatha, Phoratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisai, Aridai, Uaiezatha, ŷ ten sonnes of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha the enemie of the Jewes: but on his

goodes goodes they layed no handes. At the same tyme was the king certified of the nombre of those that were slayne at ẏ castel of Su C san. And the kinge sayde vnto Quene Esther: The Jewes haue slayne & destroyed fyue hūdreth mē at the castel of Susan, & the ten sonnes of Hamā: What shall they do in the other lādes of the king? What is thy peticion, that it may be geuen the? and what requyrest thou more to be done? Esther sayd: Yf it please the kinge, let hym suffre the Jewes to morowe also to do ac-cordinge vnto thys dayes cōmādemēt, that they may hange Hamās ten sonnes vpon the tree. And the kinge charged to do so, & the cōmaundemēt was deuised at Susan and Hamans .x. sonnes were hanged. And the Jewes geathered thē selues togeather at Susan, vpon the fourtenth daye of the moneth Adar, and slewe thre hundreth mē at Susan, but on theyr goodes they layde no handes.

As for the other Jewes in the kinges lādes, thei came together, & *stode for their lyues, & gat rest frō theyr enemyes: & slewe of their enemies fyue & seuentye thousand, D how beit they layed no hādes on their goo des. Thys was done on the thirtenth day of the moneth Adar, and on the fourtenth daye of the same moneth rested thei, which day they ordeyned to be a daye of feasting and gladnesse. But the Jewes at Susan were come together both on the thyrtenthe daye & on the fourtenth, & on the fyftenth daye they rested, & the same daye ordeyned they to be a daye of feastinge & gladnesse.
Therfore the Jewes that dwelt in the villages and vnwalled townes, ordeyned the fourtenth daye of the moneth Adar, to be a daye of feastinge and gladnes, and one sent gyftes vnto another.

And Mardocheus wrote these actes, & sent the wrytinges vnto al the Jewes that E were in al the landes of king Ahasuerus, both nye and farre, that they shulde yearly receaue & hold the fourtenth and fyftenth daye of thee monethe Adar, as thee dayes wherein the Jewes came to reste frō theyr enemyes, and as a monethe wherein theyr payne was turned to ioye, and their sorow into prosperite: that they shulde obserue ẏ same as dayes of wealth and gladnesse, & one too sende gyftes vnto another, and to distribute vnto the poore.

And the Jewes receaued it that they F had begōne to do, and that Mardocheus wrote vnto them: how that Hamā ẏ sōne of Hamadatha all the Jewes enemie, had deuysed to destroye all the Jewes, & caused to cast Phur (that is Lott) for to put them in feare, & to bryng them to naught: and how Hester wente and spake to ẏ kin ge, that thorow letters his wycked deuyce (which he ymagined agaynst the Jewes) might be turned vpon his owne heed, and how he & his sonnes were hanged on the tre. For ẏ which cause they called this day Phurim after the name of *Phur, accor- * That is, Lot. dyng to all the wordes of this wrytinge: & what they them selues had sene, and what had happened vnto them.

And the Jewes set it vp, & toke it vpon them & their sede, & vpō all soch as ioyned thē selues vnto them, that they wolde not misse to obserue these .ii. dayes yearly, accordynge as they were wrytten & appointed, how ẏ these dayes are not to be forgot tē, but to be kept of childers chyldrē amō-ge al kinredes in all lādes & cytyes. They G ar ẏ dayes of Phurim, which are not to be ouerslipte amōge the Jewes, & the memoryal of them oughte not to perysshe from theyr sede.

And quene Hester the daughter of Abi-haill and Mardocheus the Jewe wrote with all auctorite, to confirme this seconde wrytinge of Phurim, and sente the letters vnto al the Jewes in the hūdreth & se uē and twentie landes of the empyre of A hasuerus, wyth frendly and faythful wor des, to confirme these dayes of Phurim, in theyr tyme appoynted, accordynge as Mardocheus ẏ Jewe and Hester ẏ quene had ordeyned concernynge them: lyke as they vpon their soule and vpon their sede had cōfirmed ẏ actes of the *fastynges & * Hest. iiii. c. of hir cōplaynte. And Hester cōmaunded to stablish these actes of this Phurim, & to wryte them in a boke.

vpō the Iles of ẏ see. As for A all the worke of hys power and auctorite, and the great worshippe of Mardocheus, which the king gaue hym, behold it is wrytte in the Cronicles of the kynges of Media and Persia. The ende of the boke of Esther.

The Boke of Job.

Job is plaged of God, by the losse of hys goodes and chyldren.

The. I. Chapter.

A In the land of Hus ther was a man called Job: an innocēt & vertuous man, soch one as feared God & eschued euell.
This man had. vii. sonnes & thre daughters. Hys substaunce was. vii. M. shepe, iii. M. camelles, v. C. youcke of oxen, v. C. she asses and a very great housholde: so that he was one of the most principal men among al them of the east countrey. And his sonnes wente, and made bāckettes: one daye in one house, another day in another, and sente for theyr thre systers to eate and drincke wyth them. So when they had passed ouer the tyme of their bankettinge round about, Job sent for them, and clensed them agayne, & gat vp earlye, and offred for euery one a burntoffringe. For Job thought thus: peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence, and haue bene vnthankfull to God in theyr hertes.
B And thus dyd Job euery daye. Now vpō a tyme, whē the seruātes of God came and stode before the Lord, Sathā came also among them. And the Lord sayde vnto Sathan: From whēce comest thou? Sathan answered the Lord, and sayde: I haue gone aboute the lande and walcked thorow it.

Thē sayd the Lord vnto Sathan: hast thou not cōsydered my seruaunt Job, how that he is an innocēt & vertuous mā: soch one as feareth God, & eschued euel, & that there is none lyke him in the land? Sathā answered, & sayde vnto the Lorde: Doth Job feare God for nought? hast thou not preserued hym, his house, & al his substaūce on euery syde? hast thou not blessed the workes of his handes? Is not his possession encreased in the land? But laye thyne hand vpō him a little, touche once all that he hathe, and (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. And the Lord said vnto Sathā: lo al that he hathe, be in thy power: onelye vpon hym selfe se that thou laye not thine hande. Then went Sathā forth from the Lorde.

C Now vpō a certayn day whē his sōnes and daughters were eating, and drinking wyne in their eldest brothers house, there came a messenger vnto Job, & sayd: Whyle ẏ oxē were a plowing, & the asses going in the pasture besyde thē: ẏ Sabees came in violently, and toke thē al away: ye they haue slayne thy seruaūtes with the swerd, and I only ranne my waye, to tell the.

And whyle he was yet speakinge, there came another, & sayd: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, it hath consumed and burnt vp al thy shepe & seruauntes: and I only ranne my way, to tel the. In ẏ meane season whyle he was yet speakinge, there came another, & sayde: The Caldees made thre armies, & fel in vpō thy camels, which they haue caried away, yea and slayne thy seruaūtes with the swearde: and I only am gottē away to tel the: Whyle he was speaking, there came yet another, & sayde, Thy D sonnes & daughters were eatinge & drinking wyne in their eldest brothers house, & sodenly ther came a mightie great wynde out of the South, & smote the. iiii. corners of the house: which fell vpō thy childrē, so that they are dead, and I am gottē awaye alone, to tell the.

Then Job stode vp, & rent hys clothes shaued his head, fel downe vpō the groūd worshipped, & sayd: Naked came I out of my mothers wōbe, & naked shall I turne thyther agayne. The Lorde gaue, and the Lord hath taken awaye: now blessed be ẏ name of the Lord. In al these thinges did Job not offend, nor murmured foolishly agaynst God.

a* By the seruauntes of god here vnderstande, not onely angelles, by whō he ordereth ÿ course & workes of ÿ worlde, but also ÿ godly & chosen, whom he continually careth and prouydeth for, Job.ii.a.

b* Came & stode before the lorde. Thynke not that god sometime apeare the to the angelles, and sometime not: for the good angelles do alwayse se the face of god. Nether cōmeneth God ether with ÿ angelles or with ÿ deuell with bodely speache but ÿ holy ghoost in the scriptures speaketh many thinges vnto vs accordyng to oure fealynge, and vseth a maner of speakyng famyliar to vs, attributyng appearyng speakyng enquerying & answerynge to God and to aungelles, whyche thynge man only vseth, to thynke ÿ we therby maye the easelyar perceaue hys meanynge. The commynge of the aungelles here is no nother thing than to geue accomptes of ÿ office inioyned the: which thei geue, knowlege ÿ God seyth with what truste they did it: and to geue thankes, and wayte for their reward. They came (sayth Origen) honouring magnifienge, prayslynge, geuynge thankes. Of Sathan also wryteth he thus. He came, nether with goyng to, or cōmynge in, but he came in thought, councel, & most wicked desyre to accuse ÿ ryghtwesse before God. Hys thought & desyre are taken as cōminge. The deuill then is counted to haue come into the syght of god, not that the most wycked came in deade in the syght of the good God, but because his cruel & most wicked thoughte came into the syght of god. And thus euen nowe a dayes also commeth the deuyll wyth them into ÿ sight of God, in ÿ he dayly accuseth, tempteth, vexethe, persecutethe and troublethe the godlye.

¶ Job is plaged with sore byles, & afterward is mocked of his wife. His frendes visite him, & haue compassion on hym.

The.ii. Chapter.

A It happened also vpō a tyme that when ÿ seruauntes of god came & stode before the lord, Sathā came amōg them, & stode before hym. a* And the Lord sayde vnto Sathan: From whence commest thou? Sathan answered and sayde: I haue gone aboute the lande, and walcked thorow it.

Thē said the Lorde vnto Sathan: hast thou not cōsydered my seruaūt Job, how ÿ he is an innocent and vertuous mā such one as feareth God, & eschueth euell, and B that there is none like him in ÿ lande? But thou mouedest me against him, to punysh him: yet is it in vayne, for he cōtinueth still in his godlynesse. Sathā āswered ÿ lord, and sayde: Skinne for skynne, & yce a man wyll geue al that euer he hath, for his life.
But laie thyne hād vpon him, touche him once vpō the bone & flesh, and (I holde) he shal course the to thy face. Then sayd the lord vnto Sathan: lo, there hast ÿ him in thy power, but spare his lyfe.

So went Sathan forth from the Lord, & smote Job wyth marueilous sore byles, from ÿ sole of the fote vnto his crowne: so that he sat vpon the ground in the asshes, and scraped of the fylthe of his sores wt a potsherde.

Then sayde his wife vnto him: Dost ÿ C cōtinue in thy perfectnes? curse god, and dy. But Job said vnto her. Thou speakest like a folish woman. Seynge we haue receaued prosperite at the hād of god, wherfore shulde we not be cōtēt with aduersyte also? In all these thynges, did not Job synne with his lippes.

Now when Jobs frendes herd of al the trouble, that happened vnto hym, there came thre of thē, euery one from his owne place: namelye, Eliphas the Thamanite, Baldad the Suhite, and Zophar ÿ Naamathite.

For they were agreed together to come, to shewe theyr compassyon vpon him, & to D comfort him. So when they lyft vp their eyes a farre of, they knewe him not.

Then they cryed, and wepte: then euery one of them rente hys clothis, & sprynckled dust vpon their heades in ÿ aire. Thei sat them downe by him also vpō ÿ groūd vii. dayes & vii. nightes. Nether was there eny of thē that spake one word vnto hym, for they sawe that hys payne was verye greate.

a* God is here described askynge and demaundyng, not that he vnto whom al thinges ar knowē shuld therby learne any thing: but that the deceates & rāckour of Sathā which alwayes lyeth in wayte, might be vnto vs the better knowen, to thyntent that we shoulde walke the moare warely.

¶ The wordes of Job, wherin he declareth ÿ this present life is myserable: & that ÿ death of the ryght was so ioyouse and honorable.

The.iii. Chapter.

A After thys opened Job hys mouth, and a* cursed his day and sayde: loste be that daye, wherein I was borne, and the nyghte, in the whyche it was sayde: there is a man child conceaued

The same daye be turned to darcknesse, & not regarded of God from aboue, neather be shyned vpõ with lighte: but be couered with darcknesse, and the shadow of death.
Lett the dimme cloude fal vpon it, and let it be lapped in with sorow. Let the darck-storme ouercome that nyghte, let it not be reckened amonge the dayes of the yeare, ner counted in the monethes: Despysed be that nyght, & discommended: let them þ curse the daye, euen those that be ready to rayse vp mourninge geue it also theyr cursse. Lett the starres be dymme thorow B darcknesse of it. Lett it loke for light, but let it se none, nether the rysynge vp of the fayre mornyng: because it shut not vp the wombe that bare me, ner hyd these sorowes fro myne eyes.

Alas, why dyed I not in þ birth? why did not I perish, as sone as I came out of my mothers wõbe? why set they me vpõ their knees? why gaue they me sucke w their brestes? Thẽ shulde I now haue lye stil, I shuld haue slepte, & bene at rest: like as þ kynges and lordes of the erth, which buyld them selues speciall places: As the C princes þ haue great substaũce of gould, and their houses ful of siluer. O that I ve terlye had no beynge, or were as a thynge borne out of tyme þ is put asyde, ether as yong children, which neuer saw the lyght There must þ wycked ceasse frõ theyr tyranny, ther soch as are ouer laboured be at rest: ther ar those lett out fre, which haue bene in presõ: so that they heare nomore the voyce of the oppressoure: There are small & great: the bonde man, and he that is fre from hys master.

Wherfore is the lyght geuen to him þ is in mysery? and lyfe vnto thẽ, that haue heuy hertes? Which longe for death, yf it come not: & search for it, more then for treasure: whyche also wolde be excedynge glad, & reioyce yf they found theyr graue. That shulde be ioye to the man whose waye is hyd, & whiche God kepeth backe from him. For my syghes come before I eate, & my roaringes fal out like flowyng water. For þ thing þ I feared, is come vp-on me: & the thing that I was afraied of, is happened vnto me. Was I not happie? had I not quyetnes? was I not in reste?
And now commeth soch misery vpon me.

Understandyn, he meaneth so that he can not obtayne to dye, which thinge he so earnestly desyreth day.

The Notes.

a* Cursed hys daye. Lyke as a man hauing an imposteme (sayth Chrisostome) yf he be cut of the Surgeõ, hauing nothig wherwith he may resyst, during the time of his cutting, holdeth fast þ thinges þ be nye him & is redy to byte thẽ that stand by him, & yet can do no thing vnto thẽ: euẽ so Iob fearing þ greuou senes of blasphemyng & cursing, doth wringe to vnsyuely thinges, & speaking after þ maner of þ cõmõ people, which impute theirmisery to the influẽce of þ starres, & to the daye of their birth, curseth his day, þ is, testifieth w cursing, how bitter a lyfe he lyueth, & vnto how greate miseries he was borne (as we cõmõly say in an vnhappy houre, euẽ as tho-ughe now a dayes a mã repẽting his synnes, shuld say: Wo is me wretch. In an vnhappye houre was I borne which with my dedes ha ue denyed my maker, wo worth it. &c. b* They that cursse the daye, are those that are wery of theyr lyfe, in so moche that they fall in dede to cursinge.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Then answered Eliphas the Themanite & sayde vnto him: Yf we begin to commen with the, A peraduenture thou wilt be dis-contente, but who can wythhold him self frõ speaking: Beholde, thou hast bene a teacher of many, & hast confor ted the wery handes.

Thy wordes haue set vp those that were falle, thou hast refreshed the weake knees But now that the plage is come vpon the thou shrinkest away: now that it hath tou ched thy selfe, þ arte faynte harted. Is not B this thy feare, thy stedfastnes, thy pacience, & the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Conside (I pray the) whoeuer perysshed being an innocẽt? Or, whẽ were þ godly destroied?
As I haue sene them that plow vanite & sow malice reape þ same. With the blast of god did they perysh, & with the breth of his angre cõsumed they away. The roarying of the lion, the voice of the lyonesse, & the teeth of the lyons whelpes are broke The liõ perissheth, for lacke of pray & the lyons whelpes are scatered abrode.

And vnto me was þ word hidde, & mine C eare hath receaued a litel therof. In þ phã tasyes and thoughtes of the vysions of þ night, whẽ slepe cometh on me: feare came vpõ me & drede & made my bones to shake And whẽ þ wind passed by before my ye sence it made the heares of my fleshe stan de vp. He stode there and I knew not his face

face, an ymage ther was before me & there was styllnes, so that I heard thys voyce. b* Shal man be moare iust than God? Or shall man be purer than hys maker? c* Behold ther is no trust to his seruauntes, & in his aungelles hath he found frowardnes.
D howe moche moare in them that dwell in houses of claye, whose foundacyon is but erth: whych shalbe consumed by the Moth.
They shalbe smytten from the mornyng vnto the euening: yee they shal perish euerlastingly, & no man think theron. Is not theis d* dignitie taken away wyth the, they shal die and not in wysdome.

a* By ye roaryng, the voyce, & the teethe, are vnderstand the blasphemyes & bacbytinges that ar vsed agaynste the innocent, as it is sayde Prouer. xxx. b. By the symplitude of the lyon he meanethe, that the wycked shall perish how great or myghtye soeuer they be.
b* Shal man be moare iust: &c. Of this principle wyll Eliphaces reason thus agaynste Job. Yf God wolde destroye an innocent, it shulde folowe that man were more ryghtwes & purer than god, but this is impossible, for the contrary is shewed vnto me by reuelacyon.
c* Behold their is no trust &c. He laboureth in confirming that which he had before propounded. The summe of ye reason is, Aungeles ar not purer than god, ergo not men. d* Dignitie, sygnifyethe here whatsoeuer thei haue wherein they excell other, whether it be riches or honour, power or conning &c. For none of these shal redeame them fro deeth.

¶ The end of a fole. The ryghtwesnes of god. The Lord chastenethe hys, and delyuereth them agayne.

The .v. Chapter.

Name me one els, yf thou canst find eny: yee loke about ye, vp on eny of ye holy men. As for ye folish man, displeasure killeth A him & anger slayethe ye ignoraunt. I haue sene my self, when the folysh was depe roted, that his bewty was soden-ly destroied, that his childrẽ were wythout prosperite or health: that they were slayne in the dore, and no man to deliuer them: that hys haruest was eaten vp of the hungry: that the weapened man had spoyled it, and that the thurstye had droncke vp hys ryches. It is not the erth that bringeth forth trauayle, nether commeth sorow oute of the ground: but it is man, that is borne vnto my-sery, lyke as the byrde for to fle.
But now wil I speake of the lord, and talke of god: which doth thinges, that are B vnsearchable, & marueilous without num ber: which geueth rayne vpon the earthe, & poureth water vpon al thinges: whych setteth vp them of low degre, & sendeth pros-perite, to those that ar in heuynes: which destroieth the deuyses of the sotyll, so that they ar not able to perfourme ye thinges yt they take in hande: whych compasethe the wyse in their owne craftynesse, and ouerthroweth the councell of the wicked. In so moch that they runne in to darcknesse by fayre daye, & grope about them at ye none C daye, lyke as in the nyghte.
And so he delyuereth the poore from the swearde, from theyr mouth, & fro the hand of ye cruell, that ye poore maye haue hope, & that the mouth of the oppressoure maye be stopped.
Behold, happye is the man, whom God punysheth: therfore, despyce not thou ye cha-stenynge of the Almyghty. For though he make a wounde, he geueth a medycyne againe: though he smyte, his hand maketh whole agayne.
a* He delyuereth the oute of syxe troubles, so that in ye seuenth there can no harme touch ye. In ye myddeste of honger he saueth the from deathe: and when it is warre, fro D. the power of the swearde.
He shal kepe the from the perious tong so that when trouble commeth, thou shalte not neade to feare. In destruction & derth yu shalt be mery, & shalt not be afrayed for ye beastes of ye eerthe: But the castels in the land shalbe confederate with the, and the beastes of the fealde shal geue the peace. a Yee thou shalt know, that thy dwelling place shal be in reste: thou shalte beholde thy substaunce, & be no more punyshed for synne. Thou shalte se also, that thy sede shal increace, and that thy posteritie shalbe as the grasse vpon the erth. Thou shalt co me to thy graue in a fayre age, lyke as the corne sheewes are broughte in to ye barne in due season. Lo, this is ye matter, as we our selues haue proued bi experience. Ther fore now that thou hearest it, take better hede to thy selfe.

The Notes.

a* He delyuerethe the &c. Thys sentence propounded after ye maner of a Prophecie sig nifyeth all one wyth that of Paul. i. Cor. x. c God is faythfull whych shall not suffre you to be tempted aboue your strengthe, but shal in the myddes of the temptacion make a way to escape oute. Eliphas meanethe
He

He hath verely wrapte the in many miseries, but when the seventh cometh, and when it shall seame to hym that the offence is suffyciently punished, & that thou hast left thine impacyencye (for that sayeth he to Job, though vniustly) then wyl he prosper the & so great health, y thou shalt after leade thy life most fortunatelye.

¶ Job answereth, that his payne is more grevouse, then his faute, yet notwithstandinge he beleveth therin

A Job answered, and said: O that my misery were weyed, & my punysshmente layed in the balaunces: for then shulde it be heuyer, then the sande of the see. Thys is the cause, that my wordes are so sorowfull.

For a the arrowes of y almighty ar in me, whose indignacyō hath dronke vp my spyrete, & the terryble feares of God fyght against me. Doth the wyld asse roare whē he hath grasse? Or cryeth the oxe, when he hath fodder ynough? That which is vnsauery, shall it be eaten without salte, or is ther any taste in y whyte of an egge. The

B things that some tyme I might not away wythal, are now my meate for very sorow O that I myghte haue my desyre: O that God wolde graunte me the thyng, that I longe for: That he wolde beginne & smite me: that he wold let his hand go, & hew me downe. Thē shuld I haue some cōfort: yea I wolde desyre him in my paine, y he shuld not spare, for I wyll not be agaynste y wordes of the holy one.

What power haue I to endure? Or, what is mine ende, that my soule myghte be paciēt? Is my strength the strength of stones? Or is my fleshe made of brasse? Is it not so that ther is in me no help? b that my substaunce is taken fro me. He y is in tribulacion ought to be comforted of his neyghbour: c but the feare of y lorde is cleane awaye: Myne owne brethren passe ouer by me as the water broke, that hastely runneth thorow the valleyes. But thei that feare the hoare frost, the snow shal fall vpon them.

C When their tyme cōmeth they shalbe destroied & perysshe: and when they be set on fyre, they shalbe remoued out of their place, for y pathes that they go in, ar croked: they hast after vayne thynges, and shall perish. Consydre the pathes of Theman, y the wayes of Saba, wherin thei haue put their truste. Cōfounded are they, y put my cōfidence in them: For when they came to opteine y thīges y thei loked for, thei were brought to confusion.

Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but now that ye se my mysery, ye are afrayed. D Did I desyer you, to come hither? Or to geue me eny of youre substaūce? To deliuer me frō the enemyes hād, or to saue me frō the power of the mightie? Teach me & I wil holde my tonge: and yf I do erre, shewe me wherin.

Wherfore blame ye then y wordes, y are well & truly spoken? whiche of you cā reproue thē? Sauing only that ye are so tyll to check mens sayinges, & can speake many wordes in y wynd. Ye fall vpō the fatherles, & go about to ouerthrow youre owne frend. Wherfore loke not only vpō me, but vpō youre selues: whether I lye, or no. Turne into youre owne selues (I pray you) be indifferēt iudges, & consydre mine vngiltines: whether ther be eny vnryghtuousnes in my tōg, or vayne wordes in my mouth.

a a The Arrowes of the allmyghtye after some mennes opynyon, ar the sorenes of his iudgemente & hys wrathe: after some other, they are y trouble which the law moueth in the hertes of mē, while thei ther by ar stirred to hate thē selues, and so are healthfully kylled. as it is sayd Psal. xxxviii, a. Some againe expounde them to be ther crosse of mysery & wretchednesse wherin God had nowe wrapped hym. For the Saynctes (saye they) receaue ther crosse of the hand of God. The same wyl, that this sentence be a increasing & amplifying of that, which his aduersary had scarcely layde agaynste hym. Eliphas in the begynnynge of the fourthe Chapter had sayde, that the plage was come vpō hī & had touched hym. With this (say they) meateth he now. Beholde it not onelye touched me, but woundeth me wyth Arrowes, & those venoumed wyth venoume, beyng w y gall of dragōs, w which touchīg, both my bloude wareth wood, & al my sprete is supped vp. Moreouer god hath not onely throwe these dartes vpō me, but also his dreadful terrours y is, whatsoeuer he hath y is terrible, layeth he on me. b b That my substaunce is takē frō me. The Chalde interpr. hath. Wysdome is departed from me, and that, after Rab. Mos. the wysdome of dyscussyng iudgyng & tryeng of thynges. As though he shuld say, so sore is my greife, sayth my helpe is taken frō me, y I am not permytted to breathe so longe, tyll I may call to remembraunce what is moaste acceptable to god. Some read. Is not al y stregth of myne indeuoure quite gone from me.

et But the feare of the Lord &c. As though he sayde. But alas, now adayes, there is no feare of the lord lefte: and therefore it is no maruel, yf charite also which is ioyned to ẏ feare of God, be not in vse.

¶ Job sheweth that this lyfe is but a batayle or war fare.

The. vii. Chapter.

A Is not the lyfe of man vpon erth a very batail? Are not his dayes lyke ẏ dayes of an hyred seruaũt? For like as a bõde seruaũt desireth ẏ shadow, & as an hyreling wold faine haue an ende of his worcke: Euen so haue I laboured whole monethes lõg (but in vaine) & many a carefull nyghte haue I tolde. When I laied me downe to slepe, I sayde: O when shal I rise? Agayne, I lõged sore for the night. Thus am I ful of sorow, tyll it be dark. My flesh is clothed wyth wormes, fylthynesse & dust: my skinne is withered, & trombled together: my dayes passe ouer more spedely thẽ a weeuer cã weeue oute his webbe: & are gone, or I am a warre. O B remembre, ẏ my lyfe is but a wynde, and that myne eye shal no more se ẏ pleasures thereof, yee and that none other mans eye shall se me eny more. For yf thou fasten thine eyes vpõ me, I come to naught like as a cloude is cõsumed & vanisshed away euen so he that goeth downe to hell, commeth nomore vp, ner turneth agayne into hys house, nether shall hys place knowe him eny more.
C Therfore I wil not spare my mouth, but will speake in ẏ trouble of my sprete, in ẏ bytternes of my minde wil I talke. Am I a see or a walfysh, ẏ thou kepeste me so in preson? When I thynke: my bedd shal cõforte me, I shall haue some refresshing by talcking by my selfe vpon my couch. Thẽ troublest thou me wt dreames, & makest me so afrayed thorow visions, ẏ my soule wissheth rather to be strãgled, & my bones D to be deed.

I cã se no remedy, I shall lyue no more: O spare me thẽ, for my daies ar but vaine What is mã, that thou hast him in suche reputacyon, & settest so moch by him? Thou takest diligẽt care for hym, & sodẽly doest thou trye hym.

Why goest ẏ not fro me, ner lettest me alone, so longe tyll I swalow downe my spetle? I haue offẽded, what shal I do vnto the, O ẏ preseruer of men? Why hast ẏ made me to stãd in thy way, & am so heuy a burden vnto my selfe? Why doest ẏ not forgeue me my sinne? Wherfore takest ẏ not away my wyckednes. Beholde, nowe must I slepe in the duste: & yf ẏ sekeste me to morow in ẏ mornyng, I shalbe gone.

¶ Job is reprehended and noted to haue deserued his payne. A descripcion of hipocrites.

The. viii. Chapter.

A Thẽ answered Baldad ẏ Suhite, & sayde: How long wylt thou talke of soche thynges? how longe shall thy mouthe speake so proude wordes? Doth God peruerte the thyng that is lawfull? Or, doth the Almyghtye destroy the thing that is right? When thy sonnes synned agaynst him, dyd not he punysh them for theyr wyckednesse? If thou woldeste now resorte vnto god by tymes, and make thyne humble prayer to ẏ Almighty: yf thou woldest liue a pure and a godly life: shulde he not wake vp vnto the immediatlye, & geue the, the bewtie of righteousnes agayne? In so moch, that wherein so euer thou hadest lytle afore, thou shuldest B now haue greate aboundaunce. Enquere of them that haue bene before the, searche dylygently amonge thy forefathers: Namely, that we are but of yesterdaye, and cõsydre not, that oure dayes vpon earth are but a verye shadowe. They shal shew the, they shall tell the, yee they wyll gladly cõfesse the same.

May a rysshe be grene withoute moystnesse? maye ẏ grasse growe wtout water? No: but (or euer it be shot forthe, & or euer it be gathered) it withereth, before eny other herbe. Euẽ so goeth it wt all thẽ, that forget God: & euen thus also shal the ypocrites hope come to naught. His cõfydẽce
C shalbe destroied, for he trusteth in a spyders webbe. He maketh hĩ vpõ his house, but he shal not stand: he holdeth hĩ fast by it, yet shal he not endure. Oft time a thing doth florysh, & mẽ thynke ẏ it maye abyde ẏ sonne shynyng: it shuteth forth ẏ braunches in his gardẽ, it taketh many rotes, in so moch that it is lyke an house of stones.

But yf it be takẽ out of his place, euery mã denieth it, sayng: I know the not. Lo, thus is it wt him, ẏ reioyseth in his owne doynges:

doynges:and as for other,they grow out of the earth.
Beholde,God wyl not cast awaye a ver-tuous mã,nether wyl he helpe the vngod-ly.Thy mouth shal be fyl wt laughyng,& thy lyppes wyth gladnes.They that hate the shall be cõfoũded,and the dwellynges of the vngodly shall come to naught.

¶ Job declareth the benefites of god,& that mãnes ryghtewesnes is nothynge.

The.ix.Chapter.

A Job answered,& sayd:As for cõdẽne me:yf I wil put forth my self for a pfect mã,he shal proue me a wicked doer: for ẏ I shuld be an inocẽt,my cõsciẽce kno C weth it not,yet I my self am weery of my life.This one thig wil I say:he destroieth both ẏ righteous & vngodli.And though he slay sodenly withe the scourge,yet laugheth he at the punishmẽt of the innocẽt.

As for the world,he geueth it ouer in to ẏ power of the wycked,soch as ẏ rulers be, wherof al lãdes ar ful.Is it not so?wher is there eny,but he is soch one?
My dayes haue bene more swift then a runner:they are gone sodenly,& haue sene no good thyng.They are passed away,as the shippes that be good vnder sayle,& as the Aegle that hasteth to ẏ pray.When I am purposed to forget my cõplayninges to chaung my countenaunce,& to cõforte my self:the am I afraied of al my workes, for I know,thou fauourest not an euil doer.If I be thẽ a wicked one,why haue I laboured in vaine?Though I wasshed my D self wt snow water,& made myne handes neuer so clene,yet shuldest ẏ dyppe me in the myer,& myne owne clothes shulde defyle me.For he ẏ I must geue answere vn to,& with whom I go to lawe,is not a mã as I am.Nether is ther any dayesmã to re proue both the parties,or to laye hys hand betwixte vs.Let hi take his rod away fro me,yet let him make me no more afrayed of him,& then shal I answere hym wtout eny feare.For as lõg as I am in soch fear fulnes,I cã make no answere:And why? it greueth my soule to lyue.

The Notes.

a* God trãslateth the mõtaines,not only these of ẏ erth,but also the arrogãt & prowde tyrauntes,& the great realmes of the world, which by a borowed speache are often times in the Scripture sygnifyed by mõtaynes & hilles.So trãslated he Pharao.Exodi.xiiii.& & kynge Senacherib.Esaie.xxxvii.g. b* Here is it good to se ẏ Job presumethe not of his owne rightewesnes,but plainelie cõ fessethe hym selfe vnryghtewes & a synner before god,although before the worlde he had lyued blamelesse. God loketh on the hearte though men looke but onely on ẏ outwar de appearaunce. His aduersaryes thoughte that he shulde neuer haue had soche a crosse layde on hym,in lesse then he had also outt-wardly & openly lyued in wyckednesse.To ẏ answerethe Job in dyuerse places that he therein was not culpable,and therfore accuseth as it were after the maner of mẽ,the iud gement

grment of God, concernynge soch as are out: wardlye ryghtewes: & studiouse to lyue ver: tuously: namely soche a lyue without blame amonge men, & that bothe entende & do well to all men, and yet are wrapped in many my: steries and wretchednes oftẽ time ouer cruel.
God herin lieth the chefe of ye cõtrauersy be: twyxt Job and his aduersaryes, that Job de fendeth hym self not to haue deserued his pu nishment by his outward lyuynge: where as his aduersaryes armed only with manly and fleshly wyt, thought god to be vnrightewes, yf he wolde so greuouslye punishe hym that had not bene outwarde synne againste him.
Job, hys conscyence bearynge hym witnes, had lyued innocentlye and streyghtelye, & hurte no man, had alwayes feared God, and worshypped him onely, his childrẽn also had he nourtured to the feare of god, and couldnot no man be accused of wyckednesse. Yet wyt: nesseth he iustlye here (as al ye godly do) that he was not vtterly with out sinne, for other wyse had he bene a liar. i. John. i. If we say, we haue no sinne, we deceaue our selues, & tru eth is not in vs. Wherefore in the places where he sayeth that he hathe not deserued his punishmẽt, and that shulde seame to shew him blamelesse, know, that he speaketh of his outward maner of liuing, not of the inward thoughtes and desyers of the hearte, wherin he was vndouted an offender.

¶ Job is weery of his life, & setteth out his frayltie before God. He desyre the tyme to repẽte. A descripcion of deeth.

The. x. Chapter.

Neuerthelesse, now will I put forth my wordes: I wil spea ke out of ye very heuinesse of 3 my soule, & wil say vnto god: O do not cõdẽne me, but she we me the cause, wherefore thou iudgeste me on this maner. Thynckest thou it well done, to oppresse me, to caste me of (being a worke of thy handes) and to mayntene the councell of the vngodlye? Haste thou fleshly eyes then, or doest thou loke as mã loketh? Are thy dayes as the daies of mã, and thy yeares as mans yeres? that thou makest soche inquysycion for my wicked B nesse, & searchest oute my synne? where as (notwithstandynge) thou knowest that I am no wycked personne, and that there is no man able to delyuer me out of thine hã de. Thy hãdes haue made me, & fashoned me alltogether rõũd about, wylt thou then de stroy me sodenly? O remembre (I beseke ye) how that thou madest me of the moulde of ye earth, & shalt brynge me to earth agayne.
Hast thou not mylked me, as it were mylck: & turned me to cruddes lyke chese? Thou hast couered me wyth skynne & flesh, and knyt me together with bones & synowes,

Thou haste graunted me lyfe, & done me C good: & ye diligẽt hede that thou tokest vp on me, hath preserued my sprete.
Though thou hydest the thynges in thyne hert, yet am I sure, that thou remembrest thẽ al. Wherfore diddest thou kepe me, when I synned, & hast not clẽsed me fro mine offẽ ce? If I do wickedlye, wo is me therfore: If I be ryghteous, yet darre I not lift vp my heade: so ful am I of confusyon, & se myne owne mysery.
Thou huntest me out (beynge in heuí: nesse) as it were a Lion, and troublest me oute of measure. Thou bryngest fresh witnesses against me, thy wrath increasest thou vpon me, very many are the plages yt I am in. Wherfore hast thou brought me out of my mothers wombe? O that I had D perysshed, & that no eye had sene me. If they had caried me to my graue, as sone as I was borne, then shoulde I be nowe, as though I had neuer bene.
Shal not my short life come soone to an ende? O hold thou fro me, let me alone, that I maye ease my self a lytle afore I go thy:
ther, frõ whẽce I shal not turne agayne.
Namely, to that land of darcknesse & sha: dow of death: yee into that darck clowdy lãd & deadly shadow, wher as is no ordre, but terrible feare as in the darcknesse.

¶ Job is vainly reprehended of Sophar. God is incomprehensible. He is mercyfull to the repentaunt

The. xi. Chapter.

Then answered Sophar ye Na A amathite, & sayd: Shuld not he that maketh many wordes be answered? Shuld he yt ba bleth moch, be cõmẽded there: in? Shuld men geue eare vnto the onlye?
Thou wilt laugh other mẽ to scorne, and shal no body mocke the agayne? Wylte thou say vnto God: The thing that I take in hãd is perfect, & I am clene in thy sight?
O that God wolde speake, & open his lip pes against the, that he might shew the (out of hys secrete wysdome) howe manyfol: de hys Lawe is: then shuldest thou kno: we, that God had forgotten the, because of thy synnes.
Wilt thou find out god with thy sekyng? wilt thou attayne to ye perfectnesse of the B allmightie? He is hier thẽ heauen, what wilt thou do? Deper thẽ the hel, how wylt thou

thou the know him? His length exceadeth the legth of the erthe, & his bredth ẏ bredth of ẏ see. Though he turne all thynges vp side downe, close thē in, or thrust them to gether, who darre check him therfore?

For it is he that knoweth the vanyte of men: he seyth their wickednes also, shul
C de he not thē consydre it? A vayne body it altereth hym selfe, & the sonne of man is like a wylde asses foale. If thou haddest now a right hert, and lyftedst vp thyne handes towarde hym: yf thou woldest put awaye the wyckednesse whych thou hast in hand, so that no vngodlynesse dwelt in thy house: Then myghtest thou lyft vp thy face wythout shame, thē shuldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare.

D Then shuldest thou forget thy misery, & thyncke nomore vpon it, then vpō the waters that runne by. Thē shuld thy life be as cleare as the noone day, and spryng forth as ẏ mornyng. Then myghtest thou haue cōforthe in ẏ hope that thou hast: & slepe quyetly, whē ẏ arte buryed. Thē shuldest thou take thi rest, and no man to make the afrayd: yee many one shuld set much by ẏ. As for ẏ eyes of ẏ vngodly they shalbe cōsumed, & not escape: their hope shalbe mysery and sorow of mynde.

¶ Job in shewing his pacyence declareth ẏ myght and power of God.

The .xii. Chapter.

A So Job answered, and sayde: Thē (no doute) ye are ẏ mē alone, & wysdom shal perysshe wyth you. But I haue vnderstādig as wel as ye, & am no lesse thē ye. Yee who knoweth not these thinges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, and whō God heareth, is mocked of his neighbour: the godly and innocent mā is laughed to scorne. Godlinesse is a light despised in the hertes of the ryche, and is set for thē to stōble vpō. The houses of robbers are in wealthe & prosperyte, & they ẏ malyciously medle agaynst God, dwell without care: yee God geueth all thynges ryche plente wyth hys owne.

B Aske the catell, & they shal enfourme the: the foules of ẏ ayre, & they shall tell the: Speake to ẏ earth, & it shall shewe ẏ: Or to the fysshes of the see, and they shal certifye the. What is he, but he knoweth ẏ the hand of the lord made al these? In whose hande is the soule of euery lyuing thyng, & the breth of all men. Haue not the eares
C pleasure in hearing, & the mouth in tastynge the thing that it eateth? Among old personnes there is wysdome, and amōg the aged is vnderstandinge. Yee wythe God is wysdome and strēgth, it is he that hath councell and forknowelege. If he breake downe a thing, who can set it vp agayne? If he shut a thynge, who wyl open it. Beholde, yf he witholde ẏ waters, they drye vp: Yf he let them go, they destroye the earth. Wyth hym is strength and wysdō: he knoweth bothe the dysceauer and hym that is disceaued.

D He carryeth a way ẏ wise mā, as it were a spoyle, & bryngeth ẏ iudges out of theyr wyttes. He lowseth the gyrdle of kynges, & gyrdeth their loynes with a bond. He ledeth awaye the Preastes into captyuyte, & turneth the myghtye vpsyde downe. He taketh the verite frō out of the mouthe, & disapointeth the aged of their wisdō. He poureth out confusyon vpon Prynces, & cōforteth them that haue bene oppressed. Loke what lyeth hyd in darcknesse, he declareth it openly: and the very shadowe of death bryngeth he to light. He both encreaseth the people, and destroyeth thē: He maketh thē to multyplie, & dryueth thē away. He chaūgeth the herte of the Princes and kinges of the earth, & disapoynteth thē: so that they go wandryng out of the waye, & grope in the darck without light, stackeringe to and fro lyke dronken men.

The .xiii. Chapter.

A Lo, al this haue I sene wyth mine eye, heard with mine eare, & vnderstād it. Loke what ye know ẏ same do I knowe also, nether am I inferior vnto you. Neuertheles I am purposed to talke wt the almightye, & my desyre is to comē with god. As for you, ye are workmasters of lies, & vnprofytable Phisiciās al to gether. Wolde God ye kept your tonge, that ye might be taken for wyse men. Therfore, heare my wordes, & pondre the sentence of my lyppes. Wyll ye make answere for God wyth lyes, and mayntayne hym him with disceate? Will ye accepte the per B son of God, & intreate for hym? Shall that help you, when he calleth you to reko nyng. Thynke ye to begyle him, as a mā is begyled? He shall punish you, & reproue you, yf ye do secretly accept any personne.

Shall he not make you afrayed, when he sheweth hym selfe? Shall not his terrible feare fall vpon you? youre remembraūce shalbe lyke vnto the duste, & youre prыde shalbe turned to claye. Hold your tonges nowe, and let me speake, for there is some C thinge come in to my mynde. * a Wherfore do I beare my flesh in my teth, & mine sou le in mine hādes? Lo, ther is nether cōfort nor hope for me, yf he wil slay me. But yf I shew & reproue mine owne waies in his syght, he is euē the same that makethe me whole: & why? there maye no hypocryte co me before hym. Heare my wordes, & pōdre my sayinges wt youre eares. b * Beholde, now haue I prepared my iudgmente, and know ŷ I shalbe found rightwes. What is he, that wyll go to lawe with me? For yf I holde my tōge, I shall dye. Neuertheles graunte me two thinges, and then wyll I not hyde my selfe from the.

Withdraw thyne hand frō me, & let not the fearfull drede of the make me afray-ed. And then sende for me to the lawe, ŷ I maye āswere for my self: or els, let me spea ke, & geue thou the answere. Howe greate are my mysdedes & synnes? Let me know my trāsgressions & offences. * c Wherfore hydeste thou thy face, and holdeste me for thyne enemye? Wilt thou be so cruel & extreme vnto a flying leafe, & folow vpō drie stubble? that thou latest so sharpely to my charge, & wylt vtterly vndo me, for ŷ syn-nes of my youth? Thou hast put my fete in the stockes: thou lokest narowlye vnto al my pathes, & marckest the steppes of my fete: wher as I (notwithstanding) must cō sume lyke as a foule cariō, and as a cloth that is moth eaten.

The Notes.

a Wherfore &c. These both ar prouerbially spoken, of them that offer their lyues to Ieopardy, and spare not the selues. For he spareth not hym self that teareth hys fleshe with his teeth: and agayne he that beareth his soule in his hande, caryeth it as a thyng ready to be lost, euē as thoughe he woulde streight leaue it, and cast it of. b Behold, &c. this is his meaning. The sume of my cōclusyon was this, thus dyd I order and defende my cause agaynste your reasons that my hope is to be iustified. Armed wyth this fayth: I come without feare vnto iudgemente. He will not pronounce hi vn rightwes that so vnfaynedly hath trusted to hys mercye. Hipocrites, they nier they ar to iudgement the moare the feare: I the nyer I am to death the more strong is my hope. c Wherfore hidest thou my face. What ŷ hyding of his face meaneth loke Deu. xxxi. d.

¶ Job descrybeth the lyfe of a mā, & prophecieth of ŷ resurreccyon. Hope sustayneth the godly, tyl they obtayne that they loke for.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

Man that is borne of a womā, A hath but a short time to liue, & is ful of diuerse miseries. He cōmeth vp & falleth away like a flour. He fleeth as it were a shadowe, & neuer cōtinueth in one state.
Thinkest thou it nowe well done, to open thine eies vpō soch one, & to bringe me before ŷ in iudgmēt? Who cā make it cleane that commeth of an vncleane thinge? No body. The dayes of mā ar short, ŷ nōbre of hys monethes are knowne onelye vnto the. Thou hast apoynted him his boū des, he can not go beyonde them. Go from hym, that he maye reste a lytle: vntyll his daye come, whyche he lokethe for, lyke as an hyrelynge dothe.

If a tre be cut downe, ther is some hope B yet, that it wyll sproute and shutte forthe the braunches agayne: For though a rote be waxen olde & deed in the grounde, yet when the stock getteth the sent of water, it wyll budde, and bringe forth bowes, lyke as whē it was fyrste planted. But as for man when he is deed, perysshed & consumed awaie, what becommeth of him? The floudes when they be dryed vp, and the ry uers whē thei be emptie, are filled agayne thorow the flowyng waters of the see: but whē man slepeth, he ryseth not agayne: vn till the heauē perish: he shall not wake vp ner ryse out of his slepe. O ŷ thou woldest C kepe me, and hyde me in ŷ hell, vntyll thy wrathe were styllid: and to appoynte me a time, wherin thou myghteste * a remebre me. Maye a deed man lyue agayne? Al ŷ daies of this my pilgremage am I lokin-kyng, whē my chaūginge shal come. If ŷ woldeste but call me, I shoulde obey the: only despise not the worke of thyne owne handes.

For thou hast nombred all my goinges, D yet be not thou to extreame vpon my syn-nes. Thou hast sealed vp mine offences, as it were in a bagg: but be mercifull vnto my wyckednesse. The mountaines fal awaye at the laste, the rockes are remoued out of their place, ÿ waters pearse thorow the very stones by lytle & litle, the floudes wasshe a way the grauell & earth: Euen so destroyest thou the hope of mā in lyke ma ner. Thou preuailest against him, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungeste his estate, & puttesthi frō ÿ. Whether his chyl-drē come to worshippe, or no, he can nott tel: And yf thei be mē of low degre, he kno weth not. While he liueth, his flesh muste haue trauayle: & whyle the soule is in him he must be in sorowe.

¶ Eliphas reprehēdeth Iob because he ascrybeth wisdō & pacience to him self. He describeth ÿ curse ÿ falleth on the wycked rekening Iob to be one of nombre.

Then āswered Eliphas ÿ The proueste ẏ wordes, that ar nothing worth: & speakest ÿ thinges, which cā do no good As for shame, ÿ haste set it aside, els wol-dest ÿ not make so manye wordes before god: but thy wickednes teacheth thi mouth, & so thou hast chosen the a craftie tonge. Thine owne mouth condēneth thee, &

B uer was borne? Or, waste thou made before the hilles? hast thou herde the secrete coūcell of god, that al wysdome is to litle for the? What knowest thou, that we kno we not? What vnderstādest thou, but we can the same? With vs are olde and aged men, yee soche as haue lyued longer then thy forefathers.

Thinckest thou it a smal thynge of the consolacions of God? & are they wyth the a* Et thynge harde: Why doth thyne heart make ÿ so proude? Why standest thou so greatly in thyne owne cōceate? Where vn to loke thyne eyes, ÿ thy mynde is so puft vp agaist god & lettest soch wordꝭ go out of thi mouth? What is man, that he shuld be cleane? what hath he (which is borne of a womā) wherby he might be knowē to be righteous? Behold ther is no trust to hys sanctes: yea ÿ a* very heuēs are not cleane in his sight. How moch more thē an abhominable and vyle mā, which e* drincketh wickednes like water? I wyl tel the, heare C me: I wyl shew the a thing, that I know: which wyse mē haue tolde, & hath not bene hyd frō their fathers: vnto whō onely the lande was geuē, that no straunger shulde come amonge them.

The vngodly despayreth al the dayes of his lyfe, & the nōbre of a tyrauntes yeres is vnknowen. A fearful sounde is euer in hys eares, & when it is peace, yet feareth he destructiō: He beleueth neuer to be deliue-red out of darckenesse, the swearde is allwaye before his eyes. Whē he goeth forth to get his lyuing, he thinketh playnly, that the daye of darckenesse is at hand. Sorow and carefulnes make him afrayed, & compasse him rounde aboute, lyke as it were a king with his host ready to the battel. For he hath stretched out his hand agaīst god, and armed him self against the almightie He runneth proudly vpō him, & with a stif necke fighteth he against him: wher as he D couereth his face with fatnes, and maketh hys body wel lykinge. Therfore shall hys dwelling be in desolate cyties, & in houses whych noman inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shal not be rich, nether shal his sub staunce continue, ner encrease vpon earth.
He shal neuer come out of darckenesse, the flame shall drye vp his braūches, with the blast of the mouth of god shal he be taken away. He wyll nether applye hym selfe to faythfulnes ner truth, so sore is he disce-ued with vanite.

He shal perishe afore hys tyme be wor ne out, and his hand shal not be grene. He shalbe plucked of as an vnrypenedye grape frō the vine, & shal let his floure fal, as the olyue doth. For the cōgregation of ypocri tes is vnfrutefull, & the fyre shal consume the houses of soch, as are gredy to receaue giftes. He conceaueth trauaile, he beareth mischefe, & his body bryngeth forth disceat ¶ Job repeting his mysery, sayth that he suffereth moare then hys wyckednesse hath deserued.

The .xvi. Chapter.

Job answered, and sayde: I A haue oft tymes herd soch thin ges. Miserable geuers of cõ-fort are ye, al the sorte of you.
Shall not thy vaine wordes come yet to an ende? Or, hast thou yet eny more to sai? I could speake, as ye do also.
But wolde god, that youre soule were in my soules steade: then shulde I heape vp wordes agaynst you, and shake my heade at you. I shuld cõfort you wt my mouth, and release youre payne with ye talkyng of my lyppes. But what shall I do? For all my wordes, my sorow wyll not ceasse: and thoughe I holde my tonge, yet will it not B departe fro me. And nowe that I am full of payne, and all that I haue destroyed (wherof my wrynckles beare wytnesse) ther standethe vp a dyssembler to make me an swere wyth lyes to my face. He is angrye at me, he hateth me, and gnasshethe vpon me wt his teeth. Mine enemie shouteth vp on me with his eyes.

They haue a* opened their mouthes wide vpon me, and smytten me vpon the cheke despytefully, they haue cased the sel C ues thorow mine aduersite. God hath geuẽ me ouer to ye vngodli, & delyuered me in to ye handes of ye wycked. I was some tyme in wealth, but sodenly he hath brought me to nought. He hath take me by ye necke, he hath rent me, & set me, as it were a marke for him to shute at. He hath cõpased me rounde about wt his dartes, he hath woũded my loynes, and not spared. My bowels hath he poured vpõ ye groũd. He hath geuẽ me one woũde vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a giaunte. I haue so wed a sack cloth vpõ my skinne, & lie with my strength in the dust.

My face is swollẽ wt wepyng, & myne eyes are waxe dimme. Howbeit there is no D wyckednesse in my handes, and my praier is cleane. b* O erth, couer not my bloude, & let my criẽg fynd no rowme. For lo, my witnesse is in heauẽ, & he ye knowethe me, is aboue in ye heygth. My frendes laughe me to scorne, but myne eye poureth out tea res vnto god. Though a body might plea te wt God, as one man doth with another, yet the nombre of my yeares are come, and I must go the waye, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

The Notes:

a* To open their mouthes, sygnyfyethe to threaten with most extreame & cruel punishment, & to reproue withe shamefull, & spytefull wordes, as in the Psal. xxii. c.

b* O earth couer not my bloude, that is, as Rabi. Gene. iiii. b.

¶ Job saith that he consumeth away, and yet doth patiently abyde hys

The .xvii. Chapter.

My breth faileth, my dayes are shortened. I am hard at dea thes dore. I haue disceaued A no man, yet muste myne eye continue in heuynesse. O de-liuer me, and set me by the: who shall then be able to thruste my handes to geather?
Thou hast withholdẽ their hertes frõ vn derstandynge, therefore shall they not be sett vpon hye. He promyseth hys frendes parte of hys good, but his owne chyldren B spede it. He hath made me as it were a by worde of the cõmon people. I am his gestyng stocke amonge thẽ. My coũtenaũ ce is heuye for verye anger, & the mẽbres of my bodye are become lyke a shadowe.
Uertuous men therfore shal wel cõsydre this, & the innocent shall take part agaĩst C the ypocryte.

The righteous wil kepe his waye, & he that hath cleane hãdes, wil euer be strõger & strõger. As for you, turne you, & get you hence, for I cannot se one wyse mã amõg you. My dayes ar past, my thoughtes are vanished awaye, which haue vered myne D herte, chaunging the night in to daye, and the light into darcknes. Thoughe I tarye neuer so moche, yet the graue is my house, and I must make my bed in the darcke. I cal corruptiõ my father, & the wormes call I my mother & my syster. What helpeth then my longe taryeng? Or, who wyl ful-fyl the thing, that I loke for? Al that I ha ue, shal go downe into the pytt, & lye wyth me in the dust.

¶ Baldad reherseth the paynes of the vnfaythful & wycked.

The .xviii. Chapter.

A
THen answered Baldad ỹ Su bite, & sayd: whẽ wyl * ye make an ende of youre wordes?
Marcke well, & consydre, we wyll speake also. Wherefore

Then Job and soch as thou.

ar we coũted as beastes, & reputed so vyle in youre syghte? Why destroyest thou thy selfe wyth anger? Shal ỹ earth be forsakẽ or the stones remoued oute of theyr place B because of the? Shall not the lighte of the vngodly be put out? ye ỹ flame of his fyre shal not burne. The light shalbe darcke in hys dwelling, & hys candle shalbe put out wythe hym. Hys presumptuous goinges shall be kept in, & hys owne councell shall caste hym downe. For hys fete shalbe takẽ in the net, and he shall walcke in the snare.
Hys fote shalbe holden in the gyldet, and the thrustie shall catche him. The snare is layed for him in the ground, and a pitfall in the waye.

Fearfulnes shal make him afrayed on euerye syde, that he shal not knowe, where to get out. Hõger shalbe his substaunce, & myssfortune shal hange vpõ him. He shall eate the strength of hys skinne, a* the first C borne of death shal eate hys membres. All hys cõforte & hope shalbe roted out of his dwellinge, verye fearfulnesse shall bringe hym to the king. b* Other men shal dwell in hys house (whych nowe is none of hys) and brymstone shall be scatered vpon hys habitation. Hys rotes shalbe dryed vp be-neth, and aboue shall hys harvest be cutte downe. Hys remẽbraunce shal perishe frõ D the earth, and hys name shall not be praysed in the stretes: he shalbe dryuen frõ the lyght into darknes, and be cast cleane out of the world. He shal nether haue chylde nor kynsfolckes amonge hys people, no, ner eny posteritie in hys countrey: younge and olde shall be astonished at hys death.
Soche are nowe thee dwellynges of thee wycked, and thys thee place of hym that knoweth not God.

The Notes:

a* That is, an horrible and sodayne death Some reade the prince of death.
b* Or, she shal dwel, that is to saye his wyfe wythoute hym.

¶ Job recyteth his myserves and greuouse paynes he prophesieth of the general resurrection.

The .xix. Chapter.

IOb answered: & sayde: howe long wyl ye vexe my mynde: A & trouble me wythe wordes?
Lo, ten tymes haue ye repro-ued me: are ye not ashamed, for to laugh me to skorne? yf I go wrong I go wrong to my selfe. But yf ye wyl en haunce your selues agaynste me, & accuse me to be a wicked person because of ỹ sha me that is come vpõ me: knowe this then, that it is God, whych hath handled me so violentlye and hath compased me aboute with his scourges. Behold, though I crye yet violence is done vnto me, I cannot be herde: Though I complayne, ther is none to geue sentence wyth me. He hath hedged vp my path, I cãnot get awaye, he hath set darcknes in my gate. He hath spoyled me B of myne honoure & take the a* crowne awaye fro my head. He hathe destroyed me on euerye syde, & I am vndone: My hope hath he taken away fro me, as it were a tre pluckte vp by the rote. His wrath is kindled agaynst me, he taketh me, as though I were hys enemye.

His men of warre came together, which made theyr way ouer me, and beseged my dwelling rounde aboute. He hath put my brethrẽ farre awaye fro me, & soch as were of myne acquayntaũce, are become straũgers vnto me. Myne own kinsfolks haue C forsakẽ me, & my frẽdes haue put me oute of remẽbraũce. The seruaũtes & maydens of myne owne house take me for a strãger, & I am become as an aleaũt in their syghte.
Whẽ I cal vpon my seruaũt, he geueth me no answere:no though I pray hym wt my mouth. Myne owne wyfe maye not a-byde my breth, I am fayne to speak faire vnto the chyldren of mine awne body. Ye y very desert fooles despise me, & whe I am gone from them, they speak euil vpon me All soche as were my moste familiers, abhorre me:& they whom I loued best, ar tur D ned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my skinne, & my flesshe is awaye, only there is left me the skynne about my teth. Haue py te vpo me, haue pyte vpo we (O ye my fre des) for the hand of the lord hath toushed me. Why do ye persecute me b as God, & c are not satisfyed of my fleshe?

O that my wordes were wrytten, O y they were put in a boke: wolde God they were grauen wt an yron penne in leade or in stone. For I am sure, that my redemer lyueth, & that I shall ryse out of the earth in y latter daye: that I shall be clothed againe wt this skynne, & se god in my flesh.
Yee I my self shall behold him, not wyth other but wythe these same eyes. My rey-nes ar consumed within me, whe ye saye: Why do not we persecute hi? we haue fou de an occasyon against him. But beware of the swearde, for the swearde wylle aue ged of wyckednesse and be sure, that ther is a iudgemente.

a Rabi Abraham vnderstandethe by the crowne, the dignitye that comethe to the ryche by the meanes of theyr rychesse: for al men haue the ryche in honoure, all thoughe some vnderstande thereby his chyldren, as in the prouer. The crowne of olde men are theyr childrens chyldren. Other some, vnderstand the dygnytye that came vnto him of his wysdom & cunninge. So Jobs meaning is, that of a worshyppfull & ryche man, he is become pore and despysed.

b The Hebrues reade as they do, meaninge the cruell which are not satysfyed wythe his fleshe, soche wold he not that his frindes shuld counterfet.

c Are not satysfyed of my fleshe. To eate & be satisfyed of a mannes fleshe, is a borowed speache take both in the good & euel part. In the good parte it sygnyfieth to loue, to iudge frendly, and then at the length to fall to praising. In the euell parte, it is cruelly and beastly to missaie, & (as it were) to teare with spiteful and haynouse wordes.

Sophar saith, that the vnfaithful, the couetous and the wycked shall haue a shorte ende.

The.xx. Chapter.

Then answered Sophar the Naamathite, & said: For the same cause doo my though- A tes copel me to aswere. And why? my mynde is tossed here and there. I haue suffycyently herd thy checkynge and reprofe, therfore am I pur-posed to make answere after myne vnder standyng. Knowest thou not thys, name-lye: that from the begynnynge (euer sence the creacion of man vpo earthe) the prayse of the vngodly hathe bene shorte, and that the ioye of ypocrites cotinued but y twink lynge of an eye? Though he be magnifyeed vp to y heauē, so that his head reacheth vnto the cloudes: yet he perisheth at y last lyke dounge: In somoch that they whych B haue sene hym, saye: Where is he? He vanysshethe as a dreame, so that he ca no more be founde, & passeth away as a visy on in the nyghte. So y the eye which saw him before, getteth now no sight of him, & his place knoweth hym nomore. His children go a beggynge, theyr hādes bring the to sorow and heuynesse.

Fro his youth his bones ar full of vice, which shall lie downe wt hym in y earthe.
Whē wyckednes is swete in hys mouth, he hideth it vnder his tog. That he fauou rethe, y wyll he not forsake, but kepethe it close in his throte. The meate y he eateth, shall be turned to the poyso of serpentes, win his body. The ryches that he deuou reth, shall he perbreake agayne, for God shall draw them out of his belye: he shal C suck y serpentes heed, & the adders tonge shal slay him: so that he shal nomore se the ryuers & brokes of hony & butter: But la boure shal he, & yet haue nothinge to eate.
Great trauayle shall he make for ryches, but he shall not enioye the. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, & not helped the:
houses hath he spoyled, & not builded the.
Hys belye coude neuer be filled, therfore shal he perish in his couetousnes. He de- D uoured so gredely, that he left nothyng be hid, therfore his goodes shal not prospere.
Though he had plenteousnesse of euerye thynge, yet was he poore, and therfore he is but a wretch on euery syde.

For though the wicked haue neuer somoch to fil his bely, yet god shal send hys wrath vpon him, & cause hys battayll to raygne ouer hym: so that yf he fle the yron weapēs, he shalbe shot wyth the stele bowe The arowe shalbe takē forth, & go oute at his backe, and a glistering sweard thorow the gall of hym, feare shal come vpon him b* There shal no darknes be able to hyde him. And vnkindled fyre shal cōsume hym and loke what remayneth in hys house, it shalbe destroyed. The heauen shal declare hys wyckednes, & the earth shall take part agaynst him. The substaunce that he hath in his house, shalbe taken away & perysshe, in the daye of the Lordes wrathe. This is the porcion that thee wycked shall haue of God, and thee heretage that he maye loke for of the Lord.

The Notes.

a* He shal sucke the serpētes head. y is, he shalbe subiect to all cursednes & suffer al ma ner sorowes. It is soch a maner of speach as is before in the. xv. b, of drinking wickednes b* That is, he cannot hyde hym from pe-rilles.

¶ Iob rehearseth the prosperite of y wicked, & after descrybeth theyr sodayn ruyne and destruction.

The. xxi. Chapter.

A Iob answered, & sayd: O hea re my wordes, & amende your selues. Suffre me a lytle, y I may speake also, and then laughe my wordes to scorne, yf ye wyll. It is wyth a man, that I make this disputaciō? Which yf it were so, shul de not my spryte be then in sore trouble?
Marke me wel, be abasshed, & lay your hā-de vpon your mouth. For whē I pondre & consydre this, I am afrayed, & my flesh is smytten wyth feare. Wherfore do wicked men lyue in health and prosperite, come to theyr olde age, & increase in ryches? Theyr chylders chyldren lyue in theyr syght, and theyr generacion before theyr eyes. Theyr houses are safe from al feare, for the rodde of God doth not smyte thē. Their bullock gendreth, and that not oute of tyme: theyr cowe calueth, and is not vnfrutefull.
They send forth their childrē by flockes, & theyr sonnes leade y daūce. They beare B with them tabrettes and harpes, and haue instrumētes of musycke at their pleasure.
They spende theyr dayes in welthynesse: but sodenlye they go downe to hell. They saye vnto God: go from vs, we desyre not the knowledge of thy wayes. What maner of felowe is the Almightie, y we shuld serue hym? What profyt shulde we haue, to submyt oure selues vnto hym? Lo, there is vtterly no goodnes in thē, therfore wyll not I haue to do wythe the councell of the vngodly. Howe ofte shal the candle of the wicked be put out? howe ofte cometh their destruction vppon them? O what sorowe shall God geue them for theyr part in his wrath? Yea they shalbe euen as chaf befo re the wynde and as duste that the storme caryeth awaye.
And though God saue theyr chyldren C frō soch sorow, yet wyl he so reward them selues, that they shal know it. Their owne destruction and myserye shall they se with their eyes, & drinke of the fearful wrath of the Almightie. For what careth he, what become of his housholde after hys death? whose monethes passe awaye swyfter then an arow. In as moche then as God hathe the hyest power of all, who can teache hym any knowledge? One dyeth now when he is myghtie and at his best, riche, & in pros-perite: euē when hys ij bowelles are at the [illegible] fattest, & his bones ful of marye. Another dyeth in sorowe & heuynesse, & neuer hadd good dayes. Nowe slepe they both a lyke in the earth, & thee wormes couer thē. But I knowe what ye thinke, yea and what ye ymagin against me vnrighteously. For ye D saye: where is the Prynces palace? where is the dwellyng of the vngodly: Aske eny man that goeth by the waye, & (yf he wyll not regarde their tokens & dedes) he shall tel you, that the wycked is kepte vnto the day of destruction, and that the vngodlye shalbe brought forth in the day of wrath.
Who darre reproue him for his wayes to his face? who rewardethe him for the vn-gracousnes that he doth? Yet shall he be brought to hys graue, and watch among y heape of the deed. Then shal he be fayne to be buryed amonge the stones by y broke syde. All men must folowe hym, & there are innumerable gone before hym. O how vayne is the comforte that ye geue me?
Are not youre answeres cleane contrarye to ryght and treuth?

¶ Eliphas reprehendeth Iob of vnmercyfulnesse.

The. xxii. Chapter.

So Eliphas the Themanyte gaue answere, & sayd: Maye I a man be cōpared vnto God in wysdō, though he seme to hym self, for to be lyke hym? What pleasure hath god in that thou art righteous? Or what doth it profite hym, that thy wayes are perfecte?

Is he afrayed to reproue thee, & to steppe forth with the into iudgement? Commeth not this for the great wickednes, & for thy ne vngratious dedes which ar innumera ble? Thou hast takē the pledge frō thy bro thrē for noughte, and robbed the naked of theyr clothing: To soch as were wery, hast B thou geuen no water to drinke, thou haste withdrawē bred frō the hungrye: Shuld soche one then as vsethe violence, wronge and oppression (doinge all thing of parcia lite, & hauinge respect of personnes) dwell in the lande? Thou haste sente wyddowes awaye emptye and oppressed the poore fa therlesse.
Therfore art thou cōpased about with snares on euery syde, & sodēly vexed with feare. Shuldest thou thē se no darknesse?
Shuld not the waterflode rūne ouer the?
Now because ȳ God is hyer thē the heuēs and because thou seyst ȳ the starres are so hye, wilt thou therfore saye: Tushe, howe shuld God know? Doth his dominiō rea-che beiond the cloudes? Tush, the cloudes couer him that he may not se, for he dwelleth in heauē. Wel, thou wilt kepe the olde C way, that al wicked men haue gone: bothe olde & young, whose foūdatiō is a rūning water, which saye vnto God: go frō vs, & after this maner: Tush, what wyl the Al-mightie do vnto vs? wher as he (not with standing) fylleth their houses wt al good.
Which meaning of the vngodly be farre fro me. For with ioye shal ȳ godly, & with gladnes shal the innocent se, that their increase shal be hewen downe, & their poste-ritie consumed with fyre.
Therfore reconcile the vnto God, & be contēt, so shal al thinges prosper wt ȳ righ te wel. Receaue the law at his mouth, and laye vp his wordes in thine hert. For yf ȳ D wilt turne to the Almightie, thou shalt stā de fast, & al vnrighteousnes shall be farre from thy dwellinge: He shall geue the an haruest, which in plenty & aboūdaūce shal exceade the dust of the erth, & the golde of Ophir, like ryuer stones. Yea the Almigh tye hys owne selfe shalbe thine haruest, & the heape of thy moneye, Then shalt thou haue thy delyte in the Almightie, & lyft vp thy face vnto God. Then shalte thou make thy prayer vnto hym, & he shal heare ȳ, and thou shalt kepe thy promyses. Then, loke what thou takest in hand, he shal ma ke it to prospere with the, & the lighte shal shyne in thy wayes. For who so humbleth hym selfe, hym shall be set vp: and who so loketh meakelye, shall be healed. Yf thou be innocent, he shall saue the: and thorowe thee vngyltynesse of thyne handes shalte thou be delyuered.

Job affirmeth that he both knoweth & feareth the power & sentence of the iudge, & sayth that he hath walked in hys ryghteousnesse.

The .xxiii. Chapter.

Job answered, and sayd: My saying is yet this daye in bitternes, & my hāde heuy amōg A my gronynges. O ȳ I might se him & fynde hym: O that I myghte come before hys seate, to pleate my cause before him, and to fyl my mouth wyth argumētes. That I myght knowe, what answere he wolde geue me: & that I myghte vnderstande, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyl he pleate agaynst me wyth hys greate power and strength, or wyll he B leane hym selfe vtterlye vpon me? Oh no: let hym not do so wyth me. But lette hym geue me lyke power to go to the lawe, then am I sure to win my matter. For though I go before, I fynde hym not: Yf I come behynde, I can get no knowledge of him: Yf I go on the left syde to ponder his wor kes, I cannot attayne vnto them. Agayne yf I go on the righte syde, he hydeth hym selfe, that I cannot se hym. But as for my waye, he knoweth it: and tryeth me as the golde in the fyre.
Neuertheles my fete kepe his path, hys hye strete haue I holdē, and not gone oute of it. I haue not forsakē the cōmaūdemēt C of his lippes, but loke what he chargedme with his mouth, ȳ haue I shutte vp in my herte. It is he him self alone, who wyl tur ne him backe? He doth as him lusteth, and bryngeth to passe what he will. He rewar-deth me into my bosome, & many other thiges mo doth he, as he may by hys power.
Thys is the cause, that I shrincke at hys D presence, so that when I consyder hym, I am afrayed of him. For in so moche as he is God, he maketh my herte soft: & seynge that that he is Almightie, he putteth me in fea re. Thus cã not I get out of darknes, the cloude hath so couered my face.

¶ Iob descrybeth the wyckednes of mẽ, & sheweth what curse belongeth to the wycked.

The .xxiiii. Chapter.

B Consyderynge then that there is no tyme hyd frõ ẏ Almigh tye, howe happenethe it, that they which knowe hym, wyll not regard his dayes? For so me men there be, that remoue other mens landemarkes: that robbe them of their catel, and kepe the same for theyr owne: that dryue awaye the asse of the fatherlesse: ẏ take the wyddowes oxe for a pledge: that thrust the poore oute of the waye, and op presse the symple of the worlde togeather.
Behold, the wylde asses in the deserte goo by tymes, as theyr maner is, to spoyle: Yet the very wyldernesse mynystreth the foode for their children. They reape the B corne feld that is not their owne: ⁊ gather the grapes out of his vineyard, whõ they haue oppressed by vyolence. They at the cause that so manye men are naked and bare, hauynge no clothes to couer them ⁊ kepe them from colde: So that when the showers in the mountaines haue rained vp on them, ⁊ they be all wet, they haue none other succoure, but to kepe them among the rockes.

They spoyle the sucking fatherles chil drẽ, ⁊ put the poore in preson: In somoch that thei let thẽ go naked wout clothing, & yet the hungrye beare the sheeues. The poore at faine to labour in their oyle mil-les, ye ⁊ to treade in their wyne presses, ⁊ yet to suffre thirst. The whole citie cryeth vnto the lord with syghyng, the soules of ẏ slaine make their complaynte. But God destroyeth them not for all this, where as they (not withstandinge) are rebellious ⁊ dysobedient enemyes: whych seke not his lighte ⁊ waye, ner turne agayne in to hys C path. Tymely in the mornynge do they aryse, to murther the simple and poore, ⁊ in the nyght they go a stealynge.

The eie of the vngodly is like ẏ aduou terer, ẏ waiteth for ẏ darcknesse, ⁊ sayeth thus in hym selfe: Tush, ther shal no mã se me, ⁊ so he disgiseth his face. In ẏ nighte season thei search the houses, and hyde thẽ selues in the day tyme, but wyl not know ẏ light. For as soone as the day breaketh, the shadowe of death cõmeth vpõ them, & thei go in horrible darknes. The vngodli is very swyft: O ẏ his porcion also vpon erth were swifter thẽ ẏ rũning water which suffreth not ẏ shipmã to behold ẏ faire & pleasaũt vineyardes. O ẏ thei (for ẏ wic kednesse which they haue done) were dra-wẽ to ẏ hel, soner thẽ snow melteth at the heat. O ẏ al cõpassiõ vpõ thẽ were forgot D tẽ: ẏ their dainties were wormes, that thei were cleane put out of remẽbraũce, ⁊ vtter ly hewen downe like an vnfrutefull tree.
For they mainteine ẏ baren, ⁊ make thẽ ẏ they cã not beare, ⁊ vnto widowes thei do no good. They pluck downe ẏ mightie wt theyr power, ⁊ when thei thẽ selues at got ten vp, they are neuer without feare, as lõ ge as they lyue. And though they myghte be safe, yet they wil not receaue it, for their eyes loke vpon their owne wayes. They are exalted for a lytle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreame pouerte, ⁊ take out of the waye: yee ⁊ vtterly plucte of, as ẏ eares of corne. Is it not so? Who wyll then reproue me as a lyar, ⁊ saye that my wordes are nothynge worthe?

¶ Baldad proueth that no mã is cleane ⁊ with out synne before God.

The .xxv. Chapter.

Then ãswered Baldad ẏ Su hite, ⁊ said: Power ⁊ feare is A wt him aboue, ẏ maketh peace, sittig in his highnes, whose mẽ of warre at innumerable, ⁊ whose light ariseth ouer al, but how maye a mã cõpared vnto God, be iustyfi-ed? Or, how can he be cleane, that is borne B of a womã? Beholde, the Moone shineth nothing in cõparison to hym, and ẏ star-res ar vncleane in his syght. How moche more then mã, ẏ is but corrup ciõ: ⁊ ẏ son ne of man, which is but a worme?

¶ Iob sheweth that mã can not help god, and pro ueth it by hys myracles.

The .xxvi. Chapter.

Iob answered, ⁊ said: O how A helpest thou ẏ weak? what cõ forte geuest thou vnto him ẏ hath no strengthe? Where is ẏ councell that thou shul-deste geue him, whiche hathe no wysdome?

wyll

Wilte thou so shew thyne excellent ryghe-B twousnes? Before whom hast thou spokẽ those wordes? Who made the breth to come out of ẏ mouth? The giauntes ⁊ worthies ẏ are slayne, ⁊ lye vnder the worlde w their companyons: yee ⁊ all they which dwell benethe in the hell are not hyd from him, and the very destructiõ it selfe cã not be kepte oute of his syghte. He stretchethe C out the north ouer the emptye, ⁊ hangethe the earth vpon nothyng. He byndethe the water in hys cloudes, that they falle not downe togeather. He holdeth bak his stou le, that it can not be sene, and spredeth hys cloudes before it.

He hath cõpased the waters w certaine boundes, vntyll ẏ day ⁊ night come to an ende. The very pillers of a heauẽ tremble ⁊ D quake at hys reprofe. He stylleth ẏ see w his power, ⁊ thorow hys wysdom hath he set forth ẏ world. With his sprete hath he garnisshed the heauẽs, ⁊ w his hãd hath he wounded ẏ rebellyous serpẽt. This is now a shorte summe of his doinges? But

The .xxviii. Chapter.

There are places where sylure

Northe

With the ryuer of water parteth he a sun der the straũg people, ẏ knoweth no good neyghbourheade: soch as are rude, vnma nerly & boysterous. He brigeth fode out of ẏ erth, & that which is vnder, cõsumeth he wt fyre. There is founde a place, whose B stones are cleane Saphirs, & wher ẏ clot tes of ẏ erth are gold. Ther is a way also ẏ ẏ byrdes know not, that no vultures eye hath sene: wherin ẏ proude & hye mynded walke not, & where no lyon cõmeth: Ther putteth he his hand vpõ the stony rockes, and ouerthroweth the moũtaynes. Riuers flow out of the rockes, & loke what is plea saunt, his eye seyth it. Out of droppes bri geth he great floudes together, & the thin C ge that is hyd bringeth he to light. Howe cõmeth a mã then by wysdome? Wher is ẏ place that mẽ fynde vnderstanding? Uere ly no mã can tell howe worthy a thing she is, neyther is she founde in the lande of ẏ lyuyng. The depe saieth: she is not in me.
The see sayeth: she is not wt me. She can not be gotten for the most fine golde, nether may ẏ price of her be bought with enye moneye: No wedges of golde of Ophir, no precyous Onix stones, no Sa-phirs mai be cõpared vnto her. No, nether gold ner Christal, nether swete odours ner goldẽ plate. There is nothing so worthy, or so excellent, as ones to be named vnto her: for perfect wysdome goeth farre beyõ de them al. The Topas that cõmeth oute of Inde, maye in no wise be lickened vnto her: yee no maner of apparell howe pleasaunt and fayre so euer it be.
D From whece then cõmeth wysdome? & wher is the place of vnderstanding? She is hyd frõ the eyes of al men, yee & frõ the foules of ẏ ayre. Destructiõ & death saie: we haue herd tel of her wt our eares. But God seyth her waye & knoweth her place.
For he beholdeth the endes of the world & loketh vpõ al that is vnder heauen. Whẽ

¶ Job complayneth of ẏ prosperitie of the time past, lykewyse remembryng hys fryndes of mercye, because they sayd ẏ Job suffered accordyng to his deseruing

The. xxix. Chapter.

SO Job proceaded and went forth in his communicacion, sayīg: O ẏ I were as I was in ẏ monethes by past, & in ẏ A dayes when God preserued me: whẽ his lyght shyned vpõ my heade: when I went after the same lyght & shy-nyng euẽ thorow the darknes. As it stode wt me, when I was welthi & had ynough: whẽ God prospered my house: whẽ ẏ Al- B mightie was with me: when my housholde folckes stode about me: whẽ my wayes rãne ouer wt the butter, & when the stonye rockes gaue me riuers of oile: when I wẽt thorow the citie vnto the gate, & whẽ they set me a chaire in the strete: whẽ the yõge men (as soone as they sawe me) hyd them selues, & when thee olde arose and stode vp vnto me: when the princes left of their talking, & laied theyr hãd to their mouth: when the myghty kept styl their voyce, & whẽ their tõges cleued to the rofe of their mouthes. When al they that heard me cal led me happye: and when all thei that saw me, wysshed me good. For I delyuered the poore when he cryed, and the fatherlesse C that wanted help. He that shuld haue ben loste, gaue me a good worde and the wy-dowes herte praysed me. And why? I put vpon me rightuousnesse, which couered me as a garmente, and equyte was my crowne. I was an eye vnto the blind, and a fote to ẏ lame. I was a father vnto thee poore, and when I knewe not their cause, I sought it out diligently. I brake ẏ chai tes of the vnryghtuous, and pluct ẏ spoy le out of their teth.
Therfore, I thought verelye, ẏ I shuld haue dyed in my nest: & ẏ my dayes shuld haue bene as many as ẏ sandes of the see.
For my rote was spred out by ẏ water si- D de, & ẏ dew lay vpõ my corne. My honou re encreased more & more, & my bowe was euer the stronger in my hãd. Unto me mẽ gaue eare, me they regarded, & wt sylence they taried for my counsel. If I had spokẽ, they wolde haue it none other wayes: my wordes were so well taken among them.
They wayted for me, as the erth doth for ẏ rayne: & gaped vpon me as the grounde doth to receaue the latter shower. Whẽ I laughed, thei knew wel it was not earnes: & this testymony of my countenaūce pleased thē nothing at al. When I agreed vnto their waye, I was the chefe, & sat as a king among his seruauntes: Or as one that comforteth soche as be in heuynesse.

¶ The great despysing of men & curse of God that Job suffereth

The.xxx. Chapter.

A B Ut now they ÿ are myne in-feriours & yōger then I, ha ue me in dirisiō: yee euē they, whose fathers I wold haue thought scorne to haue set wt ÿ dogges of my catel. The power & strēg-th of theyr hādes might do me no good, & as for their age, it is spēt & past away wtout any profit. For very mysery and hon ger, they wēt aboute in ÿ wildernesse lyke wretches & beggers, plackinge vp herbes frō among the busshes, & ÿ Iunipers tote was their meate. And whē thei were dri uen forthe, men cried after them, as it had bene after a thefe. Their dwelling was be B side foule brokes, yee in ÿ caues & dēnes of the earth. Upon ÿ drye heeth wēte they aboute cryinge, & in the brome hylles they gathered them together. They were ÿ chil dren of fooles & vylaynes, which are dred away frō the world. Now am I their sōg, & am become theyr iestīg stock: they abhorre me, they fle farre fro me, & staine my face with spetle. For the lord hath opened his quiuer, he hath hytt me, & put a brydle in my mouth. Upō my right hād thei rose to geather agaynste me, they haue hurte my fete, made a waye to destroye me, and my pathe haue they clene marred. It was so easy for thē to do me harme, that thei ne ded no mā to helpe them. They fell vpon me, as it had bene the breakyng in of waters, & came in by heapes to destroye me.
Fearfulnesse is turned agaynst me.
Myne honoure banyssheth away more C swyftly thē wind, & my prosperite departeth hēce like as it were a cloud. Therfore is my mind poured ful of heuinesse, & the dayes of trouble haue takē hold vpō me.
My bones ar pearsed thorow in ÿ nyght season, & my sinewes take no rest. With thei their power haue thei chaūged my garme te, & girded me therwt, as it were wt a coate. I am euē as it were clay, & am become like asshes & dust. Whē I crie vnto thē, ÿ doest not heare me: & though I stād before ÿ, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art be come myne enemye, & wt thy vyolent hād ÿ takest part agaynst me. In tymes past thou didest set me vpō hie, as it were aboue ÿ winde, but now hast thou geuē me a very sore fal. Sure I am, ÿ thou wilt deli uer me vnto death: wher as a lodgyng is prepared for al men lyuing. Now vse not D mē to do vyolēce vnto thē, ÿ are destroyed al ready: but wher hurte is done, there vse thei to helpe. Did not I wepe in ÿ tyme of trouble? Had not my soule cōpassiō vpon ÿ poore? Yet neuerthelesse where as I loked for good, euel hapened vnto me: and where as I wayted for lyght, there came darcknesse. My bowels seeth wtin me, & take no rest, for ÿ dayes of my trouble are come vpō me. Mekeli & lowly came I in, yee & wtout any displeasure: I stode vp in the congregacyon, & cōmuned with them.
But now, I am a cōpanion of dragons, & a felow of Estriches. My skinne vpō me his turned to black, & my bones are brent with heate: my harp is turned to sorow, & my pype to weppynge.

¶ Job reciteth the innocentye of his lyuynge and nombre of his vertues.

The.xxxi. Chapter.

I
a* Made a couenaunt wythe mine eies, ÿ I wolde not loke A vpon a dāsel. For howe grea te a porciō shal I haue of god frō aboue? & what enheritaūce from ÿ almightie on hye? As for ÿ vngodly & he ÿ ioyneth him self to ÿ cōpanie of wicked doers shal not destructiō & misery come vpō hi? Doth not he se my wai-es, & al my goynges. If I haue cleued vn to vanite or yf my fete haue runne to dysceaue: let me be weyed in an euen balaunce, that God mai se my innocētie. If so be that I haue withdrawne my fote oute of the right way, yf my heart hathe folowed mine eie sight, yf I haue stayned or defiled my handes: O then is it reason ÿ I so we, & another eate, yee that my generacion and posteryte be cleane rooted oute. If my herte hathe lust ed after my neyghbouers wyfe, or yf I haue layde wayt at his dore.

Oh then let my wyfe be another mās harlot & let other lye wyth her. For this is a wyckednes & synne, that is worthy to be punisshed, yea a fyre that vtterly shulde consu-B me, & rote out al my substāce. Dyd I euer thinke scorne to do right vnto my seruātes & maydēs, whē thei had any matter agaīst me. But seing ye God wyl syt in iudgemēt what shal I do? And for so moch as he wil nedes vyset me, what answere shal I geue him? He that fashioned me in my mothers wōbe, made he not hym also? were we not both shapē a lyke in our mothers bodies?
Whē the poore desyreth any thing at me, haue I denied it them? Haue I caused the wyddow stand waytyng for me in vayne?
Haue I eatē my porciō alone, that the fa-therles hath had no part wt me? for mercy grew vp with me frō my youth, & cōpassiō C frō my mothers wombe. Haue I sene any mā perish thorow nakednes & wāt of clothing? Or any poore man for lack of raymēt, whose sides thancked me not, because he was warmed with ye wolle of my shepe Dyd I euer lift vp myne hand to hurt the fatherles? yea in the gate wher I sawe my self to be in auctorite: thē let myne arme fal frō my shulder, & myne arme holes be brokē frō the ioyntes. For I haue euer feared ye vengeaūce & punishmēt of God, & knew very wel, yt I was not able to bear his burthē. Haue I put my trust in golde?
Or haue I sayd to the fynest golde of all: thou arte my cōfydence? Haue I reioysed because my substāce was great, & because my hand gat so moch? Did I euer greatly b * regard the rysinge of ye sunne? or had I the going downe of the moone in great re-putaciō? Hath my hert medled priuely wt any disceat? Or, did I euer kisse mine own hande? that were a wyckednesse worthy to be punished, for then shuld I haue denied the God that is aboue. Haue I euer reioy-sed at the hurt of myne enemy? Or was I euer glad, yt any harme happened vnto hi?
Oh no. I neuer suffred my mouth to doo D soch a syn, as to wysh him euel. Yet thei of mine owne housholde saye: who shal let vs to haue our belly ful of his fleshe? I haue not suffred a straunger to lie without, but ope ned my dores vnto hi. Haue I euer done a ny wicked dede, wher thorow I shamed my self before men: or any abhomynaciō, yt I was faine to hide it? For yf I had feared any great multitude of people: or yf I had bene dispised of the simple, O thā shuld I haue bene afrayed. Thus haue I quyetly spēt my life, & not gone oute at ye dore. O that I had one which wold heare me. Lo, this is my cause. Let ye almighty geue me āswere: & let him that is my contrary party, sue me wt a libel. Then shall I take it vpon my shulder, & as a garlād about my head. I haue told ye nōber of my goinges, & deliuered thē vnto hym as to a Prynce.
But yf case be that my c * lād crye againste me, or yt the forowes therof make any cōplaynt: yf I haue eatē ye frutes therof vn payed for, yee yf I haue greued any of ye plowmē, thē let thystles grow in steade of my wheate, & thornes for my barlye.

¶ Here ende the wordes of Job.

a * To make a couenaūt with his eies, &c. to mortifie ye cōcupiscēce of the hert, that cō-meth by the meanes of the eie: whyche is to plucke out the eye, as is saide Mat. v. e.

b * To regard the rysyng of the sonne & the goīg downe of ye mone, is, to be gloryous in prosperite, & to vse the thinges of this world to pleasure. Iere. xxv. c. For on them that be in prosperite is the sonne counted to shine, & the mone to go downe precyously & pleasaū-ly: & on the contrary parte, to thē that be in tribulaciō, are both the sonne & ye mone coū-ted cloudy and darcksome.

c * The lande cryeth agaynst him, whē the housband men defrauded of their wages crie therfore agaynste hym: so the hyre of ye work men cryeth. Iaco. v a. And the forowes make lamentacion, when they yt plowe the groūde and make the forowes, are depryued of theyr dutye.

¶ Elihu after the other had fynisshed theyr commu-nicacion, reproueth them of folishnes. Age maketh not a man wyse, but the spirite of God.

The .xxxii. Chapter.

SO these thre mē wold speake nomore with Job, because he 1 held hī self a righteous mā.
But a * Elihu the sonne of Ba rachel the Bussite of ye kynred of Rā, was very sore displeased at Job yt he called him self iust before god. And wt Jobs thre frendes he was angrye also, because they had foūde no reasonable an-swere to ouercome him. Now taryed Elihu tyll they had ended theyr cōmunicaciō wt Job, for why they were elder then he. B And when Elihu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite sawe, that these thre men were not able to make Job āswere, he was mis-content: so that he gaue answere him selfe, and sayd: Consydering, that I am young & ye be me of age, I was afrayed, & durst not shew forth my minde, for I thoughte thus wythin my selfe: It becommeth olde men to speake, & the aged to teache wisdō.

Euery mā (no doute) hath a mynde, but it is the inspiratiō of yͤ Almyghtie yͭ geueth vnderstanding. Al mē are not wise, nether doth euery aged man vnderstand the thin ge that is lawful. Therfore wyl I speake also (in so farre as I may be heard) & wyll shew you myne opinion. For when I had wayted tyl ye made an ende of your talkin ge, & heard your wisdō, what argumentes ye made in your cōmunicatiō: yea when I had diligētly pondred what ye said, I foū de not one of you that made any good argumēt against Job, or yͭ directly coud ma ke answere vnto his wordes: lest ye shuld prayse your selues, to haue foūd out wysdō: because it is God that hath cast hī out, D & no mā. Neuertheles, seynge he hath not spokē vnto me, therfore wyl not I āswere hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they could not make answere nor speake one word) but in so moch as ye wyl not speake, standing styl lyke dom mē and makinge no answere: I haue a good hope for my parte to shappe hī an āswere, and to shewe him my meanyng. For I am ful of wordes, & the spret yͭ is within me, compelleth me.

Beholde, I am as the new wyne, why-che hathe no vente, and bursteth the newe vessels in sunder. Therfore wyll I speake, that I may haue a vente: I wyll open my lippes, & make answere I wyll regarde no maner of personne, no mā wil I spa re. For yf I wold go aboute to please mē, I knowe not howe sone my maker wolde take me awaye.

The Notes.

a* S. Hierome in his treatise of yͤ tradici-ons of the Hebrues vpō Genesis sayeth, that this Eliu was yͤ Balaā, of whō is spokē Nu meri. xxii.

¶ Eliu sheweth wherein Job offēdeth. With God may we not stryue, nor curiously searche oute hys workes.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

A Wherfore heare my wordes (O Job) & herkē vnto me al that I wyll saye. Beholde, I wyl open my mouthe, and my tōge shal speake out of my chawes. My her-te shal ordre my wordes a right, & my lyp-pes shal talk of pure wisdō. The sprite of god hath made me, & yͤ breth of yͤ Almygh tie hath geuen me my lyfe. If thou canst, then geue me answere: prepare thy selfe to stande before me face to face. Behold, before god am I euē as yͮ, for I am fashyo-ned & made euen of the same mould. Ther fore, thou nedest not be afrayed of me nether nedest thou to feare, that my auctoryte shalbe to heuy for the. Now haste thou B spoken in myne eares, & I haue herde the voice of thy wordes: I am clene wout any faute, I am innocent, & there is no wyc kednes in me. But lo, he hath piked a qua rell againste me, & taketh me for hys enemy: he hath put my fote in yͤ stok, & loketh narowly vnto all my pathes. Behold, vnto these vnreasonable wordes of thyne wyl I make answere.

Shulde god be reproued of mā? Why doest yͮ then stryue agaynste him, because he geueth yͤ no accōptes of al his doinges?
For whē god doth once cōmaund a thing C ther shulde no man be curious, to searche whether it be ryght. In dreames & visiōs of the nyght season (when slombringe cōmeth vpō men, that thei fal a slepe in their beddes) he rowneth thē in the eares, he in fourmeth them, and sheweth them playne ly, yͭ it is he, which wdraweth mā from euyll, delyuereth hym from pryde, kepethe hys soule from destruction, & his lyfe frō the swearde. He chastenethe hym wythe syckenesse, & bryngethe hym to hys bed: he layeth sore punishment vpon his bones, so that hys lyfe maye awaye with no bred, & hys soule abhorreth to eate anye dayntye meate: In so moch that his body is cleane consumed awaye, & his bones appeare no more. His soule draweth on to destrucciō, & his life to death. Now yf ther be a* mes That is, an instructor as yͤ worde of god. senger (one among a thousande) sente for to speake vnto man, and to shew him the ryghte waye: then the Lorde is mercyfull vnto hym, & sayeth. He shall be delyuered, D that he fal not downe to destrucciō, for I am sufficiently reconciled. Than his flesh (which hath bene in misery & trouble) shal be as it was in hys youthe. For yf he submytte hym selfe vnto God, he is gracyous, & shewethe hym hys coūtenaūce ioy-fully, & rewardeth man for his righteousnes. Soche a respecte hathe he vnto men. Therfore let a mã confesse (and saye) I offended, but he hath chastened & refourmed me: I dyd vnrighteously, neuertheles he hath not recompensed me therafter. Ye he hath delyuered my soule frõ destruccyon, & my lyfe, that it seith the lyghte. Lo, thus worketh God alwaye with man, that he kepeth hys soule from peryshynge, & letteth hym enioye the lyght of the lyuynge. Marcke wel (O Job) and heare me: hold the stil, vntil I haue spoken. But yf thou hast any thinge to saye, then answere me, & speake, for thy answere pleaseth me. If thou hast nothinge then heare me, & holde thy tonge, so shall I teache the wysdome.

¶ Eliu prayseth the iustice of god, whych iudgeth the worlde, and gouerneth all.

B keth vp scornefulnes like water? whyche goeth in yͤ cõpany of wicked doers, & walketh wͭ vngodly mẽ? For he saith: Thoughe a mã be good, yet is he naught before God. Therfore herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge.

Farre be it from God, that he shoulde medle with wickednes: and farre be it frõ the almyghtye, yͭ he shulde medle wͭ vnryghtuous dealyng: but he rewardeth the workes of man, and causeth euery mã to fynde accordynge to his wayes. For sure it is, that God condemneth no mã wrõgously, and the iudgement of the Almyghtie is not vnryghteousse. Who ruleth yͤ erth in hys steade? Or, whom hath he set to gouerne the whole worlde? To whom hathe he geuen hys herte, for to drawe his sprete and breth vnto hym? All fleshe shal come together vnto naught, & al men shal turne againe vnto earth. If thou now haue vnderstãding, heare what I saye, & herkẽ to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be made whole, that loueth no right? If thou were a very innocent man, shuldest thou then be punished? For he is euẽ the same, that knoweth the rebellious kinges, & saieth to Princes: Ungodly mẽ are ye. He hath none respecte vnto the per- C sones of the lordlye, & regardeth not the riche more then poore. For they be all the worke of his handes. In the twynclynge of an eie shall they be slayne: & at myd nyght, when the people & the tirauntes rage, then shall they perysh, & be takẽ awaie without handes. And why? hys eyes loke vpon the wayes of man, and he seith al his goynges. There is no darknes nor thycke shadowe, that can hyde the wycked doers frõ hym. For no man shalbe suffred to go into iudgment with God.

Many one, yee innumerable doth he punish, and setteth other in their steades: for he knoweth their euell & darcke workes, therfore shal they be destroyed. They that were in the steade of Heares, dealte lyke vngodly mẽ. Therfore turned they backe trayterouslye & vnfaithfully from hym, & wolde not receaue his wayes. In so moch that they haue caused the voice of yͤ poore to come vnto hym, & now he heareth the cõplaynte of soche as are in necessyte. If he deliuer and graũt pardon, who wil iudge or condemne? But yf he hyde awaye hys cõtenaũce, who wyl turne it about agayne, whether it be to the people or to ani man? D
For the wyckednesse and synne of the people, he maketh an ypocryte to reygne ouer them. For so moch then as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wyll not hyndre yͤ. If I haue gone amysse, enfourme me: yf I haue done wrõg, I wil leaue of. Wylt thou not geue a reasonable answere? Art thou afrayed of any thynge, seynge thou begãnest fyrst to speake, & not I? For dis the mẽ of vnderstandyng & wysdom, that haue herd me, might say: What cause yͤ speake? As for Job he hath nether spokẽ to the purpose nor wyselye. O father, lett Job be wel tried, because he hath turned hym self to the wycked: yee aboue his synnes he hathe blasphemed, whyche offence be he hath done euē before vs, in that he stryueth agaynst God with hys wordes.

Nether doth godlynes profet, or vngodlynes hurte to God, but to man.

The.xxxv. Chapter.

A ELiu spake more ouer, & said: Thinkest thou it righte that thou sayest: I am rightuous before God? Seing ȳ sayest so, how doest thou knowe it? what thinge hast thou more excellent thē I, that am a synner? Therfore wyll I ge-ue answere vnto the and thy frendes: loke vnto the heauen, & beholde it: consydre the cloudes, howe they are hyer then thou. Yf B thou synnest, what doest thou vnto hym?
Yf thyne offences be manye, how gettest thou his fauoure? Yf thou be ryghtuous what geuest thou him? Or what receiueth he of thy hādes? Of soch an vngodly person as thou, & of the sonne of man that is righteous as thou pretēdest to be: there is a greate crye and complaynt made by the that are oppressed wyth vyolence, yea euerye man complayneth vppon the cruel arme of tyrauntes. For soch one neuer sayth C Wher is God that made me? and that shyneth vpon vs, that we myghte prayse him in the nyghte? Whych geueth vs more vn derstanding thē he doth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs more thē the foules of heauen.
Yf any soche cōplayne, no man geueth answere, & that because of the wickednesse of proud tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpō God, doth not he heare him? Doth not the Almightye accepte hys crye? Whan thou D speakest then, shulde not he pardon the, yf thou open thy self before him, and put thy trust in him? Then vseth he no violence in his wrath, nether hath he pleasure in curious and depe inquisiciōs. Therfore hath Job opened hys mouth but in vayne, and folishly hath he made so many wordes.

Eliu sheweth wherfore God punissheth and cor-recteth.

The.xxxvi. Chapter.

A ELiu proceaded forth in hys tal-kynge and sayde: Holde the styl a lyttle, and I shall shewe thee, what I haue yet too speake on Goddes behalfe. I wyll open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstanding standing, and proue my maker righteous?
True ar my wordes, & no lye: & the knowledge wher withal I argue agaynst the, is perfect. Behold, God casteth not away the mighty, for he him self is mighty in power and wysdome.
As for the vngodlye, he preserueth the not, but helpeth ȳ poore to theyr ryght. He turneth not his eyes away frō the ryghte-ous, he setteth vp kynges in their trone, & confirmeth thē, so that they alway syt ther in. But yf they be layde in preson and chey- B nes, or bound with the bondes of pouerte: then sheweth he thē theyr workes & dedes and the synnes where with they haue vsed cruell violence.
He with punisshing and nurtringe of them, roundeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of frō theyr wyckednes, and to amend. Yf they now wyl take hede and be obedient, they shal weare out their dayes in prosperite, & theyr yeares in pleasure & ioye. But yf they wyll not obeye, they shal go thorowe the swearde, & perysshe or euer they be a ware. As for soche as be fay-ned, dissemblers and ypocrites, thei heape vp wrath for them selues: for they call not vpon hym, thoughe they be his presoners Thus theyr soule perissheth in folyshnes, and theyr lyfe with the condemned. The poore delyuereth he out of his straytnesse, and comforteth soch as be in necessite and trouble. Euen so shall he kepe the (yf thou wylte be content) from the bottomlesse pyt that is benethe: and yf thou wylte holde the quyet, he shall fyll thy table wyth plen teousnesse.
Neuertheles thou hast condemned the iudgement of the vngodly, yea euē soch a C iudgemēt & sentēce shalt thou suffre. For thē shal not thy cause be styllea with cruel tie, nor pacified wyth many gyftes. Hathe God ordened thē, that the glorious lyfe of the, & al soch mighty men shuld not be put downe? Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyll ther come a nyght for the, to set other people in thy stede. But beware that thou tur ne not a syde to wickednes and synne, whi che hytherto thou haste chosen more then mekenesse. Beholde, God is of a myghtye hye power: Where is there soche a gyde and lawe geuer as he? Who wyll reproue him of his waye? who wyll saye vnto him saye vnto him: thou hast done wronge.

O considre how greate & excellet hys D workes be, whom all men loue & prayse: yet wondre at hym, & yet they se hym but a farre of. Beholde, so greate is God, that he passeth oure knowledge, nether are we able to come to the experyence of hys yea-res. He turneth the water to smal droppes he dryuethe hys cloudes to geather for to rayne, so y they poure downe and droppe vpon men. He can sprede out the cloudes (a coueringe of hys tabernacle) and cause hys lyghte to shyne vpon them, & to couer the botom of the see. By these thinges gouerneth he hys people, & geuethe the a-boundaunce of meate. In y turnyng of a hande he hydeth the lyghte, & at hys comau demente it commeth agayne. The rysyng vp therof sheweth he to hys frendes and to the catell.

The Notes.

 Wyth punyshynge and nurtryng to roll de them in the eares. &c. to bringe them to y knowledge of their synnes, and to cause the to be persuaded in the selues that they be pu nysshed for them.

¶ Eliu proueth that the wysdom of god is vnsearcheable.

The .xxxvii. Chapter.

A At this, my herte is astoned, & moued out of his place. Hea re the y soud of his voyce, & the noyse y goeth out of hys mouth. He gouernethe euery thig vnder y heue, & his lighte reacheth vn to the ende of the worlde. A roaring voyce foloweth him: for hys glorious maiestye geueth such a thodre clappe, y (thoughe a ma heare it) yet may he not perceue it after ward. It geueth an horrible sounde, whe god sendeth out hys voyce: greate thynges doth he, which we ca not coprehed. When he comaundeth the snowe, it exalteth vpo the earth: As soone as he geuethe y rayne a charge, immediatlye the showers haue B their strengthe, and fal downe. He sendethe feare vpon euery ma, that they might kno we their owne workes. The beestes crepe into their dennes, & take their reste. Oute of the south commethe the tempeste, and colde out of the north.
At the  breth of God the frost commeth, & the waters are shed abrode. The cloudes do theyr labour in geuinge moystnesse, the cloudes poure downe their rayne. He distributeth also, on euery syde, accordinge as it pleaseth hi to deale out hys workes, y they maye do, whatsoeuer he comaundeth them thorow the whole worlde: whether it be to punishe any lande, or to do good vn to them, that seke hym.
Herken vnto thys (O Job) stand styl, & considre the wonderous workes of God. C Arte thou of councell wyth God, when he dothe these thinges? When he causeth the lyghte to come forth of hys cloudes? Arte thou of his coucell, when he sprededthe oute the cloudes? Haste thou the perfect kno-ledge of hys wonders? & howe thy clothes are warme, when the lande is styl thorowe the South wynde? Hast thou helped hym to spreade out the heauen, which is to loke vpon, as it were caste of cleare metall?
Teach vs what we shal say vnto him, for we are vnmete because of darknes. Shal it be tolde him what I saye? Shuld a man D speake, or shuld he kepe it backe? For eue ry man seyth not the lyghte, that he kepethe cleare in y cloudes, which he clensed whan he maketh the winde to blowe. Golde is brought out of y Northe, but the prayse & honour of Gods feare, commeth fro God hym self. It is not we that can fynd out y almightye: for in power, equitie, & righte-ousnes he is hyer tha can be expressed. Seinge the that euery body feareth hym, why shulde not all wyse men also stande in feare of hym.

The Notes.

 The breth of God here signifieth a stro ge & vehemet wind / as is the north winde.

or cõmytte thy laboure vnto hym? Mayest thou beleue hym, that he wyll brynge home the corne, or to carye anye thinge vnto the barne? The Estrech (whose fethers ar fayrer than the wynges of the sparow hauke) whē he hath layd hys egges vpō the grounde, he bredeth thē in the duste, & forgetteth them: so that thei might be trode with fete
C or broken with some wylde beast. So harde is he vnto hys yonge ones, as though they were not hys, and laboureth in vayne without any feare. And that because God hath taken wysdom from him, & hath not geuen hym vnderstanding. When his tyme is, he flyeth vp on hye, & careth neyther for horse nor man.

Hast thou geuē the horse hys strength, or learned hym to bowe downe his neck wt feare: that he letteth hym selfe be dryuen forth like a greshopper, wher as the stoute neyeng that he maketh, is fearful? he breaketh the ground with the hoffes of his fete chearfully in his strength, & runneth to mete the harnest men. He layeth a syde all feare, hys stomack is not abated, neyther
D starteth he a back for any swerd. Though the quyuers rattle vppon him, though the speare & shylde glystere: yet rusheth he in fearcely, and beateth vpon the ground. He feareth not the noyse of the trõpettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmes blow tushe (sayth he) for he smelleth the battel a farre of, the noyse, the Captaynes and the shoutinge.

¶ Job humbleth hym self vnto god, the descripciō of an Elephant, Leuiathan.

The. xl. Chapter.

Then spake the Lord vnto Job out of ÿ storme, & sayd: Gyrd vp thy loynes lyke a mā, and tel me the thinges that I wyll aske the. Wilt thou disanull my iudgement? Or wilt thou condēne me that thou thy selfe mayest be made righteous? Is thyne a a arme then lyke the arme of God? Maketh thy voyce soch a sounde as his doth? Thē arme thy self with thine owne power, vp, decke the in thy joly aray poure out the indignaciō of thy wrath: se that thou caste downe all the proude, loke well, that thou makest all soche as be stubburne, to obeye: treade all the vngodly vnder thy fete, cast them downe into the myre and couer theyr faces wyth darknes. Then wyl I confesse also, that thyne owne right hand hath saued the.

Behold b b Behemoth (whō I made wt the) whiche eateth haye as an oxe: lo, howe stronge he is in hys loynes, & what power he hath in the nauel of his bodye. He spredeth out his tayle lyke a Cedar tree, al hys vaynes are styf. His shinnes ar like pipes of brasse, hys rygge bones are lyke staues of yron. Fyrst when God made him, he ordened the wyldernesse for hym, ÿ the moūtaynes shuld geue him grasse, wher all the beastes of the felde take their pastyme. He lyeth amonge the redes in the Mosses, the fennes hyde hym wyth their shadowe, and the wylowes of the broke couer hym round about. Lo, without any labour myghte he drinke out of the whole floude, & suppe of Jordan without any trauayl. Who darre laye hand vpō him openlye, & vndertake to catch hym? Or, who darre put a hooke thorowe hys nose, & laye a snare for hym?

Darrest thou draw out c c Leuiathā wt an angle, or binde his tonge with a snare? Cāst thou put a ring in the nose of him, or bore hys chaftes thorowe wyth a naule? Wyl he make many fayre wordes with ÿ (thinkest thou) or flatter the? Wyl he make a couenaūt with the? Or art thou able for to cōpel hym to do the continuall seruice

Wylte thou take thy pastyme wythe hym as with a byrd, or geue him vnto thy maydens, that thy cōpanions may hew him in peces to be parted amonge the marchaūte men? Canst thou fyll the net with his skin or the fysshe pannier with his head? Darest thou laye hand vpon hym? It is better for the to consydre what harme myght happen the ther thorow and not to touche hym. For when thou thinkest to haue hold vpon hym, he shal begyle the: Euery man also that seyth hym, shall go backe. And why? ther darre none be so bolde as to rayse hym vp.

a* Arme for power, strength or might: as in Psalm. liiii. a b* The Hebrues vnderstād by Behemoth the greatest beast in the earth tha is an Elephant. Other vnderstand therby any earthly beaste that is great: but vnto an Elephant do al the properties here recyted right wel agre wherfore it seameth moost agreable to the truth, that by the worde be signified an Elephant.

c* Leuiathan as diuerse learned man expounde, signifieth the greatest fysshe that lyeth in the see, whych is a whalle.

¶ Of the same Leuiathan wherof is mencioned in the Chapter afore.

The. xli. Chapter.

A [illegible] Who is able to stande before me? Or, who hath geuen me anye thinge afore hand, that I am bounde to reward him agayne? All thynges vnder heauen are myne. I feare hym not, whether he threaten or speake fayre. Who lyfteth hym vppe, and stryppethe hym oute of hys clothes, or who taketh hym by the byt of hys brydle?

B Who openeth the dore of hys face? for he hath horrible teeth round about. Hys bodye is couered wythe scales as it were wythe shyldes, locked in, kepte, and well compacte together. One is so ioyned to another, that noo ayre can come in: Yea one hangethe so vppon another, and styckethe so together, that they cānot be sundered. Hys nesynge is lyke a glysteringe fyre, and hys eyes lyke the mornynge shyne. Oute of hys mouthe go torches and fyre brandes, out of hys nosetrels ther goeth a smoke, lyke as oute of an hote sethinge pott. Hys brethe maketh the coales

C burne, the flame goeth oute of hys mouth. In hys necke remaynethe strengthe, and before hys face goeth is turned to gladnes. The members of his body ar ioyned so strayte one to another, and cleue so fast to gether, that he can not be moued.

Hys herte is as harde as a stone, & as faste as the stythye that the hammer man smiteth vpon. When he goeth: the myghtiest of all are afrayed, & the knees bow. If he drawe out the swearde, there maye nether speare, ner brest plate, abide hym. He setteth as moche by a strawe as by yrō, and as moche by a rotten stocke as by metall. He starteth not away for him that bendeth the bowe: and as for slyng stones he careth as moche for stubble as for the. He counteth the hammer no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to skorne that

D shaketh the speare. He treadethe the gold in the myre lyke the sharpe pottsherdes. He makethe thee depe too seethe and boyle lyke a potte, and stereth the see together lyke an oyntemente. The waye is light after hym, the depe is hys walkynge place. Vpon earthe is there no power lyke vnto hys, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man wyll consydre all hye thynges, this same is a kynge ouer all the chyldre of pryde.

¶ The repētaūce of Job. He prayeth for his frēdes, & his goodes are restored double vnto hym.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Then Job answered the Lord, and sayd: I knowe that thou hast power ouer al thinges, & ỹ ther is no thought hyd vnto the. For who can kepe hys owne coūcell so secrete, but it shalbe knowne? Therfore haue I spoken vnwysely, seynge these thinges are so hie, & passe mine vnderstandyng. O herken thou vnto me also, and let me speake: answere vnto the thinge that I wyll aske the. I haue geuē dylygent eare vnto the, & now I se the with myne eyes. Wherfore I geue mine owne self ỹ blame, & take repentaūce in ỹ dust and asshes.

Now when the Lorde had spokē these wordes vnto Job, he sayde vnto Eliphas the Themanite: I am displeased with the and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spokē the thyng that is ryght before me, lyke as my seruaūt Job hath done. Therfore take. vii. oxen and. vii. rammes, and go to

So Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad y^e

And then came there vnto him all hys

The fyrst psalme.

¶ Those that forsake the counsels and tradicions of the wicked, and wholy geue them selues to know the Lawe of God/and to shewe it in theyr lyuinge: doth this Psalme pronounce blessed/both here and in the worlde to come: & the contrary parte, in both the worldes/miserable and wretched

1 O Blessed is the manne that goeth not in the counsel of the vngodly: that abideth not in a * ÿ waye of synners b * and sitteth not i the seate of the scornefull.

But delyteth in the law of the Lord, and exerciseth hi selfe in his lawe, bothe day and night, Suche a man is lyke a tree planted by the water syde, that bryngeth forthe hys frute in due season.

Hys leaues shall not fall of, & looke what soeuer he doth, it shall prosper.

B As for the vngodly, it is not so with them: but they are lyke the dust, whiche the wynde scatereth awaye from ÿ face of the grounde.

Therfore the vngodly shal not be able c * to stand in the iudgement, neither the synners in the congregation of the righteous.

For the Lord alloweth ÿ way of the righteous, but the waye of the vngodly shall perish.

The notes.

a * The waye of synners, is, their maners & ordinaunces, in which they walke as it were in a waye. Waye in the scrypture is take for whatsoeuer we do or go aboute, be it good or euyll, as in the laste verse of this Psalme.

b * To sytte in ÿ seate of ÿ scornefull, is, to cospire with them, and to become felowes of their mischefe as in the Psal. xxv. b.

c * To stande in iudgemente/is, to wynne the processe, and to haue sentence pronounced on theyr sydes: as to robbe iudgemente, is, to let the processe & to haue sentence pronounced agaynst ryght and truth. Esa. x. a. So then this text meaneth nomore but that the wycked shall haue suche a terrible sentence geuen vpon them, that they shall not be able to abyde, when the Lorde shal come to the general iudgement it meaneth not the wycked shal not appeare in the iudgement.

The. ii. Psalme.

¶ They that knowe not God, are moued agaynste the kyngdome of Christe wyth wonderful insentes, but in vayne yet runneth their rage thorow the whole worlde. The only waye to health, is to commit thy selfe to Christ.

1 * Why do the Heathen grudge? why do the people imagin vaine thinges? *The prophet.

The kinges of the earth stande vp, and the Rulers are come together, agaist ÿ Lord and against his anointed

Let vs breake their bondes asunder, & cast awaye their yocke from vs. *The Enemy.

* Neuerthelesse he that dwelleth in heauen, shal laugh them to scorne: yea euen the Lorde hym selfe shall haue them in derysyon. B *The Prophet

Then shall he a * speake vnto them in his wrath, & vexe them in hys sore dyspleasure.

‡ Yet haue I set my kynge vpon my holy hyll of Syon.

* As for me I wyll preache ÿ lawe wherof the Lord hath sayde vnto me: Thou art my sonne, this daye haue I begotten thee ‡God *The kinge Christ

Desyre of me, and I shal geue thee the Heathen for thyne enheritaunce, Yea the vttermost partes of the world for thy possession.

Thou shalt rule them with a b * rod of yron and breake them in peces lyke an earthen vessell.

‡ Be wyse now therfore, O ye kynges, be warned, ye that are Iudges of the earth. C ‡The Prophet Serue the Lord with feare, and reioyse before him with reuerence.

c * Kysse the sonne, lest the Lorde be angrye, and so ye perysshe from ÿ right waye.

For his wrath shalbe kindled shortly: blessed are all they that put their trust in hym.

a * To speake vnto them in hys wrath/is, to order and determe to destroye them. Ieremy. xviii. a.

b * A rodde of yron for a sure and vnbowable dominyon, as it is sayde. Psalm. lxxxviii. c. and Esa. xiiii. b.

c * Kysse the sonne, so readeth the Hebr. It is a fyguratyue speache, in whych by the sygne, is vnderstande that, which is sygnifyed therby. For by the kysse of the kynges hande euen nowe adayes in many regyons, do the subiectes testyfy, that they wylbe in the faythe and power of the kynge. He calleth hym sonne because he before brought in the father sayinge, Thou art my sonne. The Greke readeth receaue instruccion or be learned: meanyng therby that they shulde submyt them selues vnto ÿ kinge Christ, & receaue hys instruction & chastenig

¶ The. iii. Psalme.

¶ Dauid speaking vnto the lorde/wondreth both at the numbre and cōfidence of his enemies/which came agaynst hym and committed hym selfe wyth greate safetie vnto hys helpe/although his enemies were at hande ready to steyhe hym/both because no Man els can saue hym: and because none can be partakers of health or saluacion but they that beleue in hym and trust to him

Up Lord, and helpe me O my god: for thou smytest al myne enemies vpon the cheke bones, and c* breakest ye teeth of the vngodly.

Helpe belongeth vnto the lord, therfore let thy blessinge be vpon thy people.

b* Selah. This worde after Rab. kim was a sygne or token of lyftinge vp the voyce, and also a monicions aduertisement to enforce the thoughtes & mynde earnestly to geue hede to the meaninge of the verse vnto which it is added. a* To the Chaunter in b* Neginoth A Psalme of David a* That is here translate, To the Chaunter, is in Hebrue Lamnatsah: which word after the mynde of Abrah. Esra & David kimhi, expositours in hebrue, sygnifieth, To the cheafe of the syngers: which we comenly call in Englysh, setter of the queare or chaunter. This interpretacyon also do both the most & the best learned of the Latinistes best alowe, & therfore haue I folowed the same the whole Psalter thorow expressing it by this worde Chaunter. Notwithstandinge diuers Authoures do dyuersly interprete it. Some saie that it signefieth To the victory or ouercomer: some, to the victorye: which may thus agre and concord together yf thou take a Psalme to be a styrring & an exhortacion to put oure trust in God beinge sure to obtaine the victorye. And where som interpret vnto ye ende, vnderstand ... the same for therfore do we put oure truste in god, that we maye come to the ende of the victory. Som translate the tytle thus: A vehement and often made exhortation in instrumentes of musyke, a Psalme of David, that is as they them selues expound it a Psalme reuelate to David, for David is in Hebrue the datyue case not the genetyfe.

b* Neginoth sygnyfyeth the tune or note of ye instrumentes, wherafter the Psalmes before which it is prefixed, were songe: for the Psalme wer song certeyne instrumentes, but so that the swete tunes melody of the instrumetes prepared the mind more perfectly to perceaue the wordes of the holy spyrte.

Heare me when I call, O God A of my ryghtuousnes: thou that comfortest me in my trouble: haue mercye vppon me, and harkenne vnto my prayer.

O ye sonnes of men, how long wil ye blaspheme mine honour? why haue ye such pleasur in vaynite, and seke after lyes? Selah

d*Rebuke me not in thyne anger.&c. That is so heuely as one that were angred & moued with greate and venemouse indignacion. Some expoūde anger & heuy dyspleasure, or as the commen transl. readeth furie, to sygnyfie the dreadfull iugement of God, which no man auoydeth, but he that here seketh after mercye. And where god iudgeth w tranquylite & peasablenes, & hath nether anger or furi in hem yet cannot the scripture shew vnto vs what God shall appeare vnto them that shal feale his iudgement: but if it speake after our maner, of God as though it spake of a man as in the Psal. ii.c Loke after i the Psal. xxxviii.a.c e*My bones are vexed.&c. ¶ *a To the chaunter of Dauid seruaunte of the Lord, which sayde vnto the Lorde the wordes of this song, on the daye in which the Lorde deliuered hym from the hand of al his enemies, and from the hande of Saull, & sayd.

I Will loue ẏ (O lord) my strength.

I wyll prayse the Lorde, and call vpon hym, so shall I be safe fro myne enemyes.

c* The sorowes of deathe compassed me, and the brokes of vngodlines made me afrayed.

The paynes of hell came abut me, the snares of death toke hold vpō me.

Yet in my trouble I called vpon the Lorde and complayned vnto my God.

So he hearde my voyce out of hys holy temple, and my complaynte came before hym, yee euen into his eares.

Then the earthe trembled and qua B ked, the very foundacyons of the hylles shoke and were remoued, because he was wrothe.

There wente a smoke oute of hys nostrels and a consumynge fyre out of hys mouth, so that b* coales were kyndeled at it.

He bowed the heauens c* and cam downe, and it was darcke vnder hys fete.

He rode vpon the c* Cherubins and dyd fleche came flyenge with the wynges of the wynde.

He made darckenesse hys pauylion rounde aboute hym, wyth darcke water and thycke cloudes tocouer hym.

At the brightnes of his presence the cloudes remoued, wt hayle stones and coales of fyre.

The Lorde also thondered out of the heauen, and the heygthe gaue his thonder whaile stones & coles of fyre.

He sent out his arowes and scatred them, he caste forth lyghtenynges, and destroyed them.

The springes of waters were sene, & the foundacyons of the round world were dyscouered at thy chydynge (O Lord) at the blasting and breth of thy dyspleasures.

He sent downe frō ẏ heygth to fetch me, & toke me out of s* greate waters.

He delyuered me fro my strong ene C myes, and fro my foes whiche were to myghty for me.

They preuented me in ẏ tyme of my trouble, but the lorde was my defence.

He brought me forth also into lyberte: and delyuered me, because he had a fauour vnto me.

The Lorde shall rewarde me after my righteous dealing, and according to the clennesse of my handes shall he recompence me.

For I haue kepte the wayes of the Lorde: and haue not behaued my selfe wickedly agaynst my God

I haue an eye vnto all hys lawes & cast not out his cōmaūdemētes fro me

Uncorrupte wil I be before him, & will eschue myne owne wickednes.

Therfore shall the Lorde rewarde D me after my ryghtuous dealyng, and according vnto the clennes of my hādes in his eyesighte.

With the holy thou shalt be holy, and wt the innocent thou shalt be innocent

With the cleane thou shalt be cleane and with the frowarde thou shalte be frowarde.

For thou shalte saue the poore oppressed, and bring downe the hye lokes of the proude.

Thou lyghtest my candle, O lorde my God: thou makest my darckenes to be lyght:

For in the I can discomforte an host of men: yee in my God I can leape ouer the wall

E The waye of god is a perfect waye: the wordes of the lorde are tryed in the fyre: he is a shylde of defence, for al thē that trust in hym,

For who is God but the Lord? Or who hath any strenght, but our God?

It is God that girded me with strēgth, and made my waye vncorrupte.

He hath made my fete lyke hertes fete & set me vpon hye.

He teacheth myne handes to fyght, & maketh myne armes to breake euen a bowe of stele.

Thou haste geuen me the defence of thy health, thy right hande vpholdeth me, and thy louynge correccyon maketh me greate.

Thou hast made [b] rowme ynough vnder me for to go, ẏ my fote steppes shoulde not slyde.

I wyl folowe vpon myne enemies and take thē: I will not turne tyl they be discomforted.

I wyll smyte them, they shall not be able to stand, but fal vnder mi fete.

F Thou hast girded me with strength vnto the battel: thou hast throwen thē all downe vnder me, ẏ rose vp against me.

Thou hast made myne enemies to tourne their backes vpō me, thou hast destroyed them that hated me.

They cried but there was none to helpe them: yet euen vnto the lord but he herde them not.

I wyll beate them as small as the dust claye in the winde. I will cast thē out as the claye in the stretes.

Thou shalte delyuer me from the strivinges of ẏ people: thou shalt make me the [i] heade of the heathen.

A people whom I haue not knowē shall serue me.

As sone as they heare of me, they shall obey me, but the [k] straunge chyldren dyssemble with me.

The straunge chyldren are waxen olde, and go haltynge out of theyr pathes.

G The Lorde lyueth: and blessed be my helper, praysed be the God of my health.

Euen the God whyche seyth that I be auenged and subdueth the people vnto me.

It is he that delyuereth me from my cruell enemyes: thou shalt lyft me vp from them that ryse agaynst me, ẏ shalt rydde me from the wycked man.

For thys cause I wyll geue thankes vnto the (O lord) among the gentiles, and singe prayses vnto thy name.

Greate prosperite geueth he vnto hys kyng, and sheweth louyng kyndnesse vnto Dauid hys anoynted, yet ẏ vnto hys sede for euermore.

b He calleth GOD the horne of hys health, because by hym he had subdued hys enemyes, and obtayned health. It is a borowed speache of horned beastes, whiche with their hornes defende them selues and dryue awaye them that fyght agaynste them. Psalm. clxiiii. a. c By the sorowes of death And brokes of vngodlynes (by whyche is mente the obstynate multitude of the wicked and vngodlye) the paynes of hell, and the snares of death are singnifyed the ieopardous, and terryble feares which by the wickednes of hys enemyes happened vnto hym, and broughte hym verye often euen to deathes doore: so that by the iudgement of the flesh he thought hym selfe vtterly caste awaye.

d Coales after the vse of the scripture signifie (the stepinges) the anger or the indignacyon of god Psal. cxx. a. e Of this ye haue, Gene. ii. a. f Cherubin in Hebrue singnifieth in Englyshe swyft. [illegible] By all the thinges here reherced is described the power, myght and maiestye of almyghtye God, whyche he declareth in tempestes, of whiche the whole. xxix. Psal. entreateth, and in Job. xxxvii. are like thynges mencyoned to the settinge out of hys power. Often tymes we reade, that God when he woulde more openlye and more expresselye declare his power vnto men, caused thunder, lyghtenynge, and earthe quakes. &c. As in Exo. xix. when the law was geuen. And i. Regum. xii. when the people desyred a kinge. Mat. xxvii when Christe was on the crosse. Act. ii. when the holye gost came vpon the Apostles. Actuū. iiii. when they prayed. With such lyke wonders do som suppose that God dyd at one tyme or other shewe hys beneuolence to Dauid, and confyrmed hys promes, with shakynge of the earth, sendyng thonder, lyghtenynge, hayle, cloudes stormes and other terryble tokens, wherewith he holpe Dauid, and ouerthrue hys enemyes. Nethelesse it that the scripture mencioneth not therof in any place. For it mencioneth not the tempest whiche Esai prophecyed to come in the delyueraunce of Jerusalem from the Assirians, yet who wil deny but that it was in very deade so done.

g By the waters are signified, myghty and haboundaunte enemyes from whiche he sayth he was delyuered by the hande of god.

h Rowme ynough signifieth aboundaunce or plentye of all thynges. Psal. cxix. b. i Head signifieth ruler or gouernour. k Straunge chyldren are those that ought to be of the housholde of god, and that also auaunce them selues thereof, but be in dede vngodly, and walke not in the pathes of his commaundementes, as they haue promised to do. Wherof is spoken Esai. i. a.

☞ a * To the Chaunter vppon b * Aieleth c * of the dawning, A Psalme of Dauid.

a * Loke the tytle of the fourth Psalme.
b * Aieleth signifieth a certen instrument of musike or as some wyll a certen kynde of melodye. Diuers Authours do diuersely expounde it.
c * Of the dawning. This Psalm was made of our Sauiour Christ, and because it was not conuenient to describe him wythout a mistical word, he calleth hym the dawning, or (as some wyll) the mornynge starre.

A My God, my God: why hast thou forsakē me? the wordes of my cōplaynte are farre fro my healthe.
O my God I b * crye in the daye tyme, but thou hearest not: & in the night season also I take no rest.
Yet dwellest thou in the sanctuarye, O thou worshippe of Israell.
Our fathers hoped in thee, they trusted in thee, and thou dyddest delyuer them.
They called vpō thee, and were helped: they put their trust in thee and were not confounded But as for me, I am a worme & no man, a very scorne of men, and the out-caste of the people.
All they that se me, laugh me to scorne, B they shote out theyr lyppes, and shake theyr heades.
He trusted in God, let hym delyuer hym: let hym helpe hym, if he wyll haue hym.
But thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wombe, thou wast my hope, when I hanged yet vppon my mothers brestes.
I haue bene left vnto thee euer sence I was borne, thou art my god, euen fro my mothers wombe.
O, go not fro me then, for trouble is C harde at hande, and here is none to helpe me.
c * Greate bulles are comme aboute me, fatte oxen close me in on euery syde.
They f * gape vppon me with theyr mouthes, as it were a rāpyng and roaringe lyon.
I am poured oute lyke water, all my bones are out of joynt, my hert in the middest of my bodye is euen lyke meltinge ware.
My strength is dryed vp lyke a pot- D sherd, my tounge cleueth to my gūmes and thou hast brought me into the dust of deathe.
g * For dogges are come aboute me, the counsel of the wicked hath layde siage against me.
They pearced my handes and my fete: I myght haue tolde al my bones, as for them, they stode staring and loking vpon me.
They haue parted my garmentes amonge them, and caste lottes vpon my vesture.
But bee not thou farre from me, O Lorde: thou art my succoure, haste thee to helpe me.
Delyuer my soule from the swearde, E my dearelynge, from the power of the dogge.
Saue me from the Lions mouth, & heare me from amonge the hornes of the h * vnicornes.
So wyl I declare thy name vnto my brethren brethren, in the myddest of the cõgre-gacion wyll I prayse the,

O prayse the Lord ye that feare him Magnify him all ye sede of Jacob, & let al the seade of Israel feare him.

F For he hath not despysed nor abhor red the miserable estate of yͤ poore: he hath not hid his face fro me, but when I called vnto him, he herde me.

I wyll prayse the in the, l* greate con gregacion, and perfourme my vowes in yͤ syght of al them that feare the.

The poore shall eate & be satysfyed: they that seke after the lord shal prayse him our hert shall lyue for euer.

Al the endes of the world shal remẽbre them selues, and be turned vnto yͤ lor de, and all the generacyons of the Hey then shal worshippe before him,

G For yͤ kyngdom is the lordes, & he shall be the gouernour of the Heithen.

Al soch as be h* fat vpõ erth shal eat al so & worshyp, i* All they that lye in yͤ dust, and lyue so hardly, shal fal downe before hym.

The sede shal serue hym, and preache of the Lorde for euer.

They shal come, and declare hys rygh tuousnes: vnto a people that shalbe bo rne, whom the lorde hath made,

The. xxv. Psalme.

A prayer of Dauid oppressed both with synne & with enemyes. He prayeth the lorde to delyuer him from his synnes to shewe him his wayes and to ryd him from the furye of his enemyes. In the ende he prayeth for all the people.

Of Dauid.

A Unto the (O lorde) I lyfte vp my soule, My God, I truste in the:
Oh lett me not be confounded lest mine enemies triumphe ouer me.
For al they that hope in the shal not be ashamed: but soch as be scornful despisers without a cause, they shalbe put to confucyon.
Shewe me thy wayes, O Lord, a teach me thy pathes.
Lede me in thy trueth and lerne me, for thou art the god of my health, & in

For thy names sake, O lorde, be mercyfull vnto my synne, for it is greate, Whatsoeuer he be that feareth y^e lorde, he shal shewe hym the waye that he hath chosen.
His soule shal dwel at ease, and his sede shal possese the lande.
The secrete of the Lorde is among them that feare him, and he shewethe them his couenaunt.
Myne eyes are euer lokynge vnto the Lorde, for he shall plucke my fete out of the net.
Turne the vnto me and haue mercye vpō me, for I am desolate & in misery.
The sorowes of my hert are great, O brynge me out of my troubles.
Loke vpō mine aduersite & mysery, & and forgeue me al my synnes.

I maye dwel in the house of the lorde all the dayes of my lyfe, to beholde the fayer bewtye of the Lorde, and to vysit his temple.
For in the time of trouble he hath hid me in his tabernacle, yee in the secrete place of his dwelling hath he kept and set me vp vpon a* rocke of stone And now hath he b* lyft vp my hed a boue myne enemyes that compassed thoughe thou herdeste not, I be come like them, ỹ go downe in to the b* pyt Here the voyce of my humble petition, when I crye vnto the, and holde vp my hands toward thi holy temple. B O plucke me not awaie among the vngodli & wicked doers, which speake frendly to their neighboure, but ymagin mischefe in their hertes: Rewarde them accordinge to their dedes and wickednesse of their owne inuencions.

Recompence them after ỹ workes of their handes, paye them that they haue deserued.
For they regarde not the workes of the Lorde nor the operacyon of his handes: therfore shall he breake them downe, a not buylde them vp.
Praysed be the lord, for he hath herd the voyce of my humble peticion.

O Lorde my God, I b * cryed vnto the, and thou hast healed me.

Thou Lorde hast brought my soule out of c * hell: thou haste kepte my life, wher as thei go downe to the pytte.

Singe prayses vnto y lord (O ye sai tes of hys) geue thankes vnto hym for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

For his wrath endureth but y twin B cling of an eye, and his pleasure is in lyfe: heuynesse maye well endure for a night, but ioie commeth in the mornig

As for me, when I was in prosperite, I sayd: Tush, I shal neuer salmore.

And why? thou lord of thy goodnesse hadest made my hyll so stronge.

But as soone as thou turnedest thy face fro me, I was brought in feare,

Then cryed I vnto the, O Lord, yea C vnto the Lorde made I my prayer.

What profyt is there in my bloude, yf I go downe in to corrupcyon?

May the dust geue thanckes vnto y? Or shal it declare thy faithfulnes?

Heare, O Lorde, and haue mercy vpō D me: lorde be thou my helper,

And so thou hast turned my heuynesse in to ioye thou hast put of my d * sacke cloth, & gyrded me with gladnesse.

The. xxxiii. Psalme.

He exhorteth and moueth men diligetly to praise God: And sheweth that all thynges are full of hys goodnes.

A Reioyce in the Lorde, O ye ryghtuous, for it becommeth wel the iust to be thankfull.

Prayse the lorde with harpe: synge psalmes unto him with the lute and in strument of ten stringes,

Sing him a new song, yee sing luste ly unto him, and with a good corage,

For the worde of the Lorde is true & all his workes are faythfull.

He loueth mercy and iudgmẽt, þ ear-

O prayse the Lord wyth me, and let vs magnifie his name to gether.

I sought the Lord, and he herd me, yee he deliuered me, out of al my feare

They that haue an eye vnto hym, shalbe lightened, and their faces shall not be ashamed.

C This poore manne cryed vnto the lord, and he herd him, yee and delyuered him, out of all his troubles.

The Aungell of the lorde pytcheth his tent rounde aboute him that feare him, and delyuer them.

O taste, and se, how frendly ẏ lorde is, blessed is ẏ man ẏ trusteth in hym

O feare the Lorde, ye that be hys sayntes: for they that feare him lacke nothinge.

The [b] *ryche shall want, and suffer hūger, but they which seke ẏ lord: shal want no maner of thinge that is good

Come hyther, O ye children, herkē vnto me, I will teach you the feare of the Lorde.

Let him refraine his tonge from euell, & his lippes ẏ they speake no gile

Let him eschue euell, and do good: let him seke peace and ensue it.

For the [d] *eyes of the Lord are ouer ẏ rightuousnes, and his eares are open vnto their prayers.

But the [e] *face of the lord beholdeth them that do euel, to destroy the remembraunce of them out of ẏ earth.

When the righteous crye, the lord heareth them: and delyuereth them, out of all their troubles.

The Lord is nye vnto them that are cōtryte in hert, and wyll helpe such as be of an humble spryte.

Greate are the troubles of the rightuous, but the Lorde delyuereth them out of all.

He kepeth al their bones, so that not one of them is broken.

But myffortune shall slaye the vngodlye, and they that hate the ryghteuse, shalbe giltye,

The lorde delyuereth the soules of his seruauntes, and all they that put their trust him, shal not offende.

Of Dauid.

Stryue thou with thē, O Lord, that striue with me, fight thou a- A gainst them that fight againste me.

Laie hand vpon the shyld & speare, and * [a] stande vp to helpe me.

Drawe out thy swerde, and stoppe the waye agaynst them that persecute me, saye vnto my soul: I am thy help.

Let them be confounded & put to shame, that seke after my soule: let thē be turned back, and brought to cōfusiō, that ymagin myschefe for me.

Let them be as the dust before the winde, and the aungel of the lord scatteringe them.

Let their waye be darcke and slyppery, and the aungell of the lorde to persecute them.

For they haue pryuely layed their nett, to destroy me without a cause, yee and made a pytt for my soule, whiche I neuer deserued.

Let a soden destructyon com vpon him vnwarres, and ẏ nett that he hath B layde pryuely, catche him selfe, that he maye fall into his owne myschefe.

But let my soule be ioyfull in the lord, and reioyse in hys helpe.

All my bones shal say: Lord, who is lyke vnto the, which delyuerest ẏ pore frō those ẏ are to strong for him, ye the poore and the nedy from his robbers.

False witnesses are risen vp, & layed to my charge things that I know not.

They reward me euel for good, to the greate discomfort of my soule.

Neuerthelesse, whē they were sicke, C I put on a sacke cloth: I humbled my soul with [b] *fastig, & my prayer turned into myne owne bosome.

I behaued my self as though it had bene my frend or my brother I wente heuely, heuely, as one that mourneth foz hys mother.

But in myne aduersite they reioyse, & gather them to gather: Yee the very same come together agaiſt me vnwar tes, makinge mowes at me, and ceasse not.

With the gredy and scorneful ypo crytes they gnasshed vpon me wyth their teeth.

Lozde, whan wilte thou loke vpon thys?

O restoze my soule from the wicked rumour of them, my dearlyng from the lyons?.

So wyl I geue the thanckes in the greate cōgregacion and prayse the a monge much people.

O let them not triumphe ouer me ẏ ar mine enemies foz naught: O let thē not wincke wt their eyes, that hate me without a cause.

And why? their comening is not of peace, but they imagyn false wordes a gaynste the outcastes of the lande.

D They gape vpō me with their mou thes sayinge, there, there: we se it with oure eyes.

This thou seist, O Lozde: holde not thy tonge then, go not farre from me, O Lozde.

A wake lozde, and stand vp: auenge thou my cause, my God, and my Lozd.

Judge me O Lozd my God, accoz dinge to thy rightuousnesse, that they trvmphe not ouer me.

O let them not saye in their hertes: there there, so wolde we haue it: O let them not saye: we haue ouer come him

Let them be put to confucion and shame, that reioyce at my trouble: let them be clothed with rebuk and dish onoure, ẏ boost them selues agaiſt me.

Let them also be glad and reioyse, ẏ fauour my righteous dealing: yee let them saye alwaye: blessed be the lozde, which hath pleasure in the prosperitie of his seruaunte.

And as foz my tonge it shalbe tal kinge of thy ryghtuousnes and of thy prayse al the daye long.

For the Lord loueth the thing that is ryght he forsaketh not hys saynctes, but they shal be preserued for euermore: as for the sede of vngodlye, it shall bee roted out.

Yee the rightuous shall possesse the lande and dwell therin for euer.

The mouth of the rightuous, is exercised in wisdome, and hys tonge talketh of iudgemente.

The Law of his God is in his hert, therfor shal not hys fotesteppes slyde.

The vngodly seyth the rightuous, F and goeth aboute to slaye hym.

But the Lorde wyll not leaue hym in hys handes, nor condempne hym when he is iudged.

Hope thou in the Lorde, and keape his waye, and he shall so promote the that thou shalt haue the lande by enheritaunce, and se, when the vngodlye shall perisshe.

I my selfe haue sene the vngodly in greate power, and flourishynge lyke a grene bay tre, but when I went by, lo, he was goone: I soughte hym, but he

B O How louing is God vnto Israell,to suche as are cleane of hert?

Neuerthelesse my fete were almoost gone,my treadinges had wel nye slypt.

And why?I was greued at the wycked,to se the vngodly in such prosperite.

For they are in no parell of deathe,but stande fast lyke a palace.

They come in no mysfortune lyke other folke,nether are they plaged lyke other men.

And thys is the cause that they bee so putt vp in pryde,and ouerwhelmed with crueltie and vnrightuousnes.

Theyr eyes swell for fatnes,they do euen what they lyste.

Corrupt are they,and speake blasphe- B

They stretche forth theyr mouth vnto the heauen,and theyr tong goeth thorow the world.

Therfore fal the people vnto them,and there out sucke they no small auantage.

Tush(saye they)howe shulde god perceaue it?is ther knowledge in the most hyghest?

Lo,these are the vngodlye,these prospere in the worlde,these haue riches in possession.

Shoulde I then clense my herte in vayne(thought I)and a* wash my handes in innocencye?

Wherfore shulde I be then punished daily,and be chastened euery mornyng?

Yea I had almoost also sayde euen as they,but lo,then should I haue con C dempned the generacion of thy childrē.

Then thought I to vnderstād this,but it was to herde for me.

Untyll I wente into the sanctuary of god,and considered the ende of these menne.

Namely,how thou hast set them in a slyppery place,that thou mayst cast the downe headlynges and destroye them.

O how sodenly do they consume,perish and come to a fearful ende?

yea euen lyke as a dreame when one awaketh.so makest thou there b* image to vanish out of the citie.

An instruccion of Asaph.

A O God, wherfor doest thou cast vs so cleane awaye: why is thi a* wrath so hote agaist the shepe of thy pasture?

O thynke vpon thy congregacion, whom thou hast purchased from ÿ beginning: the stafe of thyne enheritaũce whom thou hast redemed, euẽ this hyl of Sion wherin thou dwellest.

Treade vpon them with thy fete, and cast them downe to the grounde, for ÿ enemye hath destroyed all to gether in the Sanctuarye.

Thine aduersaries roare in thy howses, & set vp theyr banners for tokens.

B Men may se the axes glyster aboue, like as those that hewe in the wodd

They haue set fyre vpõ ÿ Sanctuary, they haue defyled the dwellyng place of thy name euen vnto the grounde.

Yee they saye in their hertes: let vs spoile them altogether, thus haue thei brent vp all the houses of God in the lande.

We se oure tokens no more, ther is not one Prophet more, no not one that vnderstandeth any more.

O god, how longe shall the aduersary do thys dyshonour: how long shal ÿ enemy blasphem thy name? for euer?

Why withdrawest thou thin hande? why pluckest thou not thy righthande

C out of thy bosome, to consume thyne enemyes?

But god is my kynge of olde, the helpe that is done vpon earth, he doth it hym selfe.

Thou deuydest the see thorow thy power, thou breakest the heades of ÿ dragons in the waters.

Thou smytest the heades of Leuiathã in peces, & geuest him to be meate for ÿ people in the wildernesse.

Thou diggest vp welles and brokes, thou dryest vp mightye waters.

The day is thyne, and the night is thyne: thou hast prepared the lyghtes and the sunne.

Thou hast set al the borders of the earthe thou hast made bothe sommer and wynter.

Remember this, O Lorde, how the enemye rebuketh, and howe the folyshe people blaspheme thy name.

¶ The. lxxvii, Psalme.

¶ He sayeth that he was greued aboue measure for y misery of y holy people, & with sorowfle thoughtes euen almost myndlesse: And againe that he came to himselfe, and was comforted, by the remembraūce of the wonders and maruelles, which the lorde had done for his people.

In the time of my trouble I sought the Lord, I helde vp mine handes vnto him in the nyght ceason, for my soul refused all other comforte.

Whē I was in heuinesse, I thought vpon God: when my hert was vexed, then dyd I speake. Selah.

Thou heldest myne eyes wakinge, I was so feble, y I coulde not speake.

Thē remembred I the times of old, and the yeares that were past.

I called to remembraunce my song in y night, I cōmuned with mine owne B hert, and sought out my spirete.

Wyll the Lord cast out for euer?
Wyll he be no more intreated?
Is his mercy cleane gone?
Is his promyse come vtterly to an ende for euermore?

Hath y lord forgottē to be gracious?
Or, hathe he shut vp his louynge kindnesse in dyspleasure? b* Selah. C

At the last, I came to this poynte, y I thought: O why art thou so folyshe: the right hande of the most hyest can chaunge all.

Therfore wil I remembre the worckes of the lorde, and call to mynde thy wonders of olde tyme.

I wyll speake of all thy worckes, and my talking shalbe of thy doings.

The.lxxviii.Psalme

¶ He sheweth that it is the commaundemẽt of god and a special good thing, perfectly to remembre the actes and deades of ẏ lord done to his people. Thẽ saith he, that all though they were vnfaithfull, yet dyd he wonders in Egipte, and broughte them frõ thence, and though they prouoked hym to anger i the wyldernesse, gaue them abondantlye hys benefytes. And after that, when they were destroyed which came forth of Egipt, for their wickednes: yet brought he their sõnes (although thei folowed ther fathers vnfaithfulnes, ⁊ despised the wonders done in the wildernes for their fathers) in to the land promessed, ⁊ drove out ẏ inhabiters: in which, althogh he often punyshed them greuously, whẽ they prouoked and tempted him, ⁊ at the last in toke of a grate feruent wrath, byside their great slaughter suffered also the Arche to be taken from them in the time of Ely the Prest: yet behild he thẽ fauorablye againe, geuing them Dauid to their king, and restoaring godlynes againe at Jerusalẽ. in which thig he also prophecyeth of Christ vnder the shadow of Dauid.

An instruccyon of Asaph.

A Here my lawe, O my people, en-cline your eares vnto the wordes of my mouth.
I wyl open my mouth in parables, and speake of thinges of olde.
Which we haue herd and knowẽ, ⁊ such as our fathers haue tolde vs.
That we should not hyde them frõ the childrẽ of the generacions to come. but to shewe the honour of the Lorde, his myghte and wonderfull workes ẏ he hath done.
He made a couenaunt wyth Jacob, and gaue Israel a lawe, which he com maunded oure forefathers, to teache their children.
That their posteritie myght knowe it, ⁊ ẏ children which were yet vnborn.
To thintent that when they came, vp, they myght shew their children the same.
That they also might put their trust i god, ⁊ not to forget what he had done but to kepe his commaundementes.
And not to be as their forefathers, a ᵃ* frowarde and ouerthwarte generacion, a generacyon that set not their hert a right, and whose sprete was not true towarde God.
Lyke as the childrẽ of ᵇ* Ephraim, B which beyng harnessed and caryeng bow es, turned them selues, back in the tim, of battayll.
They kept not the couenaunt of god ⁊ wolde not walke in his lawe.
They forgate what he had done, and the wõderful wordes that he had shew ed for them.
Maruelous thynges dyd he in the syght of our fathers in the lande of E gipte, euen in the felde of ᶜ* Zoan.
He deuided the see and let them go thorow it, and made ẏ waters to stand lyke a wall.
In the day tyme he led them with a cloude, and all the nyght thorow with a lyght of fyre.
He claue the hard rockes in ẏ wilder nesse, ⁊ gaue them drinke therof, as it hath bene out of the greate deaphe, He brought waters out of the stony rocke, so that they gusshed out lyke the ryuers.
Yet for al this they sined agaist him, and prouoked the moost hyeste in the wyldernes, They tempted god in theyr herts, and requyred meate for theyr lust.
For they spake agaynst god, ⁊ said: C yee yee, god shal prepare a ᵈ* table in ẏ wildernesse, shal he?
Lo, he smote the stony rocke, that the watery streames gusshed out, ⁊ ẏ strea mes flowed wᵗ all: but how cã he geue bred ⁊ prouide flesh for his people?
When ẏ Lord hearde this, he was wroth: so ẏ fyre was kindled in Jacob ⁊ heuy dyspleasure agaynste Israell: Because they beleued not in God, ⁊ put not their trust in hys helpe.
So he commaunded the cloudes abo ue

ne & opened the dores of heauen.
He rayned downe Manna vpon them for to eate, and gaue thē bred frō heauen.
Then ate the angels, * fode, for he sent them meate ynoughe.
He caused the East wynde to blowe vnder the heauē, & thorow his power he brought in the south wynde.
He made flesh to rayne vpon thē as thicke as dust, and fethered foules like as the sande of the see.
He let it fall amonge theyr tentes rounde aboute their habytacions.
B So they ate and were fylled, for he gaue them their owne desyre.
They were not dysapoited of their luste.
D But while ÿ meate was yet i their mouthes: the heuy wrath of god came vpō thē, slew the * welthtest of thē, & smote downe the chosen men of Israel.
But for al this they sinned yet more, & beleued not his wonderous workes.
Therfore their dayes were consumed in vanite, and sodenly their yeares were gone.
Whē he slew them they sought him, & turned them early vnto God.
They thought then that god was their succoure, & that the hye god was their redemer.
Neuertheless they dyd but flatter him in their mouthes, and dyssembled with him in their tonges.
For their herte was not whole with him, nether continued they in this couenaunt.
But he was so mercyful, ÿ he forgaue their mysdedes, and destroyed thē not.
Yee many a tyme turned he his wrath awai, and wold not suffre his whole dyspleasure to aryse.
C For he consydered ÿ they were but * flesh euen a wynd that passeth away and commeth not agayne.
E O how oft haue they greued him in the wildernesse?
How many a tyme haue they prouoked hym in the deserte?
They turned backe, and tempted god & moued the holy one in Israel.
They thought not of his hand, in the day when he delyuered them from the hande of the enemye, How he had wrought his miracles in Egypte, and his wonders in ÿ land of Zoan.
Howe he turned their waters in to bloude, so that they might not drincke of the ryuers.
How he sent lice amōg them, to eate thē vp, & frogges to destroy them.
How he gaue their frutes vnto the catyrpyller, and their labours vnto ÿ greshopper.
How he bett downe their vyneyardes wt hayle stones, and their molbery trees with the frost.
How he smote their catel wt haylestones, and their flockes with hote thōder boltes.
How he set vpon them ÿ furiousnesse of his wrathe, anger and dyspleasure: with trouble and sallingi of euel Aungels.
When he made a waye to his fearful indignaciō, and spared not * their soules frō death, yet & gaue their * catell ouer to the pestylence.
When he smote all the fyrstborne in Egypt, the most pryncypall and myghtyest in ÿ dwellynges of * Ham.
But as for his owne peeple, he lead them forth like shepe, and caried them in ÿ wildernesse lyke a flocke. F He brought them out safely ÿ they shuld not feare, & ouerwhelmed their enemyes with the see.
He caryed them * vnto the borders of his Sanctuary: euen into thys hil. which he purchased with his righthād
He dyd cast out the heathen before thē, caused their lande to be deuyded amonge them for an heritage, & made ÿ tribes of Israel to dwel in their tentes For al this they tempted & displeased the most hye god, and kept not his couenaunt.
But turned their backes, and fell awaye lyke the forefathers, starttynge asyde lyke a broken bowe.
And so they greued him wt their hyplaces, and prouoked hym with theyr ymages.
When god heard this, he was wroth, & toke sore dyspleasure at Israel.
So that he forsoke the Tabernacle in

in Silo, euen his habytacyon wherin he dwelt amonge men.

He delyuered their power in to captyuite, and their glory into the enemies hãd

He gaue his people ouer to ŷ swerd, G for he was wrath wt h his herytage.

The fire consumed their yonge mẽ, and their maydens were not geuen to mariage.

Their prestes were slaine with the swerde, and there were no wyddowes to make lamentacion.

So the Lord[m]* awaked as one out of slepe, and lyke a graunte refresshed with wyne.

He smot his enemies in ŷ hinder partes, and put them to a perpetual shame.

He refused the tabernacle of Joseph, & chose not the tribe of Ephraim.

Neuerthelesse, he chose the tribe of Juda, euen the[n]* hyll of sion which he loued.

And there he buylded his temple on hye, & layed ŷ foũdacyon of it like the groũd, ŷ it might perpetually endure.

He chose Dauid also his seruaunt, & toke him awaye frõ the shepe fouldes.

As he was folowynge the yowes greate with yong, he toke him, that he might fede Jacob his people, and Israel his enherytaunce.

So he fed them with a faithfull & true herte, and ruled them wyth all the dilygence of his power.

B In the tyme of my trouble I cal vpon the, for thou hearest me.

Amonge the Goddes there is none lyke vnto the, O Lord, there is not one that can do as thou doest.

All nacions whom thou hast made shall come and worshyppe before the, O Lord, and shall glorify thy name.

For thou art greate, thou dost wonderous thinges thou art god alone.

Leade me in thy way, O Lord, that I may walke in thy trueth: O let my hert delyte in fearinge thy name.

I thanck the, O Lord my god, and wyll prayse thy name for euer.

For great is thy mercy toward me, thou hast delyuered my soule from the [b] nether moste hel.

C O God the proude are rysen agaynste me, and the congregacion of the myghtye seketh after my soule, and set not the before their eyes.

But thou, O Lorde God, art ful of compassion, and mercy, long sufferinge, greate in goodnes and trueth.

O turne the then vnto me, haue mercy vpon me: geue thy strength vnto thy seruaunte, and helpe the sonne of thine handmayde.

Shew some token vpon me for good, that they whych hate me, maye se it, & be ashamed: because thou lorde haste helped me, and comforted me.

A prayer of Moses the man of God

LOrde ȳ art our refuge frõ A one generaciõ to another.
Before the mountains were broughte forthe, or e uer the earth & the worlde were made, thou arte God from euer-lastyng and world without ende.
Thou turnest man to destructyon, Agayne, thou saiest: come agaie ye chil dren of men a*.
For a thousand yeares in thy sight B are but as yesterdaye that is past, and lyke as it were a nyght watch.
As sone as thou scatterest the, they are euen as a slepe, and fade awaye so denly like the grasse.

In the mornyng it is grene and grow eth vp, but in ẏ euenyng it is cut dow ne and wythered.

For we consume awaye in thy dyspleasure, and are afrayed at thy wrath full indignacion.

C Thou settest oure misdedes before the, & oure secrete sinnes in the light of thy C counten aunce.

For when thou art angry, al our daies are gone, we bringe oure yeares to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde.

b* The daies of our age are .iii. score yeares and ten: and though men be so strong ẏ they come to .iiii. score yeares, yet is their strength then but laboure & sorow: so soone passeth it away, and we are gone.

But who regardeth ẏ power of thy wrathe, thy fearfull and terryble dyspleasure?

O teach vs to nombre oure dayes, that we may applye oure hertes vnto wysdome.

Turne ẏ agayne (O Lord) at the last,
D and be gracious vnto thy seruauntes.

O satisfie vs with thy mercy, and ẏ soone: so shall we reioyce and be glad al the dayes of oure lyfe.

Comforte vs againe, now after the tyme that thou haste plaged vs, and for the yeares wherin we haue suffred aduersyte.

Shewe thy seruauntes thy worcke, & their chyldren thy glory.

And the glorryous maiesty of the lord oure god be vpō vs: O prospere thou the worcke of our handes vpon vs, O prospere thou our handy worcke.

B Moses and Aron amonge his prestes, and Samuel amonge such as cal vpon his name: these called vpon the lorde, and he heared them.
He spake vnto them out of the clou dy pyler, for they kept his testimonies, and the lawe that he gaue them.
Thou heardest them (O Lorde our God) thou forgauest them O god, and punishest their owne inuencions.
O magnifie the lorde oure God, & worshippe him vpon his holy hyl, for the lorde our god is holy.

A Psalme of prayse.

A O Be ioyfull in God (all yee landes) serue the Lord w gladnes, come before hys presence with ioye.
Be ye sure that the lord he is God: It is he that hath made vs, and not we our selues: we are but hys people, and the shepe of his pasture.
O go your waie into his gates the with thanckesgeuing, and into his co-

¶ The .Ci. Psalme.

¶ He promiseth that he wyll execute the office of a godly holy prynce, that is to say, that he wyll both lyue innocently, and also oppresse the euell and saue the good.

A Psalme of Dauid.

My songe shalbe of merci and iug A gemente, ye vnto the, O Lorde, wyll I synge.

O lett mee haue vnderstandinge in the waye of Godlynes, vntill the time that thou come vnto me: and so shall I walcke in my house wt an innocēt hert.

I wil take no wicked thing in hand I hate ye sinne of vnfayth fulnesse, it B shall not cleue vnto me.

a* A froward herte shall departe fro me I wyll not knowe a wicked parson

Whoo so pryuely sclaundereth hys neyghboure, him wyl I destroye: who so hath a proude loke and an hy stomacke, I maye not away with him.

Myne eyes shal loke for such as be faythfull in the lande, that they maye dwell wythe me: and who soo leadeth a godly lyfe, shalbe my seruaunt.

There shall no deceatfull personne dwell in my house, he that telleth lyes shall not tary in my sighte.

I shall sone destroye all the vngodlye of the lande, that all wicked doers may be roted out of the citie of the lord.

a* That is a frowarde hert which fayneth to seke the honoure of god, and yet in dede seke nothynge lesse, as he sayth Prouer. vi. b

The .cii. Psalme.

¶ A vehement bewayling of the misery of the holy people, in which they were almost oppressed wt innumerable iniuries of the borderers and people that dwelt next vnto them, at their returne from Babilon, when they came to repayre the temple & citie of Hierusalem.

¶ A prayer of the afflict, when he was in woo, and poured oute his complainte before the Lorde.

A Heare my a* prayer, O Lorde, and let my criengcome vnto the.

Hyde not thy face fro me in ye time of my trouble enclyne thine eares vnto me when I call, O heare me, and that ryght sone.

For my dayes are consumed awaye lyke smoke, and my boones are brente vp as it were a fyre brande.

My hert is smyten downe and wethered lyke grasse, so that I forget to eate my b* breade.

For the voyce of my groninge, my bones will scarce cleue to my flesh

I am become lyke a pellican in the wyldernes, and lyke an hole in a broken wall.

I wake, and am euen as it were a sparow, sittinge alone vppon the house toppe.

Myne ennemies reuyle me all the daye longe, they laugh me to scorne, ād are sworne together againste me. B

I eate asshes with my breade, and mēgle my drinke with wepinge.

And that because of thine indignacion & wrath, for thou hast takē me vp and cast me awaye.

My days are gone lyke a shadowe and I am wethered lyke grasse.

But thou, O lorde, endurest for euer and thy remembraunce thorow al generations.

Aryse therfore and haue mercye vpon Sion, for it is tyme to haue mercy vpō her, yea the time is come.

And why? thy seruauntes haue a loue to her c* stones, and it pitieth them to see her in the dust. C

The hethen shall fere thy name, O Lorde, and all the kinges of the earth thy maiestie.

For the Lorde shall builde vp Sion & shall appeare in his glorye.

b* He turneth hym vnto the prayer of the pore destitute, and despiseth not their desyre.

This shalbe written for those that come after, that the people which shall be borne, maye prayse the lorde:

For he loketh downe from hys sanctuary, out of heauen doth the lorde beholde the earth.

That he may heare the mourning of suche as be in captiuitie, and delyuer the chyldren of deathe.

That they may preach ye name of ye lord in Siō, and his worshippe at Jerusalem.

When the people are gathered together and the kigdomes also to serue the lorde. D

He hath brought downe my strength in my iurney, and shortened my dayes.

Yet wil I say: O my God, take me not awaye in the myddest of myne age: as for thy yeares, they endure thorow out all all generacions.

Thou Lord in the beginnyng, hast layed the foundacion of the earthe & ye heauẽs are the workes of thy handes.

*Hebre. i. b * They shall perishe, but thou shalt endure: they al shall ware olde as doth a garment, and as a vesture shalt thou chaung them, & they shalbe chaunged.

But thou art the same, and thy yea res shall not fayle.

The childrẽ of thy seruauntes shal contynue, and their sede shall prospere in thy sight.

a * True prayer is an earnest and affectuous cõmu nication of the hert with God, and a dilygent con syderacion of the thinges, that want in vs, concer ning the seakyng of his glory, and doyng his wil: & a burninge and feruent desire of the spirete, that re quyreth him to repayre and amende y, which wan teth in vs. Psalme. v. a Prouer. xv. d. Euery godly wysh, is also, a good prayer.

b * Bredde for any waner of sede.

c * Stones here sygnifye, the men vpon whome the Churche of God is edyfied and buylded, as in ye i. Pet. ii. a. And ye as lyuinge stones are made a spyre tuall house. a c.

The ciii. Psalme.

The prayseth ye goodnes of god toward mẽ, which doth forgeueth them their sinnes and abundauntly destributeth vnto them worldly goodes.

Of Dauid.

A Prayse the Lorde, O my soule, and al that is within me prayse his ho ly name:

Prayse the Lorde O my soule, and forget not all his benefites.

Which forgeueth all thy synnes, & healeth al thine infirmities.

Which saueth thy life from destruc cyon, & crowneth wt the mercy, and lo uynge kyndnesse.

Which satisfieth the desyre with good thynges, makyng the yonge and lustye as an Aegle.

The Lord executeth ryghtuousnes and iudgement, for al them that suffer wronge.

B He shewed his wayes vnto Moses & his workes, vnto ye childrẽ of Israel.

The Lorde is ful of compassyon and mercy, a * longe sufferinge, and of greate goodnesse.

He wyll not alwaye be chyding, ne ther wyll he kepe hys anger for euer.

He hath not dealt with vs after our sinnes, nether rewarded vs accordig to oure wickednesse.

For loke howe hie the heauẽ is in cõ parison of the earthe, so greate is his mercy also toward them that fere him.

Loke how wyde ye east is frõ ye west, so farre hath he set our sines from vs.

Yee like as a father pitieth his owne chyldren, euen soo is the Lorde mer cyful vnto them that feare him. C

For he knoweth wherof we be made, he remembreth that we are but dust.

That a mã in his time is but as is grasse, & florisheth as a flour of ye feld.

For as sone as the wind goeth ouer it, it is gone, and ye place therof know eth it no more.

But the mercyfull goodnesse of the Lorde endureth for euer and euer, vpõ them ye feare him, & his rightuousnesse vppon their chylders children.

Such as kepe his couenaunte and thincke, vpon his commaundements to do them.

The Lorde hath prepared hys seate in heauen, and his kingdome ruleth ouer all.

O prayse the Lorde, ye aungels of his, ye that be the mightie in strength fulfillynge his cõmaundements that men may heare ye voyce of his wordes.

O prayse the Lorde all, ye hys ho stes, ye seruauntes of hys, that do his pleasure.

O speake good of the Lorde, all ye workes of his in euery place of domi niõ: praise thou the Lord, O my soule.

a * The Lord is long suffering, which is more then pacyent: for he not onely suffereth but also differeth vengeaunce, desyrynge the amendement of the sinner louing better to pardon and forgeue thẽ to punish Rom. ii. a Ether despisest thou the ryches of his goodnes, pacience & longe sufferaunce. &c.

The. ciiii: Psalme.

The prayseth God for the creacyon of al things, & for his godly gouernaunce therof.

Prayse ye Lord O my soule: O lord my God, thou art become exceadig glorious, thou art clothed wt ma iesty and honoure. A

Thou deckest thy self with light as it were with a garment, thou spredest out the heauen lyke a curtayne.

Thou voltest it aboue with waters thou makest the cloudes thy charet, & goest vpon the wynges of the wynde.

*Thou makest thine angels spretes, and thy ministers flammes of fyre.

Thou hast layed the earth vpon her foundacion, that it neuer moueth at eny tyme.

Thou coueredst it with the depe like as with a garment, so that the waters stande aboue the hylles.

But at thy rebuke they fle, at y voice of thy thonder they are afrayed.

B (Then are the hylles sene alofte, and the valleys beneth i their place which thou hast appointed for them.)

Thou hast set the their boundes, which they maye not passe, that they turne not agayne to couer the earth.

Thou causest the welles to springe vp among the valleis, & the waters to runne amonge the hylles.

That all beastes of the felde maye haue drynke, & y the wilde asses may quench their thyrste.

Aboue vpo y hylles haue the foules of the ayre their habitacion, and syng amonge the braunches.

Thou waterest the hylles from aboue, the earth is fylled with the frutes of thy workes.

Thou bringest forth grasse for y catel and gren herbes for the seruyce of me.

Thou bryngest fode out of y earth: wine to make glad y hert of man, oile to make hym a chearful countenaunce C and bred to strength mans herte.

The trees a* of the Lorde are full of sappe, euen y trees of Libanus whiche he hath planted.

There make the byrdes their nestes, and the fyre hylles are a dwellyng for the storke.

The hilles are a refuge for the wild goates, and so are the stony rockes for the conyes.

Thou hast appointed the Moone for certaine seasons, the Sunne knoweth hys goinge downe.

Thou makeste darcknesse, that it may be night, wherin al the beastes of the forest do moue.

Yee and the yonge lions which rore after their pray, and seke their meat at God.

But whe the sune ariseth, they get the awaye together, and lye them downe in their dennes.

Then goeth man forth to his worcke, & to tyl his lande vntyll the eueninge.

*O Lord, how manifold are thy workes, rightwisely hast thou made the al: yee y earth is full of thy riches.

So is this greate & wyde see also, wherin are thinges crepinge innumerable, both small & greate beastes. D

There go the shippes ouer, and there is that b* Leuiatha, whome thou haste made, to take his pastime therin.

They wayte al vpo the, that thou mayest geue them meate in due season.

When thou geuest it them, they gather it: when thou openest thyne hand, they are filled with good.

But when thou hidest thy face they are sorouful: yf thou takest away their breth, they dye, & are turned agayne to their dust.

Againe, when thou lettest thy breth goo forthe, they are made, and so thou renuest the face of the earth.

The glorious maiesty of the Lorde endurethe for euer, and the Lorde c* reioysethe in hys worckes.

The earthe trembleth at the loke of him, he doth but touch the hylles & they smoke.

I wyll synge vnto the lorde as longe as I lyue, I wyl prayse my god while I haue my beynge.

O that my wordes myght please hi, for my ioye is in the lorde.

As for siners, they shalbe cosumed out of the earth, and the vngodly shal come to an ende: but prayse thou y lorde, O my soule. Prayse the euerlastig.

ted hys people, and dealt vntruly w his seruauntes.

* Then sent he moses hys seruaunt and Aaron whome he had chosen.

These did his tokens amonge thē,

* He turned their waters into blod, and slewe theyre fyshe.

* Their lande brought forth frogges, ye euen in their kings chambres.

* He spake the worde and there came all manner of flyes and lyce in all their quarters.

He gaue them hayle stones for rayne, and flammes of fyre in their land.

He smote their vineyardes and fig trees and destroyed the trees that wer in their coastes.

* He spake the worde, and there were Greshoppers and caterpillers innumerable.

These ate vp al the grasse in their lande, and deuoured theyre frutes of the grounde.

* He smote all the fyrst borne in the land euen the chefe of al their substan ce.

D * He brought them forth with syluer and golde, there was not one feble per son amonge theyr trybes.

Egipte was gladd of theyr departing for they were afrayde of them.

* He spred oute a cloud to be a cou erynge, and fyre to geue lyght in the nyght season.

* At their desire there cam quayles, a he fylled them wyth the bread of heauē.

* He opened the rocke of stone, and the waters flowed out: so that ryuers ranne in the wyldernesse.

mes which he hath made vnto Abrahā his seruaunte.

Thus he brought forth his people w ioye, and his chosyn with gladnes.

And geue them the landes of the he athen: where they toke the laboures of the peple in possession.

That they might kepe his statutes & obserue his lawes. Prayse the euerlasting.

The. cvi Psalme.

¶ The people of God, sparpled abroade for theyr offences in diuers and straunge contreyes, exhorte them selues to prayse the goodnes of God, which is euer redy for them that seke him: & do also recite ÿ synnes of theyr elders and forefathers: and agayne, the benefites of God, which he shewed them, both in the wildernes, and after in ÿ lande of Canaan.

Prayse the euerlastinge.

O Geue thankes vnto the Lord, for he is gracious, and his merci endureth for euer.

Who can expresse the noble actes of the Lorde, or shewe forth al his prayse, Blessed are they that alwaye keape iudgement, and do righteousnes.

Remembre vs, O Lorde, accordinge to the fauour that thou bearest vnto thy people: O visite vs withe thy sauinge health.

That we myghte see the pleasure of thy chosen, that we myght reioyce in ÿ gladnes of thy people, and geue thankes with* thyne enherittaunce.

We haue sinned with oure fathers, we haue done amisse, we haue delt wickedlye.

B Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypte, they kepte not thy gret goodnesse in remembraunce: but were disobedient at the see, euen at the redd sea.

Neuertheles he helped them for his names sake, that he might make his power to be knowen.

He rebuked the red seea, and it was dried vp: so he led them thorow the depeas in the wyldernes.

Thus he saued them from the hand of the hater, and delyuered them from the hande of the enemye.

*As for those that troubled them the waters ouerwhelmed them, there was not one of them lefte.

Then beleued they in his word, and songe prayse vnto him.

But within a whyle they forgat his workes, & wold not abyde his coūsel.

A lust came vpon them in the wyldernesse, so that they tempted God in C the deserte.

Yet he gaue them their desyre, and sent them ynough at their wylles.

They angred Moses in the tentes, and Aron the saynete of the lorde.

So the earth opened and swalowed vp Dathan, and coucred the congregacion of Abraham.

The fyre was kynled in their company, the flame brent vp the vngodly.

*They made a calfe in Horeb, and worshipped the molten ymage.

Thus they turned their b* glorye into ÿ similitud of a calfe, ÿ eateth haye.

They forgat God their Sauiour. which had done so grete thīges ī egypt. D Wonderous workes in ÿ lād of c* Ham, & feareful thinges in ÿ reed see.

So he sayde he wolde haue destroyed thē, had not Moses his chosē stād before him in that gap: to turne away his wrathful indignacion, lest he shold destroye them.

Yee they thoughte scorne of that pleasaunt land, and gaue no credence vnto his worde.

But murmured in their tentes, and herkened not vnto ÿ voice of the lord.

Thē lyft he vp his hand agaynst thē to ouerthrow them in the wyldernesse.

To cast out their sede amōge the nacions, and to scatter them in the landes.

They ioyned thē selues vnto Baal Peor, and ate the offeringes of ÿ deed. E

Thus they prouocked him vnto anger wt their owne inuencyons, and the plage was greate amonge them.

*Then stode vp Phinehes and executed iustice, and so the plage ceased.

And that was coūted vnto him for ryghtuousnes, amonge all posterites for euermore.

They angeryd hym also at the waters of stryfe, so that Moses was punysshed for their sackes.

Because they prouocked his spryte: & he told them playnely wt his lippes:

Nether destroyed they the Heathē as the Lord cōmaunded them.

But were mengled among the Heathen then, and lerned their worckes.

In so moch ẏ they worshipped their ymages, whyche turned to their owne decaye.

Yee they offred their sonnes ⁊ their F daughters vnto deuels.

And shed ẏ innocēt bloude of their sōnes ⁊ of their daughters, whom they offred vnto ẏ ymages of Canaan, so ẏ ẏ londe was defyled with bloude.

Thus were they stained with their owne worckes, and wente a whorynge w their owne inuencyons.

Therfore was the wrath of ẏ Lord kyled against his people, in so moch ẏ he abhored his owne inheritaunce:

And gaue them ouer into ẏ hãde of the Heathē, ⁊ they that hated thē, were lordes ouer them.

G Their enemyes oppressed thē, and had them in subieccyon.

Many a tyme dyd he delyuer thē, but they prouoked hī with their owne inuencyons, and were brought downe for their wickeenesse.

Neuerthelesse when he sawe their aduersite, he herde their complaynt.

He thought vpon his couenaunt, ⁊ pytied them, accordyng vnto the multitude of his mercy es.

Yee he made al those that had led them awaye captyue, to pytie them.

Delyuer vs, O Lord our god, and gather vs from amonge the Heathen: ẏ we may geue thãckes to thy holi name, ⁊ make oure boast of thy prayse:

Blessed be the Lord God of Israel frō euerlasting, ⁊ world without ende, ⁊ let all people sai: Amen, Amē. Prayse the euerlastynge.

He sheweth that al euels and aduersyties ar both sent and taken awaye of God.

A O Geue thanckes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracyous, and hys mercy endureth for euer.

Let them geue thanckes whom the lorde hath redemed, and delyuered frō the hand of the enemye.

And gathere them out of the landes, from the East, from the west, from the North and from the * Southe.

They wente astraye in the wildernesse in an vntroden waye, and found no citie to dwel in.

Hongrie and thirsty, and their soule faynted in them.

So they b * cryed vnto the Lord in their trouble, and he delyuered thē frō their distresse.

He led them forth by the right waye, that they might go to the cytie where they dwelt.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the lord, and the wonders that he doth for the children of men.

For he satisfied the emptye soule, ⁊ fylled the hongrie soule with good.

Such as sate in darcknesse and in the shadowe of death, being fast bound in mysery and c * yron.

Because they were not obedient to ẏ cōmaundemētes of God, but lightly regarded ẏ councel of the most highest.

Their hert was vexed with labour, they fell downe, and there was non to helpe them.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in their trouble, and he delyuered thē out of their dystresse.

He brought them out of darcknes and out of the shadowe of deathe, and brake their bondes in sonder.

O that men wold prayse the goodnesse of the lord, and the wonders that he doth for the children of men.

For he hath broken the d * gates of brasse, and smitten the e * barres of yrō in sonder.

Folyshe men were plaged for their offence, and because of ther wickednes.

Their soule abhorreth al maner of mete, they wer euē hard at dethes dore. C

So they cryed vnto ẏ lord ī their trouble ⁊ he deliuered thē out of thir distres.

He sent his word and healed them, and saued them from destruccion.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the lord, and the wonders that he doth for the children of men.

That they wolde offre vnto him ẏ sacrifice of thanckesgeuinge, and tel out

workes with gladnes.

They that go downe to the see in shippes, and occupye their busynes in greate waters.

These men se the workes of ÿ lord, and his wonders in the deape.

For at his word, the stormy wind ariseth, and lifteth vp the waues therof.

They are caryed vp to the heauen, and downe agayne to the deapth, their soule melteth awaye in the trouble.

They rele to and fro, they stacker lyke a dronkẽ mã, & are at their wyttes end.

So they crye vnto the Lorde in their trouble, and he delyuereth them out of their distresse.

He maketh the storme to ceasse, so ÿ the waues are styl.

Then are they glad because they be at rest, and so he bryngeth them vnto the hauen where they wold be.

D O that men wolde prayse the goodnes of the lorde, and the wonders that he doth for the children of men.

That they wold exalt him in ÿ congregacyon of the people, and loue hym in the seate of the elders.

Which turneth ÿ floudes in to dry land, and dryeth vp ÿ water springes.

A frut ful land maketh he bare, for ÿ wickednes of them that dwel therin.

Agayne, he maketh the e * wyldernes a standing water, and water springes of a drye grounde.

Ther he setteth ÿ hongry, that they maye buyld them a cytie to dwel in

That they may sowe their groũde, plant vineyardes, to yelde them frutes of increase.

He f * blesseth thẽ, so that they multiplye excedingly, & suffreth not their catel to decrease.

When they are mynished and brought lowe thorow oppression, thorowe eny plage or trouble.

Though he suffer them to be euell intreated thorow tyrauntes, or let thẽ wander out of the waye in the wildernesse.

Yet helpeth he the poore out of mysery (at ÿ last) and maketh him an howsholde lyke a flocke of shepe.

The righteous wil considre this & reioyse, the mouthe of all wickednesse shalbe stopped.

Who is so wyse, & pondreth these thinges wel, shal vnderstand ÿ louing kyndnesses of the Lord.

A song of a Psalme of Dauid.

O * God, my hert is ready to synge, and to geue prayse.

Awake, O my glorye, awake A lute and harp, I my selfe wyll awake right early.

I wyll geue thanckes vnto the, O Lord among the people, I wyl synge prayses vnto the among the heathen.

For the greatnesse of thy mercye is biger then the heauens, and thy faythfulnes reacheth vnto the cloudes.

* Set vp thy selfe, O God, aboue the heauens, and thy glorye aboue all the earth. B

* That thy beloued maye be delyuered: help them with thy right hand, and heare me.

God hath spoken in his Sanctuary, which thinge reioyseth me.

I wyl deuyd Sichem, and meate out the valey of Suchoth.

Galaad is myn, Manasses is mine, Ephraim is ÿ strength of my hed, Juda is my captaine.

Moab is my washpot, ouer Edom wyll I stretch oute my shue, Philistea C shal be glad of me.

Who wyl leade me into the strong citie? Who wil bring me in to Edom?

Shalt not thou do it (O God) which hast cast vs out: thou god, that wetest not forth with our hostes.

O be thou our helpe in trouble, for vaine is the help of man.

Thorow god we shall do greate actes for it is he that shal treade downe our enemyes.

a Loke the title of the.iiii.Psalme.

A Holdnot thy tong, O God of mi prayse.

For the mouth of the ungodly, yee and the mouth of the disceatful is opened upon me, and speake agaist me with false tonges.

They compasse me about with wordes of hatred, and fight against me wout a cause.

For the loue that I had unto them, they take nowe my contrary parte, but I geue my selfe unto prayer.

Thus they reward me euel for good, and hatred for my good wyl.

Set an ungodlye man to be ruler ouer hym, and let Satan stand at his ryght hande.

Whē sentence is geuen upon him, let him be condēpned, and let his praier be turned in to synne.

*Let his dayes be fewe, and his bishopricke let another take.

Let hys childrē be vagabunnes, & beg their bred: let them seke it, as they

B that be destroyed.

Let the extorcioner consume al that he hath, and let straungers spoyle hys laboure.

Let there be no man to pitye, nor to haue compassion upon hys fatherlesse children.

Let his ende be destrucion, and in ÿ next generacion let his name be cleane put out.

Let the wyckednes of hys fathers be had in remembraunce in the syghte of the lorde, and let not the synne of his mother be done awaye.

Let them alway be before the lord, but as for the memorialle of thē selues, let it perish from out of the earth.

And that because his mind was not to do good, but persecuted ÿ poore helplesse, and him ÿ was vexed at the hert, to slaye hym.

His delyte was in cursynge, and therfore shall it happen unto hym: he C loued not blessinge, and that shall be farr from him.

He clothed him selfe with cursinge lyke as with a rayment: yee it went in to his bowels lyke water, and like oyle in to his bones.

Let it be unto him as the clocke ÿ he hath upon hym, and as the girdel ÿ he is gyrded with all.

Let it thus happen from the Lord, unto myne enemyes, and to those that speake euel agaynst my soule.

But deale thou with me, O lorde God, accordynge unto thy name, for swete is thy mercy.

O delyuer me, for I am helplesse & poore, & my hert is woūded within me.

My knees are weake, thorow b* fasting: mi flesh is dried up for wante of fatnes.

I am become a rebuke unto thē, they loke upon me and shake their heades.

Helpe me, O lord my God, oh saue me for thy mercyes sake.

That they maye knowe, how ÿ this is thy hand, and that thou hast don it.

Thoughe they curse, yet blesse thou: and let thē be confounded, that rise up agaynst me, but let thy seruaūt reioice.

Let myne aduersaries be clothed wt their owne shame, as with a clocke.

As for me, I wyl geue thanckes unto the lord wyth my mouth, and praise him among the multitude.

A Psalme of Dauid.

A The Lord said vnto my lord, a * Syt thou on my righte hand, b * vntyl I make thy ne enemies thy fotstole.

The lord shal sende the rodde of thi power out of Sion, be thou ruler, eue in the myddest among thine enemies.

In the daye of thy power shall thy people offer the fre wyl offeringes, w an holy worship, the dewe of thy byrth is of the wombe of the morninge.

B The lord sware, and wyl not repete: Thou art a preste for euer after the order of Melchisedec.

The lord vpon the right hande, shal smyte euen kynges, in the daye of hys wrath.

He shal be iudge amonge the Heathen, he shall fyl them with deed bodyes, and smite in sonder the heades ouer diuers countres.

He shal drincke of the broke in the waie, therfore shal he c * lift vp his hed.

The Notes

a * To syt on his right hande, is, to haue the same glory of the Godly maiesty that he hath, to rule & gouerne as largely as he doth Ephe. ii. d, whom he set on his righte hande in heauenly thinges, aboue all rule, &c. that is made him equal with him selfe and ruler ouer al thinges.

They haue eares and heare not: noses haue they but they smel not.

They haue handes and handle not, fete haue they but they can not go, nether cā thei speke thorow their throte.

They that made them, are like vnto them and so are al such as put their trust in them.

But let Israel trust in the lord, for he is their succure and defence.

Let the house of Arō put their trust in the lorde, for he is their succour and defence.

They that feare the lord let thē put their truste in the lorde, for he is their succoure and defence. C

The lord is myndful of vs, and[b]* blesseth vs: he blesseth the house of Israel, he blesseth the house of Aaron.

Ye he blesseth all them that feare ẏ lorde, both smal and greate.

The lorde encreas you more and more: you, and your children.

For ye are blessed of the lord, whych made heauen and earth.

The law of thy mouth is dearer vnto me, then thousandes of golde and syluer.

Iod.

K * Thy hādes haue made me & fashioned me. O geue me vnderstanding, y I may learne thy commaundemētes.
They y feare the, wil be glad when they se me, because I put my trust i thy worde.
I knowe, O lord, that thy iudgmētes are ryght, & that thou of very faithfulnesse hast caused me to be troubled.
O let thy mercyful kindnesse be my cōforte, accordynge to the promes that y hast made vnto thy seruaunt.
O let thy louing mercies come vnto me, that I may lyue, for thy law is my delyte.
Let the proude be cōfounded, which handle me so falslye.
But let soch as feare the, and know thy testimonies, be turned vnto me.
O lett my herte be vndefyled in thy statutes that I be not ashamed.

Caph.

L My soule longeth for thy sauinge health, for my trust is in thy word.
Myne eyes longe sore for thy worde, saying: O whē wilt thou comforte mee.
For I am become lyke a botell in y smoke, yet do not I forget thi statutes.
How many are the dayes of thy seruaunt? when wylt thou be auenged of myne aduersaryes?
The proude haue digged pyttes for me, which are not after thy lawe.
Al thy cōmaundementes are true, they persecute me falsli, O be thou my helpe.
They haue almost made an ende of me vpon earthe, but I forsake not thy commaundementes.
O quicken me after thy louing kidnes, & so shall I kepe the testimonyes of thy mouth.

Lamed.

O lord, thy word endureth for euer in heauen.
The trueth also remaineth frō one generation to another: thou hast layed y M foūdacion of the earth, and it abideth.
They continue this daye according to thine ordinaunce, for al thiges serue y.
If my delyte were not in thy lawe, I shulde peryshe in my trouble.
I wyll neuer forget thy commaundements, for with them y quickenest me.
I am thyne, Oh helpe me, for I se be thy commaundementes.
The vngodly laye wayte for me to destroy me, but I cōsidre thi testimonies.
I se y al thinges come to an ende, but thy cōmaundement is exceadig brode.

Mem.

O What loue haue I vnto thy lawe: al the day longe is my talkynge of it. N Thou thorow thy commaundemēt hast made me wiser thē mine enemies, for it is euer by me.
I haue more vnderstādig thē al my teachers, for thy testimonies ar my studi.
Yee I am wyser then the aged, for I kepe thy commaundementes.
I refrayne my fete from euery euyl waye, that I maye kepe thy wordes.
I shryncke not from thy iudgementes, for thou teachest me.
O howe swete are thy wordes vnto my throte: yee more then hony vnto my mouthe.
Thorow thy cōmaūdemētes I get vnderstādig, therfor I hate al false wais. O

Nun.

Thy word is a * lanterne vnto my fete

O fete and a lyght vnto my pathes.
I haue sworne and am steadfastly purposed, to kepe the iudgementes of thy righteousnes.
I am troubled aboue measur, quicken me, O Lorde, accordinge vnto thy worde.
Let the free wyll offerynges of my mouth please the, O Lorde, and teach me thy iudgementes.
14 My soule is alway in my hand, yet do not I forget thy lawe.
The vngodlye haue layede a snare for me, but yet swarue not I from thy commaundementes.
Thy testimonies haue I claymed as myne herritage for euer: and whye they are the very ioye of my herte.
I applye myne herte to fulfyll thy statutes alwaye, euen vnto the ende.

Samech.

p I hate the vngodly, but thy lawe do I loue.
Thou arte my defence and shylde, my trust is in thy woorde.
Awaye fro me, ye wicked, I wyl kepe the commaundementes of my God.
O stablysh me according vnto thy worde, that I may lyue and let me not be disapointed of my hope.
Holde thou me vp, and I shalbe safe: yee I shall euer be talkinge of thy statutes.
Thou treadest downe al them that depart from thy statutes, for they ymagyn but disceate.
Thou puttest awaye al the vngodlye of the earth lyke drosse, therfor I loue thy testimonies.
My flesh trembleth for feare of the, and I am a frayd of thy iudgementes

Ain.

Q I deale with the thing that is lauful and righte, O geue me not ouer vnto myne oppressours.
Be thou suertye for thy sarnaunte, to do hym good, that the proude doo me no wronge.
Myne eyes are wasted awaye with lokyng for thy health, and for the worde of thy ryghtuousnes.
O deale with thy seruaunte according vnto thy louing mercy, and teache my thy statutes.
I am thy seruaunt, O graunte mee vnderstandinge, that I maye knowe thy testimonyes.
It is time for the (O Lorde) to laye to thyne hand, for they haue destroyed thy lawe.
For I loue thy commaundements aboue gold and precious stone.
Ther fore holde I streyght all thy commaundementes, and all false wayes I vtterly abhorre.

Phe.

Thy testimonies are woonderfull, therfore doth my soule kepe them. R
When thy worde goeth forth, it geueth lyght and vnderstandynge, euen vnto babes.
I open my mouth and drawe in my breth, for I desyre thy commaundementes.
O loke thou vpon me, and be mercyful, as thou vsest to do vnto those ŷ loue thy name.
Ordre my goinges after thy woorde that no wickednes raygne in me.
O delyuer me from the wrongeous dealynges of menne, and so shall I kepe thy commaundements.
Shew the lyght of thy countenaunce vnto thy seruaunt and lerne me thy statutes.
Myne eyes guishe out with water because men kepe not thy lawe.

Zade

Righteous arte thou, O Lorde, ād true is thy iudgemente. S Thy testimonies that thou hast comaunded are exceadinge, righteouse and true.
My zele hath euen consumed me, because myne enemyes haue forgotten thy woordes.
Thy worde is tryed to the vttermoast, and thy seruaunte loueth it.
I am small and of noo reputacion yet do not I forgett thy commaundmentes.
Thy rigtuousnes is an euerlastinge rightuousnes, and thy law is true.
Trouble and heuynesse haue taken holde vppon me, yet is my delyght in thy commaundementes.
The rightuousnes of thy testimonies is euerlastinge, O graunte mee vnderstan derstandinge, and I shall lyue.

Koph.

C I call with my whole herte, heare me, O Lorde, I wyl kepe thy statutes.

Yee euen vpon the do I call, helpe me and I shal kepe thy testimonies.

Early in the morninge do I crye vnto the, for in thy worde is my trust

Myne yes preuente the night watches, that I might bee occupyed in thy wordes.

Heare my voyce, O Lord, accordig vnto thy louinge kindnes, quicken me according as thou art wonte.

They drawe nye that of malice persecute me, and are farre from thy lawe.

Be thou nye at hand also, O Lord, for thy promises are faythfull.

As concernynge thy testimonies, I haue knowen euerlins the beginning, that thou hast grounded them for euer.

Res.

O considre myne aduersitie, and delyuer me, for I do not forgett thy la-a we.

Mainteine thou my cause and defe de me, quicken me accordinge vnto thi worde.

Health is farre from the vngodlye for they regarde not thy statutes.

Greate is thy mercye, O Lord, quicken me as thou art wonte.

Many there are that trouble me, & persecute me, yet do not I swarue from thy testimonyes.

It greueth me, when I see, that the transgressours kepe not thy lawe.

Considre, O Lorde, how I loue the commaundementes, O quicken mee wt thy louinge kindnesse.

Thy worde is true from euerlastinge, al the iudgementes of thy righteou snes endure for euer more.

Sin.

b The Prynces persecute me with x outcause, but my herte standeth in awe of thy wordes.

I am as glad of thy worde, as one that findeth great spoyles.

As for lyes, I hate and abhorre the, but thy lawe do I loue.

i Seuen times a day do I prayse the because of thy rightuous iugmentes.

Greate is the peace that they haue whiche loue the lawe, and they are not offended at it.

Lorde I loke for thy sauyng helth, and do after thy commaundementes.

My soule kepeth thy testymonies, and loueth them exceadyngly.

I kepe thy commaundementes and testymonyes, for all my wayes are before the.

Thau.

Let my complaynt come before the,
O Lorde, geue me vnderstanding, acy cordyng vnto thy worde.

Oh let my supplicacyon come before the, deliuer me according to thy promes.

My lippes shal speake of thy prayse, seynge thou hast taught me thy statutes.

Yee my tonge shal syng of thy word, for al thy commaundementes ar right.

Let thyne hande helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes.

I long for thy sauinge health, O lord, and in thy lawe is my delyte.

Oh let my soule lyue and prayse the, that thy iudgmentes may helpe me.

I go astray, like a shep that is lost: Oh seke thy seruaunt, for I do not forget thy commaundementes.

Notes

a To be vndefiled in the waye, is, to lyue in faith that worketh by charitie: and to walke, in the lawe, is to be conuersant in it, & lyue after it.

b Prynces for al maner of rulers, be they temporal or spiritual (as they cal thē) whiche after the outward apperaunce of this world seme most sage & wyse. Such withstode him & spake agaynst hym.

c The waie of trueth is the life yt is ordered after the worde of trueth, which is ordeined in the scripture. Therin sayth Dauid that he hathe walked & not in fayned tradicions & holynes ymagined by him selfe, or by any mortal man. In the same signification useth S. Peter this word. ii. Pet. ii. or ther shalbe false teachers &c. by which ye waye of trueth shalbe euel spoken of &c. d He desyreth to haue an other vnderstanding then that whiche is but manly, which is ignorant of god and of his wil, power, mercy and anger: ye thought it were neuer so well instructed, and taught yet wolde it neuer vnderstāde of it selfe, wout ye spirite of god, yt god is mercyfull righteous & forgeueth sinnes freely wout any deseruinges. Psal. cxiii b.

a* To ŷ chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid. a* Loke the tytle of the iiii. Psalme.

A O Lord, thou searchest me out, and knowest me.
Thou knowest my downe sittyng and myne vprisyng, thou vnderstandest my thoughtes a farre of.
Thou art about my path & aboute my bedd, & spyest out al my wayes.
For lo, there is not a word i my tõge, but ŷ, O Lord knowest it altogether.
Thou hast facioned me behind & before, and layed thine hande vpon me.
Such knowledge is to wonderfull and excellent for me, I can not attaine vnto it.
Whether shall I go then from thy B spirite? or whyther shall I go then frõ thy presence?
If I clime vp into heauẽ, ŷ art there: yf I go downe to hel, ŷ art there also.
If I take the wynges of the mornynge, and remayne in the vttermoste parte of the see: Euen there also shal thy hand leade me, and thy right hande shal hold me.
If I saye: peraduenture the darckenesse shal couer me, then shal my night be turned to daye.
Yee ŷ darcknesse is no darcknes wt ŷ, but the night is as cleare as ŷ daye, ŷ darcknesse & lyght are both alyke.
C For my reynes are thine, thou hast couered me in my mothers wombe.
I wyll geue thankes vnto the, for I am wõderously made: marueilous are thy workes, and that my soule knoweth right well.
My bones are not hyd from the, though I be made secretely, and facyoned be neth in the earth.
Thyne eyes se myne vnparfectnes, they stande al written in the boke: my dayes were fasshioned, whẽ as yet there was not one of them.
How deare are thy councels vnto D me O God? O how greate is the sume of them.
If I tel them they are mo in nomber then the sande: when I wake vp, I am present with the.
Wylt thou not slaye the wycked (Oh god) that the bloudthirsty might departe fro me.
For they speake vnright of ŷ, thine enemies exalt thẽ selues presumptuously.
I hate them, O Lord, that hate the: and I maye not awaye with those that ryse vp agaynst the.
Yee I hate them right sore, therfore are they mine enemyes.
Trye me, O God, and seke the grounde of myne herte: proue me, and examen my thoughtes.
Loke well yf there be any waye of wickednesse in me, b* and leade me in ŷ waye euerlasting.

They sharpẽ their tonges like a serpẽt: adders poyson is vnder their lyppes. Selah.
Kepe me, O Lord, from the handes of the vngodly: preserue me from the wicked men, whych are purposed to ouer throwe my goinges.
The proud haue layed a snare for me: & spred a net abrode wt cordes, yet and set trappes in my waye. b* Selah.
But my saying is vnto the Lord: ŷ B art my God, heare the voyce of my prayer O Lorde.
O Lorde God, thou strength of my health, thou hast couered my head in ŷ daye of battayle.
Let not the vngodly haue his desire, O lord, let hym not haue hys purpose, lest they be to proude. Selah.
Let the myschefe of their owne lippes fal vpon the head of them, that cõpase me about.
Let hote burning c* coales fal vpõ them, let them be cast in to the fyre, & in to the pyt, ŷ they neuer rise vp agayne.
A man ful of wordes shal not prosper vpon the earth: a malycyous and wycked person shalbe hunted awaye, and destroyed.

treuthe & rightuousnes sake.

And entre not into iudgement with thy seruaunt, for in thy syght shall no man lyuynge be iustyfyed.

For the enemye persecuteth my soule, he smyteth my lyfe downe to the groūd he laith me in the darckues, as þ deed, men of the worlde.

Therfore is my sprete vexed within me, and my hert within me is desolate.

Yet do I remembre the tymes past, I muse vpon al thy workes, ye I exer cise my self in the works of thy hādes.

I stretche forth myne handes vnto the my soule cryeth vnto the out of the thyrstye land. Selah.

Heare me, O Lord, & that soone, for my sprete wareth faynte: hyde not thy face fro me, lest I be lyke vnto them þ go downe into the graue.

O let me heare thy louynge kyndnesse by tymes in the a* mornyng, for in the is my trust: shew thou me the way that I shuld walke in, for I lift vp my soul vnto the.

Delyuer me, O Lord, fro mine enemyes, for I resorte vnto the.

Teache me to do the thing that pleaseth the, for thou art my god: let thy louing spryte leade me forth vnto the lande of ryghtuousnes.

Quycke me, O Lord, for thy names sake, and for thy ryghtuousnesse sake brynge my soule out of trouble.

And of thy goodnesse scater mine enemyes abrode, & destroye al men that vexe my soule, for I am thy seruaunt.

Of Dauid.

A Blessed be the lord my refuge, which teacheth my handes to warre, and my fyngers to fight.

My hope and my castell, my defence and my delyuerer, my shylde in whom I trust, which gouerneth the people that is vnder me.

*Lorde what is man, that thou hast soch respect vnto hime? Or the sonne of man, that thou so regardest hime?

*Psal.viii.a

Man is like a thing of naught, his tyme passeth awaye lyke a shadowe.

Bowe thy heauens, O Lord, & a* come downe touche the mountaynes, that they may smoke withall.

Sende forth the lyghtenyng & scater them, shute out thyne b* arowes and consume them.

B Sende downe thyne hande from a boue, delyuer me, and take me out of the greate waters, from the hand of c* straunge chyldren.

Whose mouth talketh of vanite, & their right hand is a right hand of falsed.

That I may synge a new songe vnto the, O god, and synge prayses vnto the vppon a tenstrynged lute.

Thou that geuest vyctory vnto kinges & hast delyuered Dauid thy seruaunt from the parel of the swerde.

C Saue me, & delyuer me from the hande of straunge chyldren, whose mouth talketh of vanite, and their right hand is a right hande of falsede.

That oure sonnes maye growe vp as the yong plantes, & that our daughters may be as the polyshed corners of the temple.

That oure garners may be full and plenteous with al maner of stoare: that our shepe may brynge forth thousandes & hundreth thousandes in our villages.

That our oxe may be strong to labour, that ther be no mischaunce, no decay, & no complaynynge in our stretes.

Happy are the people that be in soch a case: yee blessed are the people, which haue the lorde for their God.

¶ Wysdome is to be embraced & set by. An aduoutrous Woman is to be eschued.

The. ii. Chapter.

A MY sonne, yf thou wylt receaue my wordes, & kepe mi cōmaundemētes by y, y thyne eare maye herkē vnto wysdome applye thyne a * herte then to vnderstandynge. For yf thou cryest after wysdome, & callest for knowledge: yf thou sekeste after her as after money, & dyggest for her as for a treasure: then shalte thou vnderstande the feare of the Lorde, and fynde the knowledge of God. For it is the Lorde y geueth wysdome, oute of his mouth cōmeth knowledge & vnderstandynge.

B He preserueth the welfare of the rightu ous, and defendeth the ȳ walke innocē tly: he kepeth thē in the right path, and preserueth the waye of hys sayncte.
Then shalt thou vnderstande ryghtu= ousnes, iudgement and equitie, ye and euery good pathe. If wisdom entre in= to thyne hert, & thy soule delyte in kno weledge, then shall counsell preserue ȳ and vnderstanding shall kepe ȳ. That thou mayst be delyuered from the euell waye, and from the man that speaketh frowarde thynges. From such as leaue the hyghe streate, and walcke in the C wayes of darckenesse which reioyce in doyng euel, & delite in wicked thinges: b* whose wayes are croked, and theyr pathes sclaunderous. That thou may est be delyuered also from the straunge woman and from her that is not thyn own: which geueth swet wordes, & for= saketh the husbande of her youthe, and forgetteth the couenaunte of her God.
For her house is enclyned vnto death, D and her pathes vnto hell. Al they that go vnto her, come not agayne, nether ta ke they holde of the way of lyfe. That thou mayest walcke in the good waye and kepe the pathes of the rightuous.
For the iust shall c* dwell in the land, and the innocentes shall remayne in it: but the vngodly shalbe roted oute of ȳ lande, and the wicked doers shalbe ta= ken out of it.

The Notes.

a* Herte in the scriptures signifyeth the counsell, en deuoure, intellygence, opinion, affection, thought, and other lyke operacions of the soule, as ye maye perceaue in many places of the scrypture.

b* Whose ways are croked. &c. ȳ is, whome their very lyfe proueth to be offenders.

c* Dwell in the lande. The signification herof is shewed in the Psal. xxxvii.

A The commaundementes of God muste be dilygentlye regarded and obserued.

The .iii. Chapter.

My Sonne, for gette 3 not my lawe, but se that thi ne herte kepe my commaū= dementes. For they shal pro longe the days and yeares of thy lyfe, & bringe the peace. Let mer cy and faythfulnes neuer go from thee: bynde them about thy necke, and wryte thē in ȳ tables of thyne hert. So shalt ȳ fynde fauour & good vnderstandyng in the syghte of God and men. Put thy trust in the Lord with all thyne hert, & leane not vnto thyne owne vnderstan= dyng. In al thy ways haue respect vn= B to hym, & he shall ordre thy goynges.
Be not wyse in thyne owne conceate, but feare the Lorde, and departe from euell: so shall a* thy nauell be whole, & thy bones stronge.

Honour the Lord wyth thy substaun= ce, and with the firstlinges of all thyn encrease: so shal thy barnes be fylled wyth plenteousnes, and thy presses shall flo= we ouer with swet wyne. My sonne, de spyse not the chastenynge of the Lord, neyther fainte when thou art rebuked of hym. *For whome the Lorde loueth hym he chasteneth: and yet delyteth in him, euen as a father in hys owne son= ne. Well is him that findeth wysdom, and obteyneth vnderstandinge, for the gettinge of it is better then anye mar chaūdyse of syluer, and the profyt of it is better then golde. Wysdome is mo= re worth then precious stones, and all C the thinges that thou canst desyre, are not to be compared vnto her. Vpō her ryght hand is long lyfe, and vpon her lefte hande is riches and honour. Her wayes are pleasaunt ways, and all her pathes are peceable. She is a tre of ly= fe to them that laye holde vpō her, and blessed are they that kepe her fast.

Wyth wisdome hath the lorde layd the foundaciō of the earth, and thorow vnderstandinge hath he stablished the heauens. Thorowe his wisdomme the deapthes breake vp, & the cloudes droppe downe of the dew. My son= ne, let not these thynges departe from thyne eyes, but kepe my lawe and my counsel: so shall it be lyfe vnto thy sou le, and grace vnto thy mouthe. Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waye, & thy fote shall not stomble. If thou sle= pest, thou shalt not be afrayd but shalt take thy rest and slepe swetelye.
Thou nedest not to be afrayde of anye sodeyne feare, neyther for the violent pusshing in of the vngodly, when it cō meth. For the Lorde shall besege the, and kepe thy fot that thou be not takē D Refuse not to doo good vnto him that shoulde haue it, so long as thyne hand is able to do it. Say not vnto thy ney boure: go thy waye and come agayn to morow wil I geue the: whet as ÿ hast nowe to geue him.

Intend no hurt vnto thy neigbour seing he hopeth to dwell in rest by the.
Striue not lightly wt any man, where as he hath done the no harme. Folow not a wycked man, and chose none of his wayes: for the lorde abhorreth the froward, but his secrete is amonge the ryghtuous. The curse of the Lorde is in the house of the vngodlye, but he blesseth ÿ dwellynges of ÿ rightuous.
As for the scorneful, he shal lough the to scorne, but he shall geue grace vnto the lowlye. The wyse shall haue honour in possession, but shame is ÿ pro-mocion, that foles shal haue.

¶ Wysdome and her frutes and weys ought to be serued,

The. iiii, Chapter.

A Eare, O ye children, the fatherly exhortacyon, & take good hede, that ye maie ler-ne wysdome. Yee I shal geue you a good rewarde yf ye wyll not forsake my lawe. For when I my selfe was my fathers deare sonne, and tenderly beloued of my mother, he taught me also, sayenge: Let thyne hert receaue mi wordes, kepe mi commaundemẽts, and thou shalt liue.
Get the wisdom, get the vnderstandig forget not the wordes of my mouth, & B shrynke not from them. Forsake her not, and she shal preserue the: loue her, and she shal kepe the. The chefe poynte of wysdome is, that thou be wylling to obtayne wysdom, and before al thy goodes to get the vnderstanding: Make muche of her and she shal promote the: Yee yf thou embrace her, she shal brynge the vnto honoure.

She shal make the a gracious head and garnysh ÿ a* wt a crowne of glory.

Here me sonne and receaue my wor-des, that the yeares of thy lyf maye be many. I wyll shew the, the wayes of wis-dome, and lede the in the right pathes So that yf thou goest therin, there shal no straytnesse hynder the: and when ÿ runnest thou shalt not fal. Take fast hold of doctrin, let her not go kepe her for she is thy lyfe. Come not in the C path of the vngodly, and walke not in the waye of the wycked. Eschue it, & go not therin: departe asyde, and passe ouer by it: For they can not slepe, except they haue fyrst done some mischefe: nether take they any rest, excepte they haue fyrst done some harme. For they eate the bred of wyckednesse, and drincke the wyne of robbery: The path of the ryghtuous shyneth as the lyghte, and is euer brighter and brighter vnto the parfect day. But the way of ÿ vngodly is as ÿ darcknes, wherin D men fal, or they be a warre. My sonne, marcke my wordes, & enclyne thyne ea-re vnto my sayinges. Let them not departe from thyne eyes, kepe them euen in the myddest of thyne herte. For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynde them, & health vnto all their bodyes.
Kepe thyne herte with all dilygẽce, for there vpon hangeth life. Put away from the a frowarde mouth, and let the lyppes of sclaunder be farre from the.
Let thyne eyes beholde the thynge ÿ is ryghte, & let thyne eye liddes loke straight before ÿ. Pondre the path of thy fete, so shal al thy ways be sure.
Turne not a syde, nether to the b* right hand nor to the left, but with hold thy fote from euell.

a* That is, with great and syngular honoure, as after in the. xii. a. b* By the right hand is vnderstande the false & wycked confidence in workes, & by ÿ left, desperacio. To turne aside or adde to the right hãd is, to adde ÿ to ÿ word of god, which god neuer cõmaunded. To turne asyde or bow to the left hande is, to take away from the worde of god, or to do that which is forbidde. As it is written in Deuter. xxviii. b. & Iosue. xxiii. b.

¶ He warneth to eschue & fle whordom. He forbyd-deth prodigalitye & wastfull spendyng. He willeth vs to lyue of oure owne laboures. Men must loue their wyues.

My sonne, geue hede vnto my wysdome, and bowe E thyne Eare vnto my prudence: that thow mayeste regarde good councell, & ÿ thy lyppes maye kepe nourtoure.
For the lyppes of an harlot are a droppynge honye combe, and her throte is softer then oile. But at ÿ last she is as bytter as worm wod, and as sharp as a two edged swerde. Her fete goo dow ne vnto deth, and her steppes perse tho row vnto hell. She regardeth not the B path of lyfe, so vnstedfast are her wais, that thou canst not knowe them. Hea re me therfore (O my sonne) and depar te not from the wordes of my mouthe.

Kepe thy waye farre from her, and com not nye the doores of her house. That thou geue not a* thyn honor vnto an other and thy yeres to the cruell. That other men be not fylled wyth thy goodes, & that thy labours com not in a straung house. Ye that thou mourne not at the last (when thou hast spente thy bodye & goodes) and then saye: Alas, why hated I nourtoure? why dyd my hert de C spyse correccion? wherfor, was not I obedient vnto the voyce of my techers, and herkned not vnto them that infor med me? I am comme almoost into all mysfortune, in the myddest of the multitude and congregation. b* Drinke of the water of thine owne wel, and of the ri uers that runne out of thine owne spri ges. c* Let thy welles flowe out abroa de, that there maye be ryuers of water in the streates: but let them be only thy ne owne, and not straungers wyth the.

Let thy well be blessed, and be glad D with the wyfe of thy youth. Louynge is the hynde, and frendly is the Ro: let her brestes alwaye satisfye the, and hol de the euer content wyth her loue. My sonne, why wylt thou haue pleasure in an harlott, and embrase the bosome of Iob.xxxiiii. xxxiiii.c. another woman? *For euery mans wai es are open in the syght of the Lorde, & he pondereth all theyr goynges. The wyckednes of the vngodly shall catch hym self, and with the snares of his ow ne synnes shall he be trapped. Because he woulde not be refourmed, he shall dye: & for hys greate folyshnes he shal be destroyed.

The notes.

a* That is, thy substaunce. b* That is holde thy onelye to thyne owne wyfe.
c* That is, let thy chyldren come out of thy howse wyth honour and not as bastardes.

¶ The slouthfull and sluggish is prycked and styr-red to worke: The scismatike is reproued. Aduoutrye ought to be earnestly auoyded.

My sonne, yf thou be suertye for A thy neyghboure, yf hast fast-ned thyne hand wyth a nother man: ye thou arte bounde with thyne owne wordes, & take with thine owne speache. Therfore, my sonne, do thys: dyscharge thy selfe, for thou art come i to thy neyghboures daunger. Goo thy waye then soone, and intreate thy neighbour: let not thine eyes slepe nor thyne eye lyddes slomber. Saue thy selfe as a doue from the hand, and as a byrd from the hand of the fouler. Go to the Emmet (thou slogard) concider her wayes, and lerne to be wyse. She hath no gyde, no teacher, no leder: yet i the Sommer she prouydeth her meate and gathereth her fode together in the haruest. *How longe wilt thou slepe, thou slo B gysh man? whē Wilt thou aryse out of thy slepe? Yee slepe on styl a lytel, slomber a lytle, fold thyne handes to gether yet a lytle that thou mayest slepe: so shal po-uerty come vnto the as one that trauay-leth by the waye, and necessyte lyke a weapened man. A dissembling person, a wycked man goeth wyth a frowarde mouth, he wyncketh wt his eyes, he to keneth wt his fete, he poynteth wt hys fyngers he is euer ymagenynge myschef and frowardnesse in his hert, and causeth discord. Therfore shal his des truccion come hastely vpon him, sodely shal he be al to broken, & not be healed.

There be sixe thinges which the Lord hateth, and the seuenth he vtterly abhorreth: A proude loke, a dyssemblyng tong, handes that shed innocent bloud, an hert that goeth about wt wic kede ymagynacions, fete that be swyft in rennyng to do myschefe, a false wyt-nesse that bryngeth vp lyes, & such one as soweth dyscord among brethrē. My C sonne kepe thi fathers cōmaundementes, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother.
Put thē vp together in thine hert, and bynd thē about thy necke. That they maye leade the where thou goest, preserue the whē thou art a slepe, and that whē thou awakest, thou mayst talk of thē. For the cōmaundemēt is a lanterne, & the lawe a lyght: ye chastenyng & nourtoure is the waye of lyfe: that they may kepe the fro euel woman, & from the flatteryng tong

of the harlot: y thou lust not after her beuty in thyne hert, & lest thou be takẽ w her fayre lokes. An harlot wil make a man to begge his bred, but a maried womã wyll hunt for y precyous lyfe.
Maye a man take fyre in his bosome, & his clothes not be brẽt? Or cãone go vpõ hoate coales, & his fete not be hur te? Euen so, whosoeuer goeth in to his neyghbours wyfe, and toucheth her can not be vngiltye. Men do not vtterli de spise a thefe that stealeth to satisfie his soule, when he is hongre: but if he may be gottẽ, he restoreth agayne seuen ty mes as moche, or els he maketh recõp ense with all y good of his house. But who so cõmitteth aduoutri w a womã, he is a foole, and bringeth his life to de B struccyon. He getteth him selfe also shame and dishonoure, such as shal ne uer be put out. For y gelousy & wrath of the man wyl not be intreated, no tho ugh thou woldest offer hym greate gyf tes to make amẽdes, he wil not receaue them.

¶ God ought to be feared and honoured: his commaundementes ought to be kept: Wanton appetytes and desyres ought to be shonned.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

A My sonne, kepe my wordes, and laye vp my commaundemẽtes by the. Kepe my commaunde mẽtes and my lawe, euen as the apple of thyne eye, and thou shalt lyue. Bind them vpon thy fyngers, and wryte thẽ in the table of thine hert. Saye vn to wysdome: thou art my syster, & call vnderstondyng thy kynswoman: * y she maye kepe the from the straunge woman, and from the harlot which ge B neth swete wordes. For out of y wyn dowe of my house I loked thorow the trealesse, and beheld the simple people, and among other yonge folkes I spy ed one yonge foole goyng ouer y stre tes, by the corner in the waye towarde the harlottes house in the twylight of the euenyng, when it be ganne now to be nyght and darcke. * And beholde there met him a woman in an harlot tes apparell (a dysceatfull, waton & an vnstedfast womã: whose fete coud not abyde in y house, now is she without, now in the stretes, and lurketh i euery corner) she caught y yonge man, kyssed hym, and was not a shamed, saying: I C had a vowe to paye, and thys daye I perfourme it. Therfore came I forth to mete the, that I myght seke thy face and so haue I founde the. I haue dec ket my bed with coueringes & clothes of Egypt. My bed haue I made to smel of Myrre, Aloes, and Cynamon.
Come, let vs lye togther, and take our pleasure tyl it be daye lyght. For the good man is not at home, he is gonne farre of. He hath taken the bagge of mony w him: who cã tell when he com meth home? Thus with many swete wordes she ouercame hym, and wyth D her flatterynge lyppes she wann hym.
Immedyatly he folowed her, as it were an oxe led to the slauter (and like as it were to the stockes, where folcs ar punished) so long tyl she had wounded hys lyuer with her dart: lyke as if a bir de hasted to the snare, not knowyng y the parell of his lyfe lyeth there vpon.
Heare me now therfore, O my sonne, & marcke the wordes of my mouth. Let not thine hert wander in her wayes. & be not thou dysceaued in her pathes.
For many one hath she wounded and cast dowue, ye many a strong mã hath she slayne. Her houses is the waye vnto hel, where men go downe into y chambers of death.

¶ The. viii. Chapter

Doth not wisdom crie? doth I not vnderstanding put for th her voice? Stãdeth she not in the hye places in the stretes and wayes? doth she not crye before the whole cytie, and in the gates where men go out & in?
It is you, O ye mẽ (sayeth she) whome I cal, Unto you (O ye children of mẽ) lyft I vp my voyce. Take hede vnto knowledge, O ye ignorauunt, be wyse in hert, O ye foles. Geue eare, for I wyll speake of greate matters, and opẽ my lyppes to tel thinges that be right. For my throte shalbe talking of the trueth, & my lyppes abhorre vngodlynesse. All the wordes of my mouth are ryghtu ous, there is no frowardnesse nor fal sede therin. They are all playne to such as wyll vnderstande, and ryghte to them that fynde knowledge.

Receaue my doctrine therfore, and not syluer: and my knowledg, more thẽ fine golde. For wysdome is more worth thẽ precous stones, ye al ẏ thīges ẏ ẏ canst desyre, are not to be compared vnto it.
I wysdome haue my dwellynge wt knowledge, & prudent councel is mine owne. With me is the feare of the Lord, and the eschuuyng of euel. As for pryde, dysdayne, & euell waye, and B a mouth that speketh wicked thinges, I vtterly abhorre them. I can geue councell, and be a gyde: I haue vnder standing, I haue strength. Thorow me, kinges reygne: thorow me, prīces make iust lawes. Thorow me, Lordes beare rule, and all iudges of the earth execute iudgement. I am louynge vnto thosse that loue me, and they that seke me early shal fynde me. Riches & honoure are with me, yee excellent goo des and ryghtuousnes. My frute is better then golde and precious stone, and myne encrease more worth thẽ fine syluer. I walke in the waye of ryghtu ousnes, and in the strete of iudgement.
That I maye send prosperite to those C that loue me, and to encrease their trea sure. * The Lorde him selfe had me in possessyon in the beginnyng of his wa yes, or euer he beganne his workes a fore tyme. I haue bene ordened frō euerlasting, and from the begynninge or euer the earth was made. When I was borne, there were nether depth-es nor springes of water. Before ẏ foundacions of the mountaynes were layed, ye before al hylles was I borne The earth and al that is vpon ẏ earth was not yet made, no not the groūd it selfe. For when he made the heauens, I was present: when he set vp the dep-thes in order: whē he hanged the clou D des about: when he fastened ẏ springes of the depe: When he shut the see with in certayne boundes, that the waters shuld not go ouer their marckes. Whē he layed the foundacions of the earthe.
I was wt him, ordring al things, dely ting dayly, & reioisīg al ways before hī.
As for ẏ round compase of this world I make it ioiful: for my delit is to be a mōg ẏ childrē of men. Therfore harkē vnto me, O ye childrē, for blessed are they ẏ kepe my wayes. O geue eare vn to nurtoure, be wyse, and refuse it not.
Blessed is the man ẏ heareth me, watching dayly at my gates, and geuyng attendaunce at the posts of my dores.
For who so fyndeth me, fyndeth lyfe, & shal obtayne fauour of the Lord. But who so offendeth agaynst me, hurteth his owne soule. Al they ẏ hate me, are the louers of death.

ÿ mouth of ÿ folysh, is nye destruccyõ.
The ryche mannes goodes are hys stronge holde, but pouertie oppresseth the poore.
The rightuouse laboureth to do good but the vngodly vseth his encrease vn to synne. To take hede vnto ÿ chas tening of nurtoure, is the waye of lyfe: but he that refusethe to be refoormed, goeth wronge. Dessembling lyppes kepe hatred secretly, & he that speaketh any sclaunder, is a foole: Where mo ch bablyng is, there must nedes be offence: he that refrayneth his lyppes is wysest of al. An innocẽt tõg is a noble tresur, but ÿ hert of the vngodlyis nothyng worth. The lyppes of ÿ righ tuous fede a whole multitude, but fo-les shal dye in theyr owne foly. The blessynge of the Lord maketh rich mẽ, as for careful trauaile, it doth nothing therto. A fole doth wickedly & ma-keth but a sporte of it: neuerthelesse it is wysdom for a man to beware of soch.
The thinge that the vngodlye are afrayed of, shall come vpon them, but ÿ righteuous shal haue their desire.
The vngodly is lyke a tẽpest that pas seth ouer, & is no more sene, but ÿ rightuous remayneth sure for euer. As vine ger is to the tethe, and as smoke is vn D to the eyes, eue so is a slougish persõne to thẽ ÿ sende him forth. The feare of ÿ Lord maketh a long lyfe, but the yea res of the vngodly shalbe shortened.
The paciẽt abydyng of the righteous shalbe turned to gladnes, but the hope of the vngodly shal perysh. The waye of the lord geueth corag vnto ÿ godly, but it is a feare for wicked doers. The righteous shal neuer be ouerthrowne, but the vngodly shal not remayne in the land. The mouth of ÿ iuste wylbe talkynge of wisdome, but the tonge of the frowarde shal perish. The lyppes of the ryghteous ar occupyed in accep table thynges, but the mouth of the vn godly taketh them to the worst.

D him selfe. Who so hoordeth vp hys corne, shalbe cursed among the people: but blessinge shall lyghe vpon his head ỹ selleth it. He that laboreth for honestie fyndeth hys desyre: but who so seketh after mischef, it shal happen vn to hym. He that trusteth in his riches, shall haue a fall, but the rightous shal florish as the greane leafe.

Who so maketh disquietnes in his owne house, he shallhaue wynd for hys heritage, and the foole shalbe seruaunt to the wyse. A A Wyse woman vpholdethe her househ, ut a folish wyfe plucketh it downe whoo so feareth the lord, walketh in the right path: & regardeth not him that abhorreth the wayes of ẏ Lorde. In the mouth of the folysh is ẏ boastinge of Lordshyppe, but the lyp pes of the wyse wyll be ware of suche.
Where no a* oxen are, there the crybbe is emptie: but wheare the oxen laboure there is moch frute. A faythfull wyt nesse wyll not dissemble, but a false re corde wyll make a lye. A scornefull bo dy seketh wysdome, and fyndeth it not: but knowledg is easye to come by, vn to hym that wyl vnderstand. Se that thou meddle not with a foole, and doo as though thou haddeste no knowled ge. The wysdom of hym that hath vn derstanding is, to take heade vnto hys waye, but the folyshnes of the vnwyse deceaueth. Foles make but a sporte of synne, but ther is fauorable loue amōg the rightuous. The herte of hym that hath vnderstādīg wyll nether dyspay re for any sorowe, nor be to presumptu ous for anye soden ioye.
B The houses of the vngodly shall be ouerthrowne, but the tabernacles of ẏ ryghtuous shall so floryshe. There is a b* waye which some men thynke to bee ryght, but the ende therof leadeth vn to death. The herte is sorowfull euen in laughter, & the ende of myrth is he uynesse. An vnfaythfull personne shal be fylled wyth hys owne wayes, but a good man wyll beware of suche. An ignoraunt body beleueth all thynges but who so hath vnderstādinge, loketh well to hys goynges. A wyse man fea reth, and departeth from euell: but a fo le goeth on presumptuouslye. An vn pacient man dealeth folyshlye, but he ẏ is well aduised, doth otherwayes. The ignoraunte haue folyshnes in possessi on, but the wyse are crowned wt know ledge. The euel shal bowe them selues before the good, and the vngodly shall C wayte at the doores of the rightuous.
The pore is hated eue of his owne ney bours, but the rych hath many frendes.
Who so despyseth his neyghboure, doth amis: but blessed is he ẏ hath pyte of the pore. They ẏ imagin wickednes, shall be disapointed: but they that mu se vppon good thynges, vnto such shal happen mercy and faythfulnesse. Dily gent laboure bryngeth ryches, but wher many vayne woordes are, truly ther is scarcenesse. Ryches are and ornamente vnto the wyse, but ẏ ignoraunce of ẏ fo les is very folyshnes. A faythfull wyt nes delyuereth soules, but a lyer decea ueth them. The feare of the Lorde is a strong holde, for vnto hys he wyll be a sure defence. The feare of the Lord is a wel of lyfe, to auoyde the snarys of deth. The increase & prosperitie of ẏ co D mens is ẏ kynges honour, but ẏ decay of the people is ẏ confusyon of the prin ce. Pacience is a token of wysdom, but wrath and hastie displeasure is a toke of folyshnes. A mery hert is the lyfe of the body, but rancour consumeth awai the bones. He ẏ doth a pore mā wrong, blasphemeth hys maker: but who so hõ th pytie of the poore, doth honoure vn to God. The vngodly is afrayd of eue ry parel, but ẏ rightuous hath a good hope euen in deathe. Wysdome resteth in the herte of hym that hath vnderstā ding, and he wyll teache them that are vnlerned. Righteousnes setteth vp the E people, but wickednes bryngethe folke to destruction. A discreate seruant, is a pleasur vnto the kynge, but one that is honest prouoketh hym vnto wrathe.

A Softe answer putteth downe A displeasur, but frowarde wor des prouoke vnto anger. A wyse tong commendeth knowledge, a foo lysh mouth blabbeth out nothynge but folyshnes.

The

The eyes of the Lorde loke ouer eue-ry place, both vpō the good and badd.
A wholsome tonge is a tree of lyfe, but he that abuseth it, hathe a broken minde. A foole despiseth his fathers correccion, but he that taketh hede whā he is reproued shall haue the moare vnderstandynge.
In the house of the rightuous are B greate ryches, but in ẏ increase of ẏ vn godly ther is mysordre. A wisemouth poureth oute knowledge, but the herte of the folysh doth not so. The lorde abhorreth the sacrifyce of the vngodly but the prayer of the ryghtuous is ac ceptable vnto him. The waye of the vngodly is ā abhominaciō vnto ẏ lord, but who so folowethe rightuousnes, him he loueth. He that forsaketh ẏ right strete, shalbe sore punyshed: and who so hateth correccion, falleth in to death: The hel wher paine is know ne vnto the Lord, how moch more then the hertes of men? A scornful bodye loueth not one that rebuketh hym, nether wyll he come amonge the wise.
A mery herte maketh a chearfull coun tenaunce, but an vnquyet mynde ma-keth it heuy. A wyse hart wyll seke after knowledge, but the mouthe of fooles medleth with foolyshnesse.
All the dayes of the poore are mysera-ble, but a quyete herte, is as a continu all feast. Better is a lytle wt the feare of the lorde then greate treasure, for they are not withoute sorowe. Better is a messe of potage wt loue, then a fat oxe with euel wyll.
C An angri man stereth vp strife, but he ẏ is pacient stylleth discorde. The waye of ẏ slouthfull is ful of thornes, but ẏ strete of ẏ rightuous is wel clen sed. A wyse sonne maketh a glad fa ther, but an vndiscrete body shamethe his mother. A fole reioyseth in foo-lishe thinges, but a wyse man lokethe well to his owne goinges. Unaduysed thoughtes shal come to naught, but where as men are that can geue councel, there is stedfastnesse. O how ioyfull a thynge is it, a man to ge ue a conuenient answere? O howe pleasaunt is a worde spoken in du sea son. The waye of lyfe leadethe vnto heauen, that a man shulde be ware of hell beneth.
The Lorde wyl breake downe ẏ hou D se of ẏ proude, but he shal make fast ẏ borders of ẏ widdow. The lord ab-horreth the ymaginaciōs of ẏ wicked, but pure wordes are pleasaūt vnto hi.
The couetous mā roteth vp his owne house, but who so hateth rewardes, shal liue. A rightuous mā museth in his minde how to do good, but the mynde of ẏ vngodly ymagineth, how he may do harme. The lorde is farre from the vngodly, but he heareth ẏ prayer of ẏ rightuous. Lyke as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth ẏ herte, so dothe a good name fede the bones. The eare that herkneth vnto wholsome warnig, and enclineth therto, shal dwel among the wise. He that refuseth to be refour med, despyseth his owne soule: but he that submitteth him selfe to correccyon, is wyse.

The .xvi. Capter.

The feare of the Lorde is ẏ A ryght scyence of wysdome, & lowlynes goeth before ho nour.  A man may well purpose a thynge in hys herte, but the answere of the tonge cōmeth of the Lorde. A mā thinketh al his wayes to be cleane, but it is the lord ẏ fashioneth the myndes. Cōmytte thy workes vnto ẏ Lorde, and loke what thou deuysest, it shall pros-pere. The lorde doth al thynges for his owne sake, yee & when he kepeth ẏ vngodly for the daie of wrath. The lorde abhorreth all presumptuous & proude hertes, ther may nether stregth B ner power escape. With louynge mercy, & faithfulnesse synnes be forge uen, and who so feareth the Lorde es-chueth euell. Whē a mās wayes please the lorde, he maketh hys verye ene-myes to be hys frendes. Better is it to haue a lytle thynge wt rightuous, then great rentes wrōgously gottē. A mā de uyseth a way in his hert, but it is ẏ lord ẏ ordereth hys goinges. When the prophecy is in ẏ lippes of the king, his mouth shal not go wrong in iudgment.
A true measure & a true balaunce are at the Lordes, he maketh al weyghtes.

A It is a greate abhominacyō when kin ges are wicked, for a kinges seate shul de beholden vp wt rightuousnesse.
Ryghtuous lyppes are pleasaunte vn to kynges, and they loue hym ÿ speaketh ÿ trueth. The kynges displeasure is a messaūger of death, but a wise man will pacifye hym. The cherefull countenaunce of ÿ kyng is lyfe, & his louynge fauoure is as ÿ euenyng dewe. To haue wisdome in possessiō is better then golde, and to get vnder standinge, is more worth then syluer.
The path of the ryghtuous eschuethe euel, & who so loketh wel to his waies, kepeth his owne soule. Presumptu ousnes goeth before destruccio, and af ter a proude stomake there foloweth a fall. Better is it to be of humble mynde with the lowly, then to deuyde the spoyles wt the proude. He that handleth a matter wysely, opteyneth good: & blessed is he, ÿ putteth his trust in the Lorde. Who so hath a wyse vn derstandynge, is called to councel: but he ÿ can speake fayre getteth more ry ches. Understandyng is a wel of lyfe C vnto him that hath it, as for the chaste ning of foles, it is but folyshnes. The hert of the wise enfourmeth hys mouth, & amendeth the doctrine in his lyppes.
Fayre wordes are an hony combe, a re freshyng of the mynde, & health of the bones. There is a waye ÿ men thinc ke to be right, but the ende therof lea-deth vnto death. A troublous soule disquietethe her selfe, for her owne mouth hath brought her therto. An vn godly personne stereth vp euel, and i his lips he is as an whote burnīg fyre: A frowarde body causeth stryfe, & he ÿ ys a blabbe of his tonge, maketh de-uysyon amounge Princes. A wycked man begileth his neighbour, & leadeth D him the waye ÿ is not good. He ÿ wyncketh with hys eyes, ymagyneth myschefe: & he that byteth his lippes, wyll do some harme. Age is a crow ne of worship, yf it be founde in ÿ way of ryghtuousnes. A pacient man is bet ter then one stronge: & he ÿ cā rule him selfe, is more worth then he ÿ wynneth a cytye: The lottes are cast i to the lappe, but their fall standethe in the Lorde.

*Of this ye haue before in the .x. Chap. b.

The .xvii. Chapter.

Better is a drye morsel with A quietnesse, then a ful house a many fat catel with strife.
*A discrete seruaunte shal haue more rule then ÿ son-nes ÿ haue no wysdome, & shall haue like heritage with the brethrē. Like as siluer is tried in the fire & golde in ÿ fornace, euē so doth ÿ Lord proue the hertes. A wicked body holdeth moch of false lippes, & a dessemblīg persōne geueth eare to a deceatfull tōge.
*Who so laugheth the pore to scorne, blasphemeth his maker: & he ÿ is glad of another mās hurt, shal not be vnpu nished. Chylders chyldren are a wor shyppe vnto the elders, & the fathers arē the honour of ÿ children. An elo quent speach be cōmethe not a foole, a dessembling mouth also besemeth not a prince. Liberalyte is a precious B stone vnto him that hath it, for where soeuer he becōmeth, he prospereth.
Who so couereth an other mans offence, seketh loue: but he that discloseth the faute, settethe frendes at variaunce. One reprofe doth more good to him ÿ hath vnderstādinge, then an C. stripes vnto a foole. A sedicious personne seketh myschefe, but a cruel messaūger shalbe sente agaynste hym.
It were better to come agaynst a she Bere robbed of her whelpes, then a-gaynst a foole, in his folyshnes.
*Who so rewardeth euell for good, the plage shal not depart frō his house He ÿ soweth discorde & stryfe, is like one ÿ diggeth vp a water broke: but ā opē enemy is like ÿ water ÿ breakethe out & rēneth abroade. The lord hateth C as wel him ÿ iustifieth ÿ vngodli, as hi ÿ cōdēpneth ÿ innocēt. What helpeth it to geue a foole money in his hād, wher as he hath no mīd to by wisdō: He is a frēde ÿ al way loueth, & i aduersyte a mā shal know who is his brother: who so promiseth by ÿ hād, & is surety for a nother, he is a foole. He ÿ loueth strife, deliteth in synne: and who so setteth his dore to hye, seketh after a fall.

Who so hath afrowarde herte opteineth no good: & he ẏ hath an ouerth warte tonge, shall fall in to myschefe.
An vnwise body bryngeth him selfe into sorowe, and the father of a foole can haue no ioye. A merye herte ma keth a lustye corage, but a sorowfull mynde dryeth vp the bones. The vn godly taketh giftes out of the bosom, to wreste the wayes of iudgment.
Wysdome shyneth in the face of hym that hath vnderstandynge, but the eyes of fooles wandre thorow out all lan des. An vndiscrete sonne is a grefe vnto his father, & an heuynesse vnto his mother that bare hym. To punish the innocent, & to smyte the princes ẏ geue tru iudgment, ar both euel.
*He is wyse & discrete, ẏ tempereth his wordes: & he is a man of vnderstã dinge, ẏ maketh moch of his sprete: Yet a very foole (when he holdeth his tonge) is counted wyse, and to haue vn derstanding, when he shutteth his lip pes.

The.xviii.Chapter.

in euery thynge. A foole hath no delyte in vnderstã dynge, but onelye in those thynges wherin his hert reioyseth.
Where vngodlynes is, there is also disdayne: and so there foloweth shame and dishonoure: The wordes of a mãs mouth are lyke depe waters, and the well of wysdome is lyke a full streame.
It is not good to a*regarde the personne of the vngodly, or to put backe the righteous in iudgemente. A fooles lyppes are euer brawling, & his mouthe prouoked vnto battayll. A fooles mouth is his owne destruccion, & his B lyppes are ẏ snare for his owne soule.
The wordes of a sclaunderer are very woundes, & go thorow vnto ẏ ynmost partes of the body. Who so is slouth ful & slacke in his laboure, is ẏ brother of him that is a waster. The name of the Lorde is a strõge castel, the righ teous flyeth vnto it, & shalbe saued.
But ẏ rych mans goodes are his strõg holde, yee he taketh them for an hy wal rounde about him. After pryde cõmeth C destruccyõ, & honour after lowlynes.
*He ẏ geueth sentẽce in a matter be to be cõfounded. A good stomacke driueth awaye a mans disease, but whẽ the sprete ys vexed, who maye a bide it? A wysse herte laboureth for knowledge, & a prudente eare seketh vnderstandynge. Liberalyte bryn-geth a man to honour & worshipe, and setteth hĩ among great men. The righ tuous accuseth him selfe first of al, yf his neyghboure come, he shal fynde hĩ. D The lot pacifieth ẏ variaunce, & par teth the mightie a sunder. The vnite of brethren is stronger then a castel, & they ẏ holde together are like the barre of a palace. A mans bely shalbe satisfyed with ẏ frut of hys own mouth, and with ẏ encrease of his lippes shal he be fylled. Death and lyfe stãd in ẏ power of the tonge, he that loueth it, shal enioye the frute therof. Who so fyndeth a wyfe fyndeth a good thing and receaueth an whollsome benefite of ẏ Lord: The poore maketh suppli cacyon and prayeth mekely, but ẏ rich geueth aurough answere. A frende ẏ delyteth in loue, doth a mã more frẽdshipe, & sticketh faster vnto him then a brother.

The.xix.Chapter.

Better is the poore ẏ liueth godly, A then the blasphemer that is but a fole. Where no discrecion is, there the soule is not well: & who so is swyfte ons fote, stõbleth hastely. Folishnesse maketh a mã to go out of his waye, and then is his herte vnpacient agaynste the Lorde. Ryches make many frendes, but the poore is forsakẽ of his owne frendes. A false witnesse shall not remayne vnpunished, & he ẏ speaketh lyes shall not escape. The multitude hangeth vpon greate men, & euery man fauoureth him ẏ geueth rewardes. As for the poore, he is ha ted amonge all hys brethrẽ: yee his ow ne frẽdes forsake him, & he that geueth credẽce vnto wordes, getteth nothing.
He ẏ is wyse, loueth his own soule:

and who so hath vnderstanding, shall prospere. A false witnesse shal not re mayne vnpunyshed, and he that speaketh lyes shal perishe. Delicate ease becommeth not a foole, much more vn semelye is it, a bonde man to haue the rule of princes. A wyse man putteth of displeasure, and it is his honour to let some fautes passe. The kynges disfauour is lyke the roaring of a Lyõ, but his frendshyp is like the dewe vpõ the grasse. An vndiscrete sonne is ye heuynes of his father, and a brauling wyfe is like ye topp of an house, where thorow it is euer droppyng.
House and ryches maye a mã haue by ye herytage of his elders, but a discrete woman is the gyft of the Lord.
Slouthfulnes bryngeth slepe, and an ydel soule shall suffer honger.
C Who so kepeth the cõmaundement, ke peth his owne soule: but he yt regardeth not his waye, shal dye. He ye hath pitie vpon ye poore, lendeth vnto the Lord: and loke what he layeth out, it shal be payed him agayne. Chasten thy sonne while ther is hope, but let not thi soule be moued to slaye him. For grate wrath bryngeth harme, therfore let him go, and so mayest thou teach hym more nurtoure.
O geue eare vnto good councell, & be content to be reformed, yt yu mayst be wyse here after. There are many de uyces in a mans hert, neuer theles the coũcel of the Lord shal stande. It is a D mans worshipe to do good, and better it is to be a poore man, then a dyssembler. The feare of the Lorde preser ueth the life, yee it geueth plentuous-nes, without ye vysytacion of any plag.
A slouthful body shutteth hys hand in ter hede: and yf thou reprouest one ye hath vnderstanding, he wyl be ye wiser.

He ye hurteth his father or shutteth out his mother, is a shamefull and an vnworthy sonne. My sonne, heare no-more the doctrine ye leadeth the awaye from ye wordes of vnderstanding.
A false witnes laugheth iudgement to scorne, and ye mouth of the vngodly eateth vp wickednes. Punishmentes are ordened for the scorneful, and stry-pes for fooles backes.
a * Of this is spoke in the xvi. Chapter. b

The.xx. Chapter.

Wyne is a voluptuous thin ge, and dronckenes causeth A sediciõ: who so delyteth ther in, shal nether be wyse.
The kynge ought to be feared as the roaring of a lyon, who so prouoketh hi vnto anger, offendeth agaynst hys o-wne soule. It is a mãs honour to kepe hym self from stryfe, but they ye haue pleasure in brawlinge, are fooles euery one. A slouthful body will not go to plow for cold, therfore shal he go a beg gyng in Sommer, & haue nothing.
Wyse counsell in ye hert of mã is like a water in ye depe of ye earthe, but he ye hath vnderstanding, bryngeth it forth.
Many ther be yt are called good doers, but where shall one fynde a true faithful mã? Who so ledeth a godly & an in B nocent lyfe, happie shal his childrẽ be whom he leaueth behynde hym. A kynge that sytteth in iudgment, and loketh well aboute hym, dryueth away all euell. * Who can saye: my herte is cleane, I am innocẽt frõ synne.
To vse two maner of weightes, or two maner of measures, both these ar abho mynable vnto the Lorde. A chylde is knowne by his conuersacyon, whether his workes be pure & ryght.
As for the hearynge of the eare & the syght of ye eye, the Lord hath made the both. Delyte not thou in slepe, lest thou come vnto pouerte: but opẽ thine eyes, & thou shalt haue bred ynough.
It is naught, It is naught (say men) when they haue it, but when it is gone they geue it a good word. A mouth of vnderstanding is more worth then golde, many precious stones, & costly Iewels. Take his garmẽt that is suertye for a straunger, & take a pledge of hym for the vnknowne mans sake.
Euery mã liketh the bred that is gotten wyth disceate, but at the last hys mouth shalbe filled with grauell.
Thorow councell the thinges that men deuyse go forwarde: and wyth discrecion ought warres to be taken i hande hande. Medle not with him that bewrayeth secretes, and is a sclaunderer, and disceaueth with his lippes. Who so curseth hys father and mother, hys light shalbe put out in the myddest of darcknesse. The herytage that cömeth D to hastely at the fyrst, shal not be prayfsed at the ende. Saye not thou: I wyl recompence euel, but put thou thy trust in the Lord, and he shal defende the. The Lorde abhorreth two maner of weyghtes, and a false balaunce is an euel thinge. The Lord ordereth euery manes goinges, for what is he, that vnderstandeth his owne wayes?

It is a snare for a man to blaspheme ẏ which is holy, and then to go about wt vowes. A wyse kynge destroyeth ẏ vngodlye, and bryngeth the whele ouer them. The lanterne of the Lord is the breth of man, and goeth thorow all the inward partes of the body. Mercy and faithfulnes preserue the kyng, and wt louinge kyndnes his seate is holden vp. The strength of yonge men is their worship, and a graye head, is an honour vnto ẏ aged. Woundes driue awaye euel, and so strypes the inward partes of the body.

The .xxi. Chapter.

The kynges hert is iṅ hand 3 of the Lorde, lyke as are ẏ ryuers of water: he maye turne it whither so euer he wil. Euery man thincketh his owne waye to be right, but the lord iudgeth the hertes. To do righteous-nesse and iudgemente is more acceptable to the Lord then sacrifice. A presumptuous loke, a proude stomacke, & the lanterne of the vngodly is synne.
The deuyces of one that is dilygente, bryng plenteousnes: but he that is vn aduysed, commeth vnto pouerte.
Who so hoordeth vp ryches with the disceatfulnes of his tong, he is a foole, and lyke vnto thē that seke their owne death. The robberies of the vngodly shal be their owne destruccion, for they wold not do the thyng that was right The wayes of the froward are stra unge, but the workes of hym that is cleane, are ryght.

* It is better to dwel iṅ a corner vnder B the house toppe, then wt a brawlyng wo man in a wyde house. The soule of the vngodly wysheth euel, and hath no py tye vpon his neyghboure. * When the scorneful is punished, the ignorāt take the better hede: and when a wyse man is warned, he wyl receaue ẏ more vnderstandyng. The rightuous enfourmeth the house of the vngoly, but the vngodlye goo on styll after their owne wickednesse. Who so stoppeth his eare at the cryeng of the poore, he shal crye him selfe and not be herde. A pre-uy rewarde pacifyeth displeasure, and a gyfte in the bosome stylleth furyous nesse. The iust delyteth in doynge the thinge that is right, but the wor-ches of wickednesse abhorre the same.
The man that wandereth out of the waye of wysdome, shal remayne in the congregaciō of the deed. He that hath pleasure in banckettes, shall be a pore C man: Who so delyteth in wyne and de licates, shal not be ryche. The vngod ly shal be geuen for the rightuous, & ẏ wicked for the iust. * It is better to dwel in a wyldernesse, then with a chy ding and an angry woman. In a wyse mans house there is greate treasure & plentuousnesse, but a folysh body spen deth vp al. Who so foloweth ryghtu-ousnesse and mercy fyndeth bothe lyfe, righteousnes & honour. A wyse man wyn neth ẏ citie of ẏ mitie, & as for ẏ strength ẏ they trust in, he bryngeth it downe.
Who so kepeth his mouth and his tōg the same kepeth his soule from trouble He that is proude and presumptuous, is called a scorneful mā, which in wrath darre worke maliciously. The volup- D tuousnesse of the slouthful is his owne death, for his handes wyl not laboure.
He coueteth and desyreth al the daye longe, but the rightuous is alwaye ge uing and kepeth nothing backe. * The sacrifice of the vngodly is abhominacion, for they offer the thynge that is gotten, wyth wyckednes. A false wyt-nesse shall peryshe, but he that wyll be contente to heare, shall all waye haue power to speake him selfe.
An vngodly man goeth forth rashly, but ẏ iust reformeth his owne waye.

Esaie, i. b: and. xlvii. b Psal. xxxiii. c There is no wysdom, ther is no vnderstanding, there is no councell agaynst the lord. The horse is prepared against the daye of battel, but the lorde geueth the victory.

The. xx vi. Chapter.

A Lyke as snowe is not mete in sommer, ner rayne i haruest: euen so is worshippe vnsemely for a foole. Lyke as the byrde and the swalowe take their flyght and fle here and ther, so the curse that is geuen i vaine, shall not lyght vpon a man. Unto the horse belongeth a whyppe, to the Asse a brydle, and a rodde to the fooles backe. Geue not ÿ foole an answere after hys foolyshnesse, lest thou become lyke vnto him: but make the foole an answere to his foolyshnesse, lest he be wise in his owne conceate. He is lame, of his fete, yea dronken is he in vanite, that committeh eny thynge to a fole.
B Lyke as it is an vnsemely thynge to haue legges & yet to halt, euen so is a parable in the fooles mouth. He that setteth a foole in hye dignite, that is euen as yf a manne dyd caste a precious stone vpon the galous.

A parable in a fooles mouth is lyke a thorne that prycketh a droncken mã in the hande.

A man of experience discerneth al thynges wel, but who so hyreth a foole, hyreth soch one as wyll take no hede.
Lyke as the dogge turnethe againe to C hys vomyte, euen so a foole beginneth hys foolishnesse agayne afresh. If thou seyst a man that is wise in his owne conceate, ther is more hope in a fole then in hym. The slouthful sayeth: there is a leoparde in the waye, & a lyon in the myddest of the stretes. Lyke as the dore turnethe aboute vpon the threshholde, euen so doth the sloughfull welter hĩselfe in hys bed. The slothful body thrusteth hys hande in to hys bosome, and it geueth hym to put it agayne to hys mouth. The slougard thynketh hym selfe wyser, then a. vii. men b*that sytte and teache. Who so goeth by and medleth with other mens stryfe, he is lyke one that taketh a dog by the eares. Lyke as one shuteth deadly arowes and dartes out of a priuy place, euen so doth ä dissembler with his neyghboure. And then sayth he, I dyd it but in sporte: where no wood is, there the fire goeth out: and wher the bacbyter is taken away, there the stryfe ceaseth.

*Coles kyndle heate, and wood the fyre: euen so doth a brawlyng felow steare vp variaunce. A slaunderers wordes are lyke flatterye, but they pearse ÿ D inward partes of the body.
Uenimous lyppes and a wicked hart, are lyke a potsherd couered with syluer drosse. An enemy dissembleth wyth his lyppes, and in the meane season he ymagineth myscheafe, but when he speketh fayre, beleue hym not, for ther are seuẽ abhominations in hys herte. Who soo kepeth euell wyl, secretelye to do hurt, hys malyce shall be shewed before the whole congregation. *Whoo diggeth vp a pytte, shall fall therin: and he that weltereth a stone, shall stomble vpon it hym self. A dissemblyng tong hateth one that rebuketh hym, and a flattering mouth worketh myschefe.

The. xxvii. Chapter.

A Make not thy bost of to morow, for ye knowest not what maye happen to daye. Let a nother mã prayse the, and not thyne owne mo uth: ye other folkes lippes, and not thine.
The stone is heuy, and the sande we yghtye: but a fooles wrath is heuyer then they both.
Wrath is a cruel thinge, and furyous nesse is a very tempest: ye who is able to abyde enuye? An open rebuke is better then a secrete loue. Faithful are the a * woundes of a louer, but the kys ses of an enemy are disceatful. He that is ful, abhorreth an honye combe: but B vnto him that is hongry, euery sower thinge is swete. He that oft tymes flyt teth, is like a byrde that forsaketh her nest. The hert is glad of a swete oynt-ment and sauoure, but a stomacke that can gaue good councel, reioyseth a mã nes neyghboure.
Thyne owne frende and thy fathers frend se ye forsake not, but go not to the brothers house in time of thy trouble.
Better is a frend at hand, then a brother farre of.
My sonne, be wyse, and thou shalt make me a glad hert: so that I shal make an swere vnto my rebukes. A wyse man seynge the plage wyl hide him self, as for fooles they go one styll, and suffer Prouer. xx. harme. * Take his garment that is su ertye for a straunger, and take a pledge of him for the vnknowne mãs sake He that is to hasty to prayse his neigh C boure aboue measure, shalbe taken as one that geueth him an euel report. A brauling woman and the rofe of ye house droping in a raynye daye, maye wel be compared to gether.
He that refrayneth her, refrayneth ye wind, and holdeth oyle fast in his hãde.
Lyke as one yron whetteth a nother, so doth one man cõfort another. Who so kepeth his fyge tre, shall enioye the frutes therof: he that wayteth vpõ his master, shal come to honoure. Lyke as in one water there apeare dyuers fa ces, euen so dyuerse men haue diuers hertes. Lyke as hel and destruccyõ are neuer ful, euen so the b * eyes of men cã neuer be satisfied. Syluer is tried in ye moulde, and golde in the fornace, and so is a man, when he is openlye praysed to his face. Though thou shuldest brai a foole with a pestell in a morter lyke otemeele, yet wyl not his folyshesse go D from him. Se that thou know the nõ ber of thy cattel thy selfe, and loke wel to thy flockes. For ryches abyde not alway, and the c * crowne endureth not for euer. The hey groweth, the grasse commeth vp, and herbes are gathered in the mountaynes. The lambes shal cloth the, and for the goates thou shalt haue money to thy husbandry. Thou shalt haue goates mylke ynoughe to fede the, to vphold thy housholde, and to sustayne thy maidens.

The. xxviii. Chapter

The vngodly a * flieth nomã chasyng him, but the righ A tuous standeth styfe as a lyon. Because of synne the lande doth oft chaung her prince: but thorow men of vnderstan-dig & wysdom, a realme endureth long.
One poore mã oppressing another by violẽce, is like a continual rayne ye destroyeth the frute. They that forsake thy lawe, prayse the vngodly: but such as kepe the lawe abhorre them. Wic ked mẽ discerne not the thynge that is ryght, but they ye seke after the Lorde, discusse al thinges.
A poore man ledinge a godly lyfe, is better thẽ the riche ye goeth in froward wayes. Who so kepeth the lawe, is a B childe of vnderstandinge: but he ye fe deth riotous men, shameth his father.
Who so increaseth his riches by b * vãu tage and wynning, let him gather the to helpe the poore with al. He that tur neth awaye his eare from hearinge ye lawe, his prayer shal be abhorred.
Who so leadeth the righteous i to an euel waye, shal fal in to his owne pyt, but the iust shal haue the good in possession. The ryche man thincketh hym selfe to be wyse, but the pore that hath vnderstandinge c * cã perceaue him wel ynough.
When righteous men are in prospe-rite, then doth honoure florish: but whē the vngodly come vp, the state of men chaungeth. He that hideth his synnes, shal not prospere: but who so knowled geth them and forsaketh thē, shal haue mercy. Wel is him that standeth al C wate in awe: as for him that hardeneth his hert, he shal fal in to mischefe. Like as a roaring lyon ād an hongry beare, euen so is an vngodly prince ouer the poore people.

Where the prince is without vnder standing, there is greate oppression & wronge: but if he be such one as hateth couetousnesse, he shal longe rayne. He ẏ by vyolence shedeth eny mās bloud, shal be a rennagate vnto his graue, & no man shall be able to succoure him.
Who so leadeth a godly and an innocent lyfe, shalbe safe: but he that goeth frowarde wayes, shal ones haue a fal.
...m. xii. b. *He that tylleth his lād, shal haue plē
...ua. d teousnesse of bread: but he that folow-eth ydilnes, shal haue pouerte ynough A faithful man is greatly to be commended, but he that maketh to muche haste for to be riche, shal not be vngil-tie. To haue respecte of personnes in iudgement is not good: And whye he wil do wrong, ye euē for a pece of bred.
D He that wyl be rich al to sone, hath an euel eye, and cōsidreth not, that pouer te shal come vpon hī. He that rebuketh a man, shal fynde more fauoure at the last, thē he ẏ flattreth hī. Who so robeth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne: the same is like vnto a mur therer. He that is of a proud stomacke stereth vp stryfe: but he ẏ putteth hys trust in the Lord, shalbe wel fedd. He ẏ trusteth in his owne hert, is a foole: but he that dealeth wysely, shalbe safe.

He that geueth vnto the poore, shal not want: but he ẏ turneth awaye hys eyes from such as be in necessitie, shall suffer greate pouerte him selfe.
When the vngodly are come vp, men are fayne to hide them selues: but whē they perish, the righteous increase.

He that is styfnecked & wyl A neyghboure, layeth a net for hys fete: The synne of the wicked is his owne snare, but the ryghtuous shall be glad & reioyce. The ryghtuous consid'reth ẏ cause of the poore, but the vngodly re gardeth no vnderstandinge. Wicked people bring a citie in decaye, but wise men set vp agayne. If a wyse man go B the waye of a serpent ouer a stone, the waye of a shepe in the see, and the way of a man with a yõg womã. Suche is the waye also of a wyfe that breaketh row a seruaunt that beareth rule, tho-row a fole þ hath great riches, thow an

The Conyes are but a feble folke, yet make they their couches amonge the rockes. The greshoppers haue not a gide, yet go they forth together by heapes. The spider laboureth: with her hādes, and that in the kynges palace.

Yet my herte had greate experience of

I applied my mynd: ẏ I might know, what were wysdome & vnderstādinge, what were errours & folyshnes. And I perceaued that this also was but a vexaciō of minde: for where moch wis-

Then thoughte I in my minde: If it happen vnto the foole as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour eny more, for wysdome? So I cōfessed with in my herte, ẏ this also was but vanite For ẏ wyse are euer as lytle in remem braunce as ẏ folish, & all ẏ dayes, for to come shalbe forgottē yee ẏ wyse mā dieth as wel as ẏ foole. Thus begāne I to be wery of my lyfe, in so moche, ẏ I coulde away wᵗ nothinge ẏ is done vnder ẏ Sūne, for al was but vanyte & vexacyon of mind: Ye I was wery of my labour, wᵗ I had takē vnder ẏ Sū ne, because I shuld be faie to leaue thē vnto another mā, ẏ cōmeth after me for who knoweth, whether he shalbe a wise mā or a fole? & yet shal ye be lorde of al my labours, which I wᵗ such wisdome haue takē vnder ẏ Sūne. Is not this a vayne thing? So I turned me to re D frayne my minde frō al such trauayle, as I toke vnder the Sūne: for so moch as a man shuld wery him selfe wᵗ wis dome, wᵗ vnderstāding & opportunite, & yet be fayne to leaue his labours vn to another, ẏ neuer swett for thē. This is also a vayne thing & a greeat misery.
For what getteth a mā of al the labour & trauayle of his mynde, ẏ he taketh vnder ẏ Sūne, but heuinesse, sorowe & disquietnesse al ẏ dayes of his lif? In so moch ẏ his herte cānot rest in ẏ nig ht. Is not this also a vaine thig? Is it not better thē for a mā to eate & drinc ke, & his soule to be mery i his labour?
Ye I saw ẏ this also was a gift of god:
For who maye eate, drincke, or bringe eny thynge to passe withoute hym?

And why? he geueth unto man, what it pleaseth him: whether it be wysdome, understandyng, or gladnesse. But unto ẏ synner he geueth werines & sorow, ẏ he maye gather & heape together the thinge, ẏ afterwarde shalbe geuē unto him whom it pleasethe God. This is now a vayne thinge, yee a very disquietnesse and vexacyon of mynde.

¶ All thinges come in their tyme and passe awaye in their tyme.

The. iii. Chapter.

Every thynge hathe a tyme,
A yee all that is under ẏ heauen, hath is cōuenient season. There is a tyme to be borne, & a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante, & a tyme to plucke up the thynge, that is planted.
A time to slay, & a time to make whole.
A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde up.
A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh:
A tyme to mourne, & a tyme to daunce:
A tyme to cast away stones, and atime to gather stones to gether:
A tyme to embrace, & atyme to refraine from embracynge:
A tyme to wynne, and a tyme to lese:
A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende:
B A tyme to cutt in peces, & a tyme to sowe together.
A tyme to kepe sylence, & a tyme to speake.
A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate:
A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace:
What hath a mā els (ẏ doth any thing) but weerynesse & laboure? For as touchinge the trauayle and carefulnesse which god hath geuen unto men, I se ẏ he hath geuē it them, to be exercysed in it. Al this hath be ordened maruelos goodly: to euery thing his du tyme. He hath planted ignoraunce also in ẏ hertes of men, ẏ they shuld not fynde out ẏ ground of his workes, which he doth C frō ẏ beginning of ẏ ende. So I perceaued, ẏ in these thinges there is nothing better for a man, then to be mery & to do well so lounge as he lyueth.
For al that a man eateth & drincketh, yee what soeuer a man enioyeth of all his labour, that same is a gyft of god.

I cōsydered also ẏ what soeuer God doth, it cōtinueth for euer, & ẏ nothing cā be put unto it nor take frō it: & ẏ god doth it to the intent, ẏ men shuld feare him. The thing ẏ hath bene, is now: & ẏ thing ẏ is for to come, hathe bene afore tyme, for god restoreth agayne the thinge that was passe. Moreouer, I sawe under the sunne ungodlynesse in the steade of iudgement, & iniquite in steade of rightuousnesse. Then thought I in my mynde: God shal seperate the rightuous from the ungodly, & the shalbe the tyme and iudgemente of all councels & workes. I comened w D myne owne herte also concerninge the children of men: how God hath chosen them, & yet letteth them apeare, as though they were beastes, for it happeneth unto men, as it doth unto beastes, as the one dyethe, so dierhe the other: yee they haue both one maner of byrth, so that (in this) a man hath no preminence aboue a beast, but al are subdued unto vaniti. They go al unto one place, for as they be al of dust, so shal they al turn unto dust agayne. Who knoweth * the sprete of mā ẏ goeth upward, & ẏ breth of the beest that goethe downe to the earth? Wherfore I perceaue, ẏ ther is nothinge better for a man, thē to be ioyful in his laboure, for ẏ is hys porcion. But who wyl bryng him to se ẏ thyng that shal come after him?

The notes

* The comē translaciō readeth, whether the sprete of a man goo upwarde, and the breath of a beaste downe warde.

¶ The mysteries of the innocent. The superfluous laboures of men. The child that is poore & wise. &c.

The. iiii. Chapter.

So I turned me, & cōsydred A al ẏ vyolent wronge ẏ is done under the sunne: & behold, the teares of soch as were oppressed, & ther was no man to comforte thē or ẏ wolde delyuer & defēd thē frō ẏ violence of their oppressours. Wherfore I iudged those that are deed, to be more happye thē soche as be a lyue: yee hym that is yet unborne to be better at ease then they both, because he seith not the myserable workes ẏ are done under ẏ sunne.

Agayne

B Againe, I sawe that al trauaile and dilygence of labour was hated of eue-ry man. This is also a vayne thyng, & a vexacyon of mynde. The foole fol-deth his handes together, and eateth vp his owne flesh. One hande full (sayth he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with laboure and tra-vayle. Morouer, I turned me, and beholde yet another vanyte vnder the sonne. Ther is noman, no mo but him selfe alone, hauinge nether chylde nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauayle, hys eyes cannot be satysfyed wyth ryches, (yet doth he not remembre him selfe, & saye:) For whom I do take soche trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne and my-C serable thynge. Therfore two at bet ter then one, for they may wel enioy the profyt of their labour. If one of them fal, his companion helpeth him vp a-gayne: But wo is him that is alone, for yf he fal, he hath not another to help him vp. Agayne, when two slepe to gether, they are warme: but how can a bodye be warme alone? One maye be ouercome, but two may make resistaū ce: A thre folde cable is not lyghtlye broken. A poore chylde beyng wyse, is better then an olde kynge, that doteth, and cannot bewarre in tyme to co D me. Some one commeth out of pre son, & is made a kynge: & another why ch is borne in the kyngdom, commeth vnto pouerte. And I perceued, ÿ all men liuing vnder the sonne, go with ÿ secōde childe, that commethe vp in the steade of the other. As for the people ÿ haue bene before him, & that come after him, ther ar innumerable: yet is not their ioye ÿ greater thorow him. This is also a vayne thynge & a vexacion of mind. When ÿ cōmest into the house of god, kepe thy fote[a] * & draw ny,[b] * that ÿ mayest heare: ÿ is better then ÿ offeri ges of fooles, for they know not what euyl they do.

BE not hasty wt thy mouth, & lett not thyne hert speake A eny thynge rashlye before god. For God is in heauē and thou vpon earthe, ther fore let thy wordes be fewe. For where moche carefulnesse is, there are manye dreames: and where many wordes are, there men may heare fooles. * If thou * Deu. xxiij Baruc. vi. c make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to performe it. As for folish vowes, he hath no pleasure in them. If thou promyse eny thinge, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vow then that thou shuldest promyse, and not paye.
Vse not thy mouth to cause thy fleshe for to synne, that thou saye not before the angell: my foolishnesse is in the fau te: For then God wilbe angrie at thy voyce, & destroye al the workes of thy ne handes. And why? where as are B many dreames and many wordes, ther are also dyuerse vanyties: but loke ÿ thou feare God. If ÿ seyst the pore to be oppressed & wrongeously dealt wt al, so ÿ equyte and ÿ right of ÿ lawe is wrested in ÿ land: maruel not ÿ at soch iudgment, for one greate man kepethe touch with another, and ÿ myghty hel pe thē selues together. The whole lād also with ÿ feldes and al ÿ is therin, is in subiection and bondage vnto ÿ kig He ÿ loueth money, wyll neuer be satis fied with money: & whoso delyteth in riches, shal haue no profit therof. Is not thys also a vayn thyng? Where as moch riches is, ther are many ÿ spend them awaye. And what pleasure more hath he ÿ possesseth them, sauinge ÿ he may loke vpō them wt his eyes? A C labouring mā slepeth swetely, wether it be litle or moch ÿ he eateth: but ÿ a-boundaunce of the rich wyl not suffre hym to slepe.
Ye is ther a sore plage, which I haue sene vnder ÿ sunne (namely) riches kep te to ÿ hurt of him ÿ hath them in possession. For oft tyme ÿ they perishe wt his greate mysery and trouble: and yf he haue a chylde, it getteth nothynge.

*Job. i. d. c. Lyke as he came naked out of hys mo Timo. vi. b thers wombe, so goeth he thether agay ne, and carieth nothing awai with him of all hys labour. This is a myserable plage, that he shal go awaye euen as he came. What helpeth it him then, that he hath laboured in the wynde?
All the dayes of hys lyfe also must he D he eate in the darcke, with greate care-fulnes, syckenesse and sorowe. Therfor me thynk it a better and a fayrer thyn-ge, a man to eate and drynke, and to be refresshed of al hys laboure, that he ta keth vnder the sunne all ye days of his lyfe which god geueth hym, for thys is hys porcion. For vnto whome soeuer God geueth riches, goodes and power, he geueth it hi to enioye it, to take it for his porciõ & to be refresshed of his labur this is now ye gift of god. For he thincketh not much how longe he shall lyue for so moch as god fylleth hys herte wt gladnesse.

¶ The mysery of the ryche and couetous. The dif ference of a foole and a wyse man.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

A There is yet a Plage vnder the sonne, & it is a generall thyng amonge men, when God geueth a man ryches, goodes and honour, so that he wanteth nothyng of al that hys her te can desyre: and yet god geueth hym not leaue to enioy ye same, but an other mã spendeth thẽ. Thys is a vayne thĩg and a myserable plage. If a manne be B get an hundred children, and lyue many yeares, so that his dayes are many in nombre, and yet can not enioye hys good neyther be buryed: as for hym I saye that an vntymely byrthe is bett er thẽ he. For he commeth to naught and goeth hys waye into darknes, and his name is forgotten. Moreouer he seythe not the sunne, and knoweth of noe rest nether here nor there. Ye though he ly-ued two thousande yeares, yet hath he no good lyfe. Com not all to one place Al the laboure that a manne taketh is for hym selfe, & yet hys desyre is neuer fylled after hys mynde. For what hath the wyse more then the fole? What hel-peth it ye poore that he knoweth to wal-C ke before the lyuynge?

The syght of the eyes is better, then ye soule shulde so departe awaye. How be it this is also a vayne thyng and a disquietnesse of minde. What is more excellent then mã? yet can he not in the lawe get the vyctory of him ye is migh tier then he? A vayne thynge is it to cast out many wordes, but what hath a man els?

¶ That which passeth our strengthes & wittes ought we not to seke after.

¶ The. vij. Chapter.

For who knoweth what is A good for man lyuyng, in ye dayes of his vayne lyfe, which is but a shadowe?
Or, who wil tel a man what shal happen after him vnder ye Sõne?
* A good name is more worth then a precious oyntment, and the day of dea th is better then the daye of byrth.
It is better to go i to an house of mour B nyng, then in to a bãcketynge house.
For there is the ende of all men, & he ye is liuyng, taketh it to hert. It is better to be sory then to laugh, for when the countenaunce is heuy, the hert is ioyfull. The herte of the wyse is in the mournynge house, but the herte of the folish is in the house of myrth. It is better to geue eare to the chastenig of a wyse man, then to heare the songe of fooles. For the laughing of foles is lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thynge Who so doeth wronge maketh a wise man to goo out of his witte, & destroy eth a gentle herte. The ende of a thing is better then the begynnyng. The pa cient of sprete is better then the hye min ded. Be not hastely angri in thy mi de, for wrath resteth in the bosome of a foole. Saye not thou: What is ye cause that the dayes of the olde tyme were better, then they that be now? for that were no wyse question. Wysdome is better then ryche s, yet moche more worth then, the eye syght. For wysdome defendethe as well as moneye, and the excellente knowlege and wysdome geueth lyfe vnto hym ye hath in possessiõ: Consider ye worcke of God, how that no man cã make ye thin ge straight, which he maketh croker-

C Use wel the tyme of prosperite, and re membre ÿ tyme of mysfortune: for god maketh the one by the other, so ÿ a mã can fynd nothing els.

These .ii. thinges also haue I con-sydred in the tyme of vanyte: ÿ the iust man perisheth for his rightuousnes sake, and the vngodlye lyueth in hys wyckednesse. Therfore be thou nether to righteous ner ouer wyse, that thou perish not: be neyther to vnrightuous also ner to folysh, lesse thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take hold of this, and not to let ÿ go out of thy hand. For that he feareth God, shal escape them all.

Wysdom geueth more corage vnto the wyse, then ten myghtie men of the citie: * for there is not one iuste vpon [illegible] erth, that doth good, and synneth not.
Take not hede vnto euery worde that is spoken, lest thou here thy seruaunte curse the: for thyn owne hert knoweth, ÿ thou thy selfe also hast oft tymes spo ken euel by other men. All these thin-ges haue I proued because of wisdom, for I thought to be wyse, but she went farther fro me then she was before, yee & so depe that I might not reach vnto D her. I aplied my mind also vnto konw ledge, and to seke out science, wysdom and vnderstanding: to knowe the foo-lishnes of the vngodly, and the errour of doting fooles. And I founde, that a womã is bitterer thẽ death: for she is a very angle, her herte is a net, and her handes are cheynes. Who so pleaseth God shal escape from her, but ÿ sinner wyl be taken w her.

Beholde (sayeth the preacher) this haue I diligentlye searched out and proued, ÿ I myght com by knowledg, which as yet I seke, and fynde it not.
Among a thousande men I haue foũd one, but not one wom an amounge all Lo, thys onlye haue I founde, ÿ God made man iust and right, but they seke dyuers sotelties, where as no mã hath wysdome and vnderstanding, to geue answere ther vnto.

¶ The kynges commaundement ought to be obeied.
Gladnes is one of the these thinges vnder ÿ sonne.

¶ The .viii. Chapter.

Wysdom maketh a mans A face to shine, but malyce Prou.xvii. putteth it out of fauour. Job.xi. b Kepe the kinges cõmaũ demẽt (I warne the) and the oth that thou hast mad vnto god.
Be not hastye to go out of his light, a se thou cõtynue in no euel thynge: for whatsoeuer it pleaseth him, that doth he . Like as when a king geueth a charg, hys cõmaundemẽt is mightie Euen so who maye saye vnto hĩ: what doest thou? who so kepeth the cõmaũ dement, shal fele no harme: but a wyse mans hert discerneth tyme and maner: For euery thing wyl haue oportunitie and iudgement, and thys is the thing that maketh men ful of carfulnes and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come, for who wil tel hi?
Nether is there eny man ÿ hath power ouer the sprete, to kepe still ÿ sprete, B nor to haue eny power i ÿ time of deth, it is not he also that can make an ende of the battel, nether maye vngodlynes delyuer him, that medeleth with all.

All these thynges haue I consydered, and applyed my mynde vnto eue-ry worcke ÿ is vnder the Sonne: how one man hath lordshipe vpon another to his owne harme. For I haue oft sene the vngodly brought to their gra ues, and fallen downe from the hye & gloryous place: in so much ÿ they were forgotten in the cytie, where they were had in so hye and greate reputacion.
This is also a vayne thing. Because now that euel workes are not hastely punyshed, the hert of man geueth him selfe ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though an euel person offend an hun dred tymes, and haue a longe lyfe: yet C am I sure, that it shal go wel with the that feare God, because they haue him before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodly, it shal not be wel with hym, nether shal he prolong his dayes: but euen as a shadowe, so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanyte vpõ earth:
There be iust mẽ, vnto whom it happe neth, as though they had the workes of ÿ vngodly: Agayn, ther be vngodly whom it goth as though they had ÿ workes of ẏ ryghtuous. This me thin ke also a vayne thynge. Therfore I cō mēd gladnes, because a mā hath no bet ter thinge vnder the sun, then to eate & drincke, and to be merye: for that shall he haue his labour al the dayes of his D lyfe which God geueth hym, vnder the Sunne. When I applyed my minde to learne wysdome, and to know ẏ tra uayle that is in the worlde (and ẏ of such a fashion, ẏ I suffred not myne eyes to slepe nether daye nor nyght) I vnder-stand of al ẏ worckes of God, that is not impossible for a man, to attayne vnto the worckes ẏ are done vnder the sunne: and though he bestowe his la-labour to seke them out, yet can he not reach vnto them: ye though a wyse mā woulde vndertake to knowe them, yet might he not fynd them.

The notes.

* Some rede the Goddes: that is, Iudges.
¶ A man wytteth not, by the rightwisenes of his owne workes, whether he be worthi of loue or hate A man ought to lyue merely with his wyf. A praise of wysdome.

The .ix. Chapter.

FOr al these thinges purpo sed I in my mynde to seke A out. The ryghtuous and wyse ye and their[a] * wor-kes also are in the hand of God: and[b] * there is no man ẏ knoweth ether ẏ loue or hate of the thynge ẏ he hath before hi. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: It goeth: wt ẏ ryghtu ous as wt the vngodly: with ẏ good & cleane as with the vncleane: with hi ẏ offereth as with him ẏ offreth not: like as it goeth wt ẏ vertuous, so goeth it also with ẏ sinner. As it happeneth vn to the periured, so happeneth yt also vnto him ẏ is afraied to be forsworne.
Amonge al thinges ẏ come to passe vn der the sonne, this is a misery, ẏ it hap peneth vnto al alyke. This is the cause also ẏ the hertes of men are full of wickednesse, and madd foolishnesse is in their hertes as longe as they liue vntyl they dye.
B And why: as longe as a mā lyueth, he is careles: for a quicke dogge (saye they) is better thē a ded liō: for they ẏ be lyuyng, knowe ẏ they shal die: but they ẏ be deed: know nothig, nether deserue they eny more. For their memoriall is forgottē, so that they be nether loued, hated nor enuied: nether haue they eny more parte in the worlde, in al ẏ is don vnder the Sonne. Go thou thy waye then, eate thy bred wt ioye, and drincke thy wyne with gladnes, for thy wor-kes please God[c] * Let thy garmētes be alwaye whyt, & let thy head want none oyntment. Use thy self, to lyue ioyfully with thy wife whom thou louest, al the dayes of thy lyfe which is but vayne, ẏ god hath geuen the vnder ẏ Sunne al the dayes of thy vanite: for ẏ is thy porcion in this lyfe, of all thy laboure and trauayle ẏ thou takest vnder the sonne. What soeuer ẏ takest in hande to do, ẏ do with al thy power: for amōg ẏ dedw, here as thou goest vnto, there is nether worcke, councel, knowledge nor wysdome.
So I turned me vnto other thin- C ges vnder the sonne, and I sawe ẏ in running, it helpeth not to be swyft: in battayl it helpeth not to be stronge to fedyng, it helpeth not to be wyse, to ryches it helpeth not to be suttel: to be had in fauour, it helpeth not to be con nyng: but ẏ al lyeth in tyme & fortune.
For a man knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fyshe are takē ẏ with angle and as the byrdes are catched wyth ẏ snare. Euen so are men taken in the perlous tyme, when it commeth sodely vpon them.
Thys wysdome haue I sene also D vnder the Sunne, and me thought it a greate theynge.
There was alytel citie, and a few men within it: so there came a greate kynge and beseged it, and made great bulwarckes agaynste it.
And in the cytie there was founde a poore man (but he was wyse) which wythe hys wysdome delyuered the cytye: yet was there no ebodye, that had eny respecte vnto such a symple man.
Then sayede I, wysdome is better then strengthe. Neuerthelesse, a symple mannes wysdome is despysed, and hys wordes are not herde.
A wyse mās councel that is folowed i sylence, is farre aboue the cryeng of a captayne

captayns amonge fooles. * For wysdõ is better then harnesse: but an vnthrift alone destroyeth much good.

The notes.

a * Some reade, seruauntes.
b * Some reade: and man knoweth nother loue nor the herte: which is al before him. The sẽtence signifieth so much, as no mã knoweth whether God loue or hate any man: Understand by the rightuousnes of his owne workes.

¶ The dyfferaunce betwene a fole and wyse man. Fortune and happy is that realme which hathe a wyse prynce.

The. x. Chapter.

DEad flyes ÿ corrupte swete
A oyntmente and make it to styncke, are somthig more worth then the wysdome & honoure of a foole. A wise mans hert is a * vpon the ryght hande, but a fooles herte is vpon the left. A dotynge foole thyncketh, ÿ euery man doth as foolyshly as him selfe. If a principal spirete be geuen the to beare rule, be not negligent then in thyne offyce: for so shall greate wyckednes be put down, as it were with a medecyn. Another plage is there, which I haue
B sene vnder the sonne: namely, the ignoraunce that is commenly among prynces: in that a foole setteth in grete dignite, and the rich are set downe beneth. I se seruauntes ride vpon horses and prynces goinge vpon their fete as yt were seruauntes. * But he ÿ dyggeth vp a pyt, shal fal therin him selfe: and who so breaketh the hedge, a serpente shal byt him. Who so remoueth stones shal haue trauayle with al: and he ÿ heweth wod shalbe hurt therwith.

When an yron is blunte, and the poynt not sharpened, it muste be whet agayne, and that w might: Euen so doth wysdome folow diligence. A ba-C bler of his tonge is no better then a serpent ÿ styngeth without hissing. The wordes out of a wyse mans mouth are gracious, but the lyppes of a foole wil destroye him selfe. The begynning of his talking is foolyshnes, and the last worde of his moth is greate madnes. A foole is so ful of wordes, ÿ a mã can not tel what end he wil make: who wil the warne hĩ to make a conclusiõ. The labour of ffolysh is greuous vnto the whyle they knowe not how to go in to the citie.

Wo be vnto the (O ÿ realme, and D lande) whose kyng is but a chylde, and whose prynces are early at their bãckettes. But wel is the (O thou realme) & whose king is come of nobles, & whose prynces eate in due season, for strength & not for lust. The same Preacher was not wyse alone, but taught the people knowlege also, he gaue goodheade, sought out D grounde and setforth many parables.
His dylygence was to fynde out acceptable wordes, ryght scripture, and the wordes of truth. For the wordes of the wyse are lyke prykes and nayles that go thorowe, wherwith men are kepte together: for the are geuen of one shepherd onely.
Therfore be warre (my sonne) that aboue these thou make the not many and Thou hast wõded mi hert, O mi sister, my spouse, thou hast wounded my hert, with one of thyne eyes, & with one chey ne of thy necke. O how fayre and loue ly are thy brestes, my syster, my spouse?

Thy brestes are more pleasaunte then wyne, and the smell of thine oyntemen tes passethe all spyces. Thy lyppes, O my spouse, droppe as the hony combe, ye mylke and hony, is vnder thy tõge, and the smell of the garmentes is lyke D the smell of franckinsence. Thou arte a well kepte garden, O my Syster, my spouse, thou art a wel kept waterspring, a sealed well. The frutes that sprouts in the, are lyke a paradise of pomgrana tes with swete frute: as Cipresse, Nardus, Saffronne, Calmus, and all the trees of Libanus: Myrre, Aloes, ãd all the best spyces. Thou art a well of gar dens a well of lyuinge waters, whych renne downe from Lybanus.

¶ The Churche, answerĩg of Chryst.

As for my loue, he is whyte and redde coloured, a syngular personne among many thousãdes: his head is the most fine golde, the lockes of his hearre are busshed, browne as the euenynge: Hys eyes are as the eies of doues by the wa ter brokes, washen with mylk, and remaining in a plenteous place: His che kes are lyke a garden bedd, wherin the Apoticaries plãt al maner of swete thi ges: His lyppes droppe as the floures D of the most principall Myrre, hys han des are full of golde rynges & precyous stones. His body is as the pure yuery, decte ouer with Saphires: Hys legges are as the pylers of Marbel, set ke the kynges purple folden vp in plates.

O how fayre & louely art thou, my dearlynge, in pleasures. Thy stature C is like a date tree, and thy brestes like the grapes.

¶ The spouse speakyng of the crosse.

I sayde: I wyll clym me vp into the date tree, & take hold of his braunches.

¶ The spouse speakynge to the spou sesse.

Thy brestes also shalbe as the vyne grapes, the smell of thy nostrels lyke y smel of apples, & thy throte lyke y best wine. This shalbe pure & cleare for my loue, his lippes & teth shal haue theyr pleasure. There wyll I turne me vnto my loue, & he shal turne hym vnto me.

¶ The churche speakyng to Christ.

O come on my loue, let vs go forth in ¶ The Church speakynge to Chryst.

O set me as a seale vpon thyne hert, and as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is mightye as the death, and gelousye as the hell. Her coales are of fyre, & a very flamme of þ Lorde: so that many waters are not able to quench loue, nether maye þ streames droune it. Yee yf a man wolde geue al the good of his C house for loue, he shulde counte it nothynge.

¶ Christ speakynge of the churche to the Synagoge.

When our loue is tolde our yonge sister, whose brestes are not yet growne what shal we do vnto here?

¶ The answere of Christ for þ church.

Yf she be a wall, we shall buylde a syluer bowlwerck ther vpon: yf she be a tower, we shal fastē her with borders of Cedre tree.

¶ The church answerethe to the Synagoge.

If I be a wal, & my brestes like towres, then am I as one that hath founde fauoure in his syght.

¶ The sinagoge speking to þ church.

Salomon had a vinyarde at Baal Hamon, thys vyneyarde delyuered he D vnto the kepers: that euery one for the frute therof shoulde geue hym a thousand peces of syluer.

¶ Esaye prophesyeth that the anger of God shall come vpon Jerusalem because of theyr synnes.

The first Chapter.

A The prophecye of Esay the sonne of Amos, whych he shewed vpon Juda & Jerusalem: In the time of Osiah Joatham, Ahaz, and Jehezekiah, kings of Juda. Heare o heauen herken O earth, for the Lord speaketh, I haue nourished and brought vp chylderen, and they are fallen away fro me. An oxe knoweth hys lorde, and an asse hys masters stal, but Israell knoweth nothynge, my peple hath no vnderstandinge. Alas for B thys sinfull people, which are expert in blasphemyes, a frowarde generacion, vnnaturall chylderen. They haue forsaken the Lord, they haue prouoked the holy one of Israell vnto anger, and are gone bacwarde, wherfore shoulde yee be plaged any more? For they are euer fallyng awaye. The whole heade is sych, and the hert is very heuy. From the sole of the fete vnto the heade ther is no whole parte in al your body: but al ar woundes, botches, sores & strepes which can nether be helped, bound vp, wolsyed, nor eased with any oyntment.
C Your land lyeth waste, your cyties are brent vp, your enemyes deuour youre land, and ye must be fayne to stand, & loke vpon it: and it is desolate, as yt were with enemyes in a battel. Moreouer the daughter of Sion is lefte alone lyke a cotage in a vynyard like a watchehouse in time of warre, like a beseged citie. And excepte the lord of Hostes had left vs a few a liue: we shoulde haue bene as Sodoma, and like vnto Gomorra.

Heare the word of the Lord ye tyrauntes of Sodoma, and herken vnto the lawe of our god, the people of Gomorra Why offre yee so many sacrifyces vnto me? I am discontent for the brentofferynges of wethers and with the fatnes of fed beastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes and gootes. When ye apere before me, who D requireth you to treade within me porches? Offer me no mo oblacions, for it is but lost laboure. I abhorre your incence, I maye not awaye with youre newmoones, your Sabothes & solempne daies. Your fastings at also in vayne. I hate your newe holydayes and fastinges, euen fro my very herte They make me werry, I can not abide them. Though ye holde out your handes turne I mine eyes from you. And though ye make many prayers, yet here I nothing at al, for youre handes are ful of bloude.

Wash you, make you cleane, put a E waye youre euel thoughtes out of my syght, ceale from doing of euel & vyolence. Lerne to do right, applye youre selues to equite, delyuer the oppressed, helpe the father lesse to his ryght let the widdowes complaynt com before you. Now go to (sayth the Lord) we wil talke together. Is it not so? Though your synnes be as read as scarlet, shal they not be whyter then snowe? And though they wer like purple, shal they not be like white wolle? Is it not so? If ye be louing and obedient, ye shall enioye the best thinge that groweth in the land. But if ye be obstynate and rebellyous ye shalbe deuoured with the swerde: for thus the Lorde hath promysed with his owne mouth.

f How happeneth it then that y ryghtuous cytie, whych was full of equyte, is be come vnfaythful as an whore? ryghtuousnes dwelt in it, but now murther s* Thy syluer is turned to drosse, and thy wyne myxt wt water. Thy prynces are trayters and companions of theues, They loue giftes altoge ther, & fo-low rewardes. As for y fatherles, they helpe him not to hys ryght, nether wyl they let the widdowes causes com befo re them. Therfore speaketh the Lorde God of hostes the mighty one of Israell: ah I must ease me of myne enmyes and auenge me vpon them. And therfo re shall I lye my hande vpon the, ande burne out thy drosse from the fynest and purest, and put out al the lead, and let thy iuges agayne as they were somtyme, and the Senatoures as they were from the begynnyng. Then shalt thou be called the rightuous citie, the faythfull citie. But Sion shall be redemed G with equytie, and her captiuitie with the rightuousnes. For the transgressours and vngodly, and such as are becomme vnfaythfull vnto the Lorde, must altogether be vtterly destroyed.

And except ye be ashamed of the oke trees wherin ye haue so delyted, and of the gardens that ye haue chosen: yee shalbe as an oke whose leaues are fallen awaye, and as a garden that hathe no moystnes. And as for the glorye of the thynges it shalbe be turned to drye strawe & he that made thē to a sparcke And they shall both burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quench thē.

EUery man can eschue a per sō moued in āger, for what doth he wisely: euin so shal A the Lorde of hostes take a waye from Jerusalem and Juda, al possessions and power, al mea te and dryncke the capitayne of the sou se and the aged man, the worshipful of fyftie yeare olde, and the honourable: the Senatour, and men of vnderstan= babes shall haue the rule of you. One

Then shall he sweare and say. I cā not helpe you. Moreouer there is ney= that both theyr wordes and councels at

The Lord is here to cōmen of the matt the people. The Lord shal come for the to reason wyth the Senatours & prin ces of his people, & shal saye thus vnto the. It is ye yͭ haue burnt vp my vyneyarde, the robbery of the poore is in youre house. Wherfore do ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the innocentes: thus shall the God of Hostes reuyle them.

Moreouer thus sayeth yͤ Lord: Seinge yͤ daughters of Siō are become so proude, and com in with stretched out neckes, and with vayne wanton eyes: seynge they come in tryppyngely nycely with their fete: Therfore shall yͤ Lorde c* shaue the heades of yͤ daugh-
D ters of Sion, & make their bewty bare in yͤ daye. In that daye shall the Lord take awaye yͤ gorgiousnes of their apparel, & spanges, cheynes, partlettes, & colares, bracelettes & hoodes, yͤ goodly floured wyde & broderd raiment, brusshes & headbandes, rynges and garlandes, holy daye clothes & vales, kerchues & pynnes, glasses & smockes, bonettes and taches.

And in steade of good smell there shalbe stynck amonge them. And for their gyrdles there shalbe lowse bandes. And for wel sett hearre there shalbe baldnes. In stede of a stomacher, a sack cloth, and for their bewty wytherydnes and sonne burnynge. Their husbandes and their myghtie mē shal perysh with the swerde in battell.

a. That is, thou arte better apparelled, and richer then we, helpe vs with fode and other thynges necessarye. All the curses which the prophete here reciteth, were fulfilled in the destruccion of Jerusalem.

b. Some reade: exactours or extorcioners. He noteth the couetousnes of prestes and prelates. God here calleth the poore, widdowes, the fatherlesse, and all that are destitute of the comforte of this worlde hys people: whom the pharisees then oppressed: now Prestes, and suche as falsely boaste them selues to be spiritual: iustly called exactours, in as moch as they require theyr ryghte (as they call it) more by mens tradicions, then by the worde of God: and do not so seake soules to God, as many for them selues. Oppresse, that is, spoyle, pill, and euen shaue, so that they seldome leaue ought. What house, feld, or marchaundise is ther that renderest them not some what? Whether they be children chrystened, or mariages made, or men come to the table of the Lord: whether the secke be visited, ther is euer some what required. Furthermore they are not onely accused to be couetous, but also to be wemen, that is, effeminate and womanly: because they moost fylthely & vbelly spende and wasted that, which they haue scrapped with iudgyng, violence, and moost naughte facions.

c* To shaue the heddes of women is to make thē confounded and ashamed, for it is a shame to a woman to be shauen. 1. Corint. xi. a. So that the prophete herby signifieth, by a borowed speach, that yͤ Lorde shall make the doughters of Syon (by which vnderstande, the women of Jurye) confounded and ashamed, and bringe them to extreame wretchednes and pouertie, and euen to nought. Josephus maketh mencion that Jerusalem, whiche was the chef Cyti therof, was ones so famyshed yͭ a certeyn woman of the citie ate her owne chylde. Albeit som vnderstande euen here also by the daughters of Syō the townes, vilages, and castels of Syon: as it doth indede often signifye in the scriptures.

The .iiii. Chapter.

For wante of men seuen women desyre to haue one man.

At that time shall a* their gates mourne & complaine, and they shal sytt as deso- B late folck vpon the earth.
b* Then shal seuen wyues take holde of one man, and saye: we wyl laye al oure meate and clothynge together in comē, only yͭ we may be called thy wyues, and that this shamful reproche maye be taken from vs. After that tyme shal yͤ c* braunche of yͤ Lord be bewtyful and myghtye, and the frute of the earth shalbe fayre and pleasaūt for those Israelites yͭ shal sprīg therof. Then shal the remnaunt in Sion and the remaīe at Jerusalem be called holye: namelye al such as are wrytten among the lyuing at Jerusalem: what tyme as the Lord shal wash awaye the desolacion of the daughters of Siō, & pourg the bloud out from Jerusalem with the wynd of his smoke and fyre. Moreouer vpon all the dwellynges of the hyl of Sion and vpon their whole congregacion, shal the Lord prouide a cloude and smoke by daye, and the shy-nyng of a flamyng fyre by nyghte: for C al their glory shalbe preserued. And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe because of hete in the daye tyme, a place & refuge where a mā maye kepe him for wether and rayne.

a* The gates shal mourne and complayne, because not onely the souldyers shal perish with the swerd, but also the Judges and geuers of sentence. He toucheth the place of iudgmente for the Judges: for in yͤ Gates was iudgement wont to be geuē. Such like. Or, euen the gates shal be destroyed, and no mā shal entre in or go out therat, for yͤ gates mourne, if the people be not often sene in them.

b. Then shal vii. wyues &c. The meanyng is. The wycked women were not contented with their husbandes, but there shal com such a scarcenes of men, yͭ ther shall be skante for euery seuenth woman one man suche a slaughter shal ther be, yͭ few men shall remayn, and that women shal be brought into captiuite.

c* By this braunche vnderstand Christ.

The. v. Chapter.

Of Christ and his vyneyarde, wyth an exectracyon of couetousnes and of dronckenes.

A Now well then, I wil singe my beloued frende a songe of his vyneyarde. My beloued frende hath a vyne yarde in a very frutefull plenteous grounde. This he hedged, this he walled rounde about, & planted it wt goodly grapes. In ye myddest of it builded he a towre, and made a  wyne presse therin. And afterwarde when he loked yt it shulde brynge him grapes, it brought forth thornes. I shewe you now my cause (O ye Cytysens of Jeru salem & whole Juda:) Judge I praye you betwixte me, & mi vineyard. What more coulde haue bene donne for it, that I haue not done? Wherfore then hath it geuen thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, I shall tell you how I will B do with my vineyard: I will take the  hedge frō it, that it maye perysh & brake downe ye wall, that it maye be troden vnder fote. I wyl laye it waste, yt it shall nether be twisted nor cut, but beare thornes and breares. I wyl also forbyd the cloudes, that they shall not rayne vpon it. As for the vyneyarde of the Lorde of Hoostes it is the house of Israell, and whoole Juda his fayre plantynge. Of these he loked for equyte but se there is wrōg: for rightuousnesse, lo, It is but mysery.

Wo be vnto you yt ioyne one house C to another, & bringe one lande so nigh vnto another, tyll ye can get nomore grounde. Wyll ye dwell vpō ye earth alone? The Lord of Hostes rowneth me thus in myne eare: shal not many greater & more gorgious houses be so waste, yt no mā shal dwell in thē? And ten akers of vynes shall geue but a Quarte, and xxx. bushels of sede shall geue but thre. Wo be vnto them that ryse vp early to vse them selues in dr-onckennes, and yet at nyght are more superfluous wyth wyne. In those cō panies are harpes and lutes, tabrettes & pypes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worcke of the Lorde, and consydre not the operacion of his handes.
Therfor cōmeth my folke also in capty uite, because they haue no vnderstandyng. Theyr glory shalbe myxte wyth hunger, and their pryde shalbe marred D for thyrste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth marueilous wyde: that pryde, boostyng and wysdomme, with soch as reioyse therin, maye des-cende in to it.

Thus shall man haue a fall, he shalbe brought lowe, & ye hygh lokes of ye proude layde downe. But ye Lord of Hostes, that holy God: shalbe exalted & vntouched, when he shal declare hys equyte and ryghtuousnesse after this maner: Then shall ye lambes eate theyr appointed foder, & shal fede plen teously i the moūtaynes. Wo be vnto vayne persones, that dra we wyckedn-es vnto thē, as it were with a corde: & synne, as it wer with a cart rop. Which vse to speke on this maner: let hym ma ke haste now, ād go forth with hys wor ke, that we may se it. Let the councel of the holy one of Israell come, and dra we nere, that we maye knowe it.

Wo be vnto them that cal euel good, and good euel: which make darcknes lyght, and lyght darcknesse, that make sower swete, and swete sower. Wo be E vnto them that are wyse in their owne sight, and thyncke them selues to haue vnderstandinge. Wo be vnto them, yt are connynge men tō suppe oute wyne, and experte to set vp dronkennes.
These geue sentence with the vngod-ly for rewardes, but cōdempne the iust cause of the rightuous.

Therfore lyke as fyre lycketh vpp the strawe, and as the flamme consu meth the stubble: Euen so (when theyr rote is full) theyr blossome shall vanysh awaye lyke dust or smoke: for they despyse the law of ye lord of hostes, & bla spheme the wordes of the holye maker of Israell.

Therfore is the wrathe of the Lord kindled also agaynst his people, and he  shaketh his hande at them: ye he F shall smyte so, that the hylles shall trē ble: And there karcases shall lye in the open stretes, lyke myre. After all this, the wrath of God shall not cease, but he shal stretch his hand wyder. And he shal geue a tokē vnto a straūg people, & call unto the in a farre countre, & be-holde, they shal come hastely w spede.

Ther is not one faint nor feble amon ge them, no not a slogyshe nor slepery persone. Ther shall not one of them put of the gyrdle from hys loynes, nor lou se theyr latched of his shue, Theyr aro wes are sharpe, and theyr bowes bente Their horse hofes are lyke flinte, and theyr cartwheles lyke a stormy wynd.
Their crye is as it were of a lyon, and the roaringe of them lyke lyons whelpes. They shall roare, and hantche up the praye, and no man shall recouer it or get it from them. In that daye they shalbe so fearce upon them, as the see.
And if we loke unto the lande, behold, it shall be all derckenes and sorow if we loke to heauen: beholde, it shall be darcke with carefull desperacion.

Then spake I: Lorde how long? he b answered: untyl the cities be utterly w out inhabitours, and the houses with out men, tyll the lande be also desolate, and lye unbuylded. For the Lord shal take the men farre awaye, so that the lande shall lye waste. Neuertheles, the it shall conuerte and be frutefull. And

The. vii. Chapter.

It happened in the tyme of Ahaz the A sonne of Jotham, which was the son ne of Oziah kig of Juda: that Rasin the kyng of Siria, & Phakeh the son ne of Romeliah, kinge of Israell: went up toward Jerusalem to besege it, but wanne it not. Nowe when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) herd word therof, that Siria & Ephraym were confederate to gether: his herte quaked (ye & the herte also of his people) like as a tre in the fiel de, that is moued with the wynde.
Then sayde God unto Esaye: go mete te Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at the head of the ouerpole, in the fotepath by by the fullers grounde, and saye vnto hym, take hede to thy selfe and be styll, but fear not, nether be faynt harted, for these two tales: that is: for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furiousnes of Razin the Sirian and Romelies sonne: be cause that the king of Siria Ephraim & Romelies sonne haue wickedly conspired agaynst the, saying: We wyl goodowne into Juda, vexe them, and brynge them vnder vs, and set a kynge there, euen the sonn of Tabeel. For thus sayeth ÿ Lorde God therto. It shall not so goo forth, nether come so to passe: for the head cytye of ÿ Sirians is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Razin. And after fyue B & threscore yeare, shall Ephraim be no-more a people. And the chefe cytie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelies sonne. And yf ye beleue not, there shal no promyse be kepte with you. Moreouer, God spake vnto Ahaz, sayig: requyre a tokne of the Lorde, thy God, whether it be towardes the depth beneth or towarde the height aboue. Then sayde Ahaz: I wyl requyre none, nether wyl I tempte the Lord.

The Lorde answered: Then heare to, ye of ÿ house of Dauid: Is it not ynouugh for you, that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also?
And therfore the Lorde shall geue you a token of hym selfe: Beholde, a virgin shall conceaue and beare a sonne, and shall cal his name a* Emanuel. Butter and hony shall he eate, that he maye kn ow the euel, and chose the good. But or C euer ÿ chylde come to knowledge, to eschue the euell and chose the good: The lande (that thou art so afrayde for) shal be desolate of both her kynges.

The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (soch as neuer came sence the tyme ÿ Ephraim departed frõ Juda) thorow the kyng of ÿ Assirians.
For at the same tyme b* shall the Lorde whistle for ÿ flies that are about the water of Egypt, and for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come, and shall lyght al in the valeyes, in ÿ holes of stone, vpon all grean thyn-ges, and in all corners.

At the same tyme shal the Lorde c* shaue d* the heare of the head and the fete and the beerd cleane of, with ÿ e* rasoure ÿ he shal paye them withall be D yonde the water: namely, with the king of the Assirians. At the same tyme shal a man liue with a cow, and two shepe.

Then because of the abundaunce of milck, he shal make butter and eate it.
So that euerye one which remayneth in the lande, shal eate butter and hony.
At the same time al vinyardes (though there be a thousand vynes in one, and were sold for a thousand siluerlinges) shalbe turned to breers and thornes.
Like as they shal come in to the lande with arowes and bowes, so shall all ÿ land be come breres and thornes. And as for al hilles that now are hewen do-wne, thou shalt not come vpon them, for feare of brerés and thornes. But ÿ catel shall be dryuen thyther, and the shepe shal fede there.

a* That is God with vs.

b* That is, shal geue a smal token and brynge the to gether. The hoste, as wel of Nabuchodonosor as of Sennaherib was of the Assirians, Egipciãs, and Indians. The egipcians calleth he flyes, because ther be in Egipt many flyes: and the Assirians bees, because ther is in Assiria abundaunce of bees and honye. By the water of Egypte, he signifieth Nilus.

c* That is, take cleane awaye.

d* That is, the nobles and rulers. And by the heare of the fete and bearde, are sygnified the comenalte, and whatsoeuer is seamely or manly in it.

e* By the rasoure that shal pase out, vnderstandeth he the kinge of Assur, and the other aboue named.

¶ The deliueraunce of the lande by Emanuel. The stone of offence, at which many shal stomble

MOreouer the Lord sayde vnto me: Take the a greate leafe, & A wryte in it, as men do with a penne, that he spede hem to robbe, and haste hem to spoyle. And immedietly I called vnto me faythful wytnesses Vriah the preste, and Zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that went I vnto the Prophetisse, that nowe had concea-ued and borne a sonne. Then sayde ÿ Lord to me: geue hem this name: Ma herschalal haschbas (that is: a spedie robber: an hasty spoyler). For why, or euer the chylde shal haue knowledg to saye: Abi and Im, that is father, and Mother): shall the ryches of Damascus and the substaunce of of Samaria be taken awaye, thorow the kynge of the Assirians.

B The Lord spake also unto me, sayinge: for so moch as the people refu seth the still a* rennynge water of Silo, and put their delyte in Razin & Rome-lies sonne: Beholde, ẏ Lord shal bringe myghtye and greate floudes of water upon thē: namely, ẏ kyng of ẏ Assiriās with all his power. Which shall poure out his furiousnes upon every man & renne over al their banckes. And shal breake i upon Juda. increasing in power, tyl he gett him bi ẏ throte. He shal fyll also the wydenesse of thy lande b* with hys brode wynges, O Emanuel.
Go together ye people, & gather you, herken to all ye of farre countrees.
Mustre you, & gather you: mustre you & gather you, take youre coūcel together, yet must youre councel com to nought, go i hande withal yet shal it not prospere. Excepte Emanuel: (ẏ is god) be wt C us. For the Lorde chastised me, & toke me by ẏ hāde, & warned me, saying unto me: that I shuld not walcke i ẏ waie of this people. He sayd moreover: foun-de wt none of thē, whosoever saie: yonder people are bounde together. Never D theles feare them not, nether be afraide of thē, but sanctyfye ẏ Lord of Hostes, lett hym be youre feare & drede. For he is ẏ sanctifyeng & stoune to stombleat c* ẏ rock to fal upō, a snar & net to both ẏ houses: to Israel, & the inhabitours of Jerusalē. And many shall stomble, fall, and be brokē upon him: yee they shalbe snared and taken. Now laye the witnesses together (sayde the Lorde) & seale ẏ lawe with my disciples. Thus I wayte upon the Lorde ẏ hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, & I loke unto him. But lo, as for me, & ẏ ch yldrē which ẏ Lord hath geuē me: we are a tokē & a wonder in Israel, for the Lorde of Hostes sake, which dwelleth upō the hyll of Syon. And therfore yf they saye unto you: aske councell at ẏ sothesaiers, witches, charmers & con-iurers, then make them thys answere:
Is there a people eny where, ẏ asketh not councell at his God: whether it be concernynge the dead, or the lyvynge.
If eny man want lyghte, let him loke upon the lawe and the testymony, whe ther they speke not after this meanig.
If he do not this, he stombleth and suf fereth hunger. And if he suffer hunger, he is out of pacience, and blasphemeth his kinge and his God. Then loketh he upwarde, and downe warde to the earth, and beholde, there is trouble & darcknesse, vexation is roūd about hi, and the cloude of erroure.
And out of such adversite, shall he not escape.

The notes

a* He calleth ẏ kyngdom of David, which fygureth the kyngdome of Christ, the styl rennynge water of Silo: which thing agreeth very wel unto Christe, ẏ was meke and lowly of hert. Mat. xi. & Zacha. ix. Beholde the kyng commeth unto the poore and lowly. &c. He raygneth in styl & peasable conscience. Silo is a sprynge at the fote of the hil of Sion: which hath not contynually water: but sprungeth certen houres and dayes, and commeth with a greate sound by ẏ bothom of the grounde, and ryftes and holes of an hard stony rocke. The maner of spekig is borowed, of the despised lytelnes of the water which signifieth the smal estimacion and poverty of the Christ.
b* With his broade wynges, that is, with his hostes of souldiers. So in Ezech. xvii. & is a kinge described, by an eagle that hath greate wynges.
c* Some reade, and as the rocke to faule upon, to ii. houses of Israel: a snare and net to ẏ inhabitours of Jerusalem. And they expound the sentence thus The Lord wyl be unto the. ii. houses of Israel, that is, to the house of Juda and to the houses of the trybes: partly a sanctifieng (by which understand helth and felycite) partly a ston to stomble at. So that some of both the houses shal be sanctified, and some shal stomble, but that chefely they of Jerusalem shal be snared. Who shal be sanctified, and who shal stomble and fal, doth S. Peter clerly expound i. Pet. ii. saying: unto you therfore which beleve, he is precious: but unto thē, which beleve not, ẏ stone which ẏ buylders refused, &c.

¶ The. ix. Chapter.

¶ He prophecieth of Christis nativite & dominion. A

Even lyke as in time past it hath bene wel sene, that ẏ land of zabulon & the land of Nephtali (wher thorow ẏ see waye goeth over Jordane in to the lande of Galilee) was at ẏ fyrst in lytel trouble, but afterward sore vexed.

Neverthelesse the people that have dwelte in darcknesse, shall se a greate lyght. As for them that dwel in ẏ land of the shadowe of death, upon them shal the lighte shyne. Shalt thou multyply the people, and not increase ẏ ioye also? They shal reioyce before the eue as men make mery in harvest, and as men that have gotten the vyctorye, when they deale the spoyle.

For thou shalt breake the a* yock of the peoples burthen: the staff of his shoul-B der and the rodd of his oppressoure as in the b* daye at Madian.

Moreouer all temerarious and sedicious poer (yee wher ther is but a cote fylde with bloude) shalbe burnt, & fede the fyre. For vnto vs a chyld shalbe born, & vnto vs a sonne shalbe geuen. Upon hys shoulder shall the kyngdome lye, & he shalbe called with his owne name: The wonderous geuer of councell, the myghtie God, the euerlasting father, the prynce of peace, he shall make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shall syt vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kingdom, to set vp the sam, to stablish it with equyte and ryghtuousnesse, frō thence forth for euermore. This shal the gelusy of the Lorde of hostes bringe to passe. The Lord sent C a worde in to Jacob, the same is come in to Israel. And the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwel in Samaria, can saye wyth pryde and hye stomackes, on thys maner: The tyle worckes fallen downe, but we wil buylde it with harder stones. The Molbery timbre is broken, but we shal sett it vp agayne w Cedre. Neuertheles, thee Lorde shall prepare Razin the enemy agaynest thē, & so ordre theire aduersaryes, the Syrians shal laye holde vpon thē before & the Philistines behynde, and so to deuoure Israel wyth open mouth.

After all this, the wrath of the Lord shall not ceasse, but yet hys hande shal be stret ched oute styll. For the people torneth not vnto hym, that chastiseth them, nether do they seke the Lorde of hostes. Therfore the Lorde shall rote oute of Israell both head and tayle, braunche and twigge in one daye. By the head, is vnderstande the Senatoure and honorable man, & bi the taile, the Prophet that preacheth lyes. For all they whych enfourme the people that thei be in aright case, loch be dysceauers.

Soch as men thyncke also to be perfecte amonge these, are but cast awaye. Therfore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in their yonge mē, nether fauoure their fatherlesse & wydowes. For they are all togegether Ypocrites and wicked, and al their mouthes speake folly. After al this shal not the Lordes wrath ceasse, but yet his hande shal be stretched out stil. For the vngodli burne as a fyre in the bryers and thornes: And as it were oute of a fyre in a wodd or a redde bush, so ascendeth the smoke of their pryde. D

For this cause shal the wrath of the Lord of Hostes fal vpon the lande, & the people shalbe consumed, as it were with fire, no mā shal spare his brother. If a mā do turne hi to the right hand, he shal famish, or to the lyft hand to eate, he shal not haue ynough. Euery man shal c* eate the flesh of his owne arme: Manasses shal eate Ephrai, & Ephraim Manasses & they both shal eate Juda. After al this shal not the Lordes wrath ceasse, but yet shal his hande be stretched out styl.

a* This yocke fygureth the yock and burthen of the lawe, which so oppressed the people that S. Peter could saye to the Apostles, y nether they nor theire fathers were able to kepe it Actes xv. b. This yock hath Christ broken according to this prophecye of Esay, and verely discharged the burthe therof. For we knowe now that God is satisfied and contented in the bloud of his sonne Christe, and that the many thousandfold punishmentes which are due to oure synnes, are cleane pardoned and forgeuen for the merites of the same Christe i. Johan ii. a. The Hebrues expound this of the destruccion of the host of Senaherib which was done by the Aungel, of which ye haue after in the xxxvii. g. And cal the host of the Assirians the yock of the peoples burthen, the staffe of the shoulder & rodde of the oppressour, but it is a more greuous bondage, wher with the the spirituall Senaherib of whome that Assirian was a certen figure and shadowe, bounde vs, and frō which christe hath delyuered vs.

b* By the daye at Madian is meant the daie wherein Gedeon with thre C. men slu an innumerable multitude of the Madyanytes, as ye reade Judic. vii. There fought the Lorde for hi and delyuered the people from bondage, euen so hath he now delyuered vs from the captiuite of the deuel, death, and hel by Christ.

c* He eateth the flesh of his owne arme, that taketh awaye the goodes of his nyghbour and robbeth his kynsman. The meanyng is, that one shal robbe and polle another.

b* Or passage. Vnder the land of Jordan.

¶ He prophesieth of the natiuitie of Christ & of his people: of the remnaunt of Israel, and of ÿ faith of the Heathen or gentilles.

The .xi. Chapter.

After thys there shall come a rodd forth of the kynred of Jesse, and a blossōe out of his rote. The spirete of the Lord shall lyght vpon it: the spirete of wysdom and vnderstandynge: thee spirete of counsell and strength, the spirete of knowledge, and of the feare of God: and shal make him feruent in the feare of God.

For he shall not geue sentence after the thyng that shall be brought before his eyes, nether reproue a matter at ÿ fyrst hearyng: but wyth ryghteousnesse shall he iudge the poore, and with ehelpynges shal he refourme the symple of the worlde.

He shall smyte the a* worlde b* wyth the staff of his mouthe, & wt ÿ breath of hys mouth shall he slaye the wicked. Righteousnesse, shal be the gyrdle of his loynes, treuth and faythfulnesse, the gyrdynge vp of hys raynes. Then shal the wolfe dwell with the lambe, & ÿ Leoparde shal lye downe bi the gote Bullockes, Lyons & catell shall kepe company together, so that a lytle childe shall dryue them forth. The cowe & the Bere shal fede together, & their yongeones shal lye together. The Lyon shal eate straw like the oxe, or ÿ cowe. The chyld whyle he sucketh shal haue a desyre to the serpētes nest, & when he is wened he shal put his hād in to the Cockatryces den nomā shal do euell to another, nomā shal destroy another, in al ÿ c* hyl of my Sāctuary. For ÿ erth shalbe ful of the knowledge of the Lorde, euen as though the water of the se flowed ouer the earth.

Then shal the gentyles enquere after ÿ rote of Jesse (which shalbe set vp for a token vnto the Gentiles) for his dwellynge shalbe glorious. At the same tyme shal the Lord take in hande againe, to conquere the remnaunt of his people which are left alyue. Frō the Assirians, Egypcians, Arabians, Morīās, Elamites, Caldeyes, Antiochiās and Ilandes of the see. And he shal sett vp a token among the Gentyles and gather together the dispersed of Israell, yee & the out castes of Juda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim and the enmyte of Juda shalbe cleane roted oute. Ephraim shal beare no euell wyll to Juda, & Juda shal not hate Ephraim: but they both together shal fly vpon the shoulders of the Philistines to warde the West, and spoyle them together that dwell towardes the East. The Idumytes and the Moabites shal let theyr handes fal and the Ammonites shalbe obedient vnto them. E

The Lorde also shal cleue the tonges of ÿ Egypcyans see with a myghtie wynde shal he lyft vp his hande ouer Nilus, & shal smyte his seuen streames and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shal he make a waye for his people, ÿ remayneth frō ÿ Assiriās lyke as it happened to the Israelites what tyme they departed out of ÿ lād of Egypt the f* That is they shalbe soare ashamed, that their faces shalbe as redde as fyre.

g* By the worlde here is signified Babilon, because of the greatnes therof.
h* By the dwellynge of these beastes in Babylon doth the Prophete meane, that it shal be vtterly destroyed, and becom as desolate as a wildernes: as after in ẏ .xxxiiii. c. Pellicanes, Storkes, &c. shal dwel therin.

¶ The retourne of the people from captiuite. The prosperitye of the people of God, and affliccion of their enemyes. The pryde of Babylon.

The .xiiii. Chapter.

But the Lorde wilbe mercyful vnto Jacob, and wyl take vp Israel agayne, and set thẽ in their owne lande. Straungers shal cleaue vnto them, and get thẽ to the house of Jacob. They shal take the people, and cary them home with them. And the house of Israel shal haue them in possession for seruauntes and maydens in the lande of the Lorde. They shal take those prysoners, whose captyues they had ben afore: and rule those that had oppressed them. When the Lord now shal brynge the to rest, from the trauayle, feare, and harde bõdage that thou wast laden wt al: thẽ shalt thou vse this mockage vpõ ẏ king of Babilõ, & saie: How happeneth it that the oppressour leaueth of? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? Doutles the Lorde hath broken the a* staf of the vngodly, and the scepter of the lordly. Which when he is wroth smyteth the people wt durable strockes, and in his wonders he persecuteth them: and tameth thẽ contynually. b* And therfore the whole worlde is now at rest and quyetnesse, and men synge for ioye.

Yee euen the Fyrre trees and Cedres of Libanus reioyce at thy fal, saying: Now that thou art layd downe, there come no mo vp to destroye vs. c* Hel also trembleth at thy comming, al mighty men and princes of the earth, steppe forth before the. Al kynges of ẏ earth stand vp from ther seates, ẏ they maye al (one after another) synge and speake vnto ẏ. Art thou wounded also as we? art thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is gone downe to hel: Mothes shalbe laide vnder the, & wormes shalbe thy couering.

How art thou fallen from heauẽ (d* O Lucyfer) thou fayre mornyng chyld hast thou gotten a fal euen to ẏ groũd, ẏ (not withstanding) dydest subdue the people: And yet ẏ thoughtest in thyne herte: I wyl clyme vp into heauen, and make my seate aboue the sterres of god, I wyl syt vpon the gloryous mount towarde the North, I wil clyme vp aboue the cloudes, & wyl be lyke the highest of al. Yet darre I saye ẏ thou shalt be broughte downe to the depe of hel. They ẏ se the, shal narowly loke vpon the, and thincke in them selues, saying: Is this the mã, ẏ brought al landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes afrayde: Is this he that made ẏ worlde in a maner waste, and laide the cities to the grounde, which let not his prysoners go home?

How happeneth it that the kynges of al people lye, euery on at home i his owne palace, with worshipe, and thou art cast out of thy graue lyke a wylde braunch: like as dead mens rayment ẏ are shut thorowe with the sweard: as they ẏ go downe to ẏ stones of ẏ depe:

as a deade coarse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buryed with them. Euen because that thou hast wasted thy land, and destroied thy people. For the generacion of the wicked shalbe without honour, for euer. There shal away be sought to destroy their children, for their fathers wickednes: they shal not come vp agayne to possesse the lande, & fyl ẏ worlde ful of castels and townes.

F I wyl stand vp against them (saith the Lord of hostes) and root out the name and generation of Babilon (sayth the Lorde) and will geue it to the Otters, and wil make water poddels of it. And I wyl swepe them out with the besome of destruccion, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. The Lord of Hostes hath sworne an othe, saying it shal come to passe, as I haue determyned: & shalbe fulfylled as I haue deuysed. The Assirians shalbe destroyed in my lande, & vpon my mountaynes wyll I treade them vnder fote. Where thorow hys yocke shal come from you, and his burthen shal be take from your shoulders. Thys deuyce hath God taken thorow the whole worlde, and this is his hād stretched out ouer all people. For yf ẏ Lorde of Hostes determē a thing, who wyl disanulle it? And if he stretch forth hys hande, who wyl hold it in againe?

G The same yeare that kynge Ahaz died, God threatened by Esay on this maner: Reioyce not (ẏ whole Palestyna) as though the rod of him that beateth the were broken: for out of the serpentes rote, there shal waxe a kockatrice, and the frute shalbe a fyre worme. But the poore shal fede of the best thynges, and the symple dwell in saftye. Thy rotes wyl I destroy with honger, and it shal slaye the remnaunt. Houle ye poztes, wepe ye cytyes, and feare thou (O whole Palestina) for there shal come frō the north a smoke, whose power no man maye abyde. Who shal then maynteyne the messages of ẏ Gētyles? But ẏ lord stablysheth Sion & ẏ poore of my people shal put their trust in him.

a ✣ By the staffe is vnderstand tyranny, and by the scepter domynacion.

b ✣ While Nabuchodonosor his childe liued ẏ people were not onlye oppressed, but also kynges and Prynces, but when they were once ryd out of the waye, then was myserye and waylynge ended. By the worlde he signifieth the comens: and by firre trees and ceders, the heades and rulers, as before the .ii. c.

c ✣ That is euen they that be in hel wil tremble, whē Nabuchodonosor commeth thither. It is figuratly spoken to the further settyng out of the mischief of Nabucodonosor.

b ✣ He compareth the death of Nabuchodonosor to the falling of Lucifer the mornyng sterre, which he calleth the childe of the mornyng, because it appereth onely in the mornyng. The meanyng is: No such thinge ought to haue happened vnto the, that in earth wast lyke the mornyng sterre, which no mā can take out of heauen: And thou that wast so myghtye, that thou destroyedst, what people ẏ wouldest and vnto whome it was a pastyme to destroy owe nacions, hast receaued such measure as ẏ hast geuest. Such a like thinge is there in Eze. xxviii. Against kyng Tirus.

¶ The .xv. Chapter.

This is the heuy burthe vpon Moab: Ar of Moab was destroyed (as me thought) in the nyght season: A The walles of Moab peryshed in the nyght, and banished away: They wente to Baith and Dibon in ẏ hye places, for to wepe: Moab dyd mourne frō Nebo to Medba: ✣ Al their heades were colled, and al their beardes shauen. In their stretes were they B gyrded about with sacke cloth. In all toppes of their houses and stretes, was there nothing, but mournyng and weping. Hesebon and Eleale cried, that their voyce was herde vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab bleated and cryed for very sorow of their myndes. Wo is my herte for Moabs sake: They fled vnto the cytye of zoar, which is like a fayre frutful bullock, they went C vp to Luhith, weping. The waye toward Horonaim was ful of lamentacon for the hurt. The waters of Nimrim were dried vp, ẏ grasse was withered herbes destroyed and what necessarye grene thing there was beside. In like maner the thynge that was lefte them of their substaunce, they caryed it by water to Araby. The crie went ouer ẏ whole lande of Moab: from Eglaim vnto Beer, was there nothing but mournynge. The waters of Dimon were full of bloude, for the enemye had sent thither a bonde of men, which as a lion laye a wayte for the remnaunte of the land, and for them that were escaped.

a* In tymes past it was a token of mournynge, to shaue the heed and clyppe the bearde: and therfore saith the Prophete, that the Moabytes cut awaye their heares, for sorowe and carfulnes. A like thin ge haue ye in Jeremy. vii. f. Cut of thyne heare, and cast it awaye. &c.

¶ The destruction Moab.

¶ The. xvi. Chappter.

A Then sent the Lordes of the lande a man of warre, fro the rock that lyeth toward the desert, a* vnto the hyll of the daughter Syon, (For as for the b* daughters of Moab they were as it had bene a tremblynge byrde, that is put out of her nest, by y ferry of Arnō) which messenger sayde: gather your councel, come to gether, c* couer vs with your shadowe d* i the myddaye, as the nyght doth: hyde the
B chased, and bewraye not them that are fled, let the persecuted Moabites dwel amonge you, be oure open refuge agaynst y destroyer: for the aduersary oppresseth vs, y robber vndoeth vs, & the tyraunt dryueth vs out of oure lande. But the trone of your kingdom is ful of grace, therfore he that sytteth vpon it with faythfulnesse and trueth in the house of Dauid, know the thing, and do his dilygence to help shortly, accordyng to equyte and rightuousnes.
As for Moabs pryd shal they answer, it is wel knowen. And al though they be excellent, proude, arrogant, and hye mynded: yet is their strength nothing like. And therfore Moab complayneth vnto Moab, wher thorow they cōe al to mourne: & now that they be smytten, they take their deuyce beneth by y
C bricke wal, and make their complaint. The suburbes also of Hesebō were made waste, & y Prices of y gentiles, hewed downe y vynyardes of Sibma, which were plāted wnoble grapes, & spred vnto Jazer, & went vnto y end of y desert, whose braūches stretched their selues forth beyōd y see. Therfore I mourned for Jazer & for y vynyardes of Sibma w grete sorow. I poured my teares vpō Hesebō & Eleale, for al the it sōges were layde downe, i their haruest & gatherig of ther grapes: Mirth & chere was gon out of y feld & viniardes in so muche y no mā was glad nor sōg. Ther wēt no treder i to y winepresse, their mery chere was laid downe.
Wherfore my bely rōbled (as it had bene a lute) for moabs sake, & mine inward D membres for the brick walles sake.
For it happened thus also: when Moab saw y she was turned vpsyde downe: she went vpō hie in to her Sanctuary, to make her prater there, but she myght not be helped. This is the deuyce which the Lord toke in hande at that tyme agaynst Moab. But now the Lord sayeth thus: In thre yeare shall the power of Moab with their pōpe (which be is greate) be mynyshed, lyke as the burthen of an hyred seruaunte. And as for y remnaunt of thē, they shalbe lesse then a fewe, and not rekened moch worth.

This is the heuy burthen vp on A Damascus: Beholde Damascus shal be no more a cytye, but a heape of broken stones. The cytyes of Aroer shalbe waste: the catell shall lye there, & noman shal fraye them awaye. Ephraim shal nomore be strōge, & Damascus shall no more be a kyngdome. And as for the glory of y remnaunt of y Syrians, it shalbe as the glory of y chyldre of Israel, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. At that tyme also shall the glory of Jacob be very poore, & his fatnes leane. It shal happē to thē, as whē one sheareth in haruest, which cutteth hys B hand full with y sickle, & whē one gathereth sheaues together i y valleye, of a* Raphaim, there remayneth yet some cares ouer: Or as when one shaketh ā olyue tree, whych fyndeth but two or thre olyue beries aboue i y toppe, & foure or fyue i y braunches. Thus y Lord God of Israel hath spokē, Thē shal mā conuerte againe vnto his maker, & turne his eyes to y holy one of Israel. And sha. l not turne to y aulters y are y worke of his owne handes, nether shall he loke vpon groues & ymages, which his fingers haue wrought. At y same time shal their strōg cities be desolat lik as they late, because thou haste forgotten God thy sauyour, and haste not called to re-membraunce the rock of thy strengthe.

Wherfore thou hast also set a fayre plant, and grafted a straung braunch.
In the daye when thou dydest plant it, it was greate, and gaue soone y frute of thy sede: But in the day of haruest y shalt reap an heap of sorows ꝛ mysereis

Wo be to the multitud of much pe is their porcyon, that do vs harm, and heritage of them that robbe vs.

soone, and do your message vnto a str-aung and herd folke: to a fearful peo ple, and to a people that is further the thys: to a desperate and pylled folcke, whose lande is deuyded from vs with ryuers of water. Yee all ye y lyt in the compasse of the world, & dwel vpo the earth: when the toke shalbe geuen vp on the mountaynes, then loke vp: and B when the Hoorne bloweth, thenne

And thus they were layde waste, for y

The prophet prophecyeth euyll agaynst Egypt.

The. xix. Chapter.

This is the heuy burthe vp on Egypt: Beholde, the Lo rde wyll a * ryde vpon a sw- A yfte cloude, & com into Eg ypte. And the goddes of Egypt shall tremble at his comynge, & the hert of Egypte shall quake wych in her. For thus sayeth the Lord: I wil stere vp the Egypcyans one agaynst another amoge the selues, so that one shalbe euer agaynst his brother and neyghbour, yee one cyte agaynst another, & one kingdom agaynst another.
And Egypt shalbe choked in her selfe.
When they aske councel at their god-des, at their Prophets, their sothsaiers & witches: then wyll I brynge their co B uncell to naught. I wyll deliuer Egypt also into the handes of greuous rulers, and a cruell kenge shall haue the rule of them. b * The water of the see shalbe drawne out, Nilus shall syn ke awaye, & be drocke vp. The ryuers also shalbe drawn out, the welles shal decreace and drye awaye, Rede & rush shall fayle, y grasse by the waters syde or vpo the ryuers back, ye and whatso euer is sowed by the waters, shalbe wy thered, destroyed, and brought to naught. The fysshers shal mourne, al such as cast angles in the water shall co-playne, & they that sprede their nettes i the water, shalbe faynt harted. Such as laboure vpon flax & sylck shal com to pouerte, & they also that weeue fine workes. All the poundes of Egypte, all the pollyeye of their Moates and dyches shall come to naught.

Yee the vndyscrete princes of Zoan, the coūcell of the wise Senatoures

of Pharao shal turn to folyshnes: Tho se that dare boast and say of Pharaos behalfe: I am come of wyse people, I ã come of the olde regall Progeny. But where are now the wyse men? Let them tell the and shew the, what the Lord of hoostes hath taken in hand against E gypt. Foles are those prynces of Zoã, and proude are the Princes of Noph: yee they deceue Egypt with theyr noby C litie of their stocke. For the Lorde hath made Egypt droncken with the spirite of errour, and they shal vse it in al matters: euen lyke as a dronken man goeth spewynge about. For Egipte shall lack good counsel, so that they shal not kno we what to do, nether beginig, nor ende nether vpon the lande nor water. Thẽ shall the Egiptians be lyke vntoo womẽ, afrayd and astonyed, at the lyfting vp of the heade, which the Lord of hoo stes shal lyft vp ouer them. The Lande of Juda also shal make the Egyptiãs afrayde, who so doth but speake vpõ it, shall put them in feare: And that becau se of the counsell, which the Lorde of ho stes hath deuised agaynst them. Then shall the fyue Citties of Egypte speake wyth the Cananites tonge, and sweare D by the lorde of hoostes, and Heliopolys shalbe one of them. At the same tyme shall the lorde of Hoostes haue an aulter in the myddest of the land of Egyp te, with this title therby, Unto the lord.
Thys shal be a token or testymony vn to the Lord of Hostes in the land of E gypt, when they shal crye vnto hym, be cause of those that oppres them: that he shal sende them a Captayne and a sauyoure to delyuer them.

Moreouer, Egypte shallbe boughte vnto the lord, & the Egipcians also shal know the lord at ÿ same tyme: they shal do hym reuerence with the peace offering es, and with me at offrynges: they shal promyse him offrynges: yee and paye E hym also. Thus the lord, shall smyte Egypt, and heale it agayne: and so shal they turne to the lord, and he shal haue mercy vpon ÿ, and saue them. Thẽ shal ther be a comen waye out of Egypt in to Assiria. The Assiryans shall come in to Egypt, and the Egypcyans into Assiria. The Egypcians also and the Assirians shall both haue one Goddes seruyce.
Then shal Israel with honoure be the thyrde to Egipte and Assur. And the Lord of hosts shal blesse them, saing: Blessed is my people of the Egipciãs, Assur is the worcke of my handes, but Israel is myne enheritaunce.

A This is the heuye burthē of the a* waste see: A greuous vysyon was shewed vnto me, lyke as when a storme of wynd and rayne rusheth in from the wyldernes, that terryble lande. Who so maye deceaue (sayd the voyce) let him deceaue: who so maye dystroye, let him distroye. Up Elam, besege it O Madai: for I wyll styll al their grounynges. With thys, ẏ reynes of my backe were ful of payne: Panges came vpon me, as vpō a woman in her trauayle. When I herd it/ I was abashed: ⁊ when I loked vp, I was afrayde. Myne hert panted, I trembled for feare. The b* darcknes made me fearful in my mynde.

B Yee sonne make ready the table (sayde this voyce) kepe the watch, eate ⁊ drynke: Up ye Captaines, take you to youre shylde, for thus the Lord hathe charged me: go thy waye, ⁊ set a watchman, ẏ he may tel what he seeth. And whē he had wayted dylygently he saw two horsmen, the one rydinge vpon an Asse, the other vpon a camel. And the lyō cryed: Lord, I haue stand waytinge al the whole daye/ ⁊ haue kept my watch all the nyght. For the Lorde hath so determed in him wype away the teares from all faces, & take awaye the confusyon of hys peo-

At the same tyme shall it be sayd: lo, this is our God, in whome we put our trust, and he hath healed vs. This is ÿ Lord that we haue wayted for: Let vs C reioyse and delyte in hys helth. For the hande of the Lorde ceaseth vpon this hyll. But Moab shalbe threshen down vnder hym, like as the straw is troden vnder fete in a dōg hyl. For he shal stre tche out hys hands vpon hym lyke as a

And therfore make no mockes at it, that youre captiuite increase not: for I haue herde the Lorde of Hostes saye, that there shall come a soden destruccion & plage vpon the whole earth. Take hede and heare mi voice, pondre and mercke my wordes wel. Goeth not the housbande man euer in due sea son earnestly to hys lande: he moweth & ploweth his grounde to sowe. And when he hath made it playne, he soweth it wt fetches or comyn. He soweth the wheate and Barlye i their place Millum and Rye also in their place. And that he make not ryght, his God teacheth him and sheweth him. For he treadeth not ẏ fytches out with a wayne, nether bringeth he the carte whele there ouer the comin, but he thressheth the fytches oute with a flayle, and the comin with a rod. As for ẏ wheate, he gryndeth it to make bred ther of, In as moch as he con not brynge it to passe with treadynge out. For nether ẏ brosynge ẏ the cart wheles make, nor his beastes cangrind it. But now the multytude of all the people, that went out agaynst Ariel: the whole host, the stronge holdes, and sege: is lyke a dreame which appeareth in the nyght: It is lyke as whẽ an hungry mã dreameth that he is eating, and when he awaketh, he hath nothynge: lyke as when a thirstie man dreameth that he is drinkinge, and when he awaketh, he is faynte, and his soule vnpacient,

¶ The .xxx. Chapter.

Wo be to those shrynkīg chyldrē (sayeth ÿ Lord) which seke coūsell, but not at me: whych take a webbe in hande, but not after mi wil: that they maye heape one synne vpon and aske me no councell) to seke helpe B at the power of Pharao, and com forte in the shadowe of the Egyptians. But Pharaos helpe shalbe your confusyon, and the comforte i the Egyptians sha dowe shalbe your awne shame. Youre straungers com vnto Hanes. But y shall al be ashamed of the peple ÿ may not help you, which shal not brīg you strēgth or com forte, but shame & confu syō. Your beastes haue borne burthēs vpō their backes towarde the South, thorowe the wale that is full of parell and trouble, because of the lyon & lyones, of the Cockattrice and shutynge dragon. Yee the Mules bare youre substaunce, and the Camels brought your tresure vpō their croked backs, vnto a peple ẏ cannot helpe you. For the Egypcians helpe shalbe but vayne and lost. Therfore I tolde you also that your pryde shulde haue an end. Wherfore go hence & wryte the thys in theyr tables and note it in a boke: ẏ it mai remayne by their posteriti, & be styll kept For it is an obstinate people, vnfaythfull childeren, chylderen that wyll nott heare the lawe of the Lorde.

They darre saye to the Prophetes:
C Intromitte your selues with nothing, and vnto the Sothsayers: tel vs of no thyng for to come, but speake frendlye wordes vnto vs, and preache vs fal se thynges. Treade out of the waye, goo out of the path, turne the holy one of Israel from vs. Therfore thus sayth the holy one of Israell: In as moche as ye haue cast of youre bewtie, and cōforted youre selues with power and nymblenes/and put youre confydence therin: therfore shall ye haue thys myschefe agayne for youre destruction and fal, lyke as an hye wale, that falleth because of some ryft (or blast) whose breakinge cometh sodenlye.

And youre destruction shalbe lyke as an erthen pot, which breketh no mā touchinge it, and breaketh so sore, that a man shal not fynde a sheuer of it too fetche fyre in, or to take water wyth all out of the pytte. For the Lord God, euē the holy one of Israell hath promysed thus. With styll sittinge and rest, shall ye be healed, in quyetnesse & hope shall your strenght lye. Notwithstādyng ye
D regarde it not, but ye wyl say: No, for thus are we constrayned to fle vpon horses, And therfore shall ye flye, we must ryde vpon swyft beastes, and therfore your persecutours shal yet be swyfter. A thousande of you shall fle for one/or at the moost for fyue, which do but onely geue you euel wordes vntyll ye bee desolate as a ship mast vpō ā hye mountayne/and as a beaken vpon an hill.

Yet standeth the Lord waytynge, that he maye haue mercy vpon you, and lyfteth him self vp, ẏ he may receiue you to grace. For the Lorde God is ryghtuous. Happye are all they that wayte for hym. For thus (O thou people of E Syon and ye cyttisens of Jerusalem) shall ye neuer be in heuynes, for doutlesse he wyll haue mercy vpon the. As soone as he heareth the voyce of thy crye, he wil helpe the. The Lord geueth you the* bred of aduersyte, and the water of trouble. But thine instructer flyeth not farre from ẏ, yf thyne eyes loke vnto thyne instructoure, and thyne eares harken to hys word, that cryeth after the and sayeth: this is the waye, go thys, and turne nether to the ryght hande nor to the lefte.

Morcouer, yf ye destroye the syluer F workes of your Idoles, and cast away the golden coapes that ye deckte them wyth all (as fylthynes) & saye gett you hence: Then wyll he geue rayne to the sede that ye shal sowe in the earth, and geue you breade of the encrease of the earth, so that al shalbe plentuous and aboundaūt. Thy catell also shall be fede in the brode medowes, yet thine oxē and Mules that tyll the grounde, shal eate good foder, which is purged with ẏ fanne. Goodly ryuers shall flow out of al his moūtaines and hylles. In the daye of the greate slaughter when the towers shal fal, the moone shal shine as ẏ sonne, and the sonne shyne shal be seuen folde, and haue as moche shyne, as in seuen dayes besyde.

In that daye shal the Lorde bynde vp the brosed sores of his People, and heale their woundes. Beholde the glory of ẏ Lord shal come from farre, his face shall burne, that no man shalbe able to abyde it, his lyppes shal wagge for very indygnacyon, and hys tonge shalbe as a consumynge fyre. Hys breath like a vehemēt floud of water, which goeth vp to the throte. That he maye take awaye the people, which haue turned them selues vnto vanyte, & the brydle of errour, that lyeth in other folkes chawes.

But ye shall synge, as ẏ vse is in ẏ night of the holy solempnitie. Ye shal reioyse

selopse frõ youre harte, as they ẏ come with the pype, when they go vp to the mount of the Lord, vnto the rock of I srael. The Lord also shal set vp the po were of hys voyce, & declare hys terrib D le arme, with hys angrycountenaũce, yee and the flame of the consumynge fyre, with earthquake, tempest of wind, & hayle stones. Then shal the Assyrians feare also, because of the voyce of the Lorde, which shall smyte him wyth ẏ rodde. And the same rodde which the Lorde wyl sende vpon him, shal moued the whole foundacyon: with tromper, with noyse of warre and batell to destroye. For he hath prepared ẏ fyre of pa yne from the begynnynge, yee euen for kynges also. This hath he made depe & wide, ẏ norisshing therof is fyre and wood innumerable, which the breath of the Lorde kyndleth, as it were a match of brymstone.

of Hostes kepe, saue and defend and de lyuer Jerusalem. Therfore, O ye chil dren of Israell, turne agayne, lyke as C. ye haue exceaded in your goynge back.
For in that daye euery man shal caste out his Idols of syluer and gold, whi ke Idoles) expounde it thus. Not by oure Idoles, not by our strength, not by manes helpe (which a l the power of, God & the inuisible swerde that can Beholde, theyr aungels crye wythout, the messaungers of peace wepe bitterly: The stretes are waste, ther walketh no man therin, the appoyntment is broke, the cyties are dispysed, they are not regarded/ the doselate earth is in heuines.

Lybanus taketh it but for a sporte, ẏ it a* Their spoyle, that is, of the Assirians. It should seme that their spoyle was so gathered after that ẏ aungel had destroyed the hoste of Senaherib. iiii. Reg. xix. g. ii. Para. xxxii. e. Esay. xxxvii. g b* By the conceauyng is vnderstande the thought and ymagynacion, and by the bearynge or bringig forth the worke. The Assirians thought to take ẏ citye of Jerusalem, but their thought was in vaine and their worke of none effect. Wherupon they are counted to conceaue stubble and bringe forthe strawe.

c* Your spret. &c. That is, your proude thoughtes and Imaginacions shalbe the very fyre that shall deuoure you: and the cause wherfore the lorde shall sende out his aungel to destroye you.

¶ Jerusalem is asseged by Sennaherib, in yͤ time of kyng hezekiah.

IN the .xiiii. yeare of king A Hezekiah, cā Sennaherib kynge of the Assyrians do-wne, to laye sege vnto al the stronge cyties of Juda.*
And the king of yͤ Assyrians sent Rabsakeh frō Lachis towarde Jerusalem, agaynst kynge Hizekiah, with a greuous hoste, which set him bi the condyte of the ouerpole in the way that goeth thorow the fullers lande. And so there cam forth vnto hī Eliakim Helkiahs sonne yͤ Preistdēt, Sobna the Scribe & Joah Asaphs sonne the secretory.
And Rabsakeh sayde vnto them: Tell Hezekiah, that yͤ greate king of Assyria sayeth thus vnto him: What presump cion is this, that thou trustest vnto?
Thou thinckest (peraduentur) that th- B ou hast councell and power ynough to mayntene this warre: or els wher to tr ustest thou, that thou castest thy selfe of fro me? lo, yͤ puttest thy trust in a broke staf of rede (I meane Egipt) which wh yͤ leaneth vpon, it goeth into his hande & shutteth him thorowe. Euen so is Pharao the kyng of Egypt, vnto all thē that trust in him. But yf thou wouldest saie to me: we trust i the Lord our God:
A goodly God indede: whose hye places & aulters.
Hesekiah toke down, & comaūded Juda
and & Jerusalē, to worshyp only before þ al ter. Abide þ, þ hast made a cōdiciō wt my Lord the kyng of þ Assiriās, þ he should C geue þ ii. thousād horses: art þ able to set men ther vp? Seing now that thou cāste not resist the power of the smallest Prynce, that my Lorde hath, how darest thou trust in the charettes and hor semen of Egypt? Moreouer, thynckest thou that I am come downe hyther, to destroye thys land without the Lordes wyll? The Lord sayd vnto my, go down into the Land, that þ mayest destroy it.

Then sayde Eliakim, Sobna and Joah vnto Rabsaketh: speake to vs thi seruaunts (we praye the) in the Siriās language / for we vnderstande it well: And speke not to vs in the Jewes tōg, lest the folke heare, whiche lyeth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabsakeh: Thinckeyt, that the Kynge sent me to speke thys only vnto you? Hath he not D sent me to them also, that lye vpon the wall? þ they be not cōpelled to eat theyr own dōg & drik theyr oune stale wt you?

And Rabsaketh stode styl, and cried with a lowd voyce in the Jewes tong, and sayde: Now take hede, how þ great kyng of the assirians geueth you war nynge. Thus sayth the kynge: Let not Hezekiah disceaue you, for he shall nott be able to delyuer you. Moreouer let not Hesekiah comfort you in the Lord, when he sayth: The lorde without dou te shall defend vs & shal not geue ouer thys cytie into the handes of the kyng of the assirians, beleue hym not. But thus sayt he the kyng of Assiria: opteyn my fauour, enclyne to me: so may euery man enioye hys vyneyardes and figg E tres & drike þ water of his cisterne: vn to þ time þ I come my selfe, and bryng you into a land that is lyke your owne, wher in is wheate and wyne, whiche is both sowen with sede / and planted with vyneyardes. Let not Hezekiah disce aue you, when he sayeth vnto you: the Lorde shal delyuer vs. Myght the Goddes of the Gentiles kepe euery mās la nde, frō the power of the king of the As syrians? Wher is the God of Homath & Arphad? Where is the God of Sephar uaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hande? Or which of al goddes of the landes / hath deliue red the contrie out of my power, so þ þ Lord shuld delyuer Jerusalem fro my hand? Unto the, Hezekiahs messaun-gers held their tunges, and answered not one word: for þ kyng had charged them, that they shulde geue hym none answere. So came Eliakim Helkiahs sonne the Presidēt, Sobna the scribe, and Joah Asaphs sonne the secretary / vnto hezekiah with rent clothes, & told him the wordes of Rabsaketh.

Hezekiah humbleth himself before the lord. The armye of Sennaherib is slayne of the Angell of þ Lord: & he him selfe is kylled of his owne sonnes.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

When Hezekiah heard that A he rent his clothes, & put on a sack clothe, and went into the temple of þ lorde.
But he sent Eliakim the Presydent, Sobna the Scrybe, wyth the eldest prestes clothed in sack / vnto the prophet Esay þ sonne of Amoz, and they sayde vnto him: Thus sayth Hezekiah: This is the day of trouble, of plage and of wrath: lyke as when a chyld cometh to the byrth, but the woman hath no power to bryng it forth.
The Lord thy god (no dout) hath wel consydred the wordes of Rabsakeh, wh om his Lord the Kyng of the Assirians hath sent to, defye and blaspheame the lyuing God: with suche wordes as the Lord thy God hath heard ryght wel.
And therfore lyft vp thy prayer for the remnaunt, that yet are left. So the seruauntes of kynge Hezekiah cam to Esay.

And Esay gaue them this answere: B Saye thus vnto your lord: thus saeth the Lorde: Be not afrayed of the wor-des that thou hast herd, wherwith the kyng of the Assyrians, seruaūtes haue blasphemed me. Behold, I wyl cause a wynd go ouer him, as sone as he heare th it, he shal go agayne into his coun-tre, there wyl I destroye him with the swerde. Nowe when Rabsakeh returned, he founde the kyng of Assyria lay ing sege to Lobnah, for he had vnder stad / þ he was departed from Lachis.
For there came a rumoure, that Thar hakah kynge of Ethiopia was come forthe to warre agaynst him.

C And when the kyng of Assyria hearde that, he sent other messaūgers to king Hezekiah, with this cōmaundemēt: Spake thus to Hezekiah king of Juda: Let not thi God deceaue the, in whom thou hopest, & sayest: Jerusalē shal not be geuē in to the hādes of the kyng of Assyria. For thou knowest wel how the kynges of Assyria haue handled al the landes that thei haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Were the people of the Gentiles (whō mi progenytours cōquered) delyuered at any tyme thorow their goddes? As namely, Gozan/Haran, Rezeph, & the chyldren of Eden, which dwell at Thalassar. Where is ye kyng of Hemath, & ye kinge of Arphad, & the king of the cytye Sepharuaim, Ena and Iua? Now when Hezekiah had receaued the letter of the messaungers, & red it, he wēt vp into ye house of the Lord & opened the letter before the Lorde. And Hezekiah prayed before ye Lorde on this maner: O Lorde of hostes, thou God of Israel, which dwellest vpon Cherubin. Thou art the God, that only is God of all ye kyngdomes of the world, for thou only hast created heauē & earth. Encline thine eare Lord & considre, open thyne eyes, O Lord, & se, & pondre al ye wordes of Sennaherib, which hath sent hys embassage to blas-D sphemie the liuinge God. It is true, O Lord, that the kynges of Assyria haue conquered all kyngdomes & landes, & cast their goddes in the fyre. Not with standynge those were noo goddes, but the workes of mens handes, of wod or stone, therfore haue they destroied thē.
Delyuer vs then, O Lorde oure God, frō the handes of Sennaherib, that al kingdomes of the earthe maie knowe, that thou only art the Lorde. Then Esay the sonne of Amoz sent vnto Hez ekiah, saienge: Thus sayth ye Lord God of Israell: Where as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touching Sen naherib, thys is the answere, that the Lorde hath geuē concernyng him: De spised art thou, & mocked, a* O daugh ter of Syō, he hath shakē his head at the, O daughter of Jerusalem. But ye Sēnaherib, whō hast ye defyed & blasph emed? And agaist whō hast ye lifted vp thy voic, & exalted thy proud lokes the agaynst the holy one of Isral. Thou by the seruauntes haste blasphemed the E Lord, & thus holdest thou of thy self: I couer the hye mountaynes, and sides of Libanus with my horsemen. And there wyll I cut downe the hye Cedre tres and the fayrest Fyrre trees. I wyl vp into the heyght of it, & into ye thickest of his tymbre woddes. If there be not water, I wyl graue and drynke. And as for waters of defence / I shal dry the vp with the fete of myne hoste. Yee (sayst thou) hast thou not hearde, what I haue taken in hande, and broughte to passe of olde tyme? That same wyl, I do now also: Waste, destroye, and bringe stronge cities vnto heapes of stones. For their inhabitours shal be lyke lame men, brought in feare and confounded. They shalbe like ye grasse and grene herbes in the felde, lyke the hey vpon house toppes, that wethereth afore it be growen vp.

I know thy wayes, thy goyng forth and thy cōmyng home, yea & thy mad nes agaynst me. Therfore thy furyousnesse agaynste me, and thy pryde is F come before me. I wyl put b* a ringe in thy nose, and a bridle bit in the chawes of ye, & turne ye aboute, euen ye same waie thou camest. I wyll geue the also this tokē (O Hezekiah) this yere shalt thou eate that is kepte in stoare, & the next yeare such as groweth of hym selfe, & in ye thyrd yeare ye shal sowe and reape, yea ye shall plante vyneyardes, and enioye the frutes therof.

And such of the house of Juda as are escaped, shal come together, and the remnaunt shal take rote bynethe, and bringe forth frute aboue. For the escaped shall go out of Jerusalem, and the remnaunt from the mount Syon. G And this shall the gelousy of the Lord of hostes bring to passe. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde, concernynge the kyng of ye Assyrians: He shall not come in to the cytie, and shall shote no arowe into it, there shall no shilde hurte it, nether shal thei graue aboute it. The same wa-ye that he came, shall he retourne, and come at this cytie, saieth the Lord. And I wil kepe and saue the citie (saieth he) for myne

for myne owne, and for my seruaunte Dauids sake.

* Thus the aungel went forthe, & slwe of the Assirians hoste, an clxxxv. thousand. And when men arose vp early (at Jerusalem:) Behold, al laye full of dearde bodyes. So Sennaherib the kynge of the Assyrians brake vp / and dwelt at Niniue. Afterward it chaunsed, as he prayed in the temple of Nesrah his God / that Adramalech & Sarazer his owne sonne slwe hym with y sweard / and fled in to the lande of Ararat. And Asar had on hys sonne reygned after him.

a* The daughter of Sion doth often sygnyfye the people of pure fayth, which purelye geueth hede vnto gods word, that was first geuen in the hyl Sion etc. &c. Moall men reade thus: O thou vyrgin, daughter of Sion. &c. S. ¶ Hezekiah is sycke vnto the deathe, but is yet reuiued by the Lord, & lyueth. xv. yeres after: for which benefites he geueth thankes.

C Not longe afore thys, was Hezekiah sick vnto y deth: and the Prophet Esay the sonne of Amoz came vnto him, and sayde: Thus commaundeth the Lord: Set thyne house in order: for thou must dye, & shalt not escape. Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall, and prayed vnto the lorde / and sayde: Remember (O Lord) y I haue walcked before the in* treuth and a stedfast hert, and haue done the thing y is pleasaunt to y. And Hezekiah wept sore. Then said God vnto Esay: go & speke vnto Hezekiah: y Lord God of Dauid thy father sendeth y this word: I haue harde thy prayer, and consydred thy teares: beholde I wyll put fyftene yeres mo vnto thy life, and delyuer the and the cytie also, from the hand of the kyng of Assiria, for I wyl defend the city. And take the this toke of the Lord / that he wyll do it, this he hath spoken:

D Beholde, I will returne the shadowe of Ahaz dial / y now is layed out wyth the Sunne, and brynge it ten degrees backwarde. So the Sunne turned ten degrees backward / y which he was descended afore.

¶ A thanckesgeuing, which Hezekiah kynge of Juda wrote, when he had bene sicke, & was recouered.

b* I thought I shulde haue gone to y gates of hell in my best age, and haue wanted the resydue of my yeares.

I spake with in my selfe: I shal neuer visit the Lorde God in this lyfe: I E shall neuer se man amonge the dwellers of the worlde. Myne age is folden vp together, and taken awaye from me, lyke a shepherdes cotage: my lyfe is hewe of, lyke as a weuer cutteth of his webb.

Whyle I was yet takynge my rest, he hewed me of / & made an ende of me in one daye. c* I thought I wolde haue liued vnto the morow / but he brosed my bones lyke a lyon, and made an ende of me in one daye.

Then chatered I lyke a swalowe / and lyke a crane, and mourned as a doue.

I lyfte up myne eyes into the heyght: O Lord (sayde I) vyolence is done vnto me, be thou suertye for me.

What shal I speke or sate, tha the mat D this dorh I may lyue out all my yeares, yee in the bytternesse of my lyfe.

Verely (Lord) men must lyue in bitternesse, & all my life must I passe ouer therin: For thou raysest me vp, and wa best me. But lo, I wyl be wel contet with this bytternes.

Neuertheles my conuersacio hath so pleased the, that thou woldest not make an ende of my lyfe: so y thou hast cast all my synnes behynde thy back.

b* For hell prayseth not the, death doth not magnyfye the.

c* They y go downe into y graue / prayse not the truethe: but the lyuyng, yee the liuing acknowledge the, like as I do thys daye. The father telleth his chyldren of thy faythfulnesse.

Delyuer vs (O Lord) and we wyl sing prayses in thy house, al y dayes of our life. And Esay sayde: take a playster of fygges, & laye it vpon the sore, so shal it be whole. Then sayd Hezekiah: O what a great thing is this, that I shal go vp into the house of the Lorde.

The Notes

a ✣ Trueth for purenes, as in the Psal. li. b. But lo, thou haste a pleasure in the truth &c. That is, in puritees in true and perfecte ryghtuousnes.

b ✣ That is, I thought I shoulde haue gone to my graue, and haue dyed in my best age. &c. The Hebrew word sygnyfyeth both hell and graue, pyt or dych. That maye ye perceiue in Gene. xlii. g. where Iacob sayth, that if any myffortune should happen vnto BenIamyn in hys Iourney into Egypte wyth hys other brethren, hys graye heade shoulde be brought with sorow vnto his graue: where the comen transl. readeth hel, for graue. As for Hezekiah, he neyther feared hell nor purgatory: as ye may well se by that he a lytell before sayth: Remembre O Lorde, that I haue walcked before the in truth and a stedfast hert, and haue done the thing that is pleasaunte to the: which thynge who so dothe, neadeth not to feare any of those two places. Besydes that, the dunce mē and sophysters them selues, which were (as moost lerned men thynche) the Inuentours and Fynders, ye and the verye makers of purgatorye, saye that before the tyme of Christes commynge, ther was noo such place: so that Hezekiah is by theyr sentence shilled quite of that place: and of hell doth sentence of yͤ worde of God quyte him, which sayth: There is no condempnation to them that are in Chryste Iesu. Roman. viii. a c ✣ I thought I woulde. &c. but he brosed my bones lyke a lyon. &c. As who shulde saye: I thought to haue lyued longer: but the Lorde toke me as it had ben a lyon and febled my boones & strenght: and so trouced me with the greuous Panges of my dysease, as though he woulde in one daye haue made an ende of me. Such a greuous syknes do lerned men thincke that Dauid also laboured with, when he sayde: O Lorde heale me, for all my bones are vexed. Psal vi. a. and xxxviii. a.

d ✣ For hell prayseth not the. &c. the meanyng is. If I now dye, I can not prayse the in thy temple. For the deade and buryed can not loue and prayse the: wyth their materyall tonges or hertes. Nether can my death, nor my buryng, be at thys season for the settig out of thy glorye. For all the Godly wylbe feared wyth thy iudgement: And the wicked wyl impute my death to the ouerthrowing of ydolatrye, and to the putting downe of the brasen serpent.

e ✣ They that goo downe into the graue prayse not thy truth, that is, hope not for the truth of thy worldly promyses, which thou hast promysed vnto such as walcke vndefyledly in thy lawe. Deute. xxviii. They cannot reioyce of theyr health, when all hope of recouering is past. But if thou graunt a man his lyfe, if any man recouer hys syknes and lyue: he shal acknowledge thy goodnes, euen as I nowe geaue thanckes vnto thee, for the benefytte of my healthe which thou hast restored me.

The. xxxix. Chapter.

AT yͤ sametyme Merodach Baladam, Balada his sonne kynge of Babilon, sent letters and presentes to Hezekiah.

For he vnderstode howe that he had bene sick, and was recouered agayne. And Hezekiah was glad therof, & shewed thē yͤ cōmodityes of his treasure, of siluer, of gold, of spyces & rotes, of precious oyles, all that was in his cubberdes and treasurhouses. There was not one thyng in Hesekiahs house, no so thorow out all hys kyngdom, but he let them se it,

Then came Esaye the Prophet to B
King Ezekiah, & sayd vnto hym: what haue the men sayde? and from whence cam they vnto the? Hesekiah answered they cam out of a farre countre vnto me out of Babylō. Esay sayd: what haue they loked vpon in thyne house? Hezekiah answered: All yͭ is in myne house haue thei sene: and there is nothinge in my treasure, but I shewed it them.

Then sayde Esay vnto Hezekiah: C Vnderstande the worde of the Lord of Hostes: Beholde the tyme wyll come, that euery thynge which is in thyne house, and al that thy progenytours haue layde vp in stoare vnto this daye, shalbe caried to Babylon, and no thinge left behinde. This saieth the Lord: Yee & parte of thy sonnes, that shall come of the, & whō thou shalt get, shalbe caried hēce, & become gelded chamberlaynes in the King of Babylons courte: Then sayde Hezekiah to Esay: D Now God prospere his owne councel, which thou hast told me. He sayde moreouer: So that there be peace and faythfulnesse in my tyme.

¶ Of ẏ goodnes & mercy of God toward ẏ people

¶ The .xli. Chapter

BE styll (ye Ilandes) and herken vnto me. Ye strong ye people, Come hyther, and shew your cause, we wil go to the lawe together. Who raiseth vp the iust from the rysing of ẏ Sunne, and calleth hym to go forth? Who casteth downe ẏ people, and subdueth the kynges before him: that he maye throw them al to the grounde with his swearde, and scater them lyke stuble with his bowe? He foloweth vp on them, and goeth safely him selfe, & cometh in no fote path with his fete. Who hath made, created, and called ẏ generacion from the begynninge? Euē I the Lorde, which am the fyrste, and with the last.

Beholde ye Iles, that ye maye feare, and ye endes of the earthe, that yee maye be abashed, drawe nye, and come hither. Euery man hath cōforted hys neyghboure, and brother, and bydden hym be strong. The Smyth comforted the moulder, and the Iron smyth the hammer man, seyeng: It shalbe good, that we fasten thys caste worcke: and then they fastened it with nayles, that it shoulde not be moued. And thou Israel my seruaunt: Jacob my electe sede of Abraham my beloued, whome I led from the endes of the earth by ẏ hand: for I called the from farre and sayde vnto the. Thou shalt be my seruaūt: I haue chosen the, and wyl not caste the awaye: be not afrayed, for I wyll be with the. Loke not behind the, for I wyl be thy god, to strengthe the, helpe the, and to kepe the with this ryght hand of myne.

Behold, all they that resyst the, shal come to confusion and shame: and thyne aduersaries shalbe destroyed & brought to naughte. So that who so seketh after them, shal not fynd them. Thy destroyers shall perysh, and so shall they that undertake to make battel against the. For I thy Lorde and god, wil strengthen thy ryght hande. Euen I that saye vnto the: Feare not, I wyl helpe the. Be not afrayde thou lytell worme Jacob / and thou despysed Israel for I wil helpe the, sayeth the Lorde, and the holy one of Israell thyne auenger. Behold, I wyll make the a treadinge cart and a new flayle, that thou mayest thresh & grynde the mountaynes, and brynge ẏ hylles to poulder. Thou shalt fanne them, and the wynde shal carye them awaye, and the whyrlwynde shall scatter them. But thou shalt reioyse in the Lorde, and shalt delyte in praysinge the holy one of Israell.

When the thyrsty and poore seke water and finde none, and when theyr tong is drye of thyrst: I geue it them saith ẏ Lorde. I ẏ God of Israell forsake the not. a ✠ I brynge forth floudes in the hylles / and welles in the playn feldes. b ✠ I turne the wyldernes to ryuers / & the drye lande to condethes of water. I plante in the waste ground trees of Cedre, Boxe / Myrre and Olyues. And in the drye I set Fyrre trees / Elmes / & Hawthornes togetether. All thys do I that they all together may se and marke / perceue with theyr hertes and consyder, that the hande of the Lord maketh these thynges, that the holy one of Israell bryngeth them to passe. Stande at youre cause (sayth the Lorde) & brynge forth youre stroungest groundes sayeth the kyng of Jacob. Let the goddes come forth them selues, and shewe vs the thynges that are paste, what they be. Let them declare them vnto vs, that we maye take them to harte, and knowe them thereafter. Other let them shewe vs thynges for to come and tell vs what shalbe done hereafter: so shall we knowe that they be goddes. Shew some thyng, other good or bad, so wyll we other knowledg the same, and tell it out.

Behold/ye goddes are of naught, and your makyng is of naught/but abhominacion hath chosen you. Neverthe-
D lesse/I have waked up one from yͤ North, and he shal com. And an other frō the East, which shal cal upō my name, and shal come to the Princes, as yͤ Potter to his claye, and as the Potter treadeth downe the myre. Who tolde that afore? so wyl we confesse and saye/yͭ he is righteous. But there is none yͭ sheweth or declareth any thing, ther is none also that heareth your wordes. Beholde, I wyl fyrste graunte them of Syon and Jerusalem to be Euangelistes. But when I consyder: there is not one amonge them that prophecieth, nether (when I aske him) that answereth one word. Lo, wicked are thei and vayne wyth thynges also yͭ they take in hande, ye wynd ar they & emptynes, with theyr ymages together.

aa I bringe forth floudes in the hilles, &c. In high places that be easy to se, wher unto yͤ thursty maye sone come, wil I prepare, not lytel welles, but grete floudes of holy doctryne: and in playne feldes lowe places sprynges and fountaynes: that the lame or slouthful shal have no excuse, but that al yͤ thyrsty may come to the word of lyfe. bb I turne the wildernes in to ryuers, &c. That is: I make the doctryne of truth so general and so easy to al men, that where as were before waste wyldernesses (by which understande yͤ errours of the Heathen wher with they had made all unfruteful & dye) shal now by the grace of the holy goost, be ryuers of the water of veritie. Where al was ful of Idolatrye, of abhominacion & of stynking errours: there shall the hertes of the chosen be watered wyth godly wisdom, thorow the gospel and glad tydinges: shall be indued with the faithe, wherby they maye both profyte them selues and other: so that they be frutefull. Wildernesse often thus taken, as before in the .xxx. v. a

¶ The commyng of Christ and his baptym.

A Beholde now therfore, this is my seruaunte whome I wyll kepe to my selfe: mine elect, In whome my soule shalbe pacyfied. I wyll geue hym my spirete, that he maye shew forth iudgementes and equyte amonge the Gentyls.

He shal not be an out cryer, ner an hye mynded person. Hys voyce shall not be hearde in the stretes. A brosed rede shall he not breake, and the smokyng flax shal he not quench: but faythfully and truly shall he geue iudgement. He shall nether be outrageous ner hastye, that he maye restore ryghteousnes unto yͤ earth: and the Gentyles also shall kepe his lawes. For thus sayeth God the Lorde unto him (euē he that made heauens, & spred thē abrode and set forth the earth with her increase: which geueth breath unto yͤ people that is in it, & to them that dwell therin) I the Lorde haue called the in righteousnesse, & led the by the hande. Therfore wyl I also defende the, and geue the for a couenaunt of the people, & to be yͤ lyght of yͤ Gentyles. That thou maiest open the eyes of the blynde, let out the prisoners, & them that sit in darcknesse, out of the donge on house. I my selfe, whose name is the Lorde, which geue my power to none other, nether myne honoure to the Goddes: shew you these newe tydynges, and tel you thē or they come, for olde thynges also are com to passe. D

Synge therfore unto the Lordes, a new songe of thanckes geuynge, blow out his prayse unto the ende of the worlde, They that be upon the see, & all that is therin, prayse him, the Iles & they yͭ dwell in them, Let the wyldernes with her cities lyft up her voyce, the townes also be yͭ in Cedar, Let thē be glad that syt upon rockes of stone: and let thē cry doune from the hy mountaynes: & crying hi among the gentyles. The lord shall come forthe as a gyaunte, and take a stommake to him lyke as a fresh man of warre. He shal roare and crye, and ouercome hys enemyes. C

I haue long holden my peace (saith the Lorde) shoulde I therfore be styll, & kepe sylence for euer? I wyll crye lyke a trauelyng woman, and once wyll I destroye them and deuoure. I wyll make waste both mountayn and hyll, and dry up euery grene thig that groweth therein. I wyll drye up the floudes of water and drynche up the ryuers. I wyll bringe the blynd into a strete, that they knowe not: and leade them into a sore path that they are ignoraunt in I shal make darcknes lyghte before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streight.

These thinges wil I do, and not forget them. And therfore let them converte, and be ashamed earnestli, that hope in Idoles, and say to fashioned ymages, ye are our goddes.

Heare, O ye deaf men, and sharpe your sightes to se (O ye blynde.) But who is blinder, then my servaunt? Or D so deaf, as my a* messaungers, whome
I sent unto them? For who is so blind as my people, and they that have the rule of them? They are lyke, as if thou understoudest much, and keptest nothing: or yf one herde wel, but were not obedyent. The Lord be merciful unto them for his ryghtuousnes sake, that his word might be magnyfied and praysed. But it is a myschevous and wycked people. Their younge men belonge al to the snare, and shalbe shut into preson houses.

They shalbe caryed awaye captyve, and no mã shal lowse them. They shal be troden under fote, and no man shall laboure to brynge them agayne. But who is he amonge you, that pondreth this in hys mynde, that considreth yt / & taketh yt for a warnig in tyme to cõe?

Who suffred Iacob to be trodden under fote, and Israel to be spoyled? Dyd not the Lord? Nowe have we synned agaynst hĩ, & have had no delyte to walcke in hys wayes, nether bene obedyent unto his lawe. Therfore hath he poured upon us hys wrathful displeasure, and strong batel, which maketh us have to do on every side, yet wil we not understande: He burneth us up / yet syncketh it not in to our hertes.

a* Messaungers. He meaneth the hygh prestes, & those had cure of the people. Those shuld have taught the other, but they were blyndest of all, as Christ declareth in the gospell. Such ther be at all tymes, and shalbe unto the worldes ende.

¶ God promyseth to sende hys Christ, which shall delyver hys people. He forgeveth synnes for hys owne sake.

¶ The. xliii. Chapter.

But now, the Lord hath made the O Iacob, ãd he that facyoned þe O Israel, saith thus. Fear not, for I wil defend the. I have called the by name, thou arte myne owne.

When thou wentest in the water, I was by the, & þ strõg floudes shuld not pluck the awaye. When thou walkest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shal not kindle upõ the. For I am the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israel, thy Saviour. I gave Egypte for thy delyveraunce, the Moryans & the Sabees for the: because thou wast deare in my sight, & because I set by the, and loved the. I spiled all men for the, and delyvered up al people for thy sake, that thou shuldest not perre, for I was wyth the. I wyll brynge thy sede from the East, and gather the together from the West. I wyl saye to B the North, let go. And to the South, kepe not backe: but bring me mi sonnes frõ farre / and my daughters from the endes of the worlde: Namely / all those that be called after mi name: For them have I created, fasshyoned / and made for myne honoure.

Bringe forth that people / whether they have eyes or be blynde / deafe or have eares. All nacyons shall come in one / and be gathered ĩ one people. But which amonge yonder goddes shal declare soche thynges / & tell us what is to come? Let them bringe their wytnesses / so shal they be fre: for then men shall heare it / & saye / it is truth. But I bring you wytnesse (sayth the Lord) even those that are mi servauntes, whom I have chosen: to the ĩtent þ ye myght be certyfyed and geve me faythfull credẽce: yee and to cõsydre / that I am he / before whom there was never ani God and that there shalbe none after me. I C am only the Lord / and without me is there no Saviour. I gave warnyng / I make whole / I teach you that there shuld be no straung god amonge you. And thys recorde must ye beare me your selves (sayth the Lord) that I am god. And even he am I from the beginnig / & there is none that can take any thynge out of my hand. And what I do, cã no man chaunge.

Thus sayeth the Lord the holy one of Israel youre redemer: For youre sake I wyll sende to Babylon / & brynge all the strõgest of them from thence: Namely / the Chaldees that boast thẽ of their shyps: Even I the Lord your holy one which have made Israel, & ã your king

Moreover

Morouer, thus saith the Lord (euen he that maketh a waye in the see, and a fote path in the myghtye waters: whyche bryngeth forth the charettes and horses, the hoste and the power, that they may fal a slepe and neuer ryse, and be extincte, lyke as towe is quenched.

Ye remembre not thynges of old, and regarde nothing that is past.a* Therfore behold, I shall make a newe thynge/and shortly shal it appere: yee shal wel knowe it, I tolde it you afore, but I will tell it you agayne.

I wyl make stretes in the desert, and ryuers of water in the wyldernes.b* The wyld beastes shal worshippe me: the dragon, and the Estryche. For I shal geue water in the wyldernesse, and streames in the desert: that I may D geue drincke to my people, whome I chose. This people haue I made for my selfe, and they shal c* showe forth my prayse. For thou (Iacob) wolbest not cal vpō me, but thou haddeste an vniust toward me, O Israel.

*Thou gauest me not thy yonge beastes for burnt offeriges, nether dyd dest honoure me with thy sacryfyces. Thou boughtest me no deare spice wt thy moneye/nether pouredest the fatte of thy sacrifices vpon me. Howbeit I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offerynges, nether greuous in incense.

*But thou haste laden me wyth thy synnes, & weeried me with thine vngodlynes.

*Where as I yet am euen he only/that for myne owne selfes sake do awaye thyne offences, and forgette thy synnes: so that I wyll neuer thyncke vpon them. *Put me nowe in remembraunce (for we wyll reason together) and shewe what thou haste for the, to make the quyte.

*Thy fyrst father offended sore, and thy rulers haue synned agaynst me. Therfore I ether suspended, or slue þ chefest Princes: I did curse Iacob, & gaue Israel into reproke.

a* Therfore beholde, I shall make a newe thinge. &c. He meaneth that he wyl forsake the Iewes which were his owne peo ple, for their offences and cal the Gentyls that were Idolaters, whome he vnderstandeth by the deserte and wyldernes: as before in the. xxxv. A. xli. c.

b* The wylde beastes shal worshyppe me the dragon &c. Vnder the name of these beastes signifieth he also Heathen, which were wylde, rude and beastly, cōcernyng godly knowledge.

These sayth he that he wyl came by the preachynge of the gospel (which thynge he signifieth by waters and streames) so that they shal not herafter do hurt in the church, but shal put their shoulders vnder þ yocke of faythe, and be ruled with the lawe of charite.

c* To shewe forth the prayse of the Lord, is, to preache the remyssyō of synnes, and the delyueraūce from death and hel, and the geuenes of euerlastinge lyfe by the mercy of God, for Christes sake. A lyke maner of speakynge vseth Dauid in the Psal. xxii. D. where he bearynge the figure of Christe, sayeth: In the myddest of the congregacion wyl I prayse þ &c. Thus shoulde the Gentyles and Heathen prayse him, which people he chose for hym selfe, as ye maye se in the text: For the Iewes (which are signifyed by Iacob) wolde not do it, but their confydence in kepyng of the lawe. Thys doth the Prophet vpbrayde them with, in the person of God sayinge: * Thou gauest me not thy yonge beastes &c. As who should saye: Saye not that thou hast geuen me many sacryfices, both because thou gauest them not only, but vnto thy calues and Baalles and other Idoles: and also because I dyd neuer set greatly by them, ner greatly requyred thē. They greued me al wayes, when the faythe of the deuocio of the geuers was awaye.

The shepe of thy burntofferinges broughtest thou not vnto me, nether dydest thou glorifye me with thy sacrifices, but dydest onely satisfye thyne owne superstitions. I compelled the not to worshyppe me wyth thyne offeringes, but because thou so redely offredest such thinges vnto Idoles after the maner of the Heathen, I commaunded that they shuld not be offred vnto other goddes, but vnto me, of whose gift þ receauest them & cetera. None of al these thinges profyted me: in as much as thou leftest of the thynges which I chefely requyred righteousnes, fayth, and iudgement. Mat. xxiii.

* Thou hast moch more offended me wyth thy synnes, then that thou canst please me with al these ceremonies: which iustifie not them that do them, ner bringe them into my fauour in lesse than they fyrste be my beloued through fayth. * No maner of idoles, ner the sacryfices of oxen shepe, or goates ner the merytes of thy workes, howe precyous or goddly so euer they be, do put awaye sinne: But I my selfe alone by my only mercy and grace do perdon them, to al those that beleue that I so do: & do not ones remember them, to thintent to punysh thē: Yee, and I frely forgeue them. Rom. iii. D. I am not bounde vnto the, that haste so often fallen from thy fayth, which I onely regard. * Or elles brynge me in remembraunce, reason thy matter wt me, and shew me, whether thou haue alwayes more prouoked me vnto anger, or I haue ben ouermuch fauorable vnto þ: & whether I haue euer ben readier to forgeue, then thou to amend.

Thou canst surely neuer brynge any thinge for the, wherby thou mayest iustyfie thy cause agaynst me.

The.xliiii.Chapter.

Christ promyseth to deliuer his church, which he hath redemed. Idolatry & kneling before ymages &c are confuted.

O here now, O Jacob my seruaunt, and Israell whõ A I haue chosen. For thus sayeth the lord, that made the, fashioned the, and helped the, euen from thy mothers womb: Be not afrayed, O Jacob my seruaũte, thou rightuous, whom I haue chosen. a* For I shal poure water vpon the drye grounde and ryuers vpon ẏ thursty. I shall poure my spyrite vpon thy sede, and myne encrease vpõ thy stock. They shal growe together / lyke as the grasse, and as the wyllies by the waters syde. b* One wyl saye: I am ẏ lordes. Another wil I cal vnder the name of Jacob. The thirde shal descrybe with his hande vnto the Lorde, and geue hi self vnder the name of Israel.
Morouer, thus hath the Lord spoken: euen the King of Israel, and hys auenger, the Lord of Hostes: I am the B fyrste and the laste, and with out me is there no god. For what is he, that euer was like me, which am frõ euerlasting. Let him shwe his name, and do where thorow he may be likened vnto me. Let him tel you forthe playnely thynges, that are past and for to come; yee & that without any feare or stoppe. For haue not I euer told you hytherto, and warned you? Ye can beare me recorde your selues. Is there any god excepte me: or any maker, that I shoulde not know hym?
Wherfore al caruers of Idoles are but vayne, and their labour lost. They must beare recorde them selues/ seyng they cã nether se nor vnderstãd, they shal be cofounded. Who shoulde now make a god, or fashion an Idole, that is profitable for nothyng?
Beholde, all the felowshippe of them must be brought to confusyon, Let all the workmasters of them come & stand together from amonge men: they must be abashed and confounded one with another. The smyth taketh yron, & tempereth it with hoate coales, and fashoneth it with hammers, and maketh yt with al ẏ strength of his armes: ye, sometyme he is faynt for very hunger, and so thursty, that he hath no more power.
c* The carpenter (or ymage caruer) taketh meat of the tymbre: and spreadeth forth his lyne: he maketh it wyth some coloure: he playneth it, he ruleth it, and squareth it, and maketh it after the image of a man, and accordingto the bewtye of a man: that it maye stande in the temple.
Morouer, he goeth out to hew downe Cedre trees: He bryngeth hom Elmes and Okes, and other tymber of ẏ C wod Or els the Fyrre trees which be planted him selfe, and suche as the rayne hath sweled, which wod serueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth him selfe with al: he maketh a fyre, of it to bake bred. And afterward maketh a God there of, to honoure it: and an Idole to knele before it. One pece burneth in the fyre, with another he rosteth flesh / that he maye eate rost his bely full: wyth the thyrde he warmeth him selfe, and sayeth: Aha, I am wel warmed, I haue bene at the fyre. And of the resydue he maketh hym a God, and an Idole for him selfe. He kneleth before it, he worshyppeth it, he prayeth vnto it, and sayeth: delyuer me, for thou art my god.
Yet men nether considre ner vnderstand, because their eyes are stopped, & they can not se: & their hertes, that they can not perceaue. They pondre not in their mides, for thei haue nether knowledg ner vnderstãdig, to thynck thus: I haue brent one pece i the fyre: I haue baked bred wyth the coales therof, I haue rosted flesh with al, and eaten it: shal I now of the resydue make an abhomynacyon, and fall downe before a roten pece of wod?

The kepynge of dust, and folishnes of hert hath turned them asyde: so that no ne of them can haue a fre conscience to thyncke: may not I erre?
Consydre thys (O Iacob and Isra-D ell) for thou art my seruaunte. I haue made the that thou myghtest serue me. O Israell, forget me not. As for thyne offences, I dryue them awaye li ke the cloudes, and thy Synnes as the myst. Turne the agayne vnto me, and I wyll delyuer the.
Be gladd ye heauens, whome the lor de hath made, let al that is here beneth vpon the earth, be ioyfull. Reioyce yee mountaynes and woddes, with all the trees that are in you: for the Lorde shal redeme Iacob, and shewe hys glorye v pon Israell. For, thus sayth the Lorde thy redemer / euen he that fashioned ye from thy mothers wombe: I am the lor de, which do all thinges my selfe: alone C I only haue spred out the heuens, and I onely haue layd the foundacion of ye erth. I destroye the tokens of witches, and make the southsayers go wronge.
As for the wyse, I turne them backwar de, and make theyr connyng folyshnes.
But I set vp the purpose of me seruauntes, and fulfyl ᵇ the councel of my messaungers. I saye to Ierusalem: tur ne agayne: And to the cyties of Iuda, be ye buylded agayne: and I repayre theyr decayed pieces. I saye to the gro und, be dry. And I drye vp thy water floudes. I saye to Cirus: thou art my-ne herdman: so that he shall fulfyll all thynges after my wyll. I saye to Ieru salem be thou buylded, and to the tem ple: be thou fast grounded.

The Notes.

a For I shall power waters vpon the &c. By the water and ryuers, vnderstand the grace of God: & by the drye grounde and the thurstye, the gentyles & heathen, which had not ben fylled and watered with the worde of God. Suche a lyke sentence is there be fore in the xliii. c. I wyll make streetes in the deserte. &c.

b One wyll saye: &c. So who should saye: here and there, and all the worlde ouer are therof the Lordes people, ye euen amongest the heathen.

c Let the chrysten here note how lyuely the prophet paynteth out the vanytie of Images. For it is too be feared that oure supersticiō, concerning such thinges, passeth & exceadeth the superstition of the Iewes. Ouer euident it is, that the Iewes in oure tyme can in no wyse be perswaded to become Chrysten, so long as we fall downe & knele before ymages. Their answer is that they and we both (if we be of God) shuld in no condicion do any thing that is reproued in so many places forbidden of God The Turkes & Saracenes also moche vs therfore.
The honoure of God (saye they, and trueth it is) ouht we to seke, and to styck by hys worde: & nether to adde therunto, ner take awaye, nether to swarue to the right hande or to the left: but ernestly to stād by ye which is commaunded, & for sake that whyche is forbydden. God graunt vs Christē a better trade and conuersacyon of lyuing, then that we should wt our example be an offence ether to Iew or Sarasē, and an occasion to kepe them frō the faith of christ: And geue the simple eyes to se and perceue the falshed of ye suttel which for lucre augment their blindnes, & exhort them to such superstici on. So be it.

d That is their preachyng wherewith they coūcel the people.

The delyueraunce of the people by Cyrus. The cōming of Christ & callyng of the Gentyles.

The. xlv. Chapter.

Thus sayeth the Lord vnto A Cyrus his anoynted, whōe he leadeth by the right hād: that the people maye fall downe before him: I wyll lowse the gyrdell of Kinges: that they shal open the gates before thy face, and not to shut their dores. I wil go before shal breake the brason dores, and burst the yron barres. I shal geue the ye hyd treasur and the thinge which is secretly kepte that thou maiest knowe, that I the god of Israel haue called the by thy name, and that for Iacob my serua untes sake, and for Israel my chosen.

For I called the by the name, and orde B ned the or euer thou knowest me: Euen I the Lord, before whom there is none other: for without me ther is no god. I haue prepared the or euer thou know-est me that it might be knowen from ye and darcknes, I make peace and trou ble: yee euen I the lord do all these thy nges. a The heauēs aboue shal drop downe, and ye cloudes shall rayne righ tuousnes. The earth shal open it selfe, and brynge forth health, & therby shall rightuousnes florysh. Euen I the lord shal brynge it to passe. C Wo be vnto him that chideth with hys maker, the potsherd with the Pot ter: Sayeth the claye to the potter: What makest thou? or thi work serueth for nothing? Wo be vnto hym ye sayth to his father: why begettest ye?

And to his mother: whi bearest thou?

Thus sayeth the Lorde, euen the holy one and maker of Israel: Aske me of thinges for to cō, concernyng mi sōnes: and put me in remembraūce, as touchynge the workes of my hādes: I haue made the earth, & created man vpon it. Wyth mine handes haue I spred forth heauen/ and geuen a cōmaundmēt for all the Host ther of. I shall wake hym vp ẇ ryghtuousnesse/ and ordre al his wayes. He shall buylde my cytye/ and lett out my prisoners: and ẏ nether for gyft nor rewardes/ sayeth the Lord of Hostes.

C The Lorde hath sayde morouer: The occupiers of Egypt/ the marchauntes of the Morians and Sabees/ shall cō vnto the with trybute/ they shal folow the, & go with cheines vpon their fete. They shall fall downe before the/ and make supplicacion vnto the. For God (ẇ out whō there is none other God) shall be with the. O how profoūde art thou O God/ thou God and Sauiour of Israel? Confounded be ye/ and put to dishonour: goo hence together with shame/ all ye that be workmasters of errour: (that is worshippers of Idols) But Israell shalbe sauid in the Lorde, which is the euerlasting saluacion: They shall not come to shame ner confusyon/ worlde with out ende.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: euen he ẏ created heauen/ the God that made ẏ earth/ ẏ fashioned it, & lett it forth: I haue not made it for naught, but I

D made it to be enhabited Euen I ẏ Lorde/ without whom there is none other. I haue not spokē secretly, nether in darcke places of the earth. It is not for naught, that I sayde vnto the sede of Jacow: seke me. I am the Lord, which whē I speake, declareth ẏ thinge that is ryghtuous & true. Let them be gathered & come together, lett them drawe nye hyther, that are escaped of the people: Haue they eny vnderstandyng/ that set vp the stockes of their Idols/ & praie vnto a God, ẏ can not help thē? Lett men drawe nye, let them come hyther, and aske coūcell one at another, & shewe forth: What is he, that tolde th is before? or who spake of it, euer sence ẏ begynnyng? Haue I not ẏ Lord done it: wythout whom there is none other god: ẏ true god & Sauioure, and there is els none but I? And therfore turne you vnto me (al ye endes of the earthe) so shall ye be saued, for I am God, and there is els none. I sweare by my selfe: out of my mouth commeth the word of rightuousnes/ and that maye no man turne: but al knees shal bow vnto me, and al tunges shal swere bi me, saying: Verely in the Lord is my ryghtuousnes and strength. To him shal men come: but al they that thincke scorne of hym, shalbe confounded. And the whole sede of Israel shalbe iustifyed/ and praised in the lord.

a ✱ Some reade, ye heauens, send downe your dew from aboue, and let the cloudes rayne, &c. The prophet desyreth that kinge Cyrus may come, and help the people of Israel vnder Cyrus figuring Christe and vnder Israel the Church. As though he shulde saye: wold God the heuenly powers wolde so geue their grace, as the earthly wolde not refuse to receaue it: so that here after our heauen be not of brasse, for our synnes sake: Deu. xxviii. b but ẏ by Godes grace, the rayne of saluacyon wold fal on vs, rightuousnes dropp downe from heauen, to make oure hertes fertile and fruteful: that Christ our sauioure, which is the rightuousnes of the chosen, wold come forth of the earth, and bring forth the blossomes of saluacion. This peticion doth the Lord promesse to performe, saying: Euen I ẏ Lorde shall bring it to passe.

C Idolatrye is reproued. The health that cometh by Christ is prophecied.

Neuertheles ✱✱ Bel shal fal and Nabo shalbe broken: whose images ar a burthē for the beastes and catell, to ouerlade them, and to make them werry.

They shal synck downe/ and fal together: for they maye not ease them of their burthen, therfore must they go in to captyuite.

Herken vnto me, O house of Jacob/ and al ye that remayne yet of the housholde of Israell: whom I haue borne B frō your mothers wombe, and bought you vp from youre berth, tyll ye were growen: I which shal beare you vnto your last age I haue made you, I wil also norysh you bere you and saue you. Whom wil ye make me lyke, in fashiō or ymage, that maye be like him? Ye fooles (no dout) wyl take out siluer and goulde oute of youre purcys, and weye it, and hyre a goldsmith to make a god of it, that mē maye knele downe and worshippe it. Alas that men shuld cry vn to him, which geueth no answere and delyuereth not the man y^t calleth vpon him/from his trouble.

Consydre this wel, and be ashamed. b* Go into youre owne selues (O ye rū nagates). Remembre the thinges whi che are paste, sence the beginning of y^e worlde: that I am god, and that there is no God, ye and that there is nothing lyke vnto me.

¶ The worde of the Lord against Babilon

But as for the (O daughter thou vyrgin Babylon)a* Thou shalte syt in the duste thou shalte syt vpon the grounde, and not in a trone (O thou mayden of Chaldea) Thou shalt no more be caled tēder and pleasaūt. Thou shalt bring forth the b* quernie and grinde meele, put down thi stomacher make bare thi knes and shalt wade thorow the water ryuers. Thy shame shall be discouered, and thi preuities shalbe sene. For I wyl auēg C me of the, and no man shall lett me: sayeth oure redemer, which is called the Lord of hostes, the holy one of Israel. Syt styll, holde thy tunge, and get the into some darcke corner, O daughter Caldea, for thou shalt nomore be caled lady of kyngdomes. I was so wroth with my people, that I punished myne enheritaunce, and gaue them in to thy power. Neuertheles, thou shewedest them no mercy, but euen the very aged mē of them, didest thou oppresse ryght B sore wyth thi yock, and thou thoughtest thus, I shalbe lady for euer. And besyd all that, thou hast not regarded these thinges nether cast, what shulde come after: Heare now therfore. thou wel ful, that syttest so carelesse, and speakest thus in thine herte: I am alone, and w out me is there none: I shall neuer be wydowe, ner deselate agayne. And yet both these thynges shal come to the vp on one daye in the twyncklyng of an eye: Namely wyddowhead, and desolacyon. They shal mightely fal vpō the/
for the multitude of thy witches/and C for the greate heap of thi cōiurers: For thou hast comforted thy selfe in thi wyckedfulnes/and hast sayde: No man seyth me. Thyne owne wysdome and connynge hath disce aued the. In that thou hast sayde: I am alone, and with out me there is none. Therfor shal trouble come vpon the, and thou shelt not knowe, from whēce it shall aryse. Myschefe shal fal vpō the, which thou shalt not be able to put of.

A sodayne mysery shal come vpon the, or euer thou be a warre.

Now go to thy coniurers, and to D the multitude of thy witches (whome thou hast bene acquaneted with all frō thy youth) if they maye helpe the/or strengthen the.

Thou hast hitherto had many coūcels

The. xlviii. Chapter.

A Heare this, O thou house of Iacob: ye that are caled by the name of Israel/and are come out of one stocke wt Iuda: which sweare by ÿ name of the Lord, and beare witnesse bi the God of Israel/but not wt treuth & ryght which are called fre men of the holy cytie/as they that loke for confort in ÿ God of Israell/whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

The thinges ÿ I shewed you euer sence the begynnyng: haue I not brought them to passe/immediatly as thei came out of my mouth/& declarde thē? And they are come. Nowbeit I knewe that thou art obstynate/& that thi neck hath a* an yron veyne/and ÿ thy browe is of brasse. Neuertheles I haue euer sence ÿ begynning shewed the of thinges for to come/and declared them vnto the/or euer they came to passe: that thou shuldest not saie: mine Idol hath done it/my carued or cast ymage hath shewed it. Heare and consyder all these thiges whether it was ye ÿ prophecied them.

But as for me, I tolde the before at the B begynnynge, new and secrete thinges/ that thou knewest not of: And some be ne now not of olde tyme, wher of thou neuer herdest, befor they were brought to passe: that thou canst not saye: I knewe of them. Morouer there be some wher of thou hast nether herde ner knowne, nether haue thei bene opened vnto thine eares afore time. For I knewe that thou woldest malicyously offende, therfore haue I called the a transgressoure, e uen from thy Mothers wombe.

Neuertheles for my name s sake/I haue withdrawne my wrath, and for mine honours sake I haue ouersene ÿ, so that I haue not rooted the out. b*

Beholde I haue pourged the, and not for moneye. I haue chosen the in ÿ fyre of pouerte, And that only for myne owne sake, for I geue myne honour to none other, that thou shuldest not despyse C me. Herken vnto me O Iacob, & Israel whom I haue called. I am euē he that is, I am ÿ first and the last. My hande is the foundacyon of the earth, & my ryght hande spanneth ouer the heauens.

As soone as I called them they were there. Gather you al together, & herken: Which of yonder goddes hath declared this, that the Lorde wyll do by the kynge of Babylō (whome he loueth & fauoureth) and by ÿ Caldees his arme? I my selfe alone haue tolde you this before. Yee I shall call him and bringe him forth, & geue hi a prosperous iourneye. Come nye and heare this: haue I spoken eny thynge darckly sence the begynnynge? when a thynge be gynneth, I am there.

Wherfore the Lorde God with hys D spryte hath sent me, And thus saieth the Lorde God thine auenger, the holy one of Israell: I am the Lord thi god, whych teach ÿ profitable thinges, & leade ÿ the waye, that thou shuldest go. Yf ÿ wilt now regared mi cōma, undemens, thy welthynesse shall be as the water streame: and thy righteousnes as the waues flowynge in the see. Thy sede shallbee lyke as the sandde in the see/

and

and the frute of thy body, lyke the gra uell stones therof: Thy name shall not be roted out, nor destroyed before me.
Ye shall go awaye from Babylon, and e scape the Caldees with a mery voyce.
This shalbe spoken of, declared abrod, and go forth vnto the end of the worlde: so that it shalbe sayde: The Lord hath defended hys seruaunt Jacob/ that they suffred no thurste, when they traueled in the wyldernes. He claue the rockes asondre/ and the water gusshed out. As for the vngodlye, they haue no peace, sayth the Lord.

The Notes.

a b By this he meaneth that the people of Israell were stubburne, frowarde, rebellious, vntractable, yrefull and shameles.
b c Some reade: Beholde I haue puryfyed the: but D not as sylver: I haue chosen the out of the fournes of affliction. For myne owne sake. For myne owne sake haue I done thys: for lyke whome woulde they pollute me, truelye I will not geue my glory to anye other. Herken. & c. The same expound it thus. I wol not suffre the wholly to perysh: for if I had proued and puryfyed the as golde and sylver is puryfyed, from which all maner of drosse is clensed, there shuld nothynge haue remayned in the: verye fewe, ye none shulde haue bene saued: But I brought the vnder, & proued the in the fornes of affliction, that is, I wrapped the in captiuyte and bondage in Egypte, from whyche I afterward delyuered the. And thys haue I done for myne owne sake. That is, onely for myn owne name and glorye, of myne owne gentelnes and louing kyndnes, no for any of thy merites & deseruynges which were none at all. For how woulde ye gentyles and heathen haue polluted, defyled, & blasphemed my name, yf I had roted out myne owne people: and so haue made the trueth of the promyses which I had determyned to fulfyll in Christ, vayne and vntrue: For as well thys prayse of my truthe, as the glory of the blessynge promysed in the sede of Abraham and Dauid, wyl I not geue vnto another people or nacion. The health of the worlde shall come of the Jewes. Joh iiii. and frō none other. The glad tydinges of health shall the whole world receaue of none other then of Christ, by the preachyng of the Apostles. & c.

The. xlix. Chapter.

¶ Christ shal gather to gether al nacions be they neuer so farre of.

Ye Iles, herken vnto me, and take hede ye people frō farre: The Lord hath called me fro my byrth, & made mencyō of my name fro mi mothers wombe: b he hath made my mouth lyke a sharpe swerde, vnder the shadowe of hys hande hathe he defended me, and hyd me in hys quyuer, as a good arowe, and sayde vnto me, Thou art my seruaunt Israell, I wyll be honoured in the. Then answerde I: I shall lese my laboure, I shall spend my strength in vayne. Neuertheles, I wyll commytte mi cause and mi worke vnto the Lorde my God. And now sayeth the Lorde, euen he ye fashionde me fro my mothers whombe to be his seruaunte, that I maye brynge Jacob ag ayne vnto hi: howbeit, Israel wil not be gathered vnto hi agayne. In whose B syght I am greate, which also is my Lorde, my God and my strength. Let it be but a small thynge, that ye art my seruaūt, to sett vp ye kynreddes of Jacob, & to restore the destruccion of Israell: yf I make the not also the lyght of the Gentiles, ye thou mayest be mi healthe vnto the ende of the worlde.
More ouer thus saieth the Lorde the auenger and holy one of Israel, because of ye abhorring and despysinge among the Gentiles, concernynge the seruaunt of al them that beare rule: Kinges and princes shal se, and arise and worship/because of the Lorde that he is faythf-ull: and because of the holy one of Israell, whych hath chosen the.
And thus saieth the Lord: * In the C tyme apointed wyll I be present with the. * And in the houre of health wyl I help the, & delyuer the. I wyl make the a pledge for the people, so that thou shalt helpe vp the earth agayne, and chaleng agayne the scatred heritages: That thou maiest say to the presoners:
go forth, & to thē that are in darknesse: com in to ye light, that they maye fede in the hie wayes, and get their lyuyng in al places. There shal nether hūger ner thurste, heate nor Sunne hurte thē. For he that fauoureth them, shal leade thē, & geue thē drincke of the sprynge welles. I wyll make wayes vpon all my mountaynes, & my fote pathes shalbe exalted. And beholde, thei shall com frō farre: lo, some frō the north and west, some from the south. * Reioyse ye hea-uens, and synge prayses thou earth: Talke of ioye ye hilles, for God wil cō fort his people, & haue merci vpō his, ye be in trouble. Then shall Syō saye: * God hath forsakē me, and ye Lord hath forgottē me. *

Doth

doth a wife forget ÿ childe of hir wom be, & the sonne who she hath born? And though she do forget, yet wil not I forget the. Beholde, I haue wrytten the E my sight.[b*] They ÿ haue broke the do wne, shall make haste to buylde the vp agayne: and they that made the waste shall dwel in the. Lyft vp thine eyes, & loke aboute the: al these shal gather the to gether, & com to ÿ. As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lord) thou shalt put thē all vpon the, as an apparel, and girde thē to the as a bryde doth her Jewels. As for the lande that lieth desolate, wasted & destroied: it shalbe to narow for them that shal dwell in it. And they that wo ulde deuoure the, shalbe farre awaye.

[c*] Then the childe whō the baren shal bringe forth vnto the, shal saye in thine eare: this place is to narow, syt nye together, that I maye haue rowme. Thē shalt thou thinke by thy self: Who ha th begottē me these? seing I am barē & alone, a captiue & an out cast? And who F hath norished the vp for me? I am desolate & alone, but frō whence come these? And therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I wyll streth out mine hande to the Gentiles, and sett vp my token to the people. They shall bringe the thy sonnes i their lappes, and cary thy doughters vnto the vpō their sho-uldes. For kinges shalbe thi noursing fathers / and Quenes shalbe thy nour singe mothers. They shall fall be fore the w their faces flat vpon th earth, & lyck vp ÿ dust of thy fete: that thou ma yest knowe, who that I am ÿ Lorde.*
And who so putteth his trust i me, shal not be confoūded. Who spoyleth the gy aūte of his praye? or who taketh the pri-G soner from the myghtye? And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: The prysoners shalbe taken from the gyaunte and the spoyle delyuered from the violēte: for I wyll maynteyne thy cause against thyne aduersaryes, and saue thi sones.
And wil fede thine enemies with their awne fleshe, and make them drincke of their owne bloude, as of swete wyne.
And all fleshe shal knowe (O Jacob) that I am the Lorde thy Sauiour, & strōge auenger.

The. l. Chapter.

Thus sayth the lorde: Wher A is the byll of youre [a*] mothers deuorcement, that I sent vnto her? or who is the vsurer, to whome I solde you? Behold, for youre owne offences are ye solde: & because of youre transgression, is your mother forsaken. For why wolde no mā receaue me: when I came? and when I called, no man gaue me answere. Was my hand clean smyten of, that it myght not helpe? or had I not power to deliuer?
Lo, at a worde I drynke vp the see, & of water floudes I make drye land: so the it with darkenesse / and put a sackcloth vpon it.

* The lord god hath geuen me a wel learned tonge, so that I comforte them which are troubled, ye and that in due seasō. He waked myne eare vp betimes in ÿ morning (as the scholmasters do) that I myght herken. The lorde God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I not saye naye, nor wythdrawe my selfe / but I offre my back vnto the smyters, and my chekes to the nyppers, I turn not my face from shame and spytting, C for the lord God, helpeth me, therfore shall I not be confonded. I haue har dened my face lyke a flynte stone, for I am sure, that I shall not come to cōfu-sion. Myne aduocate speaketh for me, who wyll then go with me to lawe?
Let vs stande one agaynst another: yf there be any that wyll reason with me, let hym come here forth to me. Behold,

the Lord god standeth by me, what is he that can condemne me? lo, they shall be al lyke as an olde cloth, whiche the D mothes shal eate vp.

Therfore who so feareth the Lorde among you, let him heare the voyce of his seruaunt. Who so walketh in darknes/and no lyght shyneth vpon him, let him hope in the Lorde, and hold hi by his god. But take hede, b* ye haue al kyndled a fyre, and gyrded your sel-ues with the flame: Ye walck in ỹ glis tyng of your owne fyre, & in the flame that ye haue kyndled. This cometh vn to you fro my hande, namely ỹ ye shall slepe in sorowe.

The notes

a* God was not the cause why the congregacyō of the Iewes (which is vnderstande by mother, & was once hys spouse) was deuorsed and forsaken: but their owne offences deuorsed thē, and was ỹ cause why they were solde to the vsurer, and geuen ouer i to the handes of the Gentyles or Heathen, and spoy led amongest the Medyans, Persyans, Babilonyans, Grecyans, & Romaynes.

b* As who saye: ye your selues haue kyndled the fyre of my vengaunce, with youre offences: I was no causer therof: ye must therfore suffer the punyshement therto belongyng. For it commeth of youre o wne deseruyng that I so laye my hande vpon you & punyshe you.

The .li. Chapter.

Consolaciō & cōforth is promysed vnto ỹ faythful.

A Herken vnto me, ye ỹ holde shalbe ordred with myne arme.

The Ilandes (that is the gentiles) shal hope in me/and put their trust in myne arme. Lyft vp your eyes toward heauen/& loke vpon the earth beneth.
For the heauens shall vanysh awaye lyke smoke, and the earthe shall weare like a cloth, and they that dwel therin, shall perishe in lyke maner. But my he althe endureth for euer, and my ryghtu ousnes shall not cease. Therfore her- C ken vnto me, yee that haue pleasure in rightuousnes, thou people that bearest my lawe in thyne herte. Feare not the curse of men, be not afrayd of theyr bla sphemyes and reuylynges: for wormes and Mothes shall eate them vp lyke cloth and woll. But my rightuousnes shall endure for euer, and my sauing he alth from generacion to generacion.
Wake vp, wake vp, and be strong: O thou a* arm of the Lord: wake vp, lyke

Beholde, the Lordes hand is not so shortened y it can
A not help, nether is his eare so stopped that it maie not heare. But your misdedes haue seperated you from youre God, & your synnes hyde his face from you/ y he heareth you not. For your hādes ar defyled with bloud. and your fyngers with unrightuousnes: Your lippes speake lesinges, and your tong setteth out wickednes. No man regardeth rightuousnes, and no mā iudgeth truly. Euery man hopeth in vayne thynges, and imageneth dysceate, conceaueth werines, and bryngeth forth euel. They * * brede cockatrice egges, & weue the spyders webb. * Who so eateth of their egges, dieth. * But if one treade upon them, there commeth up a serpent. * Their webbe maketh no cloth and they maye not couer them with their laboure. * Their dedes are the dedes of wickednes, and y worcke of robbery is in their handes. Their fete runne to euel, and they make hast to shed innocent bloud. Their councels are wicked councels, harme & destruccion are in their wayes. But the waye of peace they knowe not. In their goynges is no equite, their wayes are so croked, that who so euer goeth therin, knoweth nothyng of peace.

And this is the cause y equite is so C farre from us, and that righteousnes commeth not nye us. We loke for lyghte, lo it is darcknesse: for the mornyng shyne, se, we walck in the darcke. We grope like the blind upon y wall, we grope euen as one y hath non eyes. We stomble at the none daye, as though it were toward night: i the falling places, lyke men that are half deed. We roare al like Beares, and mourne styl like doues. We loke for equite, but there is none: for healthe, but it is farre from us. For our offences are many before the, and our synnes testifie agaynst us. Yee we must confesse y we offēd, and knowledg that we do amis: Namely transgresse and deissemble agaynst the Lorde, and fall awaye from oure God: usyng presumptuous and tradicious ymaginaciōs, and castyng false matters in our hertes. And therfore is equyte gone asyde, and rightu- D ousnes standeth farre of: truth is fallē downe in the streteȝ y thing y is plain & opē, may not be shewed. Yee y trueth is laide in preson, and he y refraineth him self from euel, must be spoyled.

When the Lord saw this, it displeased him sore, that ther was no where eny equyte. He sawe also/ that there was no man, whiche had pitie therof/or was greued at it. And he hild him by his owne power, and cleaued to his owne rightuosnes. * He put ryghtuos nes vpon hi for a brest platt, and set the helmet of health vpon his heed. He put on wrathe in steade of clothing, and to= ke gelousye aboute hym for a Cloake: (lyke as when a man goeth wrothful= ly to recompence hys enemyes, and too be auenged of hys aduersaries.) Na= melye, that he myghte recompence and rewarde the Ilandes wherthorowe the name of y lord might be feared, from y rysynge of the sunne: and hys magesty, D vnto the goyng downe of the same.

For he shall come as a violent wa= ter streame, which the wynd of the lord hath moued. But vnto Syo ther shall come a redemer, & vnto the in Jacob y turne fro wickednes, sayth the Lord. I wyl make thys couenaunt w the (sayth y lorde): My spryte y is come vpon the,
& the wordes which I haue put in thy mouth shal neuer go out of thi mouth, nor out of y mouth of thy childers chil dere, fro this tyme forth for euermore.

a * To brede cokatryse egges is to go aboute that which is myschevous and wycked. And to weue y spyders webb is, to go aboute vayne and tryflynge thynges, whyche are of noo value: although they seame neuer so excellent vnto the doers.

* As he that eateth of a cokatryce egge dyeth so they that delyte in euell workes, or that consente vnto them shall perish.

* And yf a man at vnware, treade on theyr egges, & so pres se out the cokatryse & be touched, he shalbe kylled of her: euen so shall the thoughtes of the euill bringe them to death.

* As no man weareth clothes of y spyders web, so shal wicked workes cloythe no man, nor profyt hym in the daye of iudgemente, when we must go in vnto the feast in the weddynge garment, Math. xxii. b

* By the deades of wickednes vnderstande gylefull and craftie dedes: And by the deades of robbery, vyolente and tirannous deades. The texte sayth y theyr dedes are the deades of robbery because they helpe no man with theyr handes. But do rather rob & begyle the poore: so are they wythout charitie, ye so fele they not what charytie requyreth on the.

thy thyng to passe in his tyme.

a * In these wordes is the rabynes and promises of them that obey the word of god declared. As though he shuld saye: Euē as fast as the cloudes come go, and as swyftely as doues flie to their nest so rou- dy wil the faithful leaue al and couple thē selues to the church, at the voyce of Christ & of his teachers.
b * By the fyre trees & such lyke are signified Prin ces & rulers y gouerne y people, as before in y ii. c shalbe your plowmen and reapers.

But ye shalbe named the prestes of the Lorde, and men shal cal you the seruauuntes of oure god.
Ye shal enioye the goodes of the Gentiles and triumph in their substaunce: For your grete reprof and shame, shal they haue ioye that ye maie haue part with them. For they shall haue double possessiō in their land, and euerlasting D ioye shalbe with them. For I y Lorde, which loue right & hate robbery (though it were offred me) shal make their workes ful of faythfulnes, and make an euerlasting couenaunt with them.

Their sede also & their generacion rightuousnes, and the feare of god to florish forth before al the Heathen.

The garment of health is faith that worketh cha- ritie: which is called the weddinge garment. Mat. xxii. b. This garment (sayth y Prophet) shal christ put vpon the Church. For all that beleue in God shalbe saued thorow Christ, and be hys beloued ch ylderen by election & iustified by his bloud. Eph. i. b.

the corne shall eate it, and geue thanckes to the Lorde: and they that haue borne in the vyne, shall drinke it in the court of my sanctuary.
Stande back, and departe asunder, D ye that stande vnder the gate: make ro

The lxiii. Chapter.

A What is he this, þ commeth from Edom, with stained reade clothes of Bosra: ( which is so costlye cloth) & cõmeth i so nimbli wt al his strength: I am he that teacheth ry ghtuousnes, and am of power to help.
Wherfore then is thy clothinge red/and thy raiment lyke hys that treadeth in the wyne presse? I haue trodden the presse my self alone, and of all people/there was not one with me. Thus haue I trodde downe myne enemyes in my wrath, and set mi fete vpon them in mi indignacyon: And their bloude sprang vpon my clothes, and so haue I stay B ned al my rayment. For the daye of ve-ngeaunce that I haue taken in hand/and the yeare of my delyueraunce is come. I loked aboute me, & there was no man to shewe me eny helpe. I fell downe and no man helde me vp. The I helde me by myne owne arme/ and my feruētnesse susteyned me. And thus haue I troden downe the people in my wrath/ and bathed them in my disple asure: In so moch þ I haue shed theyr bloude vpon the earth.
I wyl declare the goodnesse of the Lor de/ ye and the prayse of the lorde for al that he hath geuen vs/ for the greate good that he hath done for Israell: whych he hath gyuen them of his awne fauoure, and accordyng to the multytu de of hys louyng kyndnesses. For he sayde: These no doute wyl be my people/C and no shrynkyng chyldré/ and so he was their sauyoure. In theyr troubles he forsoke them not, but the angel that went forth from his presence delivered them: Of veri loue and kindnesse that he had vnto them, redemed he them.
He hath borne them/ and caried them vp euer/sence the worlde begãne. But after they prouoked hym to wrath and vexed hys holy mynde, he was their en emye, and fought agaynst thé him self.
Yet remembred he þ olde tyme of Moses and hys people: How he brought them from the water of the see, as a she pherde doth wyth hys shepe: how he had geuen his holy spirite amonge thé: how he had led Moses by the ryght ha D nde wyth hys glorious arme: how he had deuided the water before thé (wher bi he gat him self an euerlasting name) how he led them i the depe, as an horse is led in the plaine, that thei shulde not stomble. The spirite of the Lord led thé, as a tame beast goeth in the felde.

Thus

Thus (O God) haste thou led thy people, to make thy selfe a gloryous D name with al.

*Loke downe then from heauen, and beholde the dwellyng place of thy sanctuarye and thy glory. How is it, ỳ thy gelousy, thy strength, the multitud of thy mercies and thy louing kindnesse, wyl not be entreted of vs. Yet art thou our father: For Abraham knoweth vs not, nether is Israel acquaynted with vs. But thou Lord art our father and redemer, and thy name is euerlasting O Lord wherfore hast thou led vs out of the waye? wherfore hast thou herdened our hertes, that we feare the not? Be at one with vs agayne/ for thy seruauntes sake that are of the generació of thin heritage. Thy people hath had but litle of thy Sanctuary in possessyó, for our enemyes haue taken it in: And we are become euen as we were from ỳ begynnynge: but thou art not their lorde, for they haue not called vpon thi name.

¶ The .lxiiii. Chapter.

O that thou woldest cleue ỳ heauen in sonder, and come A downe: that the mountaynes myght melte awaye at thy presence, lyke as at an hote fyre: and that the malycyous myght boyle, as ỳ water doth vpon the fyre: Wherby thy name myght be knowne amóge thyne enemyes, and that the Gentiles might tréble before the. That thou mightest come downe wyth thy wonderous stráunge workes, then shulde ỳ hylles melt at thy presence. For sence the beginnynge of the world there was none (except thou O God) that hearde or perceaued, *nether hath ani eye sene what thou dost for them, that put their trust in the. Thou helpest hi ỳ doth right wyth cherefulnesse, and them that thyncke vpon thy wayes. But lo, thou art angrye, for we offende/ and haue B bene euer in synne) * and there is not one whole.

We are al as an vncleane thing, & al our righteousnesses are as the clothes stained with ỳ floures of a womá: we fall euerychone as the leafe, for oure synnes cary vs away lyke ỳ wynde. There is no man that calleth vpon thi name, that standeth vp to take holde by the. Therfore hidest thou thi face from vs, & consumest vs, because of our sinnes.
But now O Lorde, thou father of ou- C res: *we are the claye, and thou art our potter, and we al are the worcke of thy handes. Be not to sore dyspleased (O Lorde) & kepe not our offences to long in thi remembraunce, but considre that we al are thy people. The cytyes of thy Sanctuary lye waste, Syó is a wyldernesse, and Jerusalem a desert. Oure holi house which is oure bewty, where our fathers praised the, is brent vp: yee all oure cómodities and pleasures are wasted awaye. Wilt thou not be intreated (lorde) for all this? Wylt thou holde thi peace, and scourge vs so sore?

¶ The felycytye of Jerusalem, and the callynge of the Heathen.

¶ The .lxv. Chapter.

They shall seke me, that hither to haue not asked for A me: they shal finde me, that hytherto haue not sought me. Then shal I saye immediatly to the people that neuer called vpon my name: I am here, I am here: For thus long haue I euer holden out my handes to an vnfaythfull people/ that go not the ryght waye, but after their owne ymaginacyós: To a people ỳ is euer defying me to my face they make their oblacyons in gardens, and their smoke vppon aulters of bricke, they lurke amonge the graues, and lye in the dénes allnight.

*They eat swynesflesh, and vncleane broth is i their vessels. If thou có-mest nye thé, thei saye: touch me not, for B I am holyer then thou. All these men when I am angry, shalbe turned to smoke and fyre, that shall burne for euer. Beholde it is wrytten before my face, & shal not be forgotté, but recópensed. * I shal reward it thé into their bosome: I meane youre mysdedes, and the mysdedes of your fathers together (sayth ỳ lord Lorde) which haue made smokes vpō the mountaynes, and blasphemed me vpon the hylles: therfore wil I mesure their old dedes into their bosō againe.

Moreouer thus sayeth the Lorde: lyke C as when one wold gather holi grapes, men sate vnto him: breake it not of, for it is holy: euē so wyll I do also for mi seruaūtes sakes, that I will not destr-oye them all. But I wil take a sede out of Jacob, and out of Juda one, to take possession of my hyll. My chosen shall possesse these thinges, and mi seruauntes shal dwell there. Saron shalbe a shepefolde, and ÿ valley of Achor shal geue the stallynge for the catell of my people, that feare me.* But as for you, ye are they, that haue forsaken the Lor de, and forgotten my holy hyl. Ye haue set vp an aulter vnto fortune, and geu en ryche drinckofferings vnto treasure.
Therfore wyll I nombre you with the swerde, that ye shal be destroyed all together. For when I called, no man ga-ue me answere: when I spake, ye herk-ende not vnto me, but did whickednes before myne eyes, and chose the thynge that pleased me not. Therfore thus sa-D yeth the Lorde God: Beholde, my seruauntes shal eate, but ye shal haue hō-nger. Beholde, my seruauntes shal dr-incke, but ye shal suffre thurste. Beholde, my seruauntes shal be mery, but ye shal be confounded. Beholde, mi seruauntes shal reioyce for very quyetenesse of hert: But ye shal crye for sorow of hert, and complayne for vexacion of mynde. Youre name shal not be sworn by amonge mi chosen, for God the Lor de shal slaye you, & call his seruauntes by an othere name. Who so reioyseth vpon earth, shal reioyse in ÿ true God:
And who so sweareth vpon earth, shal sweare in the true God. For the olde enmyte shall be forgotten /and taken awaye oute of my syght. For lo, I shal make a new heauen, and a new earth.
And as for the olde, they shal neuer be thought vpon, ner kepte in mynde: but men shalbe glad and euermore reioyse, for the thinges, that I shal do.
For why: Beholde, I shal make a io-yfull Jerusalē, yee I mi self wil* rei-oise with Jerusalem, and be glad with my people: And the voyce of weepynge and waylyng shal not be herde in her/from thēce forth.b* There shall neuer be childe ner olde man, ÿ haue not their ful dayes But whē the chylde cometh to an hūdreth yeare olde c* it shal dye. d* And yf he that is an hūdreth yeare of age do wrōge, he shalbe cursed. They shalt builde houses, and dwel in them: they shal plante vyneyardes, and eate ÿ frute of them. They shal not buylde, & another possesse: they shal not plante, & another eate: But the lyfe of my people shalbe lyke a tre, and so shal the wo rcke of their handes.
My chosen shall lyue longe, they shall not labour in vayne, ner begett wyth C trouble: for they are the his blessed sede of the Lorde, and their frutes with the.
And it shalbe, that or euer they call/ I shal answere them. While they are yet but thincking how to speake, I shal he are them.e* The wolff and the lam be shal fede together, and ÿ lion shal eate haye lyke the bullock. f* But earth shalbe the serpentes meate. There shal no man hurte ner slaye another, in al my holy hil/ sayeth the Lorde.

The notes.

a* God is counted to reioyce when the people fo-loweth his mynde and wyl, and that he therfore do eth them Good, and geueth them his benefytes. A like sayinge haue ye in Jere. xxxii. g. I wyl haue a lust & pleasure to do them good. &c.

b* There shal nether be child nor olde man. &c. The meaning is: There shal no man be delyted in the va-yne hope of this mortal lyfe. They that be but euen younge of age, that haue proffited in faith and holy workes, and that loue not their presente lyfe shal thinke them selues olde ynough: And that for the cotemplacions desire of the lyfe to come, which they knowe right wel shalbe much better.

c* Some read she shalbe counted ynough.

d* And yf he that is an hudreth yeare of age. &c.
The prophet meaneth hereby ÿ all though the wyc-ked come to an exceding great age, yet thinke they ÿ they haue not lyued ynough, so shal their dampnacyon be the greater.

e* The wolfe and the lambe shal fede together, &c.
The meanyng is, that the moost wicked and cruell men shal at the comming of Christ agre with ÿ good & peasable: And that the Gentiles (which for their beastly lyuinge, are often signified vnder the name of beastes) shalbe at unyte with the faithful, and ÿ one lyue louinglye with the other wout stryfe. The very same saying haue ye before in the xi. c. b f* But earth shalbe the serpentes meate, ÿ is, with earth shal ÿ serpēt be content, & nether stinge mā, ner hurt him w her venom.

The .lxvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mannes hande. He despyseth sacrifices done without mercy & fayth. God comforteth them that ar troubled for his sake. Among the Christen, the Sabboth is contynuall.

Thus sayeth the Lord, Heauen is my sete, and the ear I th is my fote stole. Whe re shall now the house stan de that ye will buylde vnto me? And wher shalbe ÿ place, ẏ I wyll dwel in? As for these thinges my hand hath made them al, and they are al crea ted, sayeth the Lorde. Which of them shal I then regarde? Euen hym that is of a lowly troubled spirete, and stādeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slaye th an ore for me/ doth me so greate di-shonoure, as he that kylleth a man. He that kylleth a shepe for me/ choketh a dog. He ÿ brigeth me meat offriges, of freth swynes blud: Who so maketh me a memorial of in cense prayseth the th-inge that is vnright. Yet take they so-ch wayes i hande, and their soule delite th in these abominacyons.
Therfore wyll I also haue pleasure B in laughynge thē to scorne, & the thing that they feare, wyll I bringe vpō thē.
For whē I called, nō mā gaue answer: when I spake they woelde not heare: But did wickednesse before mine eyes, and chose ÿ thinges that dysplease me.
Heare the worde of God all ye, that fe-are the thing which he speaketh Youre brethrē that hate you, and cast you out for my names sake, saye: Lett the Lord magnyfye him self, that we maye se yo ure gladnesse, and yet they shalbe confounded.
For as touchyng thecytie and the temple. I heare, the voyce of the Lord/that wyl re warde, and recompence his enemyes: lyke as when a wyfe bryng-eth forth a man chyld, or euer she suffre the payne of the byrth and anguysh ofe C the trauayle. Who euer herde or sawe soch thynges? doth the grounde be are in one daye? or are the people borne all at once, as Syon beareth her sōnes: For thus saieth the Lord: Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my self? Am not I he that beareth, and maketh barren: sayeth thy God. Reioise with Jeru salem, and be glad wyth her al ye that loue her. Be ioiful wyth her/al ye that mourned for her. For ye shal sucke cōforte out of her brestes, and be satisfied.
Ye shall taste, and haue delite in the plenteousnesse of her power. For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll lete peace in to her, lyke a water floude, and the myght of the Heythen lyke a flowy nge streame. Then shall ye be borne vpon her sydes, and be ioyful vpon her knees. For like as a chylde is com- D forted of his mother, so shal I comfort you, and ye shalbe comforted in Jerusa lem. And when ye se thys: youre herte shall reioyse, and youre bones shall florysh lyke an herbe.
Thus shall the hande of the Lorde be knowne amonge his seruauntes/and his indignacyon amonge hys ene-myes. For beholde, the Lorde shal com with fyre, and hys charet shall be like a whyrl wynde, that he maye recōpence his vengeance in hys wrath and his in dignacyon wyth the flame of fyre. For the Lorde shall iudge all flesh with the fire and wyth his swerd, and there shal be a greate nom bre slaine of the Lord.
Soch as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens/ and those that haue eaten swyne flesh, myce, and other abhomynacyons, shall be taken awaye together, sayeth the Lorde. For I wyll come to gather al people and tō ges wyth their workes and imagina-cyons: these shal com, and se mi glory.
Unto thē shall I geue a token, and sen de certaine of them (that be deliuered) amōg the Gentiles: in to Celycia, Afri ca and Libya (where men can handle bowes) in to Italy also and Greke lan de.
The Iles farre of, that haue not herde speake of me, & haue not sene my glory, shal preach mi praise amonge the Gentiles and shal brynge al youre E brethren for an offrynge vnto the Lorde, out of all people, vpon horses, cha-rettes and horse litters, vpon Mules and cartes to Jerusalem my holy hyl (sayeth the Lorde) lyke as the chyldren of Israel brynge the offrynge in clean vessels, to the house of ÿ Lorde.
And I shall take out certayne of thē for to be Preastes and Leuytes, sayeth the Lorde.

For

For lyke as the new heauen and the newe earth whiche I wyl make, shall be fast stablysshed by me: (sayth the Lord) So shall youre seade and youre name continue[b]* and there shalbe a new mone for the other, and a new Sabbath for the other, and al *flesh shall comme to worshippe before me (sayth the Lorde) And they shall go forth and loke vpon the carions of them that haue trangressed agaynst me for theyr wormes shall not dye, neither shall theyr fyre be quenched, and all fleshe shall abhorre them.

a * Where shall now the house stande. &c. As whoo shulde saye: whereto make ye me a temple of mannes handy worcke, which rule the whole worlde: Wether to haue I suffred the temple to kepe you Jewes in a certen maner of instruction and obedyence: and chose you one place for youre seruice, to thyntente that ye shuld not fall to the Idolles of the Gentyles. But now wyll I haue all ydolles bannisshed, and for Jewes wyll I chalenge vnto me the whole world, for one people all the dwellers vpon the earthe whyche shalbe my worshippers in spyryte and i truth. Johan. iiii. I wyll not be superstitiouslye worshypped wyth sacrefyces and ceremonies in the temple, but with ryghtuousnes, with fayth, and wyth the spyrete. The same songe that the prophete here syngeth in the latter ende of hys prophecy, songe he before in the begynnyng euen in the fyrst Chapter. Let the chrysten note these. ii. Chapters (I meane the fyrste and the last) well, and then shall they perceaue howe greately God abhorreth such Ipocrytishe worckes done wout faith, although they seme and apeare outwardly to bee moost godly.

b * That is, there shalbe a perpetuall feast and a perpetuall rest. They shall not then kepe theyr Sabboth after the maner of the Jewes, nor make difference betwene day and daye: but they shall kepe a continuall Sab oth, and neuer do seruyle worcke, that is, sinnes. Then shall they alwayes be in the téple, that is, alwayes shall they prayse God in spyrete and treuth, as wel in aduersitie as in prosperyti. They shal nether runne vnto ydols nor any creatures, but shal worshyppe the Lord onely.

* By all flesh here vnderstand the Chrysten.

The ende of the Boke of the Prophet Esay

The boke of The Prophete Jeremye.

The stock of Jeremye, and in what tyme he prophecyed. He excuseth himselfe & wold refuse the offyce of a Prophet, because he is younge and vnexpert he is taught of the Lord, & becometh bolde. God sheweth vnto him, that, the destruccion of the Jewes by the babilonians, is at hand. Jeremy is commaunded to speake the word of God vnto the Jewes without feare.

The fyrst Chapter.

These are the Sermons of Jeremye, a the sone of Helkiah the prest, one of the that dwelt at Anathoth in the land of Ben Jamin: when the Lorde had fyrst spoke with him/ a* in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon king of Juda, i the. xiii. yeare of of his kyngdome: and so durynge vnto the time of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, & vntyl the. xi. yeares of zedekiah the sone of Josiah kynge of Juda were ended: when Jerusalem was taken/ euen in the fyfth Moneth. The word of the Lord speake thus vnto me: Before I fasshioned the in thy mothers wombe, I dyd knowe the And or euer thou wast borne, b* I sanctified the, and ordened the, to be a Prophet vnto the people.
Then sayde I: Oh Lorde God, I am b vnmete, for I am yet but younge.
And the Lord answered me thus: Saie not so, I am to yonge: For thou shalte goo to al that I shal sende the vnto, & whatsoeuer I commaunde the, y shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of their faces, for I wylbe with the, to delyuer the,
sayeth the lord.
And with that, the lorde stretched out his hand, and touched my mouth, and sayde morouer vnto me. Beholde I put my wordes in thy mouth, & this daye do I set the ouer the people and kyndomes: that thou mayest rote oute, breake of, destroye and make wast: and that thou mayest buylde vp and plant After this, the Lorde speake vnto me saying:

sayinge: Jeremy, what seyst thou?
And I sayde: I se a walkynge rodde.
Then sayde the Lorde: thou hast sene right, for I wyl watch diligently vpo-my word, to performe it.

D It happened after warde, that the Lord spake to me agayne, and sayde: what seist thou? And I sayde: I do se a seething pot, loking from out of the north hether warde.

Then sayde the Lord vnto me: Out of the north shal come a plage vpon al the dwellers of the lande. For lo, I wyl cal al the officers of the kingdoms of the north (sayeth the Lord.) And theye shal come, and euerye one shall set hys seate in the gates of Jerusalem / and in al their wales round about and tho row al the cities of Juda. And thorow them shal I declare my iudgemēt vp on all the wyckednesse of those men ỳ haue forsaken me: that haue offred vn to straunge goddes and worshypped the workes of their owne handes.

And therfore *gyrd vp thy loynes aryse / and tel them al, that I geue the in commaundement. Feare them not,
I wyl not haue the to be afraied of thē For beholde, thys daye do I make the a stronge fensed towne, an yron pyler / and a wall of stele agaynste the whole lande, agaynst the kynges and myghtie men of Juda, agaynst the prestes & C people of the lande. They shal fyght a gaynst the, but they shal not be able to ouercom the: for I am with the, to deli uer the, sayth the Lord.

The notes.

a It is a necessary thynge to the vnderstandinge of the Prophetes, to knowe the Stoyres of the tymes wherin they prophecyed. The storyes of Jeremyes tyme ye haue in the fourth of the Kinges, frō the xxi. chapter to the ende of the boke: and in the seconde of the Chronycles, from the xxxiii. chapt to ỳ ende also. He prophecied a boute. xl. yeares.

b I sanctified the. &c. That is, I dedicated, chose appoynted, prepared, set the asyde, to be a prophete vnto the people So in Joh. x. Saye ye then vnto hym, whom the father hath santyfied &c. that is, hath chosen &c.

c For a Prophet, or preacher to gyrd vp his loynes, is boldely and constantly to resyste the false opynyons and doctryne of the wycked, & euen to empryne in them the worde of truth (which engendreth hate,) whether they wyl or no: and that not ones or twyse, vntyl such tyme as they ether amende, or elles waxe angry and forpyne with it: Ye and then to set more by the commaundement of the Lord thē by ỳ power and tyranny of this world: & not to set by ỳ threatenynges of rulers, which can do nothing but that which God permitteth & suffreth the: therfore ar they not to be feared of an obedient and faythful seruaunt of the Lorde.

¶ God reherceth his benefytes done vnto ỳ Jewes. Agaynst Prestes & Prophetes, or preachers that contemne & despyse God: The Jewes are destroyed, because they forsoke God, & be cause they ranne a whore huntyng after Idoles.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lord cōmaūded me thus: Go thy waye, crye in the eares of Jerusalem, and saie: Thus saieth the Lorde: I remembre the for the kindnesse of A thy youth, and be cause of thy stedfast loue: in that thou folowdest me thorow the wyldernesse, in an vntylled lande.
Thou Israell wast halowed vnto the Lorde, and so was his fyrst frutes. All they that deuoured Israel offended: mysfortune fell vpon them, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacion of the house of Israel.
Thus sayeth the lorde vnto you.
What vnfaythfulnesse founde youre fathers in me, that they wente so farre awaie fro me, falling to lightnesse, and beynge so vayne? Thei thought not in their hertes: Where haue we left ỳ lord, that brought vs oute of ỳ lande of Eg- B ypte, that led vs thorow ỳ wildernesse / thorowe a deserte and rough land, thor ow a drye and a deedly lāde / yee a lande that no man had gone thorowe, & wher in no man had dwelt. And when I had brought you ito a pleasaūt welbuilded lande, that ye myght enioye the frutes and al the cōmodyties of the same: ye went forth and defyled my lande, and brought myn heretage to abhominacyon.
The Prestes thē selues sayde not once: Where is the lorde? They that haue ỳ law i their hāds, know me not: The she pherds offēd agaynst me. The prophets do seruyce vnto Baal, and folowe soch thynges as shal bring them no profyt.
Wherfore I am constrayned (sayeth the lorde) to make my complaynte vpō you, and vpon youre childrē. Go in to the Iles of Cethim / and loke wel: sende vnto Cedar / take diligent hede: and se / whether soch thinges be done there / wether the Gentiles them selues deale so falsly and vntruly with their goddes (which yet are no goddes in dede) But my people hath geuen ouer their hye honour, for a thing yͭ may not help the.

Be astonished (O ye heauens) be afrayde, and abasshed at suche a thynge, saieth yͤ Lord. For my people hath don two euels. They haue forsaken me the wel of the water of lyfe, and digged the pyttes, yee vyle and broken pyttes yͭ holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the houshold? Why is he then so spoyled? Why do they roare and crye then vpon hym, as a lione? They haue made his lande waste, his cyttes are so brent vp, that there is no mā dwelling in the. Ye the childre of a* Noph & taphnes haue defiled thy neck.

C Commeth not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, euer sence he led the by the waye? And what hast thou now to do in the strete of Egypt? to drincke foule water? Ether, what makest thou in the way to Assiria? To drincke water of the floud? Thyne owne wyckednes shal reproue the, and thy turninge awaye shal condemne the: that thou mayest know and vnderstande, howe euel and hurtfull a thinge it is/that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, and not feared him, sayeth the lord god of Hostes.

I haue euer broken the yock of old, and burst thy bondes: yet sayst thou, I wil no more serue, but (lyke an harlot) thou runnest about vpon al hie hilles, and among al grene trees where as I planted the out of noble grapes & good rotes. How art thou troden then in to a bitter, vnfrutful, and straung grape? Yet and † so sore: yͭ though thou wash the with. b* Nitrus and make thy selfe to sauour with that swete smelling herbe of Borith: yet in my sighte thou art stayned with thy wickednesse/sayeth yͤ Lord thy God.

E Saye not now: I am not vncleane and I haue not folowed the goddes. Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in woddes/valleyes & dēnes: so shalt yͧ know what yͧ hast done. Thou art like swift Dromedary/yͭ goeth easly his waie: & thy wātones is lika wyld Asse, yͭ vseth yͤ wyldernes/ & yͭ snoffeth & bloweth at his wil. Who can tame the? All they yͭ seke the shal not fayle, but fynde the in thyne owne vnclennes.

Thou kepest thy fote from nakednes, and thy throte from thyrste/and thynkest thus in thy selfe: tush: I wyll take no sorow, I wyll loue the straūge goddes, and hange vpon them.

Lyke as a thefe that is taken wyth the dede cometh to shame, euē so is the house of Israell come to confusion: the comen people, theyr kings and rulers, theyr prestes and Prophetes. For they saye to a stocke thou art my Father, and to a stone: thou hast begoten me, ye they haue turned theyr backe vpon me, and not theyr face/but in the tyme of theyr trouble/when they saye, stande vp, and helpe vs/I shall answere them: Where are now thy Gods/that thou hast made the? byd them stand vp/ and helpe yͤ in tyme of nede: for loke how many cityes yͧ hast (O Juda) so many Gods hast thou also.

F Wherfore then wyll ye goo to lawe with me/seing ye all are synners against me, sayth the Lord? It is but lost labour, that I smyte your chylderen, for they receaue not my correccion. Youre owne swerde destroyeth your Prophetes, like a deuouring lyon. If ye be the people of the Lorde, then herken vnto hys worde am I then become a wyldernes vnto the people of Israell? or a lāde that hath no lyghte? Wherfor saith my people then: we are fallen of, ād we wyl com nomore vnto the? Doth a maide forget her rayment/or a Bryde her stomacher? And doth my people forget me so longe? Why boastest thou thy wayes so hyly (to obtayn fauoure therthorowe) when thou, haste yet stayned them with blasphemyes?

G Upon thy wynges is found yͤ bloude of pore and innocent people, and yͭ not in corners and holes only, but openlye in all these places. Yet darest yͧ sai: I ā gyltlesse: Tush, his wrath can not come vpon me. Beholde, I wyl reason wͭ the because yͧ darest say: I haue not offended. O how euell wyll it be for yͤ to abyde it: when it shalbe knowen: howe ofte thou hast gone backward? For thou shalte be confounded as well as Egipt/ as of yͤ Assirians: ye thou shalte go thy waye from them, and smyte thyne handes together vpon thy head.

Because

Because the lord shal brynge that con-fydence and hope of thyne to naughte/and thou shalt not prospere with al.

The notes

a * Noph and Taphnes were two of the chefe cyti es of Egypt, wherin the Hebrewes put their truste, but in vayne.
b * Nitrus is a kynd of salte good to wash clothes in, and the body also.
¶ God being mercyful calleth unto repentaūce his people, which he had forsaken for their whoredom with Idoles. He exhorteth Israel unto repentaūce, promysing them shepardes that shuld haue the true knowledg of god. The returne of Israel unto god, confessyng their offence.

¶ The .iii. Chapter.

Commenly/when a man put A teth awaye his wife, & she goeth from him/and mari eth with another, then the questyon is: shulde he re-sorte unto her eny more after that? Is not this feld the defyled and unclean?
But as for the/a * thou hast playde the harlot with many louers/ yet turne a-gayne to me/saith ẏ lord. Lift up thine eyes, on euery side, and loke, yf thou be nor defyled. Thou hast wayted for thē in the stretes, and as a murtherer in ẏ wildernes. Thorow thy whordom and shamefull blasphemyes, is the land de fyled.

This is the cause, that the rayne/& cumyng dewe hath ceaced. Thou haste gotten the an whores forehead, & cāst not be ashamed. Els woldest thou saie unto me: O mi father, thou art he that hast brought me up, and led me fro my youth: Wylt thou then put me away, & cast me of for euer? Or wilt thou withdraw thy self cleane fro me? Neuerthe les, thou speakest suche wordes, but ẏ art euer doinge worse and worse.

* The lord sayd also unto me: in the B tyme of Josiah the kynge: Hast thou sene what that shrinkinge Israel had done? how she hath runne up upon all the hylles, and amonge al thicke trees, and there played the harlot: haste thou sene also (when she had done all thys) how I sayde unto her: that she should turne agayne unto me, and yet she is not returned? Juda ẏ unfaithful sister of hers also saw this: Namely, that af ter I had wel sene the aduoutry of the shrynckynge harlot Israell/ I put her awaye, and gaue her a byll of deuorce ment,

For all this, her unfaythful syster Juda was not ashamed, but went bac ke and played the whore also. Yee and the noyse of her whordom hath defiled the whole lande: For she hath cōmitted her aduoutrye with stones & stockes.

Neuertheles/her unfaithful sister Juda is not turned unto me/ againe w her whole hert/but faynedly/sayth the C Lord. And the Lord sayde unto me.
The backsyder Israel is more rightu-ous/then the unfaithful Juda: & there fore go preache these wordes towarde the north, and saye: Thou shrynkynge Israel/turne agayne (sayeth the Lord) and I wyl not turn my face from you, for I am mercyful, sayth the Lord/and I wyl not alwaye beare displeasure a-gaynst the: but on this condicion, that thou know thy greate blasphemy: Na mely/that thou hast unfaythfully forsaken the lord thy god/and hast made thy selfe partaker of straunge goddes under all grene trees, but haste had no wyl to heare my voyce, saieth the lord.

* O ye shrinkyng children, turne a D gayne/sayeth the lorde: and I wyl be maryed with you. For I wyl take one out of the cytie, and two out of one ge-neracion from amonge you, and bring you out of Sion: and wyl geue you he rdmen after myne owne mynde, which shal fede you with lernynge and wysd ome. Moreouer/when ye be increased & multiplied in the lande, then (saith the lord) there shal no more boost be made of the arche of the lordes Testament: Noman shal thinke upō it, nether shal any man make mencyon of it: for from thence forth it shall nether be vysyted, ner honoured with gyftes.

Then shal Jerusalem be called the Lordes seate, and all Heathen shallbe gathered unto yt / for the name of the Lordes sake, whyche shall be set up at Jerusalem.

And from that tyme forth, they shall folowe not more the ymagynacyon of their owne frowarde herte.

Then those that be of the house of E Juda shal go unto ẏ house of Israell and they shal come together out of the North, into the same land that I haue geuen your fathers.

I haue shewed also, howe I toke ye vp beyng but a childe, and gaue the a plesaunt lande for thyne herytage, ye and a goodly Host of the heathen: and how I commaunded the, that thou shuldest *call me father onely, and not to shry-ncke fro me.

But lyke as a woman fayleth her louer/so are ye vnfaithful vnto me (O ye house of Israel (saieth the lord. And therfore the voyce of the children of Is rael was herd on euery syde, wepinge & wailig: for they haue defiled their wai, and forgotten god their lorde.

G O ye shrinking children/turne aga yne (sayinge: lo/we are thyne, for thou art the Lord our god) And so shal I he ale your back turnynges. The hilles fall, and al the hye pryde of the moun-taynes, but the health of Israell stand eth only vpon god our lorde.

Confusion hath deuoured oure fathers laboure from our youth vp: yee their shepe and bullockes, their sones and daughters. So do we also slepe i our confusion, and shame couereth vs: for we and our fathers from our youth vp vnto this daye haue synned agaist the Lorde oure God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the lord our god.

The voice

a * That is, thou hast loued, worshiped, and serued many Idoles of the gentiles, in hilles, wodes, vale yes fildes, and in many other places as we often reade in the Byble: and hast forsaken me thy husband, contrary to the maner of honest maried wemē, wher fore thou art worthy to be deuorced. Yet turne and repent & forthinche the earnestly, & I wyl not stick to receaue the agayne.

The true repentaunce or returnyng to God. He exorteth to the circumcision of the hert. The destructi on of Jewry is prophecyed, for the malyce of their hertes.

The.iiii. Chapter.

A O Israell if thou wylt turne the/then turne vnto me, sa yth the Lorde. And if thou wylt put away thyne abho minacions out of my sight, thou shalt not be moued: And shalt swe are: The Lorde lyueth: in trueth/in equitie and ryghtuousnes: and all people shalbe fortunable and ioyful in hi.
For thus sayth the Lorde, to all Juda and Jerusalem: plowe your lande, and sowe not among the thornes.

Be circumcised in the Lord, and cut away the foreskinne of youre hertes, al ye of Juda, and al the indwellers of Je rusa lem: that my indignacyon breake not out lyke fyre, and kindle, so that no man maye quench it, because of the wic kednes of youre ymaginacions.

Preach in Juda and Jerusalem, cry B oute and speake: blowe the trompettes in the lande crye that euery man maye heare, and saye: Gather you to gether/and we wyl go into stronge cities. Set vp the token in syon/spede you, and ma ke no tarienge: for I wyll bringe a gre at plage, and a greate destruction from the North. For the spoyler of the Genty les is broken vp from his place, as a li on out of his denne, that he maye make the lande waste, and destroye the cy ties, so that no man maye dwel therin.
Wherfore girde your selues aboute w sackcloth, a* mourne and wepe, for thee fearfull wrath of the Lorde shall nott be withdrawen from you.

At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde) the hert of the king and of the Princes shalbe gone, the prestes shalbe astonisshed, and the Prophetes shalbe sore a-frayed. Then sayde I: O Lorde God, hast thou thē deceaued this people & Je rusalem, saying: ye shall haue peace, & now the swearde goeth thorowe theyr lyues. Then shall it be sayde to the peo ple and to Jerusalem: b* there cometh a warme wynde from the north thorow the waye of my people, but nether to fā ne, ner to clense.

c* After that shall there come vntoo me a stronge wynde, & then wyll I also geue sentence vpon them. For lo, he cō meth down lyk as a cloud, & his charet D tes are lyke a stormy wynde: Hys horsmē are swyfter thē ye Aegle. Wo vnto vs, for we are destroyed: O Jerusalem, wash thyne hert frō wickednes, yt thou mayst be helped. Howe longe shall thy noysome thoughtes re mayne wt the?

For a voyce from Dan and from ye hyll of Ephraym speaketh out, and tel leth a destruction. Beholde, the Heathē geue Jerusalem warning, and preach vnto her, that her destroyers are commyng from farre countrees.

They

They tell the cities of Juda the same also, they shall geue them warnyng in euery place, lyke as the watchmen in ye felde. For they haue prouoked me too wrath, sayth the lorde.
Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto thys, thys is thy-ne owne wickednes and disobedience/that hath possessed in thyne herte: Ah D my bely/ ah my bely, (shalte thou crie) how is my hert so sore: mi hert panteth within me, I cannot be styl, for I haue harde the cryeng of the trompettes, ad peales of warre.
They crye murther vpon murther. the whole lande shall perysh. Immedy atly my tentes were destroyed, and my hanghinges, in the twincklynge of an eye: Howe longe shall I see the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes.
F Neuertheles, this shall come vpon the because my people is become foolysh, & hath vtterly no vnderstanding. They are the chylderen of folyshnes, and wt out any discretion. To do euel, they ha ue wytt ynough: but to do wel, they ha ue no wysdomme. I haue loked vpon the earth/ and se, it is waste and voyd.
I loked towarde heauen, and it had no shyne.
I behilde the mountaynes, and they trembled, and all the hylles were in a feare. I loked about me, and ther was no body, and all the byrdes of the ayer were away. I marked wel, and the plo wed feld was become waste: ye all their cities were broken downe at the presece of the Lorde, and indignation of his wrath.
For thus hath the Lorde sayde: The G whole lande shalbe desolate, yet wyll I not then haue done. And therfore let the earthe mourne, and let the heauen be sorye aboue: for the thynge that I haue purposed and taken vppon me to do, shall not repente me, and I wil not go from it. The whole lande shall fle, for the noyse of the horsmen and bowe men: they shal runne into dennes, into woddes, and clymme vp the stony roc-kes. All the Cities shalbe voyde, and no man dwellyng therin.
What wylt thou now do, thou beinge destroyed? For though thou clothest thy self with scarlet, and deckest the wt golde: though thou payntest thy face with coloures, yet shalt thou trym thy selfe in vayne.
For those that hytherto haue bene thy greate fauourers, shal abhorre the, and go about to slaye the. For (my thin cke) I heare a noyse, lyke as it were of a woman trauelyng, or one laborynge of her fyrst chylde: Euen the voyce of ye daughter Sio, that casteth out her armes and sowneth, sayng: Ah wo is me, how sore vexed and faynt is my herte, for them that are slayne.

The notes.

a ✠ To mourne in the Scripture sygnifieth somty me to make an vnmeasurable and greuous lamẽtacion, as when a man for vnpacience and grefe, smyteth his owne body, renteth his clothes, teareth his hearre. etc. So in Math. xxiiii. c. And then shal al the hinredes of the earth mourne. b ✠ Some reade the dyre wynd cometh out of the hy gh places of the wyldernesse, by the waye of ye daughter of my people etc. They vnderstand by ye wind the king of Egypt: And by the waye of his people ye of Egipt: which was through the wyldernes. Exod

¶ In Jewry is there no ryghtwes or faythful men found/ ether amongest the people, or the rulers, for whose sake the Lord shuld spare the cytie: wherfore Jewry is destroyed of the Assyrians.

Oke thorowe Jerusalem, beholde and se, Seke tho-row her stretes also withi, A yf ye can fynde one manne that doth equal & right or laboreth to be faithful: & I shal spare him (sayeth the Lord) For though they can saye: the Lord liueth, yet do they sweare to disceaue: Where as thou (O Lord) ✠ lokest onely vpon fayth and truth.
Thou hast scourged them, but they toke no repentaunce: thou hast correct them for amendment, but they refused thy correction. They made their faces harder the a stone, & wold not amende. B Therfore I thought in my self: per aduenture they ar so simple and folish that they vnderstande nothyng of the Lordes waye/ and iudgmentes of our god. Therfore wyl I go vnto their he ades and rulers, and talcke wyth the, yf they knowe the waye of the Lord, & the iudgementes of our god.

But these (in lyke maner) haue broken thee yock, and burste the bandes in son der.
b * Wherfore a lyon out of the wodd shal hurte them, and a wolfe in the eue nynge shal destroye them. The cat of the mountayne shal lye lurkyng bi their cyties, to teare in peces al them, that cō therout. For their offences are many / & their departynge awaye is greate.
C Shulde I then for al this haue mercy vpon the? Thy chyldren haue forsaken me, & sworne by thē that are no goddes.
And albeit they were bounde to me in maryage, yet thei fell to aduoutrie, and haunted harlottes houses.
In the desyre of vnclenly lust they are be come lyke the stoned horse, euery mā neyeth at his neyghbours wyfe. Shu-lde I not correcke this, saieth the Lord.
Shulde I not be auēged of euery peo ple, that is lyke vnto this? Clymme vp vpon their walles, beate them downe / but destroye them not vtterly: c * cut of their brāches, because they are not the Lordes. For vnfaythfully hath the house of Israel and Juda forsaken me, sa yeth the Lorde. They haue denyed the Lorde and sayde: it is not he. Tush, ther shal no mis fortune come vpō vs, we shall se nether swearde ner hōger. As for the warnyng of the Prophetes / thei take it but for wynde, yee there is none of these / whych wil tell them / that soche thynges shal happē vnto them. Where fore thus sayth the Lord god of Hostes: because ye speake soch wordes, beholde:
D The wordes that are in thy mouth wyl I turne to fyre / and make the people to be wod, that it maye consume them.
Lo, I wil bringe a people vpon you from farre, O house of Israel (sayeth the Lorde) a myghtye people / an olde people, a people whose speach thou kno west not, nether vnderstādest what thei saye. Their arowes are sodayn death / yee they them selues be very giauntes.
This people shal eate vp thy frute and thy meate / yee they shall deuoure thy sōnes and thy daughters, thy shepe and thy bullockes.
They shall eate vp thy grapes and fygges. As for thy strong and wel fened cyties, wherein thou dydest truste / they shal destroy them with the swerd.
Neuertheles I wyl not then haue don w you, sayeth the lorde. But yf they saye: wherfore doth the lorde oure God al thys vnto vs?
Then answere them: because, þ like as ye haue forsaken me, and serued str E aunge goddes in youre owne land, eue so shall ye serue other goddes also in a straunge land. Preache this vnto the house of Jacob, and crie it out in Juda, and saye thus: Heare this (thou fo-lysh and vndiscrete people) * ye haue eyes, but ye se not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not.
Feare ye not me, sayeth the Lorde? F Are ye not ashamed, to loke me in the face? which bynd the see with the sand so that it can not passe his boundes: For though it rage, yet can it do nothi nge, and though the waues therof do well, yet maye they not go ouer.
But this people hath a false and an obstynate herte, they are departed and gone awaye fro me. They thincke not in their hertes: O let vs feare the lord oure God / that geueth vs rayne b * ear ly and late, when nede is: which kepeth euer styll the haruest for vs early.
Neuertheles youre misdeades haue turned these from you, and youre syn-nes haue robbed you her of. For amō-ge my people are founde wycked personnes, that preuely laye snares & wait for men, to take them and destroye thē.
And lyke as a net is full of byrdes, so are their houses ful of that which they haue gotten with falshed and dysceat / Hereof commeth their great substaun G ce and ryches, here of are they fat and welthy. and are runne awaye fro me with shameful blasphemyes.
They mynystre not the lawe / they make no ende of the fatherlesses cause they iudge not the poore accordyng to equyte.
Shoulde I not punishe these thin ges, sayeth the Lorde? shoulde I not be auēged of al soch peple, as those be?
Horrible and greuouse thinges a re don in the lande.
The Prophetes teache falselye / and the preastes folowe them / and my people hath pleasure therin. What wyl wyl come therof at the laste.

¶ The.vi.Chapter

A Come out of Jerusalem, ye stronge childeren of Ben-Jamin: blow vp the trompettes ye Tecuites, set vp a token vnto Bethcarem/for a plage and a great mysery peyeth out from the North.
I wyl lyken the daughter Sion to a fayre and tendre woman and to her shall come the shepherdes with theyre flockes. Their tentes shall they pytche ronde aboute her, and euerye one shall fede* them that are vnder his hande.
Make battel against her, shal they say Aryse, let vs go vp, whyle it is yet day B Alas, the daye goth awaye, and thee night shadowes fall downe: Arise, let vs go vp bi night/ and destroy her strō ge holdes/ for thus hathe the Lorde of hostes commaunded.
Hew down her trees/ and set vp bul workes agaynste Jerusalem: This is the citie that must be punished, for in her is all malicїousnes. Lyke as a con-dyte aboundeth in water/ euen so thys citie aboundeth in wickednes. Robery and vnrightuousnes is hard in her, so row and woundes are euer there in my syght. Amende the (O Jerusalem) lest I withdrawe my herte from the, and ma ke the desolate: and thy lande also, that no man dwell in it. For thys sayth thee C Lorde of hoostes: a* The resydue of I srael shalbe gathered together, as thee remnaunt of grapes.
And therfore turne thine hande agai ne into the basket, like the grape gathe rer. But vnto whoome shall I speake, whome shall I warne that he maye tak hede? Their eares are so vncircumcised, that they maye not heare.
Beholde they take the word of God but for a scorne, and haue no lust therto: And therfore b* I am so ful of thine in dignacion (O Lorde) that I maye suf fer no longer. Shede out thy wrath vpon the childre that are without, and vpon al yong men. Yee the man must be taken presoner wythe the wyfe, and the aged with the crepel. Their houses wyth their landes and wyues shall be turned to straūgers, whē I stretch out myne handes vpon the inhabitours of this lande, saieth the lorde. For from ye leest vnto the most/ they hange al vpō couetousnes: and from the prophet vn to the prest, they go all about with fal-shed and lyes.
And besyde that, they heale ye hurt D of my people with swet worde, saying: peace peace, when there is no peace at all. Therfore they must be ashamed, for they haue committed abhomynacion. But how shuld they be ashamed/when they knowe nothyng/ nether of shame ner good nurtur. And therfore they shal fall amounge the slayne, and in the houre when I shal vasyte them, they shal be brought downe, sayeth the Lorde.
Thus sayeth the Lord: go in to the stretes, considre and make inquysyciō for the olde waye: and if it be the good and righte waye, then go therin, that ye maye fynde rest for your soules.
But they saye: we wyl not walcke ther in, and I wyl set watchmen ouer you/ E and therfore take hede vnto the voice of the trompet. But they saye: we wyll not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gen-tyls/ and ye congregacion shalt know/what I haue deserued for them. Here thou earthe also: beholde/ I wyl cause a plage to com vpon this people, euen the frut of theyr owne ymaginacions: For they haue not bene obedient v nto my woordes and to my lawe, butt abhorred them. Wherfore bring ye my incence from Saba, and swet smellynge Calamus from farre countrees: Your burnt offringes displease me, & I reioyce not in your sacrifices.
And therfore thus saieth the Lord: beholde, I wyl make this people fal. & ther shal fal from amōg them ye father with the children, one neyghbour shal perish with another.

Morcouer

f Morouer, thus sayeth the Lorde: Behold, there shall come a people frō the North, and a greate people shall aryse from the endes of ye earth, wt bowes & wt dartes shall they be weapened: It is a rough and fearce people, an vnmercyful people: their voyce roreth like the see, they ryde vpon horses wel apointed to the batel agaynst the/ O daughter Sion. Thē shal this citye be herd Oure armes are feble, heuynes and sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauelyng with childe. No man go forth into the feld, no man com vp on the hy strete: for the swerd and feare of the enemye shalbe on euery syde.

Wherfore, gyrd a sack cloth aboute the (O thou daughter of my people) sprynkle thy self with asshes/ moreouer I wepe bytterly, as vpon thy only beloued sonne: For the destroyer shal sodenly fall vpon vs. Thee haue I set for a prouer of my herd people to seke out & to trye their wayes. For they are vnfaithful and fallen awaye, they hange vpon filthy lucre, they ar cleane brasse and yron, for they hurt and destroye euery man. The bellous are brent in the fyre, the lead is consumed / the melter melteth in vayne, for the euel is not taken awaye from them. Therfore shall they be called naughty syluer, because the Lord hath cast them out.

The notes

* Some reade: in his place or his parte.
a * By the preaching of the word shal the chosen be gathered vnto christ, although the nombre of thē be but very few.
b * That is I cannot but power out ye heuy sentēce of thy word agaynst them.

The euelles that shal happē to ye Jewes for the despysing of their Prophetes. Sacrifices doth not the Lorde chefely requyre of ye Jewes, but that they shuld obey his word. Topheth.

A These are the wordes ye god spake vnto Jeremy: Stande vnder the gates of the Lordes house, and crie out these wordes there, wyth a loude voyce, and saye: Heare the word of the Lorde all ye of Juda / that go in at this dore, to honoure the Lorde: Thus sayethe the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell. Amende youre wayes and youre councels and I wyll lett you dwell in thys place. Trust not i falsse lienge wordes, saienge: here is the temple of the Lord, here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the lorde.

* For if ye wyl amende youre wayes B and councels, yf ye wyll iudge right betwyxte a man and hys neghbour: if ye wyl not oppresse the straunger, the fatherles and the wyddowe: yf ye wyll not shede innocēt bloude in this place, if ye wyl not cleue to straunge goddes to youre owne destructiō, then wil I let you dwell in this place, yee i the lande that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. But take heade, ye trust in councels, that begyle you and do you no good. For whē ye haue stollen, mutthured, committed aduoutrie, and periury: When ye haue offred vnto Baal, folowynge straunge and vnknowne goddes: Then come ye, and stande before me in thys house, (which hath my name geuen vnto it and say: Tush, we ar absolued quyte, though we haue done al these abhominacyons. C

* What / think you thys house that beareth mi nam, ys a denne of theues? And these thinges are not done priuely, but before myne eyes, sayeth the Lord: Go to my place in * Siloh/ wherunto I gaue my name afore tyme/ and loke wel what I dyd to the same place for ye wyckednes of my people of Israell. And now/ though ye haue done al these dedes (sayeth the Lord) and I my self rose vp euer bi times to warne you, and to comen wyth you/ yet wolde ye not heare me: I called/ ye wolde not answere. And therfore euen as I haue done vnto Siloh/ so wyl I do to this house/ ye my name is geuē vnto (and that ye put youre trust in) ye vnto the place ye I haue geuen to you & your fathers. And I shal thrust you out of my sight, as I haue caste oute all youre brethren the whole sede of * Ephraim. D

Therfore thou shalte not praye for this people, thou shalt nether geue thākes, nor byd praier for them: thou shalt make no intercession too mee for them for in no wyse wyll I heare the. Seyst thou not what they do in the cyties of

Juda

Juda, & with out Jerusalem: The chy lor gather stickes, the fathers kyndle the fyre, yͤ mothers kneade yͤ dowghe/to bake cakes for the quene of heauen.
They poure out drinkoffringes vnto straūge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath: How be it they hurte not me (sai eth the Lorde) but rather confounde, & shame them selues.

And therfore thus saieth yͤ Lorde God: beholde, my wrath and my indig nacion shalbe poured out vpō this pla ce, vpon men & catell vpon yͤ trees in yͤ felde & al frute of yͤ lande, & it shal bur ne so, yͤ no mā maie quench it. Thus sa yeth the Lorde of Hostes, the God of Israel: Yee heape vp youre burnt offringes, with youre sacrifyces/ & eate the fleshe. But whē I brought youre fa-E thers out of Egypt/ I spake no worde vnto thē of burntoffringes & sacrifices: but this I commaunded thē, sayinge: herken & obeye my voyce/ and I shalbe youre God and ye shal be mi people: so yͤ ye walcke in al yͤ wayes, which I haue cōmaūded you, that ye may prospere.

But they were not obediēt, they in clyned not theyr eares there vnto/ but went after their owne ymaginacyōs & after the mociōs of their owne wicked herte, & so turned them selues awaye, & conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they done/ frō the tyme that youre fath ers came out of Egipt, vnto this daye.

Neuertheles, I sent vnto them mi seruauntes al the prophetes: I rose vp early & sent them worde/ yet wolde thei not herken, nor offre me their eares but were obstynate & worse then theyr fathers. And thou shalt now speake al F these wordes vnto them/ but they shal not heare yͤ: thou shalt crye vpō thē/ but they shall not answere yͤ. Therfor shalt thou saye vnto them: this is the people yͤ nether heareth yͤ voyce of yͤ lord their god, ner receueth his correctiō. Faithful nes & truth is clean routed out of their mouth.

Wherfore cut of thyne hearre, and cast it awaye, take vp a complaynte in the whole land, for the lord shal cast awaie, & scater the people that he is displeased wall. For yͤ chylderen of Juda haue do ne euel in my sight, saith yͤ Lord. They haue set vp their abhomynaciōs, in yͤ house yͤ hath my nam, & haue defyled it.
They haue also builded an aulterer at b* Topheth, whi ch is in the valey of yͤ children of Hennom: that they myght burne their sonnes and daughters, wh G ich I neuer commaunded them, nether came it euer in my thought. And therfore beholde, the dayes shal come (sayeth the Lord) that it shal no more be cal led Topheth, or the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, but the valleye of the slayne, for in Topheth, they shal be bu ryed, because they shal els haue no row me. Ye the deed bodyes of this people shalbe eaten vp of the foules of the ay re and wilde beastes of the earth, & no man shal fraye them awaye. And as for the voyce of myrth and gladnes of the cyties of Juda, and Jerusalem: c* the voyce of the brydgrome and of the bryde: I wyll make them ceasse, for the land shalbe desolate.

¶ The destruction of yͤ Jewes. The Lord moueth the people to amēdment, reckenyng vp their sinnes He reprehendeth the liuing doctrin of yͤ Prophetes & Priestes, and their couetousnes also.

AT the same tyme sayeth yͤ Lord the bones of the Kin ges of Juda, the bones of A his princes, the bones of yͤ priestes and prophetes, yee and the bones of the cytisens of Jerusalem/ shalbe brought out of their gra ues and layde against the Sunne, the Moone and al the heauenly hoost: wh ome they loued, whom they serued whō they ranne after / whom they sought & worshipped. They shal nether be gathered together ner buryed / but shall lie vpō yͤ erth, to their shāes despisige.

And all they yͤ remayne of this wyc ked generaciō/ shal desire rather to die thē to liue: wher soeuer they remaine, & wher as I scater thē/ saith yͤ lord of ho stes. This shalt yͤ saie vnto thē also: Thus saieth yͤ lord, do mē fal so: yͤ they B arise not vp againe?

And turne they so farre awai, that thei neuer conuerte? Wherfore then is this people and Jerusalem gone so farre ba cke, that they turne not agayne.
They are euer the longer the moare ob stinate, and wyll not be conuerted.
For I haue loked, and consydered: but ther is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is noo man that take-th repentaunce for hys sinne, that wyll so much as saye wherfore haue I done C this? but euery manne (as sone as hee is turned backe) runneth forth styll, ly ke a wylde horse in a batell. The Stor ke knoweth his appointed tyme, the Turteldoue, the swalow and the crane consydre the tyme of their trauaile: but my people wil not knowe þ time of the punischemente of the lorde. How darre ye saye then: we are wyse, we haue the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs?
Beholde the disceatfull penne of the scr ybes, setteth forth lies: therfore shal the wyse be confounded they shalbe afraid and taken: for lo, they haue cast out the worde of the Lord: what wysdomme cā then be amonge them? Wherfor, I wil geue their wyues vnto alyauntes/and their feldes to destroyers.
For from the lowest vnto the hyest, D they folowe all fylthye lucre: and from the prophet vnto the preast, they deale all wyth lyes. Neuerthelesse, they heale the hurte of my people wyth swe-te wordes, sayenge: peace/ peace where there is no peace, at all.
Fye for shame/howe abbominable thynges do they? and yet they be not as shamed/yee they knowe of no shame.
Wherfore in the tyme of their visi tacion, they shall fall amonge the dead bodyes/sayth the Lorde. a* Moreouer I wyl gather them in (saythe the Lorde) so that there shall not be one grape vpon the vyne/nether one fygge vpon the fygge tree, and the leaues shalbe plucte of.
Then wyl I cause them to depar te, and saye: why prolong we the tyme?
E Lett vs gather our selues together, ād go into the stronge Cytie/there shall we be in reste: For the Lorde oure God hath put vs to sylence, and b* geuen vs water myxt wyth gale, to drynke: becau se we haue synned agaynst hym.
We loked for peace, and we fare not the better, we wayted for the tyme F of health, and lo/ here is nothing but trouble.
Then shall the noyse of his horses be hearde from Dan, the whole lande shall be afrayde at the neyenge of hys stronge horses: for they shal go in, and deuoure the lande, wyth all that is in it: the Cytties, and those that dwell ther in. Moreouer, c* I will sende Cokatri ces and serpentes amonge you (whiche wyl not be charmed) and they shall byte te you, sayth the Lorde.
Sorow is come vpon me, and heuynes vexeth my herte: for lo the voyce of the crieng of my people is hard from a farre countre: Is not the Lord in Syon?
Is not the kynge in her? Wherfore the haue they greued me (shall the Lorde saye) with their Images & folysh stran ge fashions? The haruest is gone, the sommer hath an ende, ande we are not helped. I am sore vexed, because of the hurte of my people: I am heuy and ab G ashed. for there is noo more Treakle at Galaad, and there is no physycian, þ can heale the hurte of my people.

The Notes.

a* Moreouer I wyl gather thē in. &c. The meanig is: I will gather the Jewes from al the partes of Jewry vnto Jerusalem. Ther shal no fygge, grape, or other frute remayne in the vyllages or feldes: and so shal they haue no lust to abyde ther, but shalbe fa yne to flye to the citi. Thyther caused he thē to flie, and there also famisshed them and deliuered them in to their enemies handes. Such punishment had their synnes deserued.
b* Hath geuen vs water mixt with gal to drinke, that is, hath wrapped vs in myserye and wretched thraldome.
c* I wyl sende Cockatrices and serpents. &c. That is, I wyl bringe among you a fearce compani of sou diers, with whose dedly arrowes and dartes. &c. Ye shalbe slayne euen as though ye shuld perish with þ strokes or venemous bytinges of Cockatrices, and serpentes.

The complaynte & bewaylinge of the prophet, for the malice of þ people. In þ knowledg of god ought we onely to reioyce. The vncircumcisiō of the hert.

The .ix. Chapter.

O Who wyll geue my heade water ynoughe, and a wel of teares for myne eyes: th at I maye wepe nyght and day, for the slaughter of my people.

Wolde

Would God that I had a cotage some where farre frō folcke, that I myght leaue my people, & go from them? for they be al aduouterers and a shrynck nge sorte. They bende their tonges lyke bowes, to shute out lyes: As for y trueth, they maye nothynge awaye w al in the worlde. For they go frō one B wickednes to another, & holde nothing of me, sayeth the Lorde.
Ye one must kepe him self frō another, no man may safely trust hys owne bro ther: for one brother vndermyneth ano ther, & one neyghboure begyleth ano ther. Ye one dissembleth with another, & they deale with no truth. They haue practised their tonges to lye, & taken greate paynes to do myschefe. They haue set their stole in the middest of di sceate, and for very dyssemblynge faill ede they wyll not know me, sayeth the Lorde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lor de of Hostes: beholde, I will melte thē, & trie them, for what shulde I els do to my people? Their tonges are lyke sha C rpe arowes, to speake disceate. With theyr mouth they speake peaceably to their neighboure, but preuely they laie wayte for hym. Shulde I not punysh them for these thynges, sayeth the Lor de? Or shulde I not be auenged of any soche people as this? Upon the mount aynes wyll I take vp a lamentacion & sorowful crye, and a mournynge vpon the fayre playnes of the wyldernes: Namely, how they are so brente vp, that no man goeth there any moore: Yee a man shal not heare one beast crie there.
Byrdes and catel are al gone frō thēce.
I wyll make Ierusalem also an heape of stones, and a denne of venymous wormes. And I wyl make y cyties of D Iuda so waste / that no man shal dwell therin. What man is so wyse) as to vn derstande this? Or to whom hath the Lord spokē by mouth, that he may she we this, and say: O thou lande, why pe ryshest thou so? Wherfore art thou so brent vp, and lyke a wyldernesse, that no man goeth thorow? Yee the Lorde hym selfe toolde the same vnto them, that forsoke hys lawe, and kepte not y thinge that he gaue them in cōmaunde ment nether lyued therafter: but folowed the wyckednes of their owne hertes, and serued stra ūg goddes, as their fa thers taught them.
Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of Ho E stes, the God of Israel: Beholde, I wil fede thys people with wormwod, and geue them gale to drink. I wyl scatter them also amōge the Heathen, whom nether they nor their fathers haue kno wne: and I wyl sende a swearde amon ge them, to persecute them, vntyl I br ynge them to naught. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. Loke that ye call for mournyng wyues, and send for wise wemen, that they come shortly, and synge a mournynge songe of you: that the teares may fall out of oure ey es, and y oure eye lyddes maye gusshe out of water.
For there is a lamentable noise hearde F of Syon: O how are we so sore destroy ed? O how are we so pyteously confoun ded? We must forsake oure owne natu ral countre, and we are shot out of our owne lodgynges. Yet heare the worde of the Lord (O ye wemen) and let your eares regard the wordes of his mouth: that ye may lerne youre daughters to mourne, and that euery one may teach her neyghbouresse, to make lamentaci on: Namely thus: Death is clymmyng vp at oure wyndowes he is come in to oure houses, to destroye the chylde before the dore, and the yonge man in the strete.
But tell thou playnly, thus sayeth the Lorde: The deed bodies of men shall lye vpon the grounde, as the donge vp on the felde, and as the heye after the mower, and ther shalbe no man to take them vp. Moreouer, thus sayeth the lorde: Let not the wyse man reioyse in hys wysdome / nor the stronge man in hys strength / nether the ryche man in hys ryches: But who so wyl reioyse, let hym reioyse in this / that he vnderstan deth, and knoweth me: for I am the lorde, which do mercy, equyte and ryg hteousnes vpon the earth. Therfore haue I pleasure in soch thinges, sayeth the lorde. Beholde, the tyme cōmeth (sa yeth the lord) that I wyll vysete all them, whose foreskynne is vncircumcy sed.

The Egiptians, the Iewes / the Edomytes, the Ammonites, the Moabytes and the shaue Madianites, that dwell in the wyldernes. For all the gentyles are vncyrcumcysed in the flesshe / but all the howse of Israell are vncircumcysed in the herte.

The notes

a a All, that is as wel the Iewes as the Gentyles: for the one is as fre as the other. The Iewes are euell as well as the heathen, as touching the herte, although they be circumcysed as touching the fleshe Therfore are they here rekened among the vncyrcumcysed.

¶ The constellacions of the sterres are not to be feared. Of the wekenes of Idoles, and of the power of God. Of euell curates.

¶ The .x. Chapter.

Heare the worde of the lorde, that he speaketh vnto the,
3 O thou house of Israell: Thus sayeth the Lorde:
Ye shal not lerne after the maner of the Heathen and ye shal not be afrayd for the tokens of heauen for the Heathen are afrayed of such: yee all the customes and lawes of the Gentyles are nothing, but vayne:
They hewe downe a tree in the wod with the handes of the wycked man / and fashyō it with the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it with nayles and hāmers, that it moue not. It standeth as styf as a palme tree / yt can nether speake nor go, but muste be borne. Be not ye afrayde of such, for they can do nether good nether euel.
But there is none like vnto the, O Lorde, and greate is the name of thy power. Who wold not feare the? Or what kynge of the Gentyles wold not obeye the?
B For amonge al the wyse men of the Gentyles, and in al their kyngdomes, there is none that maye be lykened vnto ye. They are altogether vnlerned and vnwyse. Al theyr connynge is but vanyte: namely, wod, syluer / whych is brought out of Tharsis, and beatē to plates and golde from Ophir, a worke that is made wyth the hande of the craftesman and the caster / clothed wyth yelowe sylcke and scarlette euen so is the worke of their wyse men altogether. But the Lorde is a tru God, a lyuyng God, and an euer lastyng kyng
If he be wroth, the earth shaketh: all ye Gētyles may not abyde hys indignacio ‡ As for their goddes, it maye well be sayde of them: they are goddes, that made nether heauen ner earth: therfore shal thei perysh from the earth, and frō all thynges vnder heauē But (as for oure God) he made the earth with his power, and with his wysdome hath he finished the whole cōpasse of ye worlde, with his discrecion hathe he spred out the heauēs. At his voyce ye waters C gather in the ayre, he draweth vp the cloudes from the vttermost partes of ye earth: he turneth lyghtenyng to rayne / and bryngeth forth the windes out of their treasures: His wysdome maketh all men fooles. And cōfounded be all casters of ymages, for that they cast, is but a vayne thynge, and hath no lyfe. The vaine craftesmen with their wonders, that thei in their vanite haue made, shall perish one with another in the tyme of visytacion. Neuertheles, Iacobes porcion is not soch; but it is he, that hath made al thynges, and Israel is the rodd of his inheritaunce: The Lorde of Hostes is his name. Put awaye thyne vnclennesse oute of the land, thou that art in the stronge cities. For thus sayeth the lorde: Beholde / I wil now thrust out the inhabitours of this land a greate way of, and trouble them of soch a fashion, that they shall no more be founde.
Alas / how am I hurte? Alas, how pain D efull are my scourges vnto me? For I consydre this sorow by my selfe, and I must suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all mi coardes are broken, my children are gone from me, and can no where be founde. Now haue I none to spred out my tente / or to set vp my hanginges. For the herdmen haue done folishly / that they haue not sought the lord. Therfore haue they dealt vnwysely with theyr catell / and all are scatred abrode. Beholde / the noyse is harde at hande / and greate sedicyon out of the northe to make the cyties of Iuda a wyldernesse / and a dwellinge place for Dragōs.
Now I knowe (O lorde) that it is not in mās power to ordre his owne waies, or to rule hys owne steppes and goynges. Therfore chasten thou vs, O lord, but with fauour and not in thy wrath, brynge vs not vtterli to naught.

Poure out thine indignació rather vpõ the Gentiles, that knowe the not, & vp on the people that cal not on thy name: And that because they haue consumed/ deuoured and destroyed Jacob, & haue roted out hys glorye.

‡ The verse is wrytē in Chald to shew by ẏ Jewes to the Gẽtiles of Chalde their confusion.

¶ A curse of thẽ that obey not the word of goddes promes. The people of Juda folowing the steppes of their fathers, worshippeth straũg Goddes. The lord sayeth ẏ he wyll not heare the Jewes, and forbyddeth also Jeremy to pray for them.

This is another Sermon, which the Lord commaunded Jeremy for to preach/
B saying: Heare the wordes of the couenaunt, and speake vnto al Juda, and to all them that dwel at Jerusalem. And saye thou vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord god of Israel: Cursed be euery on that is not obedyent vnto the wordes of thys couenaunt: which I commaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought them out of Egipt, from the * * yron fornace, saying: Be obedient vnto my voyce, and do according to al that I commaunde you: so shal ye be my people, & I wyl be your god/ and wyll kepe my promesse, ẏ I haue sworne vnto youre fathers: Namely, ẏ I wolde geue them a lande which floweth with mylck and hony, as ye se, it is come to passe vnto this daye. Then answered I, and sayed. Amen, It is euen so Lorde, as thou sayest.

B Then the Lorde sayde vnto me agayne: preach this in the cities of Juda and rounde about Jerusalem/ and saye: Heare the wordes of this couenaunt/ ẏ ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligentlye exorted your fathers, euer sence the tyme that I brought thẽ out of the Lande of Egypte, vnto this day, I gaue them warning by tymes: sayinge herken vnto my voyce: Neuertheles, they wuolde not obeye me, nor encline their eares vnto me, but folowed the wycked ymagynacyons of theyr owne hertes.

And therfore haue I accused them as trangressours of all the wordes of this couenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe, whych they (not with vnderstandinge) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: It is foũde out, that whole Israell and al these citisens of Jerusalem ar gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemyes of their fore fathers, whych had no lust to heare my worde. Euen like wyse haue these also folowed straunge goddes, and worshypped thẽ. The house of Israel and Juda haue broke mi couenaunt, which I made with their fathers.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Be- C hold, I wil sende a plage amonge you, which ye shal not be able to escape: and though ye crie vnto me, I wil not heare you. Then shal the townes of Juda & the cytezyns of Jerusalem go, and call vpõ their goddes vnto whom they made their oblacions: but they ar not able to helpe them in tyme of their trouble. For as many cyties as thou hast, O Juda, so many Goddes hast thou also: And loke how many streetes there be in the (O Jerusalem) so many shame full aulters haue ye sett vp, to offre vpõ thẽ vnto Baal. But praie not thou for this people, byd nether prayse ner prayer for them, for though they crye vnto me in their trouble, yet wil I not heare them.

b * O thou beloued, why doest thou so shamefull greate blasphemyes in my house, euẽ as though that holy flesh might absolue the, speciall when thou hast made thy boost of thy wyckednes. The Lorde called the a grene olyue tre, a fayre one, a frutefull one, a goodly one: but nowe that theare is a cõtrary reporte of the abrode/ he wyll burne the vp / and destroye thy braunches. For the Lorde of hostes that planted the hath deuysed a plage for the (O thou house of Israel & Juda) for ẏ euell that ye haue done to prouoke him to wrath/ in that ye dyd sacrifice vnto Baal. Thys (O lorde) haue D I lerned of the/ & vnderstãde it, for ẏ hast shewed me their imaginaciõs. But I (as a meke lambe) was caried awaye to be slayne: not knowinge, ẏ they had deuised soch a counceill agaynst me sayinge: We wil destroye his meate with ᶜ*wod, and dryue him out of the ᵈ*lãd of the lyuinge: that his name shal neuer be thought vpon. Therfore I wil beseche the now (O lorde of hoostes) ÿ righteous iudge, thou that tryest the reynes and the hertes: let me se the auenged of thẽ, for vnto the haue I cõmitted my cause. The lord therfore spake thus of ÿ citezines of Anathoth, ÿ sought to slaye me, saying: Preach not vnto vs in the name of the lord, or els thou shalt dye of our handes. Thus (I sayd) spake the Lord of hoostes. Beholde, I wil vyset you. Your yong men shal perish with the swerde, your sonnes and your daughters shal vtterly dye of honger, so that none shall remayne. For vpon the cytezyns of Anathoth wyll I brynge a plage, the year of their visitacion.

¶ The Prophet maruelleth greatly at the prosperitye of the wicked, allthoughe he confesse God to be ryghtuous. The Iewes are forsaken of the Lorde. He speaketh against Curates and preachers that seduce the people. The Lord threteneth destructyon vnto the nacions that borderd vpõ Iewry, whych troubled and vexed it.

A O Lord, thou art more rightuous, then ÿ I shold dispute with ÿ: Neuertheles, let me talke with the in thynges reasonable. *How happeneth it, that the waye of the vngodly is so prosperous? and ÿ it goeth so wel wt thẽ, which (wtout eny shame) offẽd & liue in wickednes? ÿ plãtest thẽ they take rote, they grow, & bring forth frut. They boost much of ÿ, yet doest ÿ not punish thẽ. But ÿ Lord (to whõ I am wel knowne) thou ÿ hast sene, & proued my herte take thẽ awaye, like as a flock is caried to ÿ slauter house, and apointe them for the daye of slaughter. How long shal ÿ land mourne, and al the herbes of the felde perish, for ÿ wickednes of them that dwel therin.

The catell & ÿ byrdes are gone, yet saie thei: such god wyl not destroi vs vtterly.

a * Seing thou art werry in rũning with the fote men, how wilt thou then runne with horses? In a peaceable sure lãde thou mayest be safe, but how wilt thou do in the furyous pryde of Iordane? For thy brethren and thy kynred haue al together despised the, and cried out vpon the in thine absence. Beleue them not, though they speake fayre wordes to the. As for me (saye I) I haue forsaken myne owne dwellyng place, & left myne heretage. My lyfe also that I loue so well, haue I geuen in to the handes of myne enemyes. Myne herytage is be come vnto me, as a Lyon in the wod, It cried out vpon me, therfor haue I forsaken it. Myne heretage is vnto me, as a speckled birde, a birde of diuerse colours is vpon it. Go hence, and gather all the beastes of the felde together, that they maye eate it vp. B

Dyuerse herdmen haue brokẽ downe my vyneyarde, and troden vpon my porcyõ. Of my pleasaunt porciõ they C haue made a wildernes and deserte: They haue layd it waste: and now ÿ it is wast, it syghetth vnto me. Yee the whole lande lyeth waste, and no mã regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heeth euery waye, for the swearde of the lorde shal consume from the one ende of the lande to the other, and no flesh shall haue rest. They shall sowe wheate, and reepe thornes. They shal take heritage in possession, but it shal do them no good. And ye shalbe confounded of youre owne wynnynges, because of the greate wrath of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the lorde vpon all myne euell neghbours, that laye hande on myne heretage, which I haue geuen my people of Israel: Beholde, I wyll pluck them (namely Israel) out of their D lande, and put out the house of Iuda frõ amonge thẽ. And when I haue roted thẽ out, I wyl be at one with them agayne, & wil haue mercy vpõ thẽ: & bringe thẽ agayne, euery man to his owne heritag, & e to his land. And yf they (namely ÿ trouble mi people) wil lerne ÿ wayes of thẽ, to sweare by my name: ÿ Lorde lyueth (lyke as they lerned my people to sweare by Baall) then shall they be rekened amonge my people.

But yf they wyl not obeye, then wyll I rote out the same folcke / and destroye them/sayeth the Lord.

The notes.

 Thus spake the wycked of y prophet, by y waie of rebuke. As though they had sayde by a parable. When thou wast but in a litle towne, thou couldest not beare the persecucion of thine owne cytesinnes & houshold folckes: how wylt thou then beare y pri[e]stes and chefe rulers of Juda, and the Nobles of Jerusalem. And after, by the pesable sure land is vnderstand Anathoth, & by the pryde of Jordan Jerusale. The lytel riuer of Anathoth is not to cõpared to y greate, flowing streames of Jordan. If he were dispysed of his owne auditours, howe shulde he be heard of other, & those greater and excellenter?

vnto me: goe thy waye,  and After thys/ the lorde spake vnto me agayne: Take the breche that thou hast prepared and put aboute the / and get the vp, and go vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hoole of the rocke.

So went I/and hydde it, as the lorde commaunded me. And it happened long after thys, that the Lorde spake vnto me: Up, and get the to the Euphrates/and fet the breche from thence, whiche B I commaunded the to hyde there.
Then went I to Euphrates, and dygged vp, and toke the breach from the place where I had hid it: and beholde the breche, was corrupt, so that it was profitable for nothyng.
Then sayd the lord vnto me: thus sayeth the Lord: Euen so wyll I corrupte the pryd of Juda, & the hye mynde people, they wyll not heare my worde, they folow the wicked imaginaciõs of it in to the shadowe and darcknesse of death. But if ye wil not heare me, that geue you secrete warnynge, I wil moorne fro my whole hert for youre stubburnesse. Pyteously wil I wepe, and the teares shal gusshe out of myne eyes.

For the lordes flocke shal be caryed awaye captyue. Tell the kynge and the rulers: Humble youre selues/ sett you downe lowe, for the crowne of youre glory shal fall from your head. The cy- E ties towarde the south shalbe shut vp, and no man shal open them.
Al Juda shal be caried awaie captiue, so that none shal remayne.

And if thou woldest saie then in thyne herte: Wherfore cõ these thinges vpõ to be plaged / because of Manasseh thee sonne of Hesekias kynge of Juda, for the thinges that he dyd in Jerusalem.

B Who shal then haue pity upon the / O Jerusalem? Who shalbe sory for thee?
Or who shall make intercession, to ob tayne peace for the? seynge thou goeste from me and turnedest backwarde, saythe the Lorde? Therfore I wyll stretche out myne hande agaynst the, to destroy the, and I wyl not be intreated. I wil scatre the abroade wyth the fanne on e uerye syde of the land: I wyl waste my people and destroye them: for they ha ue had no luste to turne from their ow ne waye. I wyll make theyr wydowes mo in noumbre, then the sandes of thee se. Upon the mothers of theyr chylderé, I shall bringe a destroyer in the noone daye. Sodenly and unawarres / shall I sende a feare upon their cities. She that hath borne vii. childeren, shall ha ue none, her herte shall be full of soro we.
The sunne shall fayle her in the cle C re daye, when she shall be confounded and fayntie for very heuenesse: As for those that remayne, I wyll delyuer thé unto the swearde of theyr enemyes, say eth the Lord. O mother, alas that euer thou dyddest beare me, an enemye and hated of the whol land: Though I ne uer lente ner receaued upon usury, yet all men speake euell upon me. And the Lord answered me: Lede not I the thé unto good? Come not I to thee, when thou art in trouble: and helpe the, whé thyne enemye oppresseth the? Doth o ne yron hurte an other, or one metall ÿ commith from the North, another? As for youre riches and treasure / I wyl ge ue them out into a praye, not for anye money, but because of all your synnes, that ye haue done in all your coastes.
And I wyll brynge you with youre en D nemyes into a land / that ye know not: for the fyre that is kindle in my indig nation / shall burne you up.
O Lorde (sayde I then) thou kno west all thynges, therfor remembre me, and viset me / delyuer me from my per secuters: Receaue not my cause in thy long wrath, yee thou knowest ÿ for thy sake I suffre rebuke. When I had de found thy word I eat them up gredily they haue made my hert Joyfull and glad. For I cal upon thy name / O lor de God of hostes. I dwel not among ÿ scorners, neyther is my delyte therein: but I dwel only in the feare of thy hã de, for ÿ hast fyled me wyth bytternes.

Shal my heuynesse endure for euer?
Are my plages then so grete, that they maye neuer be healed? Wylt thou be as a water, ye falleth, and can not conty nue? Upon these wordes, thus said the lord unto me: If thou wilt turne agayne/ I shal set the in my seruyce: and if thou wylt take out the thinge ye is pre cious from the vyle, thou shalte be euē as myne owne mouth. They shall conuert unto the, but turne not thou unto them: and so shal I make the a strong wal of stele agaynst this people. They shal fyght agaist the, but they shal not preuaile. For I my selfe wil be wt the, to help the, and delyuer the, saieth the lord. And I wyl rid the out of the han des of the wycked, and deliuer the out of the hand of Tirauntes.

He prophecieth the mysery of the Jewes. He she weth, that the worshiping of Idoles & the contempt of Gods law, is the cause of their misery. He prophecieth ye captiuity of Babilō, & their deliueraunce frō thence againe. The calling of ye Gētiles.

The .xvi. Chapter.

Moreouer, thus sayde the Lord:
A unto me: Thou shalt take thee no wyfe, ner beget chyldren in thys place. For of the chylderen that a re borne in this place, of theyr mothers that haue borne thē, & of their fathers that haue begotten them in thys lan-de, thus sayth the Lord: They shall dye an horryble death, no man shall mour ne for them, ner bury thē, but they shal lye as donge, upō the earth. They shal perysh thorow the swearde and hunger and theyr bodyes shalbe meate for thee foules of the ayre, & beasts of the earth.
Agayne thus saith ye lord: Go not unto them, that come together for to mour-ne and wepe, for I haue taken my pea ce from thys people (saythe the Lorde) B ye my fauoure and my mercy. And in thys lande shall they dye, olde and yon ge, ād shal not be buryed, no man shall bewepe them, no manne shall clyppe or shaue hym selfe for them.
There shall not one visite an other, to mourne wyth them for their dede, or to cōfort them. One shall not offre anoth er the cuppe of consolation, to forgette theyr heuynesse for father and mother.
Thou shalt not go into theyr feast hou se, to sytt downe, moche lesse to eate or drynke with them. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Beholde, I shal take awai out of this place, the voyce of myrth and gladnes, the voyce of the brydegrome and of ye bryde: yee and that in youre dayes, ye ye may se it.
Now when thou shewest thys peo ple all these wordes/ and they say unto the: Wherfore hath the Lord deuysed all thys greate plage for us? Or what is the offence and synne, that we haue done agaynst the Lorde oure God? C Then make thou them this answere:
Because youre fathers haue forsaken me (sayth the Lorde) & haue cleued unto straunge goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshipped: but me haue they forsaken/ ād haue not kept my lawe. And ye with your shamefull bla sphemyes, haue exceaded the wycked-nes of youre fathers. For euery one of you, foloweth the froward and euell y-magination of hys owne herte/ and is not obedient unto me.
Therfore wil I cast you out of this lande, into a lande that ye and your fa thers knowe not: and there shall ye ser ue straunge goddes daye and nyght, there wyll I shewe you no fauour. Be hold (sayth the Lord) the dayes are cōme, yt shall nomore be sayd: The lord liueth, which broght ye childrē of Israel out of ye land of Egypt: but, it shall be sayde/ the Lorde liueth, that brought the chyldren of Israel from the north. and from all landes where I had sca-tred them. For I wyl bring them agai ne into thi lande, that I gaue theyr fathers.
Behold (sayth the Lorde) I wyll se D de out many [b] fysshers to take them, & after that wyll I sende out many hun ters to hunte them out from all moun taynes and hylles ād out of the caues of stones. For myne eyes beholde all theyr wayes, and they cannot be hyd from my face, nether can theyr wycked dedes be kepte close oute of my syghte.
But fyrst wyll I sufficientlye rewarde theyr shamefull blasphemyes & synnes wherwith they haue defyled my lande:

Namely, with their stinckinge Idoles and abhominacions, wherewyth they haue fyled mine heritage. O lord, my strength/my power, and refug in time of trouble. The Gentyles shal com vn to the frō y endes of y world/& sai: Ue rely our fathers haue cleaued vnto ly-es, their Idoles are but vayne and vn profitabe. How can a man make those his goddes, which are not able to be go ddes. And therfore I wyll ones teache them, saieth the Lord, I wyll shew the my hande & my power, that they maye know, that my name is the lord.

¶ The. xvii. Chapter.

A Your sinne (O ye of y trybe of Juda) is wrytten in the table of youre hertes, and grauen so vpon the endes of youre alters wt a pen of yron & wt an adamāt clawe: y your chil dren also maye thincke vpon youre aul

He shalbe lyke the heeth, that groweth in the wildernes.
B Is for the good thing that is for to cō, he shal not se it: but dwel i a drie place of the wyldernes, in a salt and vnoccu pied land. b O blessed is the man, that putteth his trust in y Lord, and whose hope is the Lord him self. b For he shal C be as a tre/ that is plāted by the water syde: whiche spreadeth out the rote vn to moystnesse, whom the heate can not harme, when it commeth, but his leues are grene. And though there grow but lytle frute because of drouth/ yet is he not carefull, but he neuer leaueth of to bringe forth frute. Amonge al thinges ryches but not rightuously. In y mid dest of his lyfe must he leaue thē behid him, & at y last be founde a very foole.

But y (O Lorde) whose trone is moste glorious, excellēt & of most antyquite, which dwelest i y place of our holy rest: Thou art the cōfort of Israel. Al they y forsake the shalbe cōfoūded: al they y depart frō the, shalbe wrytten in earth, for they haue forsakē the lord, the very D condyte of the waters of lyfe: Heale me, O lord, & I shalbe whole: saue y me/& I shall be saued/for thou art my prayse. Behold, these men saye vnto me: Where is the word of y lord?
Let it come. Where as I neuertheless ledyng the flock in thy wayes, haue cō pelled none by violence. For I neuer desired eny mans deeth/ this knowest thou wel. My wordes also were right before the. Be not now terrible vnto me, O lord, for thou art he in whom I hope, when I am in parel. Let my persecuters be cōfoūded, but not me: let thē be afraied, & not me. Thou shalt bring vpō thē y tyme of their plage, & shalt destroye them right sore.
Agayne/thus hath the lord sayde vnto me: Go and stande vnder y gate where thorow y people and the kinges of Juda go out and in/yee vnder al y gates of Jerusalem, and say vnto thē, Heare the word of the lorde, ye kynges

of Juda, and all thou people of Juda & al ye citiesins of Jerusalē, that go thorow this gate: Thus the Lord cōmaundeth: Take hede for your lyues, that ye cary no burthen vpon you in the Sabboth, to bringe it thorow the gates of Jerusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also oute of your houses in the Sabboth.[b]* Ye shall do no labour therin, but halow the Saboth, as I cōmaunded youre fathers. How be it they obeyed me not, nether harkened they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubburne/

D and nether obeyed me, nor receaued my correccion. Neuertheles/ if ye wil here me (saith the Lord) and beare no burthen in to the cytye thorowe this gate vpon the Sabboth: If ye wyll halow the Sabboth / so that ye do no worcke therin: then shal there go thorow ẏ gates of this citye, kynges and princes/ that shall syt vpon the stole of Dauid: They shal be caryed vpon charettes, & ryde vpon horses, both they and their princes. Yee whole Juda and all the cytesyns of Jerusalem shall go heare thorow, and this cytie shal euer be the more and more inhabited. There shall come men also from the cyties of Juda from about Jerusalem, and from the land of Ben Jamin, from the playne

E feldes/ from the mountaynes & from ẏ wyldernes: which shal bringe burntofferinges, sacrifices/ oblacions/ and incense, and offer vp thanckesgeuyng in the house of the lord. But yf ye wil not be obedient vnto me, to halow ẏ Sabboth, so ẏ ye wyll beare your burthens thorow the gates of Jerusalem vpon ẏ Sabboth: Then shal I set fyre vpon ẏ gates of Jerusalem, and it shall burne vp the houses of Jerusalem/ & no man shal be able to quenche it.

a * That taketh flesh for his arme, ẏ is, ẏ putteth his trust in any thing but in the Lord.

b * Ye shal do no labour therin, but halow the Sabboth as I cōmaunded your fathers &c. The foundacion of the fayth, is, to beleue Goddes promeses, & that he made ẏ whole world, & doth also gouerne it & further ẏ he knoweth and wil iudge al thinges. &c. These thinges did the lawe requyre in keping of ẏ Sabboth, to confesse both wt word and sygne: and to geue diligent hede to ẏ hering & interpreting of the lawe to thinck of ẏ glory of god, & to releue ẏ faithful soule with ẏ fodder of the word, to ministre occasion also vnto the simple ẏ they likewise might attempt such thinges in their houses amongest their houshold folckes, to be pitiful ouer the werynes of such neighboures as laboured soare al ẏ weke before, & releace them to attend & geue hede to ẏ exercises of the spirete & to ẏ consolacion & comforting of their neighboures: not only to abstaine from outwarde workes, and fulfyl their appetites and lustes, for ẏ lord forbyd. The Sabboth shuld be applyed to the leaful seruing of God, not to synfulnes & wantōnes. It is cōmaunded to be sanctyfyed, not to be polluted and defiled wt naughtynes. To god alone must we also kepe it, and cal on his name: other goddes or godded felowes ought we not to enquere of, ner fal downe vnto them. But when such occasiōs come as turne our rest in to occupaciō and labour, thē ought we to remembre ẏ ẏ Sabboth was ordened for man, not man for ẏ Sabboth. Marc ii. b. so that in ẏ meane season/ the feare of god & ẏ charite toward our neighbour (which ar the cheafe & principal thinges in ẏ obseruacion of ẏ Sabboth) be not lyghtely regarded.

The. xviii. Chapter.

God sheweth, by ẏ example of a potter, that it is in his power to destroy the dispysers of his word, & to help thē agayne when they amend. The conspiracie of the Jewes against Jeremy. His prayer against his aduersaries.

This is another communicaciō, that God had with Jeremy, sayinge: Arise, and go downe to the Potters house/ and there shal I tel the more of my minde. Now whē I came to the Potters house/ I found him makyng his worke vpon a whele. The vessel that the Potter made of clay, brake among his handes: So he beganne a new, & made another vessell, according to his minde. Then said the Lord thus vnto me: Maye not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israel/ sayeth the Lorde Beholde, ye house of Israel: ye are in my hande/ euen as the claye in the Potters hande.

When I take in hande to rote out/ to destroye, or to waste awaye eny people or kingdom: if that people (against B whom I haue thus deuised) conuerte from their wickednes: Immediatlye/ I[a]* repent of the plage, that I deuised to bringe vpon the. Agayne When I take in hande, to buylde, or to plante a people or a kingdome: yf ẏ same people do euil before me/ and heare not my voyce: ymmediatly, I repent of the good, that I deuise to do for them. Speake now therfore vnto whole Juda/ and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Thus sayth the Lord: Behold, I am deuising a plage for you, and am taking a thyng in hande against you. Therfor let euery man turne from hys euel waye, take vpon you the thinge that is good, and do right. But they saye: No more of this, we wyll folo- C we our owne ymaginacions, and doe uery man accordinge to ẏ wylfulnes of his owne mynde.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: As be among the heathen, yf any man ha-daughter of Sio hath done. Shal not the snowe (that melteth vpon the stoni rocks of Libanus) moyste the feldes?

Or may the sprynges of of watersbe so grauen awaye, that they runne no mo

But my people hath so forgotten me, B that thei haue made sacrifice vnto vai that whoosoeuer trauayleth thereby, shalbe abasshed, and wagge theyr hea-des, with an East wynde wyll I scatter them, before theyr ennemyes. And when their destruction cometh, I wyll turne my back vpon them/ but not my face. Then sayd they: come, let vs yma gyne something a gainst this Jeremy.

Ye thys dyd euen the prestes/to whom the lawe was committed: the Senato rs, that wer e the wysest: & the prophe tes, which wanted not the word of god Come (sayde they) let vs cutt oute his Therfore let their childrē dye of hū-

Let their wiues be robbed of theyr chil bandes be slayne, let theyr yong mē bee kylled wt the swearde in ẏ felde. Let ẏ noyse be herd out of theyr houses, whē the murtherer cōmeth sodenly vpō thē: For they haue dygged a pytte to take me, & laid snares for my fete. yet lorde, ẏ knowest all their coūcell, ẏ they haue deuised, to slaye me: & therfore forgeue thē not their wickednes, & let not their synne be put out of thy syghte: but lete them be iudged befor the. as the gylti.

This shalt thou do vnto them in thee tyme of thy indygnation.

Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: be thei haue forsakē me, & vnhaloued this

Beholde therfore, the tyme commeth (saythe the Lorde) that thys place shall

In Topheth shal they be buryed, for they shal haue none other place. Thus wyl I do vnto this place also, sayeth ŷ Lord. and to them that dwel therin: ye I wyll do to this citi, as vnto Topheth (for the houses of Jerusalem and the houses of the kynges of Juda are defiled, lyke as Topheth) because of al the houses, in whose Parlers they did D sacrifice vnto al the hooste of heauen, and poured out drincke offringes vnto straunge goddes. And so Jeremye cam from Topheth, wher the lord had sent hym to prophecye, and stode in the courte of the house of the Lord, and spake to all the people: Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes the god of Israel: Beholde, I wyl bringe vpon this cytie & vpon euery towne about it/ al the plages that I haue deuised against them: for they haue ben obstinate, and wold not obeie my warninges.

¶ Jeremy is smitten and cast into preson, for preaching of the word of god. He prophecyeth ŷ captiuyte of Babilon. He complaineth that he is a mockyng stock, for the word of god. He is compelled by the spyrete to preache the word, wyl he wyl he not.

¶ The. xx. Chapter

A When a* Phashur the prest the sonne of Emer, chef in the house of the lord, herd Jeremi preache so stedfastly: he smote Jeremy, & put him in the stockes, that are by the hye gate of Ben Jamin, in the house of the Lord. The next daye folowing Phashur brought Jeremye out of the stockes agayne. Then sayde Jeremy vnto hi The Lord shal cal the no more Phashur (that is excellent and increasynge) but Magor (that is fearefull and afrayed) euery where. For thus sayeth the Lord: behold, I wyl make the a frayed, the thy self/ and al that fauour the which shall perishe with the swerde of their enemyes, euen before thy face.

And I wyl geue whole Juda vnder the power of the kyng of Babylon which shall carye some vnto Babylon presoners, and slaye some with the swerd.
B Morouer/ all the substaunce, of thys lande, all theyr precious and gorgious workes, all costlynes/ and all the treasure of the kynges of Juda: wyll I geue into the handes of theyr enemyes, whyche shal spoyle them, and cary them vnto Babylon. But as for the (O Phashur) thou shalt be caryed vnto Babilon with all thyne housholde, and to Babylon shalt thou come, where thou shalte dye, and be buryed: thou and all thy fauourers, to whome thou hast preached lyes. O Lord, thou makest me weake/ but thou refreshest me, and makest me stronge agayne. All the daye longe am I despysed, and lauged to scorne of euery man: because I haue nowe preached longe against malicious tyranny, and shewed thē of destruction. For the which cause they cast the word of the Lord in my teeth, and take me euer to the worst.

C Wherfore/ I thought from hence forth, not to speake of hym: nor to preach any more in his name. But the worde was a very burnyng fyre in my herte and in my bones, which when I wolde haue stoped/ I might not. For why, I herd so many derisions and blasphemyes, ye euen of myne owne companyons/ and of such as were conuersaunte wyth me: which wente aboute/ to make me afrayde, saying: Upon him, lett vs go vp pon hym, to feare hym & make hym hold his tong: that we may ouercome him, and be auenged of him

But the Lorde stoude by me, lyke a myghty graunte: therfore my persecuters fell/ and coulde do nothynge. They shalbe sore confounded/ for they haue done vnwysely, they shall haue an euerlastyng shame. And nowe, O Lord of hostes, thou righteous sercher, (which knowest the reynes and the verye hertes:) let me se them punished, for vnto the I commit my cause.

D Synge vnto the Lorde/ and prayse hym, for he hathe delyuered the soule of the oppressed/ from the hande of the violent. b* Cursed be the day /wherin I was borne: vnhappye be the day whe in in my mother broght me forth. Cursed be the man, that broughte my father ẏ to that man, as to the cities whiche the Lorde turned vpsyde doowne (when he of them) because he slewe me not, as so ne as I came out of my mothers womb, and because my mother was not my gr haue come oute / but remayned styll in her. Wherfore came I forth of my mo thers wombe? To haue experience of la the citie burned.

¶ The. xxi. Chapter.

These are the woordes ẏ the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy what time as kynge sede-kiah sēt vnto him Pashur A the sonne of Melchiah / and Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah prest sayinge: Aske councell at the Lorde (we pray the) of oure behalfe / for Nabucho donoser the kynge of Babylon besege th vs, yf the Lorde (peraduenture) wil deale with vs, accordinge to hys maruelos power, and take hym from vs.

Then spake Jeremye. Geue sedeki ah this answere. Thus sayth the Lord god of Israel: behold, I wyl turn back the weapons that ye haue in your han des, wherwith ye fight against the kin ge of Babylon, and the Caldees which besege you round about the wales, and I wyll bringe them together into thee myddest of this citie, and I my selfe w B yll fyght agaynst you, with an outstretched hand, and with a mighty arme, in great displeasur and terrible wrath: & wyl smite them / that dwel in this citie: yee both men and cattell shall dye of ẏ pestilence.

And after this (saith the Lorde) I shal delyuer zedekiah the king of Ju- C da, and his seruauntes, his people (and such as are escaped in the citye, from ẏ pestilence / sweärde, and honger) into ẏ power of nabuchodonosor king of Ba bylon: yee into the handes of their ene myes, in to the handes of those that fo low vpon their liues, which shal smite them with the sweard: they shal not pi tye them, they shal not spare them, they shal haue no mercy vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalt saie: Thus saieth the Lord: beholde, I laie before you the waye of lyfe and deeth.
Who so abydeth in this cytie / shall pe rysshe, ether with the swerd / wt honger, or with pestilence. But who so goethe out to holde on the Chaldes part, ẏ be sege it, he shal saue his life, and a* shal wynne his soule for a pray. For I haue set my face agaynst this cytie (sayeth ẏ lorde) to plage it / and do it no good.

It muste be geuen in to the hande of the kyng of Babylon, and be brent wt fyre.

And the house of the kynge of Ju- D da, sate thus: Heare the word of the lor de (O thou house of Dauid) for thus saith the lord: Ministre rightousn e and that sone, delyuer the oppressed frō vyolent power: or euer my terryble wr athe breake oute lyke a fyre, and burne so, ẏ no man maye quench it, because of the wickednes of your imagynacyōs Behold (saieth the lord) I wyl cōe vpō you, ẏ dwel in ẏ valleis, rocks and fel des, & saie; Tush: who wyl make vs a fraped? or who wil come into our hou ses? For I wil vyset you (saith ẏ lord) because of ẏ wickednes of your inuēcti ōs, & wyl kindle such a fire i your wod, as shal consume al / ẏ is about you.

a * Shall wynne his soule for a praye, that is, shall escape daunger: It is alone with that which goethe before he shall saue hys lyfe: hys soule that is, hys ly fe, shalbe vnto hym as a pray: because he shulde vtter ly haue loste it, if he had bydden in Jerusalem: and by flying vnto the Chaldees he shuld wynne it, suc as a man wynneth a pray in battell.

¶ He exhorteth the kynge of Juda to iudgmente, & ryghtousnes. Why Jerusalem is brought into captiuite. The death of Selum the sunne of Josia, is prophecyed.

¶ The .xxii. Chapter.

Thus sayde the Lorde also: Goo downe into the house of the king do not greue nor oppresse the straũger, the fatherles nor the wyddowe/and she de no innocent bloude in this place.

B And if ye kepe these thinges fayth-fully, then shall there come in at the do re of thys house kings, to syt vpon Da uids seat: they shalbe caried in Charets and ryde vpon horses, both they and th eyr seruauntes/and theyr people. But if ye wyll not be obedient vnto these cõ maundementes, I sweare by myne ow ne self (sayth the Lord) thys house shal be waite. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vpon the kynges house of Juda: Thou art the head, as galaad is in Ly banus: What wylt thou saye of it, yf I make the not so wast (and thy cities al so) that no man shal dwel therin? I wil prepare a destroyer with hys weapons hys house wyth vnryghteousnes, and his parlers with the good that he hath D gotten by violence: which neuer recompenseth his neyghbours laboure, ner payeth him his hyre. He thyncketh in him selfe: I wyl buylde me a wyde hou se, and gorgeous parlers: He causeth windowes to be hewen therin, and the sylynges and geastes maketh he of Cedre, and paynteth them with zenober.

Thinckest thou to raigne, now that ÿ prouokest me to wrath wyth the Cedre fusyon, because of all thy wyckednes: thou that dwellest vpon Lybanus, &

The. xxiii. Chapter.

A Wo be vnto the shephardes, that destroy, and scattre my flocke, saith the lorde. Wherfor, this ye cōmaūdement of the Lorde God of Jsraell/vnto the shepherdes that fede my people: Ye scatre and thrust out my flocke, and loke not vpon them. Therfore now wyl J viset the wickednes of your ymagynacions, saieth the Lord: And wyl gather together the a* remnaunt of my flocke, from all landes that J had dryuen them vnto/and wyl bringe them agayne to their pastures, yt they maye grow and increase. J wil set shepardes also ouer them, which shall fede them. They shall nomore feare & drede, for there shal non of them be lost saieth the lord. Beholde, the tyme commeth, saith the Lord, yt J wyl rayse vp the ryghtuous braunch of Dauid, which sheall rule/and discusse matters wt wysdom/& shal set vp equyte and rightousnes againe in the earth, B

Jn his tyme shall Juda be saued & Jsrael shal dwel with out feare. And this is the name that they shall cal hi: euen the lord our rightuous maker. And therfore beholde, the tyme cōmeth saieth the lord/yt it shal no more be sayde: the Lord lyueth, which brought the children of Jsraell out of the lande of Egipt: But the lorde lyueth, which broughte forth, and led the sede of the house of Jsrael/out of ye North lande/and from al countreis where J had scatered them, and they shal dwell in their owne land agayne.

My herte breaketh in my body because of the false propetes, al my bones shake: J am become lyke a droncken man C (yt by the reason of wyne can take no rest) for very feare of the lorde, and of his holye wordes: because the lande is ful of aduouterers, where thorow it is destroyed and mourneth, and ye plesaunt pastures of the deserte are dryed vp. Yee the waye that men take, is wycked, and their gouernaunce is nothynge lyke the holy worde of the lord: For the prophetes and the prestes them selues are poluted ypocrites, and their wickednes haue J found in my house saieth the lorde. Wherfore/their waye shalbe slipery in the darcknes, wherin D they maye stacker and fal. For J wyll bringe a plage vpon them, euen the yeares of their visitayon, saith ye Lord. J haue sene foly amonge the prophetes of Samaria, that thei preached for Baal, and disceaued my people of Israel.

I haue sene also among the Prophetes of Ierusalem, foule aduoutry/and presumptuous lyes. They take the most shamfull men by the hand, flatteryng them, so y they cā not returne frō their wickednes. Al these with their cytezyns are vnto me, as Sodom, and as the inhabitours of Gomorre.

Ierem. ix. b Therefore thus saieth the lorde of Hostes concernyng the prophetes: Beholde/ I wyl fede them with wormwod and make thē drynck the water of gal For from the prophetes of Ierusalē is the sycknes of ypocresy com in to al the land.

D Ierem. xxvii & xxviii. b And therfore the lord of Hostes geueth you this warnyng: Heare not the wordes of the prophetes that preach vnto you/ & deceaue you: for thei speake y meanyng of their owne hert, & not out of the mouth of the lorde. They saye vnto them, that despyce me: The lorde hath spoken it. Tush ye shal prospere ryght wel. Ierem. xiv. a Sophon. i. c And vnto al them/ y walck after the lust of their owne herte, they saye: Tush there shal no missfortune happen you. For who hath sytten in y councel of the lord, that he hath herd & vnderstand, what he is about to do? Who hath marked his deuise, & herde it? Beholde the stormy wether of the Lord (that is, his indignacion) shal go forth and shal fal downe vpon the hed of the vngodly. And the wrath of the lord shall not turne agayne/ vntyll he performe and fulfyl the thought of his hart. And in the latter dayes yee shall know his meanyng.

E Ierem. xliii. a I haue not sent these Prophets (saieth the Lorde) and yet they ranne. I haue not spokē to thē, and yet they preched. But yf they had contynued i my counsel and herd my wordes: they had turned my people from their euell wayes and wycked imaginacions. Am I then God y seethe but the thinge, which is nye at hande, and not that is far of, saieth the Lorde? Maye eny man hyde hym selfe, that I shal not se hym? sayeth the Lorde?

Do not I fulfyl heauen and earth? sayeth the Lorde? I haue herd wel ynough/ what the prophetes saye, that preache lyes in my name, sayinge: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe wyl this contynue in the prophetes hertes, to tel lyes, and to preache the crafty sutletys of their owne herte? Whose purpose is (with the dreames that euery one tel) to make my peple forget my name, as their fore fathers dyd/ when Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame, let him tel it: and he that vnderstandeth my word, let him shewe it faythfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheate to do to gether, sayeth the Lorde? F Is not my word lyke a fire, saieth the lord, and lyke an hammer, that breaketh y hard stone? Therfore thus sayeth the lorde: beholde/ I wil vpon the prophetes, that steal my word preuely from eueri mā. Behold, here am I, saith y lord) against the prophetes, that take vpon theyr tōges to speake: The lord hath sayde it. Behold, here am I (saieth the Lord) agaynst those prophetes, that dare prophesy lyes and disceue my people with their vanytes, and myracles, whom I neuer sent, nor cōmaunded them. Thei shal do this people grete harme sayth the lord.

Yf this people, ether eni prophet or prest aske y, and saie: what is the burthen of the Lord? Thou shalt saye vnto them: What burthen? Therfore wil I cast you fro me (saieth the lorde) because ye your selues are a burthen. And the prophet, preste or people that vseth thys terme (the burthenne of the Lord) him wyl I visit/ and his house also.

But thus shal ye saye, euerye one to another: What answeare hathe the Lorde geuen? or what is the lordes commaundemente?

And as for the burthen of the Lorde/ ye shall speake nomore of yt: G for euerye mans owne worde is his burthen, because yee haue altred the wordes of the lyuynge God the Lorde of Hostes our God.

Thus shal euery man saye to y prophetes: what answere hath the Lord geuen thee? Or what, sayeth the Lorde?

And not once to nam: the burth en of the Lord. Therfore thus sayeth ẏ lord: For so much as ye haue vsed thys terme (the but then of the Lord) where as I notwithstanding sent vnto you, and forbade you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Beholde therfore, I wyl repute you as a burthen/ and wyl cast you out of my presence: yee and the cytie also, that I gaue you and your fathers: and wil bring you to an euerlastynge confusyō, and in to such a sham, as shal neuer be forgotten.

The. xxiiii. Chapter.

¶ The vysion of the. ii. pannyers of fygges. The fyrst vysion signifieth that part of the people shuld be brought agayne frō captiuite. The second, that zedekiah and the rest of the people shulde be destroyed.

The lord shewed me a vysy a on: Behold, there stode to maundes of fygges before the Temple of the lord, after that Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilō had led away captiue Jechoneah ẏ sonne of Jehoakim kinge of Juda, the mightymen also of Juda wt the workmasters, and conning mē of Jerusalem, vnto Babilon. In the one maund were very good fyges, euen lyke as those that be first ripe. In the other maunde were very naughtye fyges, which might not be eaten, they were so euel. Then sayd the lord vnto me: what seyst thou Jeremy? I sayde: fyges, wherof some be very good, and some so euell, that noe man maye eate them.

Then came the word of the lorde b vnto me, after this maner: Thus saith the lord the god of Israel; like as thou knowest ẏ good fyges, so shal I know the men led awaye, whom I haue sente out of this place in to the lande of the Caldees/ for their profyte: and wyll set many eyes vpō them for the best, for I wyl bring them agayne into his lande, I wyl buyld them vp, and not breake them downe: I wyl plāt them/ and not rote them out. And I wyl geue the an hert to know, how that I am the lord.
They shalbe my people, and I wyll be their God/ for they shall returne vnto me wt their whole hert.

And lyke as thou knowest the naughtye fyges, whych may not be eatē, they are so euel: Euen so wyl I sayeth the Lord (let zedekiah the kyng of Juda/ (ye and al his princes, and the resy C due of Jerusalem that remayne out i this lande, and them also that dwel in Egypte) to be vexed and plagued in all kyngdomes and landes. And wyll make them to be a reprofe, a comen by worde, a laughyng stocke and shame, in al the places, wher I shal scatre thē.
I wyl send the sweard, hongre and pe stilence among them, vntil I haue cle ane consumed them out of the lande, ẏ I gaue vnto them and their fathers.

¶ Jeremy propheceyeth that they shalbe in captiuyte lxx yeares, because they contempted & dyspysed ẏ word of God. He sheweth ẏ after lxx. yeares the Babyloniās shuld be destroyed. The destruccyō of al nacions is prophecyed. He moueth the Prestes of ẏ nacions to waylyng.

A Sermon that was geuen A vnto Jeremy, vpon all the people of Juda: In ẏ fou-rthe yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, that was in the fyrste yeare of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon.
Which sermō, Jeremy the prophet ma de vnto all the people of Juda/ and to al the inhabitours of Jerusalē, on this maner.

From the. xiii. yeare of Josiah the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda/ vnto this present daye (that is euē. xxiii. yea res) the word of the lorde hath bene cō-mitted vnto me. And so haue I spokē to you, I haue risen vp earlye, I haue geuen you warnynge in season, but ye wold not heare me. Though the lor- B de hath sent his seruaunt, al the prophe tes vnto you in seson: Yet wold ye not obeye, ye wold not enclyne your eares to heare.

He sayde: turne agayne euery mā frō his euel waye, & frō your wicked yma ginacioñs, and so shall ye dwell foreuer in the lande/ that the Lorde promysed you and youre forefathers: And go not after straunge goddes, serue them not, worshypp them not, and anger me not with the workes of youre handes: the wyll not I punishe you. Neuertheles/ye wolde not heare me (sayth the lorde) but haue deffied me withe the workes of youre handes, to your owne greate harme.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde of Hoostes: because, ye haue not harkned vnto me woorde, lo I wyll sende oute, and call for all the people, that dwel in the north, sayth the lorde, and wyll prepare Nabuchodonosor y king of Babi lō my seruaunt/and wyll bryn g thē vp p o n thislande, and vpon all that dwel therin, and vponall the people that are aboute them/and wyll vtterly rote thē oute. I wyll make of them a wyldernesse / a mockage, and a continuall deserte.

C Moreouer/I wyll take from them the  voyce of gladnesse and solace/y voyce of the brydegrom and the bryde, the voyce of the annoynted, wythe the creshettes: and thys whole lande shal become a wyldernes and they shall ser ue the saide people, and the king of Ba bylon/thre score yeares and ten. Whē the .lxx yeares are expyred, I wyll visi te also the wyckednes of the kynge of Babylon & his people sayth the Lord: yee and the lande of the Caldees, & wyll make it a perpetuall wyldernesse and wyll fulfyll all my wordes vpon that Lāde, which I haue deuised agaynste it: ye all that is wrytten in thys boke, whiche Jeremy hath prophecyed of al all people/so that they also shalbe subdued vnto dyuers nacions and greate Job. xxxiiii b kynges, for I wyll recompence them a cording to theyr dedes and workes of theyr owne handes.

D For thus hath the lorde God of Is Esay. li. and Psal. lxxv. b raell spoken vnto me: Take thys wyne cuppe of indignation from my hande, y thou mayst cause al the people, to whō I send the, for to drynck of it / that whē they haue droncken thereof, they maye be mad and out of theyr wyttes, when the swerde commeth, that I wyll sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the lordes hāde, and made al the people drynke therof, vnto whom the lord had sent me.

But fyrst the citie of Jerusalem, & al the Cities of Juda/theyr kynges & C prynces: to make them desolate, waste, despised and cursed acordinges it is to me to passe thys day: ye and Pharao the kynge of Egypte/ his seruauntes hys prynces and his people altogether one with another and all kinges of the lā de of Hus, all kinges of the philistines land, Ascalon, Azah, Accaron, and the remnaūt of Asdod / the Edomites, the Moabites and the ammonites: All the kyngs of Tyrus and Sydon: the kin ges of the Iles, that are beyond the se Dedan, Thema, Buz and the shauen Ismaelytes: all the kinges of Arabye, (& generally) al the kynges that dwell in the deserte: al the kynges of Zamry, all the kynges of Elam, all the kinges of the Meedes, al kynges towarde the North, whether they be farre or ny/eue ry one with his neyghboure: Yea and all the kigdoms that are vpon the who le earth the kinge of Sesach/sayde he, shall drynke with them also.

And saye thou vnto them: Thys is F the commaundemente of the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Drynke & be dronken/spewe and fall, that ye neuer ryse: and that thorow the swerd, wh ich I wyllsend among you. But yf the wyll not receaue the cuppe of thy hand, and drynke it, then tell them: Thus doth the Lorde of hostes threaten you: drynke it ye shal and that shortly. For lo, I begynne to plage the citi, that my name is geuen vnto: Thynke ye then, that I wyll leaue you vnpunished: ye shall not go quite. For why, I cal for a swearde vpō all the inhabytoures of the earth, sayth the lorde of hoostes.

Therfore tell them all these wordes, Joel. iii. Amos. i. and saye vnto them: The lord shal cry from aboue, and let hys voyce be herde from hys holy habitacion, with a gre te noyse shall he crye from hys court re gall, he shall geue a great voyce (lyke the grape gatherers) and the sounde the rof shalbe hearde vnto the endes of the worlde. For the lorde hath a iugemente to geue vpon al people, and wyll hold his courte of iustice wyth all fleshe and punish punish the vngodlye, sayth the lorde.

For thus saieth the lord of hoostes. Beholde, a myserable plage shall goo

G from one people to another, and a grete stormy water shal aryse from al the endes of the earth. And the same daye shal the lorde hi selfe slay thẽ, from one ende of the earth to another. There shal no mone be made for eny of thẽ none gathered vp / none buried: but shall lye as dung vpon the ground.

Mourne (O ye shepardes) and cry sprynkle your selues with ashes, O ye rammes of the flock: for ẏ tyme of your slaughter is fulfilled / and ye shall fall like vessels connyngly made for pleasure.

The shephardes shal haue no waie to fle, and the rammes of the flock shal not escape. Then shal the shepardes crye horribilye, and the rammes of the flock shal mourne: for the Lord shal cõsume their pasture / and their beste feldes shal lye deed because of the horryble wrath of the Lord. They shal forsake their foldes lyke as a lyõ: For their landes shalbe wast because of ẏ wrat h of the destroyer, and because of his fearful indignacion.

a By these things are vnderstand ẏ pastyme, ẏ prosperitie ẏ abundaũce of worldly thiges. Al these wolde ẏ Lord take a way frõ the Jewes. Jer vii. g. t. i

C Jeremy moueth the people to amendemet. He is taken of the Prophetes and Prestes, & brought to iudgement, he being accused before the Princes answereth, that he had preched only the wordes of god The rulers and the people delyuer Jeremy agaynst the wylles of ẏ Prestes & prophetes: after ẏ example of Ezechiah, which had delyuered Micheah, ẏ had preached ẏ same thinges that Jeremy had preched Uriah ẏ Prophete is killed of Jehoakim contrary to the wyl of god.

The. xxvi. Chapter.

A IN the begynning of ẏ reygne of Jehoakim ẏ sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, came this worde from the Lorde, saying: Thus sayeth the Lord: Stande in the courte of ẏ lordes house, & speke vnto al thẽ which (out of ẏ cites of Juda) cõ to do worship i ẏ lordes house / all ẏ wordes ẏ I cõmaũd ẏ to sai. Loke ẏ ẏ kepe not one word back, if (peraduẽture) they wil harke, & turne euery mã from his wycked waie ẏ I maye also * repent of ẏ plage which I haue determed to bring vpon thẽ because of their wycked inuẽciõs.

And after thys maner shalt thou speake vnto thẽ: Thus sayethe the Lorde: B yf ye wyll not obey me, to walke in my Lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes / the Prophetes, whom I sent vnto you, rysing vp timely and styll sending: Yf ye wyll not followe them (I saye) then wyll I doo to thys house, as I didde vnto Siloh / and wyll make thys Citye to be abhorred of all the People of the earth. And the prestes, the prophetes and all the people herde Jeremye preache these wordes in the house of ẏ Lorde.

Now, when he had spoken out all ẏ wordes, that the Lorde commaunded hĩ to preache vnto all the people, then the pryestes / the prophetes and all the people toke holde vpon him, ãd sayde: thou shalt dye. How darrest thou be so bold, as to saye in the name of the lorde. It shal happen to thys house as it dyd vn- C to Siloh: and thys cytie shalbe so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

And when al the people were gathered aboute Jeremye in the house of the lord, the Princes of Juda herd of this rumoure, and they came sone out of the kynges palace into the house of the lorde, and sate them down before the new dore of the lord. Thẽ spake the prestes iiii. Re. xv. g. Jere. xxxvi. b and the prophetes vnto the rulers / ãd to all the peple, these wordes: This mã D is worthy to dye, for he hath preached John. xix. a agaynst this citie, as ye your selues haue herde wyth youre eares.

Thẽ sayd Jeremy vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lord hathe sent me to preach agaynst thys house & agaynst thys citie, al the wordes that ye haue haue herde. Therfore amende youre wayes and youre aduisementes and be obedient vnto the voyce of the Lorde youre God: so shall the Lorde repent of the plage, that he had deuysed against you. Nowe as for me: I am in youre handes, do with me as ye thynke expedient and good. But thys shal ye knowe: yf ye put me to death, ye shal make your selues / thys cite and all the inhabitours therof, gyltye of innocent bloude. For thys is of a truth: that the Lord hath sent me vnto you, to speke Math. xxiii. f all these wordes in your eares.

Then sayde the rulers and ẏ people vnto the prestes and prophetes: This man maye not be condemned to death for he hath preached vnto vs in ẏ name of the Lord our god. The Elders also of the land stode vp/and sayd thus vn Miche.i.a to al the people: Micheah the Morast hite/which was a prophet vnder Eze-kiah kyng of Juda spake to al ẏ peo ple of Juda: Thus sayeth the Lord of F hostes: Sion shalbe plowed like a feld Miche.iii.c Jerusalem shalbe an heape of stones and the hil of the Lordes house shalbe turned to an hye wod. Dyd Ezekiah the king of Juda and the people of Ju da put him to death forthis? No vere ly, but rather feared the Lorde,and made their prayer vnto him. For the which cause also the lord repented of ẏ plage that he had deuised agaynst them.
Shuld we then do such a shameful dede agaynst our soules? There was a pro phet also, that preached stifly in ẏ name of the lorde, called Uriah the sonne G of Semeiah of Cariathiarim: this man preached also agaynst this cytie and a gaynst this lande, accordinge to al as Jeremy sayeth. Now when Jehoakim iiii.Re.xxiii.d the king wyth al the estates and princes had herd his wordes, the king went ii.Re.xxv.a Math.i.a about to slay him: When Uriah perce ued ẏ, he was afraid, and fled, and depar ted in to egipt.

Then Jehoakim the king sent seruauntes into the lande of Egipt Namely: Elnathan the sonne of Achabor and certeyne men with him into Egipt which fetched Uriah out of egipt, and broughte hym vnto kinge Jehoakim that slew him wt the swearde, and caste hys deed body into the comen peoples graue But Ahikam the son of Saphan helped Jeremy, that he came not into ẏ handes of the people to be slayne.

Jeremy from the Lord wh ich spake thus vnto me: Make the bon des and chaynes, and put them about thy necke, and sende them to the kynge of Edom, the king of Moab, the kinge of Ammon, the kynge of Tyrus, and to the kinge of Sydon: and that by the messengers which shal come to Jerusa lem vnto Zedekiah the kinge of Juda and byd them saye vnto theyr masters, Thus saith the Lord of hostes, the god of Israel speake thus vnto your masters: I am he that made the earthe the men, and the catell that are vppon the ground, with my great power and outstretched arme and haue geuẽ it vn to whome it pleaseth me. And now wyl B I delyuer all these landes into the po wer of Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon my seruaunte. The beastes also of the felde shall I geue hym, to do hym seruice, and all people shall serue hym, and hys sonne and hys chyl des chylderen, vntyll the tyme of the sa me lande be come also: yet many people and greate kynges shall serue hym.

Moreouer, that people and kingdo me which wyll not serue Nabuchodothe Prestes also, and to all the people: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Heare not the wordes of those Prophetes/that prea-royed? b* But yf they be true Prophetes in very dede, and yf the word of the Lord be committed vnto them, the let the praye the lorde of hostes that the re naunt of the ornamentes (which are in the house of the lord, and remayne yet i the house of the kyng of Juda and at Jerusalem) be not caryed to Babylon also. For thus hath the Lord of hostes spoken concernyng the pyllers, ye lauer

Yea thus hath the Lord of hoostes the god of Israel spoken, as touching the resydue of the ornamentes of the Lordes house/of the kyng of Judaes house/and of Jerusalem: They shal-be caryed vnto Babylon/ and there they shal remayne: vntyl I vyset them sayeth the Lorde. Then will I bring C them hyther agayne. And this was done in the same yeare: euen in the begynning of ye reigne of zedekiah kyng of Juda.

¶ The false prophecy of Hananiah the Prophet. Jeremye sheweth that the prophecye of Hananiah is false, by the exaple of the other Prophetes he beig inspired the lord reproueth Hananiah, prophecying his deth.

¶ The .xxviii. Chapter.

BUt in the fourth yeare of ye A raygne of zedekiah kynge of Juda, in the fyft month it happened/that Hanani ah the Sonne of Assur, the prophet of Gabaon, spake to me in the house of the Lord, in the presence of the prestes and all the people, and sayde.
Thus saieth the lorde of hostes ye god of Israel: I haue broken the yock of ye king of Babilon, and after two yeare wil I bring agayne into this place, al the ornamentes of the Lordes house/that Nabuchodonosor king of Babilo caryed awaye from this place vnto Ba bylon. Yea I wil bring agayne Jecho niah the sonne of Jehoakim the kyng of Juda hym self, wt all the presoners of Juda (yt are caried vnto Babylon) euen into the place, saieth the lord, for I wil breake the yock of the kynge of Babylon.

Thus the prophet Jeremy gaue an B swere vnto the prophet Hananiah/be fore the prestes, and before al ye people that were present in the house of ye lord And the prophet Jeremie saide: Amen the lord do ye, and graunte the thynge, which thou haste prophecyed: that he maye bringe agayne all the ornamen-tes of the Lordes house, and restore all the presoners from Babilon in to the place. Neuertheles, herken thou also what I wil saye, that thou and all the people maye hear: The prophetes ye were before vs & tymes past, which pro phecyed of warre, or troble, or pestilece ether of peace, vpon manye nacyons & grete kigdomes/were proued by this the thing come to passe, which that pro phet tolde before. C

And Hananiah the prophet toke ye chayne chayne from the Prophete Jeremyes neck, and brake it and with that sayde Hananiah, that al the peple migh heare: Thus hath the lord spoken, euẽ so wyll J breake the yocke of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon/ frõ ẏ neck of al nacions, yea and that within this two yeres. And so the prophet Jeremy went his waye. Now after that that Hananiah the prophete had taken the chayne frõ the prophet Jeremyes neck and broken it: The word of the Lorde came vnto the prophet Jeremy sayẽg: Go/ and tell Hananiah these wordes: D Thus saieth the Lord: Thou hast bro ken the chayne of wod, but in stead of wod thou shalt make chaynes of yron.

For thus sayeth the lorde of hoostes ẏ god of Israel: J wyl put a yock of yrõ vpõ the neck of al this people that thei maye serue Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon, yea and so shal they do.
And J wyl geue him the beastes in the Jerem. xxv. c felde. Then sayde the prophet Jeremy vnto the prophet Hananiah: Heare me (J pray thee) Hananiah: The Lorde hath not sẽt thee/ but thou brigest this people into a false beleue. And therfore thus saieth the Lord: beholde J wil sẽd out of the land, and within a yere thou shalt dye because thou hast falslye spoken agaynste the lorde. So Hananiah the prophet dyed the same yeare in the seuenth Moneth.

¶ The pystle of Jeremy, sent vnto them that were in captyuite in Babylon. He prophecieth their returne from captiuite after .lxx. yeares. He prophecieth the destruction of the kynge and of the people that remayned in Jerusalem. He threateneth ii Prophetes that seduced the people. The death of Semeia ẏ Nehelamyte is prophecied.

¶ The .xxix. Chapter.

A This is the Copi of ẏ letter that Jeremy the prophete sent from Jerusalem vnto the presoners: the Senatours, prestes, prophetes, and all the people, whome Nabuchodonosor had led vnto Babylon, after that tyme that kynge Jochoniah, and his Quene/ his chamberlaynes the prices of Juda and Jerusalem the worc-kemasters of Jerusalem were departed thyther.
Which letter Elasah the sonne of Sa phan and Gamariah the sonne of Hel kiah dyd beare, whom Zedekiah ẏ kyng of Juda sent vnto Babilon to Nabu-chodonosor the kyng of Babilon: these were the wordes of Jeremyes letter.
Thus hath the Lorde of hoostes ẏ god of Israel spoken vnto al the prisoners, that were led from Jerusalem B vnto Babilon: buylde you houses to dwel therin: plant you gardẽs, that ye maye enioye the frutes therof, take you wyues to beare you sonnes and daugh ters; prouyde wyues for your sonnes, and husbandes for youre daughters, that they get sonnes and daughters ẏ that ye maye multyply there. Laboure not to be fewe, but seke after peace and prosperite of the citye wherein ye be pri soners, and praye vnto god for it.
For in the place therof, shal your peace C be. For thus saieth the lorde of hoostes the god of Israel: Let not those prophetes and soth sayers that be among you disceaue you: and beleue not your owne dreames. For why, they preache you lyes in my name/ ẏ J haue not sẽt them saieth the lorde.
But thus sayeth the lorde. When ye haue fulfilled .lxx. yeares at Babilõ J wyl bring you home/ and of myne o wne goodnes J wyl cary you hither a gayne vnto this place. For J knowe what J haue deuysed for you sayeth the lorde. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, ẏ not trouble (which J geue you all redi) and ẏ ye mightbaue hope D agayne. Ye shal crye vnto me, ye shal go and call vpon me, and J shall heare you.
Ye shall seke me and fynde me/ Yea, yf so be ẏ ye seke me with youre whole harte, J wyll be founde of you (sayeth the Lord, and wyll deliuer you out of pryson/ and gather you together a-gayne out of al places wherin J haue scatred you/ saith ẏ lord ẏ wyl bring you agayn to the same place, frõ whence J caused you to be caryed awaye captyue.
But where as ye saye, that God hath raysed you vp prophets at Babi lon: Thus hath the lorde spoken (concernynge the kynge that sytteth in the stoole of Dauid, and al the peple that dwel in thys citye, youre brethren that are not gone with you in to captiuite)

Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lorde of hoostes: Beholde, I wil send a swearde honger and pestilence upon them, and wyll make them lyke untymely fyges/ that maye not be eaten for bitternes. And I wyl persecut them with ẏ sweard, with honger and death.

I wyl delyver them up to be vexed of al kingdomes, to be cursed / abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusion of al the people, amonge whome I have scatred them: & that because they have not bene obedient unto my commaundementes (sayth the Lord) which I sent unto them by my servauntes ẏ prophetes. I stode up early, and sente unto them/ but they wolde not heare/ sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the E word of the Lord, all ye presoners, whō I sent from Jerusalem unto Babilon, Thus hathe the lorde of hoostes ẏ god of Israel spoken of Ahab the son of Colaiah, and of zedekiah/ ẏ sonne of Maasiah, which prophecieth lyes unto you in my name: Behold/ I wyl delyver thē in to the hand of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon, that he male slay thē before your eyes. And al the prisoners of Juda that are in Babilon, shal take upon them this terme of cursing/ and saye: Now God do unto the/ as he did unto zedekiah & Ahab, whom ẏ kinge of Babilon rosted in the fyre, because they sinned shamefully in Israel.

For they have not only defiled their neighbours wyves, but also preached lieng wordes i my name, which I have not commaunded them. This I testyfy, and assure, saieth the Lord. But as for Semeiah ẏ Nehelamite thou shalt speake unto him: Thus saieth ẏ lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Because F thou hast seled letters under thy name, unto all the people that is at Jerusalem, & to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah ẏ prest, yee and sent them to all ẏ prestes: wherin thou wrytest thus unto him: The Lord hath ordened the to be iiii.Re.xi.a ii.par.xxiii.a prest in steade of Jehoiada the prest, ẏ thou shuldest be the chefe in the house of the lord above al prophets, and preachers, and that thou mightest put thē in preson, or in the stockes. How happeneth it then, that thou haste not reproved Jeremy of Anathoth, which never leaveth of his prophecyeng. And beside al this/ he hath sent us word unto Babylon, and tolde us playnely, that our captivite shal long endure: & we shuld buyld us houses to dwel therin, and to plante us Gardens that we might enioye the frutes therof. Which letter Sophoniah ẏ prest dyd reade, and let Jeremy the prophet heare it.

Then came the word of the lord unto Jeremy, sayinge: Sende worde to all G Iere.xxviii.a them that be i captivite, on this maner Thus hath the lord spoken concernige Semeiah the Nehelamite: Because ẏ Semeiah hath prophecyed unto you without my commyssiō/ and brought you into a false hope, therfore thus the lord doth certyfye you: Behold, I wyl viset Semeiah the Nehelamite, & his sede: so that none of his shall remayne amonge this people, and none of them shal se the good, that I wyl do for this people saieth the Lorde. For he hathe preached falsely of the lord.

a ¶ Such prophetes as preached unto them ẏ thynges which they were desirous of, did they greatly alowe: yee even after they came to Babylon. In the they reioysed, as though they had bene sent of the Lord, & yet were they indede false Prophetes. But Ezechiel the tru prophet of the lord, which preached the contrary did they persecute. By the false prophetes they said: God hath sent us Prophetes, & there doctrine dyd they heare and folow. But the true Prophet dyd they mocke & laugh to scorne, neither wolde they beleve his doctryne, ner geve eare unto it.

¶ The returne of the people from Babilō. God by his chastenyng sheweth that the people is sinful. The destruction of the enemies of Israel.

¶ The.xxx. Chapter

These are the wordes/ that the Lorde shewed unto Jeremye/ sayinge: Thus saieth the Lorde God of Israell: Wryte up dylygent- A lye al the wordes/ that I have spoken unto the, in a boke.

For lo/ the tyme commeth (sayeth the Lorde) that I wyl brynge agayne the presoners of my people of Israell and Juda/ sayeth the Lorde: For I wyl restore them unto ẏ land/ that I gave to their fathers, and they shal have yt in possession.

Agayne/ these wordes spake the lord

Lorde, concerning Israell and Iuda: Thus sayth the Lorde: We heare a Alas for thys daye, which is so drea B defull/that none may be lykened vnto it: & alas for the tyme of Iacobs trouble, from the whych he shall yet be dely uered.. For in that daye: sayth the lord, I wyl take his yocke from of thy neck, and breake thy bondes. They shall no more serue straunge Gods vnder him/but they shall do seruice vnto GOD theyr Lord/and to Dauid theyr king, whom I wyll rayse vp vnto thé. *And as for thy O my seruaunt Iacob feare not (sayth the Lord) and be not afrayd, O Israell. For, lo, I wyll helpe the al-

For I am with the, to helpe the/ sayth the Lorde. And though I shall destroi all the people, amonge whome I haue scatered the/yet wyl I not destroy the/but correcke the, and that with discretion. For I knowe that thou arte in no wyse without faute. Therfor thus say the lorde: I am sory for thy hurte and woundes. There is no man to meddle with thy cause: or to bynde vp thy woũ des: there maye no man helpe the.

All thy louers haue forgotten the/ãd care nothing for the. For I haue ge uen the a cruell stroke, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multitu-D de of thy mysdedes, and synnes I haue had the ouerhande. Why makest thou moone for my harme? I my selfe haue pytye of thy sorowe, but for the multitude of thy mysdedes and synnes, I ha ue done thys vnto the.

And therfore all they that deuoure

E For thus sayth the Lorde: Behold, I wyll sette vp Iacobs tentes agayn/and defende his dwelling place. The ci tie shalbe buylded in her olde estate, & the house shall haue theyr ryght e foundacion. And out of them shall go thanc kesgeuing, and the voyce of ioye.

I wyll multiplye thé, and they shal not mynishe: I shall endue them wyth honour, and no man shall subdu them, Theyr Childeren shalbe as afore tyme, and theyr congregation shal conti nue in my syght. And all those that he re them, wyll I vysite.

A capteyne also shall come of them, and a prynce shal spryng out from the myddest of them: hym wyll I chaleng to my selfe, and he shall come vnto me For what is he, that geuethe ouer hys hert to come vnto me? sayth the Lorde: Ye shalbe my people also, and I wilbe F youre God. Beholde, on the other syde shal the wrathe of the Lord breake out as a stormy water/as a myghtie whir lewynde: and shall fall vppon the hea-des of the vngodly.

The terryble dyspleasure of the lor de shall not leaue of, vntyl he haue do ne, & perfourmed the intent of hys her-te, which in the  latter dayes ye shall vnderstande. At the same tyme (sayth the lorde) shall I be the god of all the generacions of Israell, and they shall be my people.

The notes.

 Of the latter dayes and what they sygnify, se be fore in Esa. ii. a.

He prophecieth that the people of Israell shalbe restored agayne vnto theyr prosperitie. To be turned from synne is the gyfte of God. The byrth of Christ is prophecied. All the wicked shall dye in theyr wickednes. The newe testament and couenaunt is prophecied. The Christen are taught and instructe of the Lorde. Oure Synnes shall so be remitted, that they shal not once be thought on. God promyseth that he wyll cast of the Iewes. The buylding agayne of Ierusalem.

Israels father, and Ephraym shall be my fyrst borne.
Heare ye word of the lord, O ye gentyles:preache in the Iles that lye far of and saye he that hath scatered Isra ell,shal gather hym together agayn,ād shal kepe him as a shepherde doth hys flocke: for the Lorde shal redeame Jacob/and rid him from the hand of the violente. And they shal come,and reioi se vpon the hyll of Sion,and shall haue plenteousnes of goodes,whyche the lord shall geue them: Namely,wheate, wyne, oyle, yonge shepe and calues.
And their conscyence shalbe as a well watered garden,for they shall nomore be hungrye.
Then shall the mayde reioyce in ye C daunce,ye both yonge and old folkes.
For I wyl turne their sorow into glad nesse,and wil comfort them & make the ioyful, euen from their hartes. I wyl poure plenteousnes vpon the hartes of the prestes,and my people shall be satisfyed wyth good thynges,sayeth the lord.
Thus sayeth the lord: *The voice of heuynes, weping and lamentacion *Jere.iii.f. Math.ii.c came vp into heauen: euen of Rachell mourninge for her chyldren,and wold not be comforted because they were awaye.
But now saieth the lorde: leaue of from weping and cryēg,withold thine eyes from teares,for thy laboure shall be rewarded,saith the lorde. And they shall come agayne oute of the lande of their enemyes: Yea euen thy posteritee shall haue consolacyon in thys (sayeth the Lord)that thy children shal come a gayne into their owne lande.
Morouer I herde Ephrayme,that was led away captyue/ complayne on this maner: O Lord/thou hast correct me/and thy chastenynge haue I recea-ued,as an vntamed calfe. Conuert yu me,and I shall be conuerted, for thou art my lord god: Yee as soone as thou turnest me, I shal refourme my self. & when I vnderstande, I shall* smyte vpon my thygh. For verely I haue cō mytted shameful thynges. O let my youth beare this reprofe and confusiō Vpō this complaīt, I thought this by my selfe: is not Ephraime my deare D sonne? Is he not the child, with whom I haue had al myrth and pastime? For sence the tyme that I first commened with him, I haue hym euer in remembraunce: therefore my herte dryueth me vnto him, gladly and louyngly wyl I haue mercy vpon him, sayth the lorde.
Get the watchmē, prouyde teachers for the, set thine hert vpon the right waye that thou shuldest walcke, and turne a gayn, O thou daughter of Israel, turn agayn to these cityes of thine. Howe long wylt thou go astraye / O yu shrin-kinge daughter? For the lorde wyl worke a newe thynge vpon earth:  A wo man shall cōpasse a man.
For thus sayeth the lord of hoostes the God of Israel: It wyl come therto
that that when I haue brought Juda out of captiuitie/these woordes shalbe hit de in the lande and in hys cities: The Lorde/which is the faire brydegrome of ryghtuousnes, make the frutefull/O thou holy hyll: And there shal dwel Juda/and all her cytties, the shepherd-es and husbandmen: For I shall feade the hungrye soule, and refresh al faint hertes. When I herde thys I came a gaine to my self, and mused, lyke as I had bene waked out of a swete slepe.

Behold, (sayth the Lord) the dayes come, that I wyl sowe the house of Is rael & the house of Juda/wt me & wt ca tell. Ye it shall come therto, that lyke as I haue gone about in tymes past to rote them out, to scater them, to breake them downe, to destroy them and chasten them: Euen so wyll I also go dyly gētly aboute, to buyld them vp agayn and to plante them, sayth the Lorde.

Then shall it no more be sayde: the fathers haue eaten a sower grape, ād ye childerens teeth are set on edge: for eue ry one shall dye for hys owne mysdede, so that who so eateth a sowr grape, hys teeth shalbe set on edge.

Beholde, the dayes come (sayth the Lorde) that I wyll make a newe coue-F naunte with the house of Israell and withe the house of Juda; not after thee couenaunt that I made with theyr fathers, when I toke them by the hande, and led them oute of the land of Egyp te: which couenaunt they brake, wherfo re I punished them sore, sayth the lord.
But this shalbe the couenaunt that I wyll make with the house of Israel af ter those dayes, sayth the Lorde: I wyl plante my lawe in the inwarde partes of them, and wryte it in theyr hertes, ād wyll be theyr God, and they shalbe my people.

And from thence forthe shall no mā teache his neighbour or his brother ād say: knowe the lorde: But they shall al knowe mee, from the lowest vnto thee hyest, sayth the Lorde. For I wyll forgeue theyr misdedes, and wyl neuer re membre theyr synnes any more. Thus sayth the Lorde which gaue the sunne to be a lyght for the dayes, and the moo ne and starres to shyne in the nyghte: which mouth the see, so that the floud-es therof ware feare: his name is the Lord of hostes. Lyke as this ordinaū ce shal neuer be taken out of my syghte, sayth the Lorde: So shall the sede of Israell neuer ceasse/but alwaye be a pe ple before me;

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde; lyke as the heauen aboue cannot be me G asured, and as the foundacions of thee earth beneth maye not be sought out: So shall I also not cast out the whole sede of Israell, for that they haue com mitted, sayth the lorde. Beholde the da yes come saith the lorde, that the citie of the lord shalbe enlarged from the to ure of Hananeell, vnto the gate of thee corner wall. From thence shal the ryg hte measure be taken before her vnto ye hyll toppe of Gareb, and shall come about Gaath/and the whole valley of ye dead carcases, and of the asshes/and al Ciremoth vnto the broke of Cedron: & from thence vnto the corner of the hor sgate toward the east, where as the sāc tuary of the lorde also shalbe set. And when it is nowe buylded, and set vp of this fasshyon, it shall neuer be broken, nor cast downe any more.

a ✱ To smyte vpon the thyge is a token of grefe. He meaneth that when the Lord geueth hym vnderstan dinge, he shall come to repentaunce, and forthyncke hys euell conuersacion b ✱ This do they comelie expound of the redempty on of Israell, by the simylytude of a woman seerch ing her husbande. As though the Prophet had say de: The people of Israell, after they haue of longe tyme forsaken theyr spouse God, shal yet at the last returne and embrace hym with the armes of faithe, charitie, and obedience. &c. Some expounde it of ye virgyn Mary: And some of the church the spouse of Christ.

¶ Jeremye is cast into preson, because he prophecyeth that the cytye shuld be taken of the kyng of Babylon, by the felde that Jeremy bought at the cōmaūdement of the Lorde, is sygnyfyed, that the people shulde come agayne to theyr owne possession. The people of God are his seruauntes, & he is their Lord. To feare God is goddes gyfte, to thintent that synnes maye be eschued.

These wordes spake the lord vnto Jeremy, in the tenthe B yeare of Zedekiah kyng of Juda, which was the .xviii. yeare of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the kinge of Babylons hooste layed sege at Jerusalem. But Jeremye the Proppete laye bounde in the courte in the pryson, whych was in

the kyng of Judaes house: wher zedekiah the kyng of Juda caused him to be layed, because he had preched of this maner: Thus saith the lorde: Beholde, I wyl delyuer thys citye in to the handes of the kyng of Babilon, which shal take it. As for zedekiah the kyng of Juda, he shall not be able to escape the Caldees, but surely he shall come into the handes of the kyng of Babilon: which shall speake with him mouth to mouth, and one of them shal loke another in the face. And zedekiah shalbe caried vnto Babilon/ and there shal he be vntyl the tyme that I viset him, saith the Lorde. But yf thou takest in hande to fight agaynst y^e Caldes/ thou shalt not prospere

B And Jeremy sayde: Thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Behold, Hananeel the sonne of Selum thyn Uncles sonne shal come vnto the/ and requyre the to redeme the land/ that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: for by reason of kinred it is thy parte to redeme it, and to bye it out.

And so Hananeel myne vncls sonne came to me in the courte of y^e preson (according to the word of the Lord) & sayd vnto me: Bye my lands (I praye the) y^t lyeth in Anathoth in y^e countre of Ben Jamin: for by heritage y^u hast ryghte to lowse it out of thy selfe, wherfore redeme it. Then I perceaued/ that thys was the commaundment of the Lord/ and so I lowsed the lande from Hananeel of Anathoth, myne Uncles sonne, and weyed him ther the money: euen seuen sycles, & ten syluer pens.

I caused him also to make me a wryting, and to seale it, and called recorde therby, and weyed him ther the money vpon the weightes. So I toke the euidence with the copie (when it was orderly sealed and red ouer) and I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah the sonne of Maasiah in the C sight of Hananeel my cosen, and in the presence of the wytnesse that be named in the euydence/ and before al the Jewes that were therby in the court of the preson.

I charged Baruch also be fore them saying: The Lord of Hostes the god of Israel commaundeth the, to take this sealed euydence w^t the copie, and to laie it in an erthen vessel, that it maye longe contynue.

For the Lord of Hostes the god of Israel hath determed/ that houses, feldes and vyneyardes shall be possessed agayne in this land.

Now when I had delyuered y^e euydence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, I besought the lord, saying: O lord D God, It is thou y^t hast made heauen & earth w^t thy gret power and hie arme, and there is nothing to hard for the. Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes & recompencest the wickednes of the fathers, in to the bosome of the children y^t come after them.

Thou art the greate and myghtye God, whose name is the Lord of Hostes: greate in councell, and infinyte in thought: Thyne eyes loke vpon al the wayes of mens children, to rewarde euery one after his waye/ and accordig to y^e frutes of his inuencyons: Thou hast done greate tokens and wonders in the land of Egipt (as we se this daye vpon the people of Israel & vpo those men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe this daye: Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of y^e lad

E of Egipt, w^t tokens, w^t wonders, with a mighty hand, w^t a stretched out arme & w^t greate terryblenes: & haste geuen the this land, lyke as y^u haddest promysed vnto their fathers: Namely, that y^u woldest geue them a lande, that floweth w^t milck and hony.

Now when they came therin, & possessed it, they folowed not thy voice, & walked not i thy law: but al y^t thou comaundest them to do, y^t haue they not done and therfor come al these plages vpon them.

Beholde there are bullworckes made now agaynst the cytie, to take it: and yt shall be wonne of the Caldees that besege yt/ wyth swerde/ wyth honger and deathe/ and loke what thou haste spokenne/ that same shall come vpon

F them.

For lo, al thynges are present vnto the: Yet saist thou vnto me (O lord God) and commaundste me, y^t I shal lowse a pece of land vnto my self, and take wytnes therto: and yet in yͤ mene season the cytie is delyuered into the power of the Caldees.

Then came the word of the lord vnto me, saying: Beholde, I am the Lord god of all flesshe / is there eny thyng to herde for me? Therfore thus sayde yͤ Lord: beholde, I shal delyuer thys citye into yͤ power of yͤ Caldees, & in to yͤ power of Nabuchodonosor yͤ kig of babilon, they shal take it in: For the Caldees shal come, and wynne this cytie / and set fyre vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgeous houses, in whose parlers they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal & poured drinck offringes vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath.

Jerem. xxv. b / x, xxxi, b.

For seynge the chyldren of Israell, and chyldren of Juda haue wroughte wyckednes before me euer from their youth vp / what haue they els don, but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes: saieth the Lorde.

Or, what hath this cytye bene els, but a prouokig of mi wrath, euer sence the daye that I buylded it, vnto thys houre? Wherfore I caste it oute of my syght because of the greate blasphemyes of the chyldren of Israel and Juda which they haue done to prouoke me: yea they, their kynges, their prynces / their Preastes their Prophetes, whole Juda / & al the cytezyns of Jerusalem. Whē I stode vp early, & taught them

F and instructe them, theye turned their backes to me, and not their faces. (Jeremi. ii. b) They wold not heare to be refourmed and correcte. They haue set their Gods in the house, yͭ is halowed vnto my name / to defyle it. (Jer. vii, a, & b) They haue builded hy places for Baal in the valey of the chyldren of Hennom, to bowe their sonnes and daughters vnto Moloch; which I neuer commaunded them, nether came yt euer in my thoughte / to make Juda synne wyth such abhomynacion.

Moreouer thus hathe the Lorde god of Israel spoken, concerning this cytie, which (as ye your selues confesse shalbe delyuered in to the hand of the kynge of Babilon, when yt is wonne with the swearde, wyth honger and wᵗ pestilence. Beholde, I wyl gather them together frō al lādes / wherin I haue scatterd them in my wrath, in my feare full and greate dyspleasure: and wyll brynge them agayne vnto thys place, where they shall dwell safelye. And they shall be my people, and I wyll be their god.

And I wyll geue them one herte and one waye, that they maye feare me G al the dayes of their lyfe, that they ād their chyldren after them maye prospere. And I wyl set vp an euerlastyng couenaunt with them, Namely: that I wyl neuer ceasse to do them good, and that I wyl put my fere in their hertes so that they shall not runne awaye frō me.

Yea I wyl haue a lust and plesure to do thē good, & faithfully to plāt thē in this land wᵗ al my whole hert, ād wᵗ al my soule.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: lyke as I haue broughte al this greate plage vpon thys people: so wyl I also bring vp on them all the good, that I haue promysed them. And men shal haue their possessions in this land, wherof ye say now, that it shal nether be inhabited of people ner of catel but be delyuered in to the hands of the Caldees: Yea land shalbe bought for money, and euydēce made ther vpon and sealed before wytnes in the court of Ben Jamin & round about Jerusalem: in the cyties of Juda in yͤ cyties that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them yͭ lye beneth, yea in the cityes yͭ are in yͤ desert. For I wyl bring their presoners hither agayne / saieth the Lord.

¶ The prophet is monished of the lord, to pray for the delyueraunce of yͤ people, which the Lord promiseth, God forgeueth sinnes & doth graciously to yͤ people, for his owne renowne. Of yͤ birth of Christe. The kingdom of christ in the church shal neuer be ended.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

Moreouer the word of the Lord came vnto Jeremy on this maner / when he was yet bounde in the courte of the preson. Thus sayeth the Lorde, whych fulfylleth the thynge that he speaketh, the Lorde which perfourmeth the thynge that he taketh in A (Jerem. xxxvii. a) in hand: euen he, whose name is ẏ lord: thou hast ✝ cryed vnto me, and I haue herd the: I haue shewed greate & hye thing, which were vnknowē vnto you Thus (I saye) spake the Lord god of Israel, concernīg the houses of this cytie, and the houses of the kynges of Juda: that they shalbe broken thorow the ordinaunce and wepens/ when the Caldees came to besege them: and they shalbe filled with the deed karcases of men, whom I wyl slaie in my wrathe & displeasure. when I turne my face frō this cyti/ because of al her wickednes: Behold/ (saieth the Lord, I wyl heale their woundes and make thē whole: I wyll open them the treasure of peace and truth.

And I wyl returne the captiuyte of Juda and Israel: and wyl set them vp againe/ as they were afore. From all mysdedes (wherin they haue offended against me) I wyl clense them. And al their blasphemies which thei haue don agaynst me, whē they regarded me not/I wyl forgeue them.
And thys shall get me a name, a prayse and honoure/ among al people B of the earth, which shal heare al ẏ good that I wyll shewe vnto them: yea they shalbe afrayed and astonied at ẏ good dedes and benefytes, that I wil do for them. Moreouer thus sayeth the Lord In this place, wherof ye saye ẏ yt shall be a wyldernes, where in nether people ner catel shal dwel: in like maner in the cyties of Juda and without Jerusalē (which also shalbe so void, that nether ner cattel shal dwel ther) shal ẏ voice of gladnes be herd agayn the voyce of the bridgrome and of the bryde/ the voyce of them that shal synge: Praise the lord of hostes, for he is louynge & hys mercy endureth for euer) and the voyce of them that shal offer vp gyftes in the house of the lord. For I wil restore the captiuyte of this land/ as it was afore, sayeth the Lord. Thus say eth the Lorde of hostes It shal com yet therto, that in this land, which is void from me and catel, and in the cytes of ẏ land, ther shalbe set vp shepardes co-tages: in the cyties vpon the mountay nes: and in the cytyes that lye vpon ẏ playne, and in the desert.
In the land of Ben Jamin, and in the iles of Jerusalem, and in the cyty es Juda, shall the shepe be nombred a-gayne, vnder the hand of him that telleth them, sayeth the Lord. Behold/ the C tyme commeth/ the lord, that I wil per Jerem. xxiii. a forme that good thing, which I haue promysed vnto the house of Israel and to the house of Juda. In those dayes and at ẏ same tyme/ I wyl bring forth vnto Dauid, the braunche of ryghteu ousnes, and he shal do equite and righ tuousnesse in the lande. In those daies shal Juda be helped, and Jerusalem shal dwel safe and he that shal call her is euen god our rightuous maker.
For thys the Lorde promeseth: Dauid shall neuer want one/ to syt vpon the stole of the house of Israel: nether shal the prestes and leuites want one to offer alwaye before me burntofferinges/to kyndle the meatoffringes, ād to prepare the sacrifyces.
And the worde of the lord came vnto Jeremy after this maner: Thus say D eth the lord: Maye the couenaunt whi Gene. viii. d ch I haue made with daye and nyghte be broken/ that there shuld not be daie and night in due season? Then maye my couenaunt also be broken, which I made wyth Dauid my seruaūt, and so he not to haue a sonne to reigne in his Trone. So shal al the prestes and Leuytes neuer fayle, but serue me. For Gene. xv. a, & lyke as the starres of heauen may not xxii. c be nombred, nether the sande of the see measured: so wyl I multiplye ẏ sede of Dauid my seruaunt, & of the Leuytes my mynisters.
Moreouer, the word of the Lord came to Jeremy, saying: Consyderest ẏ not what thys peple speaketh? Two kinreddes (saye they) had ẏ lord chose, & those same two hath he cast awaye. For so farre is my peple come/ ẏ they haue no hope to come to gether eny more, ād to be one peple againe. Therfore thus saith ẏ lord: If I haue made no couenaūt w daye & nyght, & geuē no statut vnto heuē & earth: thē wil I also cast a way ẏ sede of dauid my seruaūt: so ẏ I wil take no price out of his sede, to rule the posterite of Abrahā, Isaac & Jacob

But yet I wyll turne agayne theyr cap tiuitye, and be mercyfull vnto them.

¶ He threateneth the cytie and kynge zedekiah also shalbe geuen into the handes of the kyng of Babylon he rebuketh them that dyd vnght such of theyr brethren into captyuyty as were pardoned to goo at theyr lyberty.

¶ The .xxxiiii. Chapter.

These are the wordes which A the Lorde spake vnto Iere mi what tyme as Nabucho donosor the kinge of Ba bylon, and all hys hoostes (out of al the kingdomes that were vn der hys power) and all his people fough ht against Ierusalem and al the cities therof. Thus saith the Lord God of I srael: Goe and speake to zedekyah the kynge of Iuda, and tell hym: The Lorde sendeth the thys worde: Behold I wyll delyuer this cyte into the hand of the king of Babylon: he shall burne it/and thou shalt not escape hys hands but shalt be led away prysoner, and de lyuered into hys power, Thou shalte loke the kynge of Babylon in the face, and he shall speake with the mouth to mouth, ⁊ then shalt thou go to Babylõ Yet heare the worde of the Lorde O ze dekiah, thou kĩg of Iuda: Thus saith the Lorde vnto the: Thou shalt not bee slayne with the swearde but shalt dy in peace. Lyke as thy forefathers, the kyn ges, thy progenytours, were brent, soo shalte thou be brente alsoo, and in the mornynge, they shal say: Oh Lord. For thus haue I determyned, sayth ẏ Lord B Then spake Ieremy the prophete all these wordes vnto Sedekiah king of Iuda in Ierusalem what time as thee kynge of Babylons hoste beseged Ie-rusalem and the remnaunt of the cytis Namely, Lachis ⁊ Azecah, whych yet re mayned of the strong defenced cities of Iuda. These are wordes that the Lor de spake vnto Ieremy the prophet, whẽ Sedekiah was agreed with al the peo ple at Ierusalem: that there shulde be proclaimed a lyberte so that euery man shulde se this seruaunt and hand map de go fre, an hebrew ⁊ hebruesse, and no Iewe to holde his brother as a bõdmã Now as they had cõsented, eue so they were obedient, ⁊ let them go free. But afterwarde they repented, and toke a-gayne the seruauntes and hand mayd ens, whom they had let go fre ⁊ so made them bond agayne.

For the which cause the worde of ẏ Lord came vnto Ieremy from the lord hym selfe, saying: Thus saieth the lord God of Israel: * I made a couenaunt C with your fathers, whẽ I brought thẽ out of Egipt/(that they shuld nomore be bondmen) sayeng When seuen yea-res are out, euery man shal let his bou Deu. 15. Exo. 21. ght seruaunte an Hebrue go fre, yf he haue serued hym syx yeares. But your fathers obeyed me not ⁊ herkened not vnto me: As for you, ye were now turned, and did right before me, in that ye proclaymed/euery man to let his neyboure go fre, and in that ye made a couenaunt before me, ĩ the temple that be reth my name: But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne ãd, blasphemed mi name: In thys/that euery man hath requyred his seruaunt and handmay-dẽ agaynst whom ye had let go quyt ãd fre, and compelled them to serue you a gayne, and to be your bond men. And therfore thus sayeth the Lord: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclaime fredom vnto his brother ⁊ neyghbour wherfore/I cal you vnto a fredom, sai eth the lord; euen vnto the swearde, to ẏ D pestilence, and to the honger/and wyll make you to be plaged in al the kyng domes of the earth Yee those men that haue broken my couenaunte, and not kept the wordes of my appoyntmente which they made before me: when they hewed the calfe in two/and when there went thorow the to halfes therof The Princes of Iuda, the Princes of Ieru salem, the gelded men, the Prestes and all ẏ people of ẏ lande, whych went tho row the two sydes of the calfe.
Those men wyl I geue into the power of their enemyes/and in to the handes of them ẏ folow vpon ther lyues.

And their deed bodyes shal be mete for ẏ foules of ẏ ayre, ⁊ beastes of ẏ field As for zedekiah ẏ kyng of Iuda ⁊ hys Prynces, I wyl delyuer thẽ in to ẏ power of their enemies, ⁊ of thẽ ẏ desir to slaie thẽ, ⁊ into ẏ hãd of the king of ba bylons host,  whych now is departed frõ you: But thorow my cõmaũdemẽt (saieth the Lord) they shal com agayn before thys Cytie, they shall fyghte a-gainste it, wynne it/and burne it. Mo reover I wyl lay the Cytties of Juda so waste, ye no man shall dwell therin.

The .xxxv. Chapter.

1 The wordes which the Lor de spake unto Jeremi, in ye reigne of Jehoakym thee sõne of Josiah king of Ju da, are these: Goo unto the Ier.3.c. house of the Rechabites. And cal them out/and bring thẽ, to ye house of ye lord into some comodious plece: and geue them wyne to dryncke. Then tooke I Jaaniah the sunne of Jeremy the son ne of Habesyniah, and his bretheren & and all his sonns and the whole hous-holde of the rechabites: & brought thẽ to the house of the Lorde/into the closet of the chyldrzen of hanan the sonne of Jigedalyah the man of god: whych was by the closet of the Prices, that is aboue the closet of Maasiah the sonne of Sylum, which is the cheafe of thee treasure. And before the sonnes of thee B kinred of the rechabytes, I sett pottes full of wyne, and cuppes and layede unto them: Drincke wyne. But they sayd: we drinke no wyne/for Jonadab ...and the sonne of Rechab our father cõmaũ ded us, saying: ye and your sõnes shall never drincke wyne, buylde no houses sowe no seade, plante no vynes, yea/ ye shall haue no vyneyardes: but for all your tyme ye shal dwell in tentes/that ye maye lyue longe in the lande wher-in ye be straungers.

Thus haue we obeyd the commaũ dement of Jonadab the son of Rechab oure father, in al that he hath charged us, and so we drincke no wyne all oure lyse longe: we/nor oure wyues, oure sõ nes and oure doughters. Nether buyld we any house to dwell therin/we haue also amonge us neyther vyneyardes/ner corne land to sowe: but we dwell in tẽtes we obeye, and do according unto all that Jonadab oure father commaũ ded us.

But now that Nabuchodonosor ye kynge of Babylon came up into thee lande, we sayde, come/let us go to Jerusalem, that we may escape the hoost C of the Chaldees and the Assirians: and so we dwell nowe at Jerusalem. Then came the worde of the Lord unto Jere remy/saying: Thus sayth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israel: Go and tell whole Juda and all the inhabitoures of Jerusalem: wyll ye not be reformed to obeye my wordes: sayth the Lorde.
The wordes which Jonadab the son of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shulde drincke no wyne, are faste and surely kepte: for unto thys day th ey drincke no wyne but obey theyr fathers commaundemente. But as for me, I haue stand up early, I haue spo Jere.xviii.a ken unto you/ and geuen you earneste xxv.a. warning: and yet haue ye not bene obe dient unto mee. Ye I haue sent my ser uauntes, all the prophetes unto you I rose up earlye, and sent you worde say ing: O turne you euerye man from his wycked waye: amende your lyues, and go not after straunge Goddes to wor-shyppe them: that ye maye continue in the lande whyche I haue geuen untoo you and youre fathers/but ye wold ne ther heare me, nor folowe me.

The chyldern of Jonadab Rechabs sonne haue stedfastly kept ther fathers D commaundement, that he gaue thẽ, but thys people is not obedient unto mee And therfore thus saythe the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Behold I wyll bringe upon Juda and upon eue ry one that dwelleth in Jerusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuised again ste them. For I haue spoken unto thẽ but they wolde not folowe: I haue cal Prouer.i.c. led unto them neuertheles they wolde Esay.lxv.b. geue me no answere, Jeremy also spake Jerem.vii.d unto the housholde of the Rechabytes Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes thee God of Israell: for so moch as ye haue obeyed the commaundemente of Jona dab youre father, and kepte all his pre ceptes, and done according unto all th at he hath bydden you: Therfore thus sayeth the Lord of Hostes/ the God of Israel. Ionadab the sonne of Rechab shal not fayle, but haue one out of his stock to stand alwaye before me.

¶ Baruch wryteth (as Ieremy enditeth) ẏ boke of the curses agaynst Iuda & Israel. He is sent with ẏ boke vnto the peple, & redeth it before them al. He is called before ẏ rulers & readeth it before the also. ¶ The rulers shew vnto ẏ king ẏ wordes of ẏ boke. Iehudi taketh the boke, & redeth a lytle of it, & after casteth it in ẏ fyre. There is another wrytten, at the commaundement of ẏ Lord.

IN the fourth yeare of Ieoakim the sonne of Iosyah A kynge of Iuda, came the word of the Lord vnto Ieremy, saiyng: Take a boke and wryte therin al the wordes, that I haue spoken to the/ to Israel, to Iuda and to al ẏ people, from the tyme that I began for to speake vnto thee (in the raygne of Iosiah vnto this day: That when the house of Iuda heareth of the plage, which I haue deuysed for them they maye peraduenture turne euerye man frõ his wycked waye that I maie forgeue their offences and synnes.

Then dyd Ieremy cal Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouth of Ieremy/ all ẏ wordes of the Lorde which he had spoken vnto hym. And Ieremy commaunded Baruch, saiyng: I am in preson, so that I maye not come to the house of the Lord: therfore go thou thyther, and reade the boke that thou hast wrytten at my mouth: Namelye, the worde of ẏ Lord, and rede them in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng daye: that ẏ peple whole Iuda, and al they that come out of the cytyes/ may heare. Peraduentur they wyll praye mekely before the face of the Lorde, and turne euery one from his wycked waie. For grete is ẏ wrath & displeasure, ẏ the Lord hath taken agaynst this people.

So Baruch ẏ sonne of Neriah did according vnto al that Ieremy the prophet commaunded hym, reading ẏ wordes of the Lorde out of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in ẏ fyfthe yeare of Iehoakim the sonne of Iosiah kyng of Iuda, in ẏ .ix. moneth when it was cõmaunded/ ẏ al the people of Ierusalem shuld fast before the Lord, & they also ẏ were come frõ ẏ cytyes of Iuda vnto Ierusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Ieremy out of the boke wt the house of ẏ lord, out of the treasury of Gamariah ẏ sonne of Sapha n the Scryb which is besid ẏ hyer lofte of the new dore of the Lordes house: ẏ al ẏ peple might heare. Now whẽ Micheah the sõne of Gamariah the sõne of Saphã had herde al the wordes of ẏ lord out of ẏ boke he went downe to the kinges palace into ẏ scribes chãbre/ for ther al the princes were set: Elisama the Scrybe, Dalaiah ẏ sõne of Semei, Elnathan ẏ sõne of Acabor, Gamariah ẏ sõne of Saphan, Zedekiah the sonne of Hananiah/ wt al ẏ princes. And Micheah tolde thẽ al the wordes, ẏ he heard Baruch rede out of the boke before the people.

Then al the princes sent Iehudi ẏ sõ of Nathaniah, ẏ sõne of Selamiah the sõne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, saiyg: Take i thine hãd the boke, wherout ẏ hast red before al the people & cõe. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke i his hand & cam vnto them. And they said vnto hi: Sit downe, & rede ẏ boke ẏ we may here also. So Baruch red, ẏ they might here. Nowe whẽ they had herde al the wordes/ they were abashed one vpõ another/ & said vnto Baruch: We wil certifie ẏ king of al these wordes. And they examyned Baruch/ saiyg: tel vs/ how dydest ẏ wryt al these wordes out of his mouth? Then Baruch answered them: He spake al these words vnto me wt his mouth & I alone was wt him/ & wrote them in ẏ boke.

Then sayde ẏ Princes vnto Baruch: Go thy way, & hide the wt Ieremy, so ẏ no mã know wher ye be. And they C went in to the kyng to the court. But they kepte the boke in the chambre of Elisama the Scrybe, and tolde ẏ king al the wordes that he myght heare. So the kyng sent Iehudi to fetch him the boke, which he brought out of Elisama the scrybes chãbre. And Iehudi red it, that the kyng and al the princes which were about him might here. Now the kynge sate in the wynter house, for yt was the .ix. Moneth/ and there was a good fyre before hym: and when Jehudi had red thre or four leaues the reof, he cut the boke in peaces wt a pen knyfe, and cast it into the fyre vpon ye harth/ vntyl the boke was all brent in the fyre vpon the harth.

Yet no man was abasshed thereof/or rente his clothes nether the kinge hi self, nor his seruauntes, though they har de all these wordes. Neuertheles Elna than,/ Dalaiah, & Gamariah besoug-F ht the kynge that he would not burne the boke: Notwithstanding the kyng wolde not heare them but commaūded Jerahmeell the sonne of Amelech Sa raiah the sonne of Ezryell/ and Sela-miah the sonne of Abdyell, to lay han-des vpon Baruch the scribe/ and vpon Jeremy the prophet: but the Lord kep te them out of syght. After now that the kynge had brente the boke, and the ser mons which baruch wrot at the mouth of Jeremy, ye word of the Lord came vn to Jeremy, saying: take an other boke and write in it all the forsayde sermons that were written in the fyrste booke, whiche Jehoakim the kinge of Juda hath brente.

And tell Jehokim the kynge of Ju da: thus sayethe the Lorde: thou haste brente the boke and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast thou wrytten ther G in that ye king of Babylon shal come ād make this lāde wast so that he shal ma ke both people and cattell to be out of it. Therfore thus the Lorde sayeth of Jehoakim the kinge of Juda: there shall none of hys generation syt vpon the throne of Dauid. Hys deade corpse shalbe cast out, that the heat of the day and the frost of the nyght maye come v pon hym and I wyl vysyte the wycked nes of him, of his seade, and of his seruauntes. Morouer all the euel that I haue promised them (though they herd me not) wyll I brynge vpon them vpō the inhabytours of Jerusalem. ād vpō all Juda. Then toke Jeremy an other boke and gaue it Baruch the Scrybe the sunne of Neriah, which wrote ther in out of the mouthe of Jeremye all ye sermons that were in the fyrst boke wh iche Jehoakī ye kīg of Juda did burne And ther were added vnto them many mo sermons, then before.

¶ Zedekias succedeth Cononiah. He sendeth vnto Jeremy to praye for hym. Jeremye goynge into the land of Ben Jamyn is taken he is beaten, and put in preson, he is delyuered by king zedekiah.

The. xxxvii. Chapter.

Zedekiahh the sunne of Jo siah, whych was made kin A ge thorow Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, reg ned in the land of Juda, in the steade of Cononiah the sunne of Je hoakim. But nether he nor hys seruaū tes nor the people in the lande woulde obeye the wordes of the Lorde, which he spak by the prophet Jeremy. Neuer theles zedekiah the kinge sēte Jehucall the sonne of Selemiah/ and Sophoni ah the sonne of Maasiah the prest to ye prophet Jeremy, saying: O pray thou vnto the Lord oure god for vs. Nowe Jeremye walked fre among the people at that time, and was not put in prysō Jere, xviii, a as yet. Pharaos host was come out of xxv, a.
Egipt which whē the caldes ye beseged Jerusalē perceued/ they departed frō thēce. Then came the word of the Lord B vnto Jeremye the prophet, saiynge.
Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell thys answeare shall yee geaue to thee kyng of Juda that sent you vnto mee for councell: Beholde Pharaos hooste whiche is come forthe to helpe you, shall returne to Egypte in to hys owne lande: but the Caldees shall come agayne/ and fyght agaynst this cytye wynne it, & set fyre vpon it. For thus sayeth the Lorde: dysceaue not youre owne myndes thynking on this maner: tush/ ye Chaldees go now their way from vs: no, they shal not go their waye. For though ye had slayne the whole host of the Caldees, that besege you, and euery one of the slayn laye in C his tent, yet shuld they stande vp, and set fyre vpon thys cytie, now when the host of the Caldees was broken vp frō, Jerusalem/ for feare of the Egypcyās army, Jeremy went out of Jerusalem toward the lande of Ben Jamin to do certeyne busynes there amonge the people. And when he came vnder Ben Jamyns porte/ there was a porter, cal led Jeriah, the sonne of Selemiah the sonne of Hananiah/ whyche fell vpon hym/ and toke hym saying: thy mynde is to runne to the Caldees.

Thē sayde Ieremy: It is not so, I go not to the Caldees. Neuertheles Ieriah wolde not beleue hym, but brought Ieremy downe before the Princes. Wherfore the Prynces were angry wt Ieremy/causyng hym to be beaten, ād to be layed in pryson in the house of Ionathas ÿ scrybe. For he was ÿ ruler of the pryson. Thus was Ieremye put in to the dungyon and pryson, and so laye there a long tyme. Then zedekiah the kyng sent for hym, and called hym, ād asked hym quyetly in his owne house/ saying: thynkest thou thys busynes (ÿ now is in hand) commeth of the Lorde Ieremy answered: ye that it doth: and ÿ (said he) shalt be delyuered in to ÿ king of Babilons power.

D Moreouer. Ieremy said vnto king zedekiah: What haue I offended agaynst the, agaynst thy seruauntes or agaynst this people that ye haue caused me to be put in prison? Where ar your prophetes which haue prophecyed vnto you and sayd/that the king of Babylon shuld not come agaynst you and this lande? And therfore heare now, O my Lord the Kyng: let my prayer be accepte before the, and send me no more in to the house of Ionathas the Scribe, that I dye not there. Then zedekiah ÿ kyng commaunded to put Ieremy in the fore entry of the prison/ and dayly to be geuen hym a cake bread, and els no dighte meat, vntyl al the bred in the cyte was * eaten vp. Thus Ieremy remayned in ÿ forentre of the pryson.

a * Some reade: lyfe not vp youre affeccyons, sayīg: The Caldees &c. b * Some reade to brynd the possessyō in the myddest of ÿ people. They vnderstand her by the deuysion of Ieremies landes, with his kynsfolkes at Anathoth. Other reade: to separate, vnderstandē him self, because he was in the myddest of ÿ people that is, to cause him to depart forth of ÿ myddest of his people. They thinke ÿ he wold haue fled, for fere of persecucyon.

Saphatiah the sōne of Mathan, Godoliah the sōne of Phashur/ Iucal the sonne of Selemiah/ and Phashur the sonne of Melchiah 1 perceued the wordes/ that Ieremy had spoken vnto al the people, namelye on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lord: Who so remayneth in thys cytie, shall perysh/ ether wyth the sweard, with honger or wt the pestylence: But who so falleth vnto ÿ Caldees, shal escape/ * wynnig his soule for a pray/ and shal liue. For thus sayeth the lorde Thys cytie (no dout) must be delyuered in to ÿ power of the kyng of Babylon, and he also shal wynne it. Then sayde the princes vnto the kyng: Syr, we beseche you let thys man be put to deathe, for thus he discorageth the handes of the souldyers that be in thys cytye, and the hādes of al the people/ when he speketh suche wordes vnto them. Thys man verelye laboureth not for peace of the people/ B but myschef. zedekiah the kyng answered and said: lo/ he is in your handes, for the kyng maye deny you nothyng. Then toke they Ieremy, and cast hym into the dongion of Melchiah the sōne of Hamelech, that dwelt in the fore entre of the prison. And they let downe Ieremy wt coardes into a dongeon, wher there was no water, but myer. So Ieremy stack fast in the myre. Now whē Abedmelech the Moryan beyng a chāberleine in the kings court, vnderstode that they had cast Ieremy in to the dōgeon: he wente out of the kinges house and spake to the kyng, (whych thē sate vnder the poorte of Ben Iamin) these wordes: My Lorde the kyng wher as these men medle with Ieremy the prophet, they do hym wrōg: Namely that C they haue put him in prison, there to dy of honger, for there is no more bred in the cytie. Then the king comaunded Abedmylech the moryā & said. Take frō hence .xxx. men whom thou wilt, & draw vp Ieremy the prophete out of the dongeon, before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men wt hi & went to the house of Amalech, and there vnder an almery he gat old rages and worne clowtes and let them downe by a cord, into the dongeon

dongeon to Jeremy.
And Abedmelech the Morian sayd vnto the prophet Jeremy: O put these D ragges and cloutes vnder thine arme holes/betwyxt them and the coardes ye Jeremy did so. So they drewe vp Jeremy with cordes and toke him out of the dongeon, and he remayned in the fore entrye of the prison. Then zedekiah the kyng sent ād caused Jeremy ye prophet be called vnto him, in to the thirde en-trye, that was by the house of the lord And the king said vnto Jeremy: I wil aske the somewhat but hyde nothyng fro me: Then Jeremy answered zede kiah: Yf I be plaine vnto thee, thou wylt cause me suffre death: yf I geue ye councel, thou wilt not folow me. So ye kynge swore an ooth secretly vnto Jeremy, saying: As truly as the Lord lyueth, that made vs these soules/ I wil not slaye the/ner geue the in to the han des of them that seke after thy lyfe.

E Then saide Jeremy vnto zedeky ah: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the god of Israell, If case be) that thou wylt go forth vnto the kynge of Baby lons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe/and thys cytie shal not be brēt ye both thou and thy housholde shall escape wt your lyues. But yf thou wylt not goo forth to the kyng of Babilons prīces/then shal thys cytye be delyuered into the handes of the Caldees which shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalte not be able to escape them. And zedekiah said vnto Jeremy I am afrayd for the Jw es, that are fled vnto the Caldees, lesse I come in their hādes ye so they to haue me in derysion.

F But Jeremy answered: No they shal not betraye the: O herkē vnto the voice of the Lord (I beseche the) which I speake vnto the/so shalt thou be wel and saue thy life. But yf thou wilt not go forth, the Lorde hath tolde me thys playnely Behold, al the wemen that ar left in the kyng of Judas house, shal go out to the kyng of Babylons prīces for they thinck that thou art disceued and that the men whome thou dydeste put thy trust, haue gotten the vnder/and sett thy fete fast in the myre/ and gone their waye from the Therfore al thy wyues with their chyl dren shal fle vnto the Caldes, and thou shalt not escape their hādes, but shalte be the kyng of Babilons prisoner, ād thys cytie shal be brent. Then sayd zedekyah vnto Jeremy: loke that no body G know of these wordes, and thou shalte not dye. But yf the prynces perceaue, ye I haue talked wt the/and com vnto ye sayeng: O speke, what saide the kynge to the, hyd yt not from vs, and we wil not put the to deth. Tel vs (we praye the) what sayde the kyng to the. Se ye geue them this answere: I haue humbly besought the kyng that he wil lett me ly no more in Jehonathians house ye I dye not there: Then cam al the pri ces vnto Jeremy/and asked hym, And he told them/after the maner as ye king bad him. Then they held their pece, for they perceaued nothing. So Jeremye abode styl in the fore entry of the prisō vntyll the daye that Jerusalem was wonne:

¶ Nabuchodonosor besegeth Jerusalem zedekiah flyeth, he is taken of the Chaldees. Hys sonnes ar slayn. Hys eyes are thurst out, Jeremy is prouyded for Abedmelech is delyuered fro ye captyuite, because her onfydence that he hath in god.

¶ The. xxxix. Chapter

Now when the cytie of Je- A rusalem was taken, for in ye Jere. xxii. b; iiii. Reg. xxv ix. yeare of zedekiah king of Juda in the tenth Mo-neth, came Nabuchodono sor the king of Babylon and al hys ho ste, and beseged Jerusalem. And in the xi. yeare of zedekiah in the fourth Mo neth the. ix. day of the Moneth, he bra ke into the cytie). Then al the prynces of the kyng of Babylon, came in/ ꝛ set them downe vnder the porte: Neregel Sarezer, Samegarnabo/ Sarsachim Rabsaris Neregel Marezer, Rybmag wyth al the other prynces of the kyng of Babylon. And when zedekiah the kyng of Juda with his souldiers sawe them, they fled, and departed out of the cytie be nyght thorowe the kīges gar den, and thorowe the porte that is be twene the two wales, and so they went towarde the wyldernes.
But the Caldees host folowed fast after them, and toke zedekiah in the felde

felde of Jericho/and brought him prysoner to Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon unto Rebliath, that lyeth in the lande of Hemath wher he gaue iudgement upon him. So the king of Babylon caused the chyldren of Zedekiah to be slain and al the nobles of Juda to be slain before his face at Rabliath. And made zedekiahs eies to be put out and bõd hym with chaynes/& sent hi to Babylõ

C iiii.Re.xxv, Jere.xxxix.b Morouer, the Caldees brente up the kinges palace with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem. As for the remnaunt of the people that were in the citie, and such as were com to help them (whatsoeuer was left of the comen sorte) Nabusaradan the chefe capteyne caryed them to Babylon. But Nabusaradan the chefe capteyn let the rascal people (and those that had nothyng) dwell styl in the land of Juda, and gaue thẽ vyneyardes and corne feldes at the same tyme. Nabuchodonosor also the kynge of Babilon gaue Nabusaradan the chefe capteyne a charge concerning Jeremye, sayinge: take and cherysh hĩ & make much of hĩ: se ẏ do hĩ no harme, but intreate hĩ after hys owne desyre. So Nabusaradan the chefe captayn, Nabusasban the chefe chamberlayne/ Nergalsarezer the treasurer: and al the kynge of Babylons Lordes, sente for Jeremy/and caused hym to be let oute Jer.xxxviii.d of the fore entrye of the presonne, and committed hym unto godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of of Saphan that shulde carye hym home, and so he D dwelt amonge the people.

Jerem.xl.b Now whyl Jeremy lay yet bounde in the fore entry of the pryson/the worde of the Lorde came unto him, saying go and tell Abdemelech the Morian: Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the god of Israel: beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuised for thys citie wyll I bringe upon the, ẏ ẏ shalt se it but I wyll delyuer the (saith the lord) & ẏ shalt not com in the hãdes of those men whome thou fearest. For doutles I wyll saue the, so that ẏ shalt not perysh with the swerd: but thy lyfe shalbe saued, and that because thou hast put thy trust in me sayth the lorde.

¶ Jeremy hath lybertie to go whyther he wyll. He dwelleth with the people that remayneth at Jerusalem ouer whom Godoliah ruleth. Johanan ẏ prophesyeth deth unto Godoliah.

¶ The.xl.Chapter

This is the maner howe the A Lorde intreated Jeremye, when Nabuzaradan ẏ chef Captayne had let him go fre from Romah, whyther he had led hym bounde amonge all the presoners, that were caryed from Jerusalem and Juda unto Babilon. The chefe Captaine called for Jeremy, and said unto him: The lord thy god spake mightely before of the misery upõ this place: Now the Lord hath sent it, and performed it as he had promysed: for ye haue synned agaynst the Lord, and haue not bene obedient unto his voice therfor commeth this plage upon you. Behold, I lowse the boundes from thi handes this daye; if thou wylt now go with me unto Babilon/up then: for I wyl se to the, and prouyd for the: But yf thou wylt not go wt me to Babylon B then remayne here. Behold al the land is at my wyl, loke where thou thinkest conuenient and good for the to abyde there dwel if thou canst not be content to dwel alone, then remayne with Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan: whom the kyng of Babylon hath made gouernoure ouer the cyties of Juda, and dwel with hi amõge the people, or remayne where so euer it pleaseth the. So the chef Captayne gaue him his expences wt a reward, & let him go. Then wente Jeremye unto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Masphah, and dwelt there wyth hym amonge the people that were lefte in the lande.

Now when the captaynes of ẏ host of Juda (whiche wt their felowes were C scatred abrode on euery syde in ẏ land understand ẏ the kyng of Babilõ had made godoliah, ẏ sonne of Ahicam gouernour in ẏ land, and ẏ mã/wyfe and chyld, yea & the poore mẽ in the land (ẏ were not led captyue to Babilõ) shuld be under his iurisdicciõ: They cam to Godoliah unto Maspbah: Namely, Ismael ẏ son of Nathaniah, Johanã Jonathath ẏ sõnes of careah sareah ẏ son of Thanhometh, the sonnes of Ophat the Netophatite, Jesaniah the sonne of Maachati/with theyr compa nions And Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam þ sonne of Saphan, sworen vnto the, ãd theyr felowes on thys maner: Be not a frayed to serue the Caldees/dwell in þ lande and do the King of Babylon seruice, so shall ye prospere. Beholde, I dwell at Mazphah to be an officer in the Caldees behalfe, and to satesfy such as come to vs. Therfor gather you wine, corne and oyle, & kepe them in your ware houses, and dwell in your Cities that ye haue in kepynge.

D Yee all the Jewes also that dwelte in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea and in all the countrees/ when they herde, that the kynge of Babylon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahycam the sonne of Saphan, gouernour vpon them that were left in Juda: All the Jewes (I saye) returned out of all places where they were fled vnto: and came into the lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Mazphah, ãd gathered wyne and other frutes, and that very much.

Moreouer Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the capteynes of the hoste, that were scaterd on euery syde in þ lande came to Godolyah in Mazphah, and sayde vnto hi: knowest thou notte that Baall is king of the Ammonites & hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, to slaye the? But Godoliah the sõne of Ahicam beleued them not. Then sayd Johanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godolyah in Mazphah these wordes secretly: Let me go, I praye the, ãd I wyll slaye Ismael, the sunne of Nathaniah, so that no bodye shall knowe it. Wherfore wyll he kyl the, that all þ Jewes which resorte vnto the myghte be scatered, and the remnaunt In Juda perysshe? Then sayde Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam to Johanan the sonne of Careah: Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lyes/þ men say of Ismael

1 iiii.Re.xxv. But in the seuenth moneth it happned that Ismael the sunne of Nathaniah the son of Elysama (one of the kinges bloude) came wyth them that were greatest about the kynge, ãd ten men that were sworn with him: vn to Godolyah the Sonne of Ahicam to Mazphah, and ate there together. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah wyth those ten men that were sworne to hym starte vp, and smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam the sũne of Saphan wt the swerde, and slewe hym/ whome the kyng of Babylon had made gouernor of the lande. Ismaell also slewe all the Jewes that were wyth Godolyah at Mazphah, and all the Caldees that he founde there waytyng vpon him.

The next daye after that he had slaine Godolyah (the matter was yet vnknowen) there came certeine men from Sichem, from Siloh and Samaria, to the numbre of. lxxx. which had shauẽ theyr beerdes, rente theyre clothes/and were all heuye, bringinge meateofferynges, and incense in theyre hand/to offer it in the house of the Lord. And Ismahell the sonne of Nathaniah wẽt B forth of Mazphah weppyng to mete thẽ. Now when he met them, he sayde: goo youre waye to Godolyah the sonne of Ahicam, ãd when they came in the myddest of the citi, Ismael the sunne of Nathaniah (wt thẽ that were sworne vnto hym) slewe them, euen at the myddeste of the pyt. Amonge the. lxxx men ther were ten, that sayd vnto Ismaell: Oh slay vs not for we haue yet a great tresure in the felde, of wheate, barley/oyle and hony. So he spared them and slu them not wyth theyr bretheren. Now the pyt wherin Ismael dyd cast the dede bodyes of the men (whome he slewe iii.Re.xv.e because of Godolyah) had kynge Asa caused to be made, for feare of Baasa the kynge of Israel, & the same pyt did Ismaell fyll with sleyne men. As for þ remnaunt of thee People, the kynges doughters & al þ people þ were yet left at Mazphah vpõ whõ Nabusaradã þ chefe captain had made godoliah þ sõ of Ahicã gouernour: Ismael þ sõne of Nathaniah caryed thẽ away prisoners toward þ amonites. But whẽ Johanã the sonne of Careah and al they which had bene Capteynes ouer the kynges hoste wt hi, herde of all the wyckednes that that Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah had done: they toke their companions, and went oute for to fyght with Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah, and founde hym by the water of Rabym in Gabaon. Now when all the people whom Ismael led de captiue, sawe Iohanan ÿ sonne of Careah and all the capteynes of the hooste, they were glad. So al the people that Ismaell had caryed awaye from Mazphah were brought agayne

D And when they returned, they came to Iohanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fledde from Iohanan with eyght of his sworne companyons & went to ÿ Amonytes. Then Iohanan the sonne of Careah/ and all the captaines of the hoste that were with hym, toke the remnaunte of the people, whom Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had led awaye (when he had slayn Godolyah the sonne of Ahicam) whome they also had rescued from hym: fightinge men Women and Childeren, and gelded men, whome they brought agayne from Gabaon and wente from thence & sate them downe at Geruth Camaam/ which lyeth besyde Bethlehem, that they myght go into Egipte for feare of ÿ Chaldees: of whome they were afrayde because that Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah had slain Godolyah Ahikams sonne whom the king of Babylon had made gouernoure in the lande.

Jerem. xl. b

¶ The Capteynes aske councell of Jeremye what they ought to do. Jeremy monysheth the remnaunt of the people not to go into Egypte.

A So al the rulers, and Iohanan the sonne of Kareah / Iezeniah the sonne of Osaiah came with al the people from the least vnto the moost and sayde vnto Ieremy the prophet: O heare our peticion, that thou mayest pray for vs vnto the Lorde thy God, and for thy remnaunt wherof there be very fewe lefte of manye, as thou seest vs: that the Lorde thy God maye shewe vs a waye to go in and tel vs what we shulde do. Then Ieremye the Prophet saidvnto thé: I haue herd you

Jerem. xxi. a Jer. xxxvii. a

Beholde: I wyll praye vnto God your lord, as ye haue requyred me: and loke what answere the Lord geueth you/ I shal certifi you, therof, & kepe nothing backe from you. And they sayde vnto Jeremy: The Lord of truth and faythfulnes be oure recorde, that we wyll do all that the Lorde thy god commaunded vs, whether it be good or euil, we wyl herké vnto the voyce of our lord god to whom we sende the that it may prospeare, when we haue folowed the voyce of the Lorde oure god.

B And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Kareah, & al the captaynes of the people that were with hym: yea and all the people from the least to the moost, and sayde vnto them: Thus sayth the lorde god of Israell vnto whome ye sente mee/ to laye forth youre prayers before hym: Yf ye wyll dwell in this land, I shall buylde you vp, and not breake you downe: I shall plante you, and not rote you oute for I am pacifyed/ as concernynge the trouble that I haue done to you. Fear not the kynge of Babylon/ of whom ye stande in awe: O be not afrayd of hym sayth the Lorde: for I wyl be with you/ to helpe you, and delyuer you from hys handes I wyl pardon you, I wyll haue mercy vpon you and brig you agayne into your owne lande.

C Neuertheles, yf ye purpose not to dwel in this land, nor to folow the voyce of the Lorde your God: but wyll say thus, we wyll not dwell here, but go in to Egipte: where we shal nether se warre, heare the noyse of battell, nor suffre honger there wyll we dwell. Wherfore heare now the worde of the lorde, O ye remnaunt of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the god of Israell: Yf ye be wholy purposed to go into Egypt and to be there as straungers: the swerde that ye fere, shall ouertake you in Egypte: and the honger wherof ye be here afrayed shall hange vpon you into Egypte, and there ye shall dye. For all thei, that of set purpose vndertak to go into Egipte, there to easse them selues of theyr myseriye / shal perysh with the swerde with honger and pestilence: not one

one of them shall remayne, there shall none escape ÿ plage, that I wyl bring vpon them. For thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israell: lyke as my wrath and indignacyon is com vp on the inhabytours of Jerusalem / so shal my dyspleasur go furth vpon you also, yf ye go into Egypt: For there ye D shalbe cursed, abhorred, broughte to shame and confusion: and as for thys place ye shal neuer se it more. The lord forbyddeth you (O ye remnaunt of Ju da) ÿ ye shal not go into Egypt. And forget not that I haue warned you er nestly this day, els shal ye begile your selues. For ye sent me vnto the Lorde your God, and sayde: O praye thou ÿ Lorde our god for vs: and loke what answere the Lorde our god geueth ÿ, that bring vs agayne, and we shal do therafter. Nowe haue I shewed/ād declared vnto you the voyce of the Lord your god, for the which cause he hath sent me to you. If ye wyl not fo-low it, be sure/ that ye shal perysh with the sweard, with honger and pestylēce euen in the same place, wher your lust was to go and dwell.

¶ Johanan caryeth the remnaunt of ÿ people into Egypt, contrary to the mind of Jeremy. Jeremy prophecyeth ÿ destruction of Egypt

The .xliii. Chapter.

NOwe, when Jeremy had ended al the wordes of the Lord god vnto the people A (for their sakes to whome God had sent him) Azariah the sonne of Osaiah, and Johanā the sonne of Kareah with al the proud personnes, sayd vnto Jeremye: Thou lyest: the Lord our god hath not sent ÿ to speake vnto vs, that we should not go into Egypte, and dwell there: But Baruch the sōne of Neriah prouoketh the agaīst vs, that he might brynge vs into the captiuitie of the chaldees, that they might sleye vs and carye vs awaye presoners vnto Babylon.
So Johanan the sonne of Kare-B ah/ and all the captaynes of the hoost/and al the people folowed not the com maundement of the Lorde: Namely, to dwel in the lande of Juda. But Joha-nan ÿ sonne of kareah, & al the captai-nes of the hooste caryed awaye all the remnaunt in Juda, that were come to Jerem. xli. a gether agayne frō the Heythen (amōg whom they had ben scatred) to dwel in the land of Juda: Men womē/ childrē ÿ kynges daughters, & all those that Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had left with Godolyah the sonne of Ahikam. They caryed awaye also the pro- C phet Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Ne riah, and so came into Egypt: for they were not obedyēt/ vnto the cōmaūdemēt of god. Thus came they to Thaphnis. And in Thaphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremye, saying: Take great stones in thyne hand/ and hyde them in the brych wall vnder the dore of Pharaos house in Thaphnis, ÿ al the men of Juda maye se/ and saye vnto them: thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes the god of Israel: Be hold, I wyll send and call for Nabu- Jerem. xlvi. c chodonosor the kyng of Babylon my seruaunt, and wyll set hys seate vpon these stones ÿ I haue hyd/ and he shal sprede his tent ouer them. And whē he commeth/ he shal smyte the land of D Egypt with slaughter, with presōmēt and wyth the swearde. He shal set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptyans goddes, and burne them vp, and take them selues presoners. Moreouer he shal araye him selfe wt the lande of Egypt, lyke as a shepard putteth on his cote, and shall depart hys waye from thēce in peace. The pyllers also of the tempe of the Sunne that is in Egipt: shal he breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians goddes.

¶ He reproueth ÿ people for their Idolatry. They that set light by the threatenyng of the Lord, are chastened. The destructyō of Egipt & the Jewes therin is prophecyed.

THis is the worde that was shewed to Jeremy concer- A nyng al the Jewes/ which dwelt in Egipte: at Mag dal, at Thaphnis, at Māphis, and in the Land of Patures.
Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: ye haue sene al the my-sery that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem, and vpon al the cityes of Juda, so that thys daye they are desolate: ād no man dwelling therein: and that be cause of y great blasphemies, which they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger: in that they wente backe to do sacryfi-ce/ and worshippe vnto straunge god-des: whom neyther they nor ye, nor your fathers haue knowen. How be it, I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the prophetes: I rose vp early, I sent vnto the, and gaue them warninge: O doo noo such abominable thinges, & thinges y I hate. But they wold not follow ner her ke, to turne fro theyr wickednes, & to do no more sacrifice vnto straunge Gods.

Wherfore myne indignation and B wrath was kyndled, and it brente vp y cities of Juda, the feldes with the stre tes of Jerusalem so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Now therfore thus sayth the lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: how happeneth it, that ye doo so greate euel vnto your owne soules, thus to destroye the men and women/chyldren and Babes of Juda: so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrathe wyth the workes of youre owne handes: when ye offre vn to straunge goddes in ther lande of E gipte wher as ye be gone to dwel: that ye mighte vtterlye perishe, and that ye myght be reuyled and shamefully in-treated of al nacions. Or haue ye now forgotten the wyckednes of your forefathers, the wyckednes of the kynges of Juda and their wiues, the wycked-nes that ye youre selues and your wy ues haue done in the land of Juda, in the cytie and in the land of Jerusaleme C Yet are ye not sory this daie, ye feare not nether walke ye in my lawe and in my commaundementes, y I haue geue vn to you and your forefathers.

Therfore thus sayeth y Lord of ho stes the god of Israel: I am stedfastly aduised and determined/ to punyshe you, and to rote out al Juda. As for y remnaunt of Juda that purposit went in to Egipt, there to ease them of their misery: I wil take them & they shal al be destroied. In y land of Egypt shal they perishe being consumed with the swearde and with honger. For from the least vnto the moost they shall perishe with the swerd and wyth honger. Mo reouer they shalbe reuyled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded. For I wyl visite them that dwel in Egipte, as I haue visited Jerusalem: with the swer de, wyth honger and wyth pestilence: So that none of the remnaunt of Juda, which are gone to dwell in Egypte shal be left to come agayn into y lande of Juda although they thinke to come thether agayn, & to dwel ther. For none shal com agayn, but such as are fled away. Then al the men which knew that theyr wyues had offred vnto strau- B ge goddes, and a great sorte of wyues that stode there, yea and al the people that dwelt there in Egypte in the cytie of Patures/ and swered Jeremye, and sayde: as for the wordes y y hast spoke vnto vs in the name of the Lorde/ we wyll in no wyse heare them: but what soeuer goeth out of our owne mouthe, that wyl we do: We wyll do sacrifice, ad offre oblations vnto the Quene of heaue: like as we and our forefathers, oure kinges & our heades haue done in y cities of Juda, & in y streetes & fel des of Jerusale. For the had we plete ousnes of vitayles/ the were we in pro speritye, & no myssfortune came vpo vs.

But sens we left, to offre and to do sacrifice vnto the Quene of heaue, we C haue had scarcenes of all thynges, & perysh w the swerde and honger. Last of all, when wee wemen dyd sacrifice and offred vnto the quene of heauen/dyd we make her cakes and poure vn to her drinkofferinges to do her seruice, without our husbandes wylles?

Then sayd Jeremy vnto al y people, to the men, to the women and to al the folck, which had geue hi y answer: Did not the Lord remebre y sacrifices y ye your forfathers, your kinges & ru lers (w al the peple) haue offred in the cytics of Juda, in the stretes & land of Jerusale? & hath he not cosydered this in hys mynde? In so moch, that the lord might no lenger suffre y wickednes of your inuecios, & y abhominable thigs which he did? Is not your lad desolat & voyd ye & abhorred, so y no ma dwel leth therein enye more, as it is come to passe this day.

Dyd not al this happen unto you/because ye made such sacrifyce/ & synned agaynst the Lord? Ye haue not folowed his voyce, to walke i his lawe in his ordinaunces and statutes.

Yea this is the cause, that all mysfortune happē unto you, as it is come to passe this daye. Moreouer, Jeremy spake unto al the people and to al the women: Heare the worde of the Lorde al Juda, ye that be in ẏ land of Egipt. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Ye and your wyues haue spoken wyth your owne mouth, the thynge that yee haue fulfylled in dede.

Yea thus haue ye said: We wil not fayle, but do the thyng that pleaseth us: we wyl do sacryfice and poure out drinckofferinges to the Quene of heauen. Purposly haue ye set up youre owne good meanynges, and hastelye haue ye fulfylled your owne intent. And therfore, heare the word of ẏ lord al Juda/ ye that dwell in the lande of Egypt.

Beholde, J haue sworn by my grete name, sayeth the Lord/ that my name shalnot be rehersed thorow eny mans mouth of Juda, in all the lande of Egypt: to saye: The lord god lyueth, for J wyl watche, to plage them, and not for their wealth. And al the men of Juda that be in the lande of Egypt/ shal perysh with the swearde and with honger, untyl they be utterly destroyed.

Neuertheles, those that fled away for the swearde, shal come agayne into the land of Juda, but there shal be uery fewe of them. And al the remnaunt of Juda, that ar gone into egipt, ther to dwel, shal know whose wordes shal be found true: theirs or myne.

Take this for a token that J wyl uisette you in this place, sayethe the LORD, and that ye maye knowe how that J (without dout) will performe my purpose upon you to punisshe you. Behold, sayeth the lord J wyl delyuer Pharao Hophrea king of egipt into the handes of his enemyes, that seke after his lyfe: euen as J gaue Zedekiah the kyng of Juda in to the hādes of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, which sought after his life.

Baruch is reproued of Jeremy.

The. xlv. Chapter.

These are the wordes that Jeremy the prophet spake unto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, after A Jere xxxvi that he had wrytten these sermons in to a boke at the mouth of Jeremy, In the fourth yere of Jehoakim the sōne of Josiah kyng of Juda.

Thus saieth the Lord God of Israel unto thee, O Baruch: In so much as thou thoughtest thus when ẏ wast wryting/ Wo is me, the Lord hath geuen me payne for my trauayle: J haue weeried my selfe with syghyng & shall J finde no rest? Therfore tell him, O Jeremy, that the Lord saith thus: Behold, The thing that J haue buylded wyl J breake downe agayne/ and rote out the thing, that J haue planted, yea this whole land. And sekest thou yet promocyō? Loke not for it, and desire it not. For J wyl bring a miserable plage upon al flesh sayeth the lorde. But thy life wil J geue thee for a praye where so euer thou goest.

He prophecyeth the destruction of Egipt. Delyueraunce is promised to Israell,

The. xlvi. Chapter

Here folow the wordes of ẏ Lord to the prophet Jere- A Esay xix a. my, whych he spake unto xxx, a the Gentyles. These wordes folowing preached he to the Egipcyans concernyng ẏ host of Pharao Necho kynge of Egipte, when he was in Charcamis besyde ẏ water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon slew him/ In the fourthe yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah king of Juda.

Ye make ready buckeler and shild ye goo furth to fyght: Ye harnesse your horses, and set your selues upon them. Ye set youre sallettes faste on, ye brynge forth speares, ye scoure your swerds, & put ō your brestplates.

But alas how happeneth it, that J se you so afrayed? why shrink ye back wherfore ar are your worthyes slayne?

Ye they runne so fast awaie/that none of them loketh behynde him. Fearfulnesse is fallen vpõ euerychone of thē sayeth the Lorde. The lightest of fote shall not flee away, and the worthyes shall not escape.

B Towarde the north by the water of Euphrates, they shall stomble and fal. But what is he thys, that swelleth vp as it weare a floude roarynge and ragyng lyke the streames of water? It is Egipte that ryseth vp lyke the floud & casteth out the waters with so great noyse.

For they saye: We wyll go vp, and wyll couer the earth: we wyll destroye the cyties/with them that dwel therin Get you to horsbacke/ roll furthe the Charettes, come forth ye worthyes, ye morians, ye Lybians wyth youre bucklers/ye Lydeans with your bowes: so

C shall thys daye be vnto the lorde God of hostes, a day of vengeaunce/that he maye auenge hym of hys Ennemyes. The swearde shall deuoure/it shal be satisfyed and bathed in theyr bloud. For the lord god of hostes shall haue a slayne offering toward the north by the water of Euphrates. Go vp, O Galaad, and bringe tryacle vnto thee daughter of Egypte.

But in vayne shalt thou go to chirurgery, for thi wound shal not be stopped. The Hethen shal heare of thy shame, and the lande shalbe ful of thy cõfusion: For one stronge man shal stõble vpon another/ howe then shoulde they not fall bothe together

These are the wordes that the lord

D spake to the prophete Jeremy, concernynge the hooste of nabuchodonosor þ kinge of Babylon which was sent to destroye the land of Egypte: Preache out thorow the lande of Egypte/ and cause it to be proclaymed at Magdol, Memphys and Taphnis/and saye: Stande styll, make thee redye, for the swerd shall consume the round about

How happeneth it that thy myghtiworthyes, are fallē/why stode they not fast: euen because the Lorde thrust thē downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer styll vpon an other, One cryed vpon an other: vp let vs go agayne to oure owne people, And to oure owne naturall countre, from the sweard of oure enemyes.

Crye euen there / O Pharao kinge of Egipte/the tyme wyll bringe it on.

E As truly as I lyue (sayth the kinge whose name is the Lord o the ostes) it shall come as the mount of Tabor/and as Lybanus, if it stode in the see. O þ daughter of Egypt make redy to flit For Memphis shalbe voyde and desolate so that no man shall dwell therin. The lande of egypte is lyke a goodly fayre calfe, but one shal come out of the northe to pryche her forwarde. Her waged soudiers that be with her, are lyke fat calues.

They also shall fle away together and not abyde: for the daye of theyr slaughter and the time of theyr visitacion: shal come vpon them.

The crye of their enemies shal make

F a noyse/as the blast of a trompet. For they shal enter in with their hooste, & come with axes, as it were hewers downe of wod. And they shal cut downe her wod, sayeth the Lord/without eny discretiõ. For they shal be mo in nõbre then the grashoppers, so that no man shalbe able to tel them. The daughter of Egypt shalbe confounded/ whē she shalbe delyuered into the handes of þ peple of the north.

Moreouer thus sayeth the lord of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyl visit that restlesse people of Alerandria/ Pharao and Egypt, yea bothe their Goddes and their kynges: euen Pharao and al thē that put their trust in hym. Yea I wyl delyuer them in to the handes of those, that seke after their lyues Namely, into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of hys seruauntes. And after al these thinges it shalbe inhabited, as a fore tyme, saieth the Lord.

But be thou afrayed (O my ser- G uaunt Jacob) feare not thou, O Israel. For lo, I wyl helpe the frõ farre, and thy seade from the lande of thy captiuyte. Jacob also shal come agayne, and be in rest: he shalbe ryche, and no man shal do hym harme.

feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaūt) sayeth the Lord, for I am with thee: ād wil destroy al nacions, among whome I haue scatred the.

Neuertheles I wyl not consume thee, but chasten thee and correcte the: yea and that with discrecion: nether wyl I spare the as one that were fautles.

ss The Caldees killed the Egipcyans, at ẏ floudd of Euphrates, which was toward ẏ North: where as yet their host was wonderous greate, and their horses ꝛ charettes many. But the greater their host was, the more cruel was their slaughter: so dyd the Lord punish theyr wickednes, geuing them into the handes of the Caldees: ꝛ therfore calleth the Prophet the daye of their slaughter, the day of ẏ lordes vengeance, ꝛ them ꝛ slayne offring of the Lord.

b a As though he sayde. Hytherto (O Egipt) hast ẏ bene as a goodly fayre calf, for thyne habundaūce of riches. The worde of the lord agaynst the philistines.

The .xlvii. Chapter.

These are the wordes, that the Lorde spake unto Jeremye the Prophete agaynste the Philistines / before that Pharaoo smote the cytie of Azah. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, there shall waters aryse oute of the North: and shal growe to a greate floude, runninge ouer and coueringe the lande, the cytyes, and them that dwel therein.

And the men shal crye, and al they that dwel in the lande, shal mourne at the noyse and stamping of their strōg barded horses, al the shakyng of their charettes and at the rombling of the wheles.

The fathers shal not loke to theyr children, so feable and wery shal theyr hādes be:

B at the same tyme, when he shall be there / to destroye the whole land of the Philystines. He shal make waste bothe, Tyrus, Sidon and al other that are sworne vnto them.

For the Lorde wyll destroye all Palestina / and the other Iles, that be deuyded from the countre. Baldnesse is come vpon Azah, Ascalon wyth her other valleys shal kepe her peace.

How long wylt thou slaye, O thou swearde of the lorde? Turne againe in to thy sheeth, rest, and leaue of. But howe can it ceasse, when the Lord him selfe hath geuen him a charge against Ascalon / and raysed it vp against the cytyes of the see coast?

The word of ẏ Lord agaynst the Moabytes.

The .xlviii. Chapter.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell agaynste Moab: Wo be to the cytye of Nabo, for it shal be layde waste, brought to confusion and taken. A Esay. xv. a. xvi. a. xxv. b. Ezech. xxv. b. Sophō. ii. b. Josue. xiiii. c.

Yea thy stronge cytie of Kariathiarim shalbe brought to shame, and afrayde: Moab shal nomore be had in honoure: Wycked councell shalbe taken vpon Hesebon. Moab shalbe destroyed, and her cities brent vp: her chosen yong men, shalbe slayne, sayth the king, whose name is the Lorde of hoostes. The destruction of Moab commeth on a pace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neyghbours shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe her na me, shall say: O how happeneth it, that D the stronge staf, and the goodly rodde, is thus broken? And thou doughter Di bon/ come downe from thy glory/and syt in pouertye. For he that destroy eth Moab/shall come vp to the also, & breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the strete/and loke about the:
aske them that are fledde and escaped, and saye: what thing is happened? O, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Ar non, that Moab is destroyed. And mi sery shal come vpon the playne lande: Namely/vpon Holon/and Jahazah: vpon Mephaath and Dibon, vpon Nabo and the house of Deblathaim, vpon Cariathiarim and Bethgamul, vpon Bethmaon and Carioth, vpon Bozra, and all the cityes in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or neare.

The horne of Moab shalbe smytte downe, and her arme broken, sayeth the lorde. Make her droncken, for she magnyfyed her selfe aboue the Lorde, that men maye clappe theyr handes at her vomyte, & that she also may be lau ged to scorne. O Israell, shalte thou not laugh hym to scorne, wen he is ta ken amonge theues? Yea because of thy woordes that thou haste spoken a gainst him, thou shalt be driuen awai.
Yea Moabites shall leaue the cytyes, and dwell in rockes of stone/and beco me lyke dowues, that make theyr nest es in holes.

As for Moabs pryde, we haue her de of it, she is very hye mynded. I kno we her stoutnesse, her boastinge, her a rogancy, and the pryde of her stomack/ E sayeth the Lorde. For her furiousnes maye neyther vpholde her with stren ght nor dede. Therfor shal the mour nynge be made for Moab/and euerye mā shall cry, for Moabs sake: a lame tacion shalbe made to the men, that stā de vpon the wall. So wyll I mourne for the also, O Jazer, and for thee, O thou vyneyarde of Sabamah.

Thy wyne braunches shall come o uer the sea, and the braunches of Jazer but vnto thee see the destroyer shal bre ke vnto the haruest and grape gethe rynge: Myrth and cheare shalbe taken awaye from the tymbre feld, and from the whole lande of Moab.

There shalbe no swete wyne in the presse/the treader shall haue no stoma ke to crye, ye there shalbe none to crye vnto him: which afore tyme were her de from Hesebon to Eleale and Jahaz, whych lyfted vp theyr voyce from Zo ar vnto Horonaym, that bullock of .iii yere old. The waters also of Nemrim shalbe dryed vp.

Morouer I wyll make Moab cea F se (sayth the Lord) from the offerings and censing that she hath made vnto her Goddes in hye places. Wherfore my herte mourneth for Moab, lyke a croude playenge an heuye songe: and for the mens sake of the bryckwall my hert morneth also, euen as a pype ÿ py peth

peth a doleful song: for they shalbe be ry few/and destroyed.
Al heades shalbe shauen, and al bear-des clypped of: al handes bound/and al loines girded about with sak cloth. Upon al the house toppes and streetes of Moab, there shalbe mourning: For I wil breake Moab lyke an unproffi-table vessel, saith the Lord. O how fer ful is she? O how mourneth she? O how doth Moab hãg down her head/ and is a shamed? Thus shal Moab be a laghyng stock, and had in derysyon of al them, that be rounde about her.

For thus saieth the Lord. Behold/ the enemy shal com fleeng as an aegle, and sprede his winges upon Moab. They shal clyme ouer the wales/and wynne the strõg holdes. Then y migh ty mens hertes in Moab shalbe like y hert of a woman trauelyng wt childe.
G And Moab shalbe made so desolat that she shalbe nomore a peple, because she hathe set up her selfe agaynste the lord. Feare/pit, and snare shal com up on y (O Moab) saieth the lord. Who so escapeth the fere, shal fal in the pyt/ and who so getteth out of the pyt, shal be taken in the snare.

For I wyl bring a yeare of visita cyon upõ Moab, saieth the lord. Ther that are able to fle/ shal stand under y shadow of Hesebon. For there shal go a fyre out of Hesebon, and a flame frõ Sion, and shal burne up that proude peple of Moab, both before & behind.
Wo be unto the (O Moab) for y pe ple of Chamos shalt perish: Ye thy sõ nes & daughters shalbe led awaye cap tyue. Yet at y last wyl I bring Moab out of captiuite agayne/saieth y lord. thus farre of the plage of Moab.

The notes

a Chamos in the name of the Idole and god of y Moabytes.
b After the Greke. Some reade: Geue a flower or winges.
c The Hebr. expound this of y Caldes, y they shu ld haste to destroy y whole kingdom of y Moaby-tes: as though y text shuld mene thus much: cursed be he y neclygētly performeth y vengeāce of y lord, y spareth these most wycked Moabytes, and that withholdeth his sweard frõ shedding of their bloud.

¶ The word of y Lord against y amonites, agaist Iduma, Damascus, Cedar & Elam.

A As concernyng the Amoni tes, thus the Lord sayeth: Hath Israell no chyldren, or is he without an heyre? Why hath youre kyng thẽ taken God in? wherfore doth his peo-ple dwel in hys cyties? Beholde ther fore/the tyme commeth (sayeth y lord) that I wyl brynge a noyse of warre in to Rabah of the amonytes. Rabel shalbe desolat, and her cytis brent up? and the Israelites shalbe lordes ouer those that had them in possession afor, saieth the lord. Hesebon shal mourne/ for it shalbe roted out of the grounde, sayeth the Lord. The cytties of Ra-bah shal crye out, and gyrde them sel-ues wyth sack cloth: they shal morne, & runne about the wales: for their kyng shal be led awaye presoner: yee his pre stes and princes with him. Ezech.xxi.d & xxv.a Amos.i.a

Wherfore trustest thou in the water streme that flew to and fro, O thou fearce daughter: and thinkest thou art so safe (by reasõ of thy treasure) that no man shal come to the? B

Beholde, I wyl brynge a feare up-on the, saieth the Lord god of hoostes, from al those that be aboute y: so that ye shalbe scaterd euery man from ano ther, and no man shall gather them to gether againe y be fled. But after y/ I wil bring the Ammonites also oute of captiuite agayne.

Upon the Edomites hath the lorde of hoostes spoken on thys maner: Is there no more wysdome in Theman? Is there no more good councel amõg his peple? Is their wisdom thẽ turned cleane to naught? Get you hence, turne your backes, crepe downe in to y depe, O ye cytylsines of Dedan.

For I wyll brynge destructyon upon Esau, yee and thee daye of hys vysytacyon. If the grape ga-therers come upon thee, shoulde they nott leaue some grapes? Yf the nyght robbers came upon thee/shoulde they not take so much as they thought wes ynough?
But I wyl make Esau bare, and dis-couer his secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them. Hys sede shall be wasted awaye yea hys brethren and his neyghbours, and he him selfe shal not be lefte behynde.

Iere.xxvi. Eze.iii.b i.Petr.iiii.c

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherles chil dren behynd thee/ and I wyl kepe thē and thy wyddowes shal take theyr com forth in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken: Behold, they that men thought were vnmeate to drincke of the cuppe, haue dronken with the fyrst: and thin kest thou then to be free?

No, no: thou shalt nether be quite nor fre, but thou must drinck also: For why/ I haue sworne by my selfe (sayth the lorde) that Bozrah shall become a wyldernesse an open shame a laughi ge stocke and cursynge: and her cities shalbe a continuall deserte.

D For I am perfectlye infourmed of the Lorde, that he hath sent a message alredy vnto the heathen. Gather you together/ and go forthe against them:

Abd.i.a Eze.xxvii.b Iere.xlviii.d make you redy to the battayle, for lo: I wyll make the but smal among the heathen, and lytle regarded amo ung men.

Thy hye stommake and the pryde of thy hert haue deseaued the, because thou wylt dwell in the houses of stony rockes, and haue the hye mountans in possessiō. Neuertheles though thy nest were as hye as the Aegles/ yet wyll I cast the downe, sayth the lorde. More ouer Idumea shalbe a wildernes: who so goeth by yt, shalbe abashed, & wōder at all her myserable plages. Lyke as Sodome, Gomor, and the cities that laye there about, were turned vpsyde downe (sayth the Lord) so shall no bo dy dwell in Idumea/ and no man shal haue his habitacion there. Beholde/lyke as the lyon commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Iordane vnto the grene pastures of Ethan, so wyl I dryue hym, and make hym runne aga ynst her. But who is the yong man that I wyl ordeyne therto? Who is ly ke vnto me? What is he that wyl stry ue wyth me? What shepherd maye stā de in my handes?

Therfore heare the councell of the Lorde/ that he hath taken vpon Idumea: and hys purpose that he hath de-uysed vpon the Citezins of Theman: E The least of the flocke shal teare them in peces, and loke what fayre thing the y haue, they shall make it waste, and them selues also. At the noyse of theyr fall the earthe shall quake, the crye of theyr voyce shalbe herde vnto the red see, Beholde, the enemye shall come ād fle vp hyther like as it were an Aegle: and sprede his winges vpon Bozrah.
Then shall the hertes of the worthyes in Edom, be as the harte of a woman trauelynge of chylde. Vpon Damascus, Hemad and arphad shall come cōfusyon, for they shall heare euell tydin ges: they shalbe tossed to and fro lyke the see that cannot stande styll. Damascus shal be sore afrayde, and shal fle, tremblyng shal come vpon her. Sor row and payne shall ouertake her as a woman traueling of chylde. But how shuld so worshypfull and glorious a cytye bee forsaken? heare therfore: her F yonge men shall fall in the stretes, ād al her men of war shal be taken away in that tyme sayeth the Lord of hostes, I wyl kyndle a fyre in the lande of Da mascus, which shal consume the palace of Benhadad.

As for Cedar and the kyngdomme of hazor, whome Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon smote downe/ the Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Aryse, and get you vp vnto Cedar, ād destroye the people towarde the easte.
Theyr tentes and theyre flockes shall they take awaye/ yee theyr hanginges and theyr vessell. Theyr camels alsoo shal they cary away with them. They shal come about them on euery syde wt a fearfull crye.

Fle, get you sone awaye, crepe into caues, that ye may dwell there: Ye in habitours of hazor sayth the Lord: for Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon hathe holden a Councell concerning you, & concluded his deuyse agai nst you. Aryse, and get you vp agaīst yonder ryche and carelesse people (saith the Lord) which haue nether gates nor doore barres, and that dwel not together. Theyr camels shalbe stolen/ ād the droues of theyr catel dryue awaye

Morouer

Morouer, these that be shauen wyll I scatre towarde al the wyndes/and bringe them to destruction: yee ād that thorow their owne samplers, sayeth ẏ Lord. Hasor also shalbe a dwellingfor Dragons, and an euerlasting wyldernesse: so that no body shal dwel there/and no man shal haue ther hys habitacion.

These are the wordes/that ẏ Lord G spake to the prophete Jeremy concernynge Elam, in the begynninge of the reygne of zedekiah kynge of Juda. Thus saieth the lorde of hoostes: Beholde, I wyl ᵇ *breake the bow of Elā and take away their strength: and vpon Elam I wyl bringe the foure windes from the foure quarters of heuen and wyl scatre them agaynst the same foure wyndes. And ther shalbe no people, but some of Elam shal fle vnto thē For I wil cause Elam to be afraied of their ennies, and of thē that seke their lyues: and wil bringe vpon thē the in dignacion of my wrath, saith the lord/ And I wil persecut them with ẏ swerd so long til I haue brought them to nought. I wyl set ᶜ *my stole in Elam/ I wyl destroye both the king and ẏ princes from thence, saieth the lord. But in processe of tyme, I wil bring Elam out out of captyuytie agayne, saith the Lord.

The Notes.

a * By this young man do some vnderstand Alexander the greate conquerar, which ouercame al landes.
b * The Elamtes were good bowmen in battel: ād therfore is their bow prophecied to be broken. &c By which is meant that they shuld be ouercom by the of their enemies & scatred abrode vnto the foure coastes of the erth:
c * That is (as some thinke) Alexaunder the grete conquerer, ẏ wanne Elam: ¶ He prophesieth the destruction of Babilon & ẏ deliueraūce of Israel, which was in captiuitie.

¶ The. L. Chapter

The wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the prophet Je-A remy/cōcernig Babilon, & the land of the Caldes: preach among the Gentils, let youre voice be hearde, make a token: crye oute, keape no sylence, but saye: Babylon shalbe wonne, Bel shalbe cōfounded, and Merodach shalbe ouercome.

Yea their goddes shalbe broughte to shame and their images shal stande in feare. For out of the north ther shal come a people agaynst her, which shal make her lande so waste that no bodye shal dwel therin: nether man nor beast for they shal flit and depart from thence a * In those dayes and at that tyme saieth the lord, the children of Israel shal come/they and thy children of Juda/ wepinge and makinge haste, and shal seke the Lorde their God. They shal aske the way to Siō, thither shal they turne their faces, and come and hange vpon the in a couenaūt that neuer shal be broken.

My people hath bene a lost flocke my shepardes haue disceaued them, & haue made them go astraye vpon the hilles. They haue gone from the mountayne to the lytle hil, and forgot ten their folde. Al they that came vpon them, haue deuoured them: and their enemyes sayde: We haue made no faute againste theym, for they haue displeased the Lord, yea euen the lord whiche is the bewtye of their ryghtuousnes, ād that defended ther fathers. Yet shal ye fle from Babylon, and departe out of the land of the Caldees, & ye shalbe as ẏ rammes that go before the flocke. For lo, I wyl wake vp an hooste of people from the northen land, and bringe them vpon Babylon Iere. l. these shal laye seige to it, and wynne it. Their arowes shal not mysse, lyke as a connyng archar shuteth not wrong.

And the Caldees shal be spoyled, and al they that spoyle them, shalbe satysfyed, sayeth the Lorde: Because ye were so chearful and gladd, to treade downe myne heretage, and fulfylled poure pleasures, as the calues in the Esay. xiii grasse: and tryumphed ouer them lyke the bulles/when ye had gotten the victory. Youre mothers shalbe sore confounded, and they that bare you, shal come to shame. She shalbe the leaste set by among the nacyons, voyd, wast, and dryed vp. No man shal be able to dwel there, for the feare of the Lorde/but she shal be whole desolate.

All they that goo by Babylon / shall stand styl and be abashed/ & shal wonder at al her plages.
C Go forth in your aray against Babilō round about al ye that cā handel bowes: shoute at her, spare no arowes, for she hath synned agaynst the lord. Cry out vpon her, vpon her. Agaynste her rounde about: she shal yelde her selfe, her foundacions shal fal, and her walles shal come downe, for it shalbe the vengeaunce of the Lord. Yea vengeaunce shall be taken of her / and as she hath done, so shal she be dealt wal They shal rote out ẏ sower from Babylon, and hym that handleth the sykle in haruest. For feare of the sweard of the enemy, euery man shal get hym to his owne people, and euery mā shal flye to his owne lond. Israel is a scatered flocke, the Lyons haue dyspersed them. Fyrst the kyng of the Assyriās deuoured them / last of al this Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon hath brosed al their bones.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde/ I D wyl visit the king of Babilon and his kyngdome/ as I haue vysited ẏ king of the Assyrians: and wyl bring Israel againe to his plesaunt pasture, that he maye fede vpon Charmel and Basan/ and be satisfyed vpon the mounte of Ephraim and Galad. In those dayes and at the same tyme (sayeth ẏ lord) yf the offence of Israel be sought for/. there shal none be found: yf men enquire for the synne of Iuda/ ther shal be none: for I wyl be mercyfull vnto them/ whome I suffer to remayne ouer.

iiii Re. xix a Esay. xxxvi,

Go downe (O thou auenger) into the ennmies land / and vyset them that dwel therin: downe with them / & smit them vpon the backes sayeth the lord: do accordyng to al that I haue commaunded thee. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of a slaughter and greate murther, namelye on thys maner: Howe happeneth it / that the hammerre of the whole worlde is thus broken and brosed in sonder? How chaunceth it / that Babylon is become a wildernes among the Heathen on thys maner? I my selfe haue layed wayte for thee, and thou art taken: vnawares art thou trapped & snared: For why / thou hast prouoked ẏ lord vnto anger: The lord hath opened hys house of ordinaunce, and brought furth the weapons of hys wrath. For the thynge that is done in the lande of the Chaldees, it is the Lord of hostes worcke.

These thinges shall come vpon her at the last / they shal breake into her pryuy chambre, they shall leaue her as bare as stones, that be layde together in heapes. They shall so destroye her/ ẏ nothyng shalbe lefte. They shall slaye al theyr mighti souldiers and put thē to death. Wo be vnto them for the day and tyme of theyr visitacion is at hande. Me thincke I heare already a cry of them that be fled and escaped oute of ẏ lande of babylon, which shewe in Syon the vengeaunce of the Lorde oure God, the vengeaūce of hys temple: yea a voyce of them, that crye agaynste babylon call vp all the archers agaynste Babylon, pytche youre tentes rounde about her that none escape. Recompense her as she hath deserued: and according as she hath don / so deale with her agayne: for she hath set vp her selfe agaynst the lorde, agaynst the holye one of Israell. Therfore shal her yong mē fall down in the stretes and all her mē of warre shalbe rooted out in that day sayth the Lorde. Beholde I speake vnto thee (O thou proude) sayth the lord God of hoostes for thy daye shall come euen the time of thy visitacion: And ẏ proude shall stomble and fall, and no man shall helpe hym vp. I wyll burne vp his cities with fyre, and it shal consume all that is round aboute him.

C

Thus sayth the lorde of hoostes: The chyldern of Israel and Iuda suffred violence together. All they that haue them in Captyuitye, keape them faste, and wyll not let them goo: but theyr auenger and redemer is mighty, whose name is the lord of hoostes: he shall mainteyne theyre cause/ he shall make the lande shake, and iudge them that dwell therein, one with another.

The sweard shal come vpon the Caldees ders/saieth the lorde/vpon them that dwel in Babilon/vpon their princes/ and vpon their wise men: The swerd vpō their sothsaiers. as for those (thei shal become fooles.) The sweard vpō their worthyes, so that they shal stand in feare: The sweard vpon their horsmen ād charettes/and vpon al ẏ commen people that dwel vnder them: so that they shall become b*like wemen: The swerde vp on their treasure, so ẏ it shalbe stollen awaie: The swerd vp on their waters, so that they shalbe dried vp: For the land worshippeth images, and delyteth in straunge wonderful thinges. Therfor shal wild bestes, Apes, and Estriches dwel therin: for there shal neuer mā dwel there, nether shal eny man haue his habitaciō there for euermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorre/with the cityes that laie there about, saieth ẏ lorde: So shall no man dwel there also, nether shal eny man haue there his habitacion. Behold, ther shal come a peple from the North, with a greate bounde of men and many Kinges shall stande vp from the endes of the earth: They beare bowes & buckelers, cruel are they & vnmercyful.

Their voyce roreth lyke the ragig

B ser/they ride vpon horses, and com weponed to fight agaynst thee: O Babylon. As soone as the kyng of Babilon heareth tel of them, his hādes shal wax feble: Sorow and heuynes shal come vpon him, as a womā trauelling wyth child. Behold, Like as the lion cōmeth vp from the pleasādt medowes of Jordane vnto the grene pastures of Ethan/so wyl I driue them forth/& make them run against her. But whom shal I chose out, ād orden to such a thinge? For who is like me, or who wil stryue with me/or what shepard maye stande against me? Therfore here the coūcell that the lord hath geuen vpon Babylon, and the deuice that he hath taken vpon the land of the Caldees. The lest amonge the peple shal tere them in peces/and loke what plesaunt thing they haue they shal laye it waste. The noyse at the wynnynge of Babylon shal moue the earth, & the crye shal be herde among ẏ Gentils.

Their dwellynge places shalbe brent vp, their barres shall be broken. One purseuaunt shall mete another, yea one poste shal come by another, to bryng the kynge of Babilõ D tydinges that his citie is taken in on euery syde, the fordes occupyed/the fennes brẽt vp, and the souldiers sore afrayed.

For thus saieth the lord of hoostes the god of Israel: the daughter of Babylon hath bene in her tyme like as a threshing floore, but shortely shall her haruest com. Nabuchodonosor ye king of Babylon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessel. He swalowed me vp lyke a dragõ, and filled hys bely with my delycates, he hath cast me out, he hath taken my substaunce awaye, and the thing that was left me hath he caryed unto Babylon/sayeth the daughter that dwelleth in Sion: yea and my bloude also unto the Caldes, sayeth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde, I (E) wyll defend, thy cause/and aueng the: I wyl drynk up her see/& drye up her water springez.

and

(...ay.xiii.a) Babilon shall become an heape of stones a dwelyng place for dragons/a fearfulnes and wondryng, because no man dwelleth there. They shal roare together lyke lyons, and as thy yonge lyons when they be angrie, so shal thei bende them selues. In their heart I shal set drincke before them/ and they shalbe dronken for joye: Then shal they slepe an euerlasting slepe, and neuer wake, sayeth the Lord: (...xiii.b) I shal carye the downe to be slayne like shepe, lyke wethers and gootes. O, how was Sesach wonne: O, how was the glory of the whole land taken? how happeneth it, that Babilon is so wondred at amonge the Heathen? The see is rise ouer Babilõ, and hath couered her with his greate waues: Her cyties are layde wast, the land lieth unbuilded & void: it is alone where no man dwelleth, ãd wher no man traueleth thorow. Morouer/I wyl uiset Bel at Babylon: (...em.l.a. / ...ay.xlvi.a / ...an.xiiii.b) and the thing that he hath swalowed up, ỹ same shal I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentyls also shal runne nomore unto him, yea and the walles of Babilon shal fal.

O my people, come out of Babilõ, that euery man maye saue his lyfe, frõ the fearful wrath of the Lorde. Be not faynte herted, and feare not at euery rumore that shalbe herd in the lãd: for euery yere bringeth new tydinges yea straunge wickednes and lordship. And lo, the tyme commeth that I wyl uiset the ymages of Babylon, and the whole land shalbe confounded, ye and her slayne shal lye in ỹ middest of her. Heauen ond earth w al that is therin, shal reioyce ouer Babilon, when the destroyers shal come upon her from the North, sayeth the Lord. (F)

(...ap.l.c) Lyke as Babylon hath beaten downe and slaine many of Israel, so shal there fal many, and be slayne in al her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the swearde, haste you, stande not styll, remembre the lord afarre of: and thincke upon Jerusalem, for we wer ashamed to heare the blasphemies: Oure faces were couered with shame, because the straunge aleauntes came into the Sanctuary of the Lord. Wherfore beholde (sayeth the lorde) the tyme commeth/that I wyl uyset the ymages of Babylon/and thorowe the whole lãde they shal morne and fal. Though Babylon clyme up into heauen, and kepte her power an hye: yet shal I sende her destroyers, sayeth the Lorde. (Jerem.xlix.d)

A pyteous crye shalbe hearde from Babilon, and a grete misery from the lande of the Caldees: when the Lorde destroyeth them, and when he dryueth out the hye stomacke and proude bostyng, wherwith they haue bene as furious as the waues of greate water floudes, and made great crakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shal come upon her (euen upon Babilon) which shal take her worthyes, and breke ther *bowes: for god is disposed to aueng him selfe upon them, and sufficientlye to recompence them. Ye (sayeth ỹ lord) I wyl make their Prynces, their wyse men, their chef rulers and al their worthyes, drõcken: so that they shall slepe an euerlasting slepe/and neuer wake: Thus sayeth the king, whose name is the lord of hostes. (G)

Morouer, thus sayeth the lord of hostes: The thycke wal of Babilon shalbe broken/& her proud gates shal be brent up. And the thing that the gentiles and the people haue wrought with greate trauayle and labour, shal come to naught and be consumed in ỹ fyre.

Thys is the charge that Jeremye gaue unto Sariah the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah, when he wẽt toward Babilõ with Zedekiah ỹ king of Juda/in the.iiii. yere of his raigne Now this Saraiah was a peaceable Prince. Jeremy wrote in a boke al the mysery that shuld come upon Babylon, yee and all these sermones that be wryten agaynste Babylon, and gaue Saraiah thys charge: When thou when thou commest vnto Babilon, se that thou reade these wordes, and saie: O lord/thou art determed to rote out this place, so that nether people ner catel shal dwel there eny more, but to lie waste for euer: and when thou hast red out the boke/ bynde a ston to it, & cast it in the myddeste of Euphrates, and saye: Euen thus shal Babilon syncke, and be thurste downe with the burthē of trouble, that I wyl bringe vpō her: so that she shall neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the preachinges of Jeremy.

Zedekiah was. xxi. yere old, when he was made kynge, and he raigned. xi. yeare in Jerusalem. His mothers Jere. xxix. a. iiii. Re. xxva name was Hamutal, Jeremies daughter of Lobnah. He lyued wickedly before the Lord euen as Jehokim dyd. Wherfore the lord was angrye at Jerusalem and Juda, so lōge tyl he had cast them out of his presēce. And zedekiah fel from the king of Babylon. But in the. ix. yere of his raigne In the tenth Moneth, the tenth day of the Moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon with al his Hoost came before Jerusalem/ and beseged it/ and made them bulwarkes round about it. And this besegig of kyng zedekias.

And in the fourth Moneth, the. ix. daye of the Moneth, there was so grete honger in the cytye: that there wer/ nomore vytayles for the people of the lande. So al the souldyers brake awaye and fled out of the cytie by nyght thorow the waye of the porte betwene the two wales by the kynges garden.

Nowe the caldes had compassed the cytye rownde aboute/ yet wente these menne their waye toward the wildernesse.

And so the Caldes folowed vpon them, and toke zedekiah the king in ÿ felde of Jericho/ when his hoost was runne from hym. So they caryed the kynge awaye presoner to Reblah, vnto the kyng of Babilon in the lande of Hemath/ wher he gaue iudgement vpon him.

The kinge of Babylon also caused zedekiahs sonnes to be slayne before his face, ye and put al the princes of Juda to death at Reblach. Moreouer he put out the eyes of zedekiah, caused him to be bound wite chaines, to be caryed vnto Babilon & let him lye i preson, tyl he dyed. C

Now the tenth daye of the fifth moneth in the ix yeare of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, Nabusaradan the chefe captaine and the kyng of Babylons seruaūts came vnto Jerusalē, and brent vp the house of the Lord. He brent vp also the kynges palace, all ÿ houses and al the gorgeous buildinges in Jerusalem. And the wole hoost of the Caldes that were with the chefe Captayne/ brake downe al the walles of Jerusalem round about.

As for the poore people and suche folke as yet was left in the cytie, which also were fallē to the kyng of Babilō, ye and what people as yet remayned Nabusaradā the Chefe captayne caryed them awaye presoners. But the pore people of the countrey, dyd Nabusaradā the chefe Captayne leaue in ÿ lāde, to occupy the vyniardes and feldes.

The Caldes also brake the brasen pylers that were in ÿ house of ÿ Lord, ye the seate and the brasen lauer that was D in the house of the Lorde: And caryed all the metall of theym vnto Babylon.

They toke awaye also the Cauldrōs, shouels, flesh hokes, sprinklers, spones & al the brasen vessell ÿ was occupyed in the seruyce: With the basens, colepannes, sprynckles, pottes, candelstyckes, spones and cuppes: wherof

C of some were of golde, and some of syl uer.

The chefe Captayne toke also the two pyllers, the lauer ȳ .xii. brasē bullo ckes that stode vnder the seate/ whych kyng Salomon made in the house of the Lord: & all the vessell conteyned so much metal/ ȳ it might not be weyed.
For euery pyller was .xviii. cubites hye and the rope ȳ went about it, was .xii. cubites/and foure fyngers thicke and rounde. Now vpon the rope were bra-sen knoppes, and euery knop was fiue cubites hye: and vppon the knoppes were hoopes, and pomgranates roūd about of cleane brasse.

After thys maner were both the pil lers fashioned with the pomgranates, wherof there were an hundred & .xcvi which hanged vpon the hoopes round aboute. The chefe Capteyne also toke Saraiah the hye preste, and Sophoni ah that was cheafe nexte hym, and the thre kepers of ȳ treasury. He toke out F of the cytie a chamberlayn which was a capteyne of the souldiers/and seuen men that were the kinges seruauntes, which were foūd in the cytie: and Se-phera capteyne that vsed to mustre ȳ men of warre: with .lx. men of the con tre ȳ were taken in the cite. These Na buzaradan the chefe Capteyne toke/ & caryed thē to the kinge of Babilon vn to Reblath, and the kynge of Babylō caused them to be put to deathe at Re blath in the lande of Hemath. And thus Juda was ledde awaye captiue, out of his owne land. This is the summe of the people, whome Nabuchodo-nosor ledde awaye captiue.

In the seuenth yere of hys reygne, he caryed awaye of the Jewes / thre thousande, and thre and twentye. In ȳ .xviii. yere/ Nabuchodonosor caryed awaye from Jerusalem eyght hundred G and .xxxii. personnes. In the .xxiii. yere of Nabuchodonosor, Nabuzaradan the chefe Capteyne/toke awaye seuen hundred and .xlv. Jewes prysoners.
The whole summe of al the prysoners, is foure thousande and syx hundred.

In the .xxxvii. yeare after that Jehoacin the kynge of Juda was caried away in ȳ .xxv. day of the .xii. Moneth, Euilmerodach kinge of Babylon (the same yeare that he reygned) gaue Jehoacin the kyng of Juda hys pardon, and let hym oute of pryson, and spake louyngly to hym. And set his trone aboue the trones of the other kynges that were with hym in Babylon. He chaunged also the clothes of his Prison, yea, & he did eate with hym al his lyfe longe. And he had a continuall ly-

Aleph.

A ii.Pa.lxx.b. iiii.Esd.xv.a

ALas, how sytteth the cytye so desolate/ that some tyme was ful of people? How is she become lyke a wedow/ which was ỹ lady of al nacyons? How is she brought vnder trybute, that ruled al landes.

Beth.

She wepeth sore in the nyght, so ỹ the teres runne downe her chekes: for amõg al her louers, ther is none ỹ geueth her any cõfortyng her next frendes abhorre her, and are become her enemyes.

Gimel.

Juda is takẽ presõer, because she was defiled: and for seruig so many strãg goddes/ she dwelleth now among the hethen. She fyndeth no rest, all they that persecuted her, toke her, and so she dwelleth among her enemies.

Daleth.

B The stretes of Siõ, mourned because no mã cõmeth more to ỹ solempne feastes. Al her gates are desolat, her prestes make lamẽtaciõ/ her maydẽs are careful, ꝛ she her self is i greate heuines.

He.

Her enemyes are fallẽ vpon her head/ and haue put her to shame: because ỹ Lord hath chastened her for her greate wickednes: her chyldrẽ are ledde a waye captiue before their enemy.

Vau.

Al the bewty of the daughter of Syon is awaye/ her prynces are become lyke wethers that fynde no pasture. They are dryuen awaie before their enemie/ so ỹ they haue no more power.

Zain.

Now doth Jerusalem remembre ỹ tyme of her misery and disobediẽce, ye the ioye and plesure that she hath had in tymes past: seyng her people is brought doune thorow the power of their enemye, and there is no man for to helpe her: her enemies stand loking at her ꝛ laugh her Sabboth dayes to scorne.

Heth.

Jerusalẽ synned euer more ꝛ more/ therfore is she come in decaye. Al they that had her in honour, dispise her: for they haue sene her fylthynesse. Yet she sygheth/ and is ashamed of her selfe.

Teth.

C Her skyrtes are defyled, she remembred not what wold folow: therfore is her fall so greate, and there ys no man to comforte her. O Lorde, consydre my trouble, for myne enemy hathe the vpperhande.

Jod.

The enemy hath put his hand to all the precyous thynges that she had, yea euen before her eyes came ỹ heathen in and out of ỹ Sanctuary whõ thou (neuertheles) hast forbiddẽ to com within thy congregacion.

Caph.

D Al her people seke their bred wyth heuynes and loke what precyous thyng euery man hath, that geueth he for meate, to saue hys lyfe. Consydre, O Lord, and se, how vyle I am become.

Lamed.

O ye al that go fore by, behold and se, yf ther be any sorow like vnto mine, wherwith the Lord had troubled me in the daye of his fearful wrath.

Mem.

From aboue hath he sẽt downe a fyre in to my bones and chastened me he hath laied a net for my fete, and throwen me wyth open: he hath mad me desolate, so that I must euer be mournig.

Nun.

E The yock of my trangressyõ is cõ-

Samech.

The lord hath destroyed al the myghtie men/that were in me. He hath proclaymed a feast/to slaughter al my best men. The lord hath trodē downe ẏ daughter of Juda, like as it were i a wyne presse.

Ain.

Therfore do I wepe/and myne eyes gushe out of water: for the comfort that shulde quyckē me, is farre fro me My chyldren are dryuen awaye, for f why: the enemye hath gotten the ouer hande.

Phe.

Sion casteth out her handes/ and there is no man to comforte her. The lord hathe layed the enemyes round about Jacob, & Jerusalem is as it were a menstruous woman / in ẏ myddeste of them:

Zadé.

The lord is ryghtuous, for I haue prouoked his * coūteaūce vnto anger. O take hede all ye people, and cōsidre my heauines: My maidens & mi yong men are led awaye into captiuitee.

Koph.

I called for my louers (but they begyled me) for my Prestes and councellers, but they perished: euen while they sought for meate, to saue their lyues.

Res.

Considre (O lord) how I am troubled, my wombe is disquyeted, my hert turneth about in me, and I am full of heuynes. The swearde hurteth me wout/& win I am lyke vnto death.

Sin.

They heare my mournīg, but there is none that wyl comfort me. Al myne enemyes haue heard of my trouble, ād at glad therof, because thou hast done it. But thou shalt brynge forth the tyme, when they also shalbe like vnto me

Thau.

From thee shal com al their aduersyte: thou shalt pluck them away euē as thou hast plucked me, because of al my wickednés. For my sorow is very greate, and my hert is heauy.

The. ii. Chapter.

Aleph.

ALas, how hath the lord darkened the daughter of Sion so sore in his wrath? A Threñ.iiii.b
As for the honoure of Israel, he hath caste it downe from heauen: How happeneth it/ ẏ he remembred not his owne fote stole when he was angry?

Beth.

The Lord hath cast downe all the glory of Jacob without any fauoure: al the stronge places of the daughter Juda, hath he broken in his wrath, & throwne them downe to the grounde: her kyngdome and her Prynces hath he suspended.

Gimel.

In the wrath of his indignacyon he hath brokē al the * horne of Israel he hath wdrawen his ryghte hand frō the enemy: yea a flāme of fyre is kyndled in Jacob, and hath cōsumed vp all round about.

Daleth.

He hath bent his bowe lyke an e B nemy, he hath fastened his ryght hāde as an aduersary: and euery thyng that was pleasaunt to se, he hath smyttē it downe. He hath poured out his wrath lyke a fyre, into the tabernacle of the daughter of Sion.

He.

The lord is become lyke as it were an enemy, he hath cast downe Israel & al his places: yea, al his strong holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled the daughter of Juda with muche sorow & heuynes.

Vau.

Her tabernacle (which was lyke a gardene of pleasure) hath he destroyed her hie solēpne festes hath he put downe. The lord hath brought it so to pas ẏ the hie solempne festes & sabbothes i Sion, are cleane forgotten. In his heuy displeasure hath he made the kynge and prestes to be despysed.

The lord hath forsaken hys owne aulter, and is wroth with his owne sactu-ary and hath geuen the wales of their C toures into the handes of the enemy.
Theyr enemies made a noyse in ye hou se of the Lorde, as it had bene in a solé

All our enemies gape vpon vs.

Feare and snare is come vpon vs, yea, despyte and destruction.

Whole riuers of water gushe oute

F of myne Eyes, for the greate hurte of my people.

Phe.

Myne eyes runne, and cannot ceas se, for there is no rest

O Lord, When wylt ẏ loke downe from heauen and consydre?

Myne eye breaketh my hert: becau se of all the doughters of my citie.

Zade.

Myne enemyes hunted me out sherpe ly, lyke a byrde/yea, and that withoute a cause.

They haue put downe my lyfe in to a pytte/and layed a stone vpon me

They haue poured water vpon my head, then thought I, nowe I am vn done.

Koph.

I called vpō thy name, O lord, out of the depe pytte.

Thou haste hearde my voyce, and hast not turned awaye thyne eares frō my syghing and cryinge.

Thou hast enclyned thy selfe vnto me: when I called vpon thee and hast sayde; feare not.

Res.

Thou (O Lorde) hast mayntayned the cause of my soule, and hast redemed my lyfe.

O lorde thou hast sene my blasphe mers, take thou my cause vpon thee. G

Thou haste well consydered howe they goo about to doo me harme/and that all theyr councels are agaynste me

Sin.

Thou haste herde all theyr despyteful wordes (O Lorde) yea and al theyr I magynacions agaynste me.

The lyppes of myne enemies, and theire deuises that they take againste me, al the day longe.

Thou seest also theyr syttinge dow ne and theyr rysynge vppe, they make theyr songes of nothyng, but of me.

Rewarde them (O lorde) accordyng to the workes of theyr hādes.

Geue them the thynge, that theyr owne herte is afrayd of/euen thy cur se.

Persecute them (O Lord) with thy ne indygnation/and rote them out frō vnder the heauen

The notes.

a* Galle, for sorowfulnes: as in the Psal. lxix. they gaue me galle to eate, &c. That is they that should haue conforted me dyd me moch grefe, and augmē ted my sorowes, as if one shuld geue byter meates to hym that is hungrye. ¶ The prayer of Jeremy

A CAll to remembraunce (O Lorde) what we haue suffred, consyder and se oure confusion. Oure enherytaũce is turned to the stra ungers, and our houses to the aleaun ters. We are becom careful and fatherlesse, and our mothers are as the wydowes. We are faine to drink our owne water, for money & our owne wod must we bye w money. Our neckes are vn der persecution, we are wery, and haue no rest.

I fore time we yelded our selues to B the Egyptians/and now to the Assiry ans, onely that we myghte haue bread enough. Our fathers (which are gon) haue synned, and we must beare theyr Iere. xxxi. e. Ezech. xviii. a wyckednesse. Seruauntes haue ỹ rule of vs/and no man delyuereth vs oute of their handes. We must get our liuing w the peril of our liues, because of the drouth of the wyldernesse.

Oure skinne is as it had bene brẽt in an ouen/for very sore honger. The wyues are rauyshed in Sion, and the maydẽs in the cyties of Juda. The prynces are hanged vp with the hand of the enemyes, they haue not spared ỹ olde sage men/they haue taken yonge mens lyues from them/and the boyes ar hanged vp vpon trees. The elders C syt no more vnder the gates, and ỹ yõge men vse nomore playing of Musy ke. The ioye of our hert is gone, our mery quere is turned into mourning.
The garland of our head is fallen: alas, that euer we synned so sore.

Therfore our hert is ful of heuy-nesse, and our eyes dymme: because of the hyl of Sion that is destroyed. In somuch, that the foxes runne vpon it.
But thou, O Lord, that remaynest for euermore, and thy seate, world w oute D ende: wherfor wilt thou stil forget vs, and forsake vs so long? O Lord, turne thou vs vnto thee, and so shal we be turned. Renue our daies as in old tymes, for ỹ haste banyshed vs nowe longe ynoughe, and hast bene sore dyspleаsed at vs.

¶ The boke of the Prophete Ezechiel.

¶ The time wherein Ezechiel prophecied, in what place. His offspring & office. The vision of ỹ foure beastes. The visiõ of ỹ wheles. The visiõ of ỹ thro ne, & of ỹ Image aboue ỹ throne.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

IT chaunced in ỹ .xxx. yeare the fyfthe daye of the. iiii. A Moneth, ỹ I was among the prisoners by the riuer of Cobar: where the hea uens opened, and I sawe a vysion of God. Now the fyfth daye of ỹ moneth made out the fifth yeare of kyng Joa-cins captyuite. At the same tyme came the word of the Lord vnto Ezechiel ỹ sonne of Buzi the Preste, in the lande of the Caldees by the water of Cobar, where the hande of the Lord came vpõ
hym.

And I loked, and behold a stormy wynd cam out of ỹ North with a great cloud ful of fyre, which with his glister lyghtened al rounde aboute.

And

And in the myddes of the fyre it was al cleare, & as it were the lykenes of foure beastes, whiche were fashioned lyke a man: sauing, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.
Theyr legges were streyghte/but theyr fete were lyke bullockes fete, and they glystred, as it had bene fayre scou red metal. Under theyr winges vpõ al the foure corners they had mens han-des. Theyr faces and their winges were towarde the foure corners: yet were the wynges so, that one neuer tou ched another. When they wente, they turned them not aboute: but echeone went streyght forwarde.
Upon the right syde of these foure, C theyr faces were like the face of a man, ad the face of a lyon: But vpon the left syde/ they had the face of an Oxe/ and the face of an Aegle. Theyr faces also and theyr wyngs were spred out a boue; so that two winges of one touched euer two wynges of another / & with the other they couered theyr bodi Eueryone when it went it went streyg ht forwarde: Where as the spreete led them/thither they went/ad turned not aboute in theyr goynge.
D The fasshion and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hoate coales of fi re/euen as though burning cressettes had, bene amonge the beastes: and the fyre gaue a glystre, and oute of the fyre there went lightenynge. When the be astes went forward and backward, one would haue thought it had lyghtned.
Now when I had well consydered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vp-on the earth with foure faces also lyke the beastes.
The fasshyon and worck of ỹ whe les was lyke the sea. The four wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpõ) as it had ben one whele in an other. Whẽ one went forward, they went al foure, and turned them not about in their go ing. They were large, greate and horrible to loke vpon. Theyr bodies were E full of eyes round about them al four.
When the beastes went, the wheles wente also wyth them: And whẽ the be astes lyft thẽ selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyft vp also, Whether soeuer the spyrete went/thyther went th ey also, and the wheles were lyft vp/ & followed thẽ: for the spyrete of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beastes went forth/stode styl, or lift thẽ selues vp frõ the earth: thẽ the wheles also went, sto de styll: and were lyft vp/ for the breth of lyfe was in the wheles.
Aboue ouer the heades of the beasts there was a fyrmament, which was fas F shyoned as it had ben of the moost pu re Chrystal, and that was spredde oute aboue vpon their heades: vnder the sa me fyrmament were theyr wynges lay de abroade, one towarde an other, and two wynges couered the body of euery beast. And whẽ they wẽt forth, I herd the noyse of theyr wynges, lyke the noi se of great waters, as it had bene the voyce of the great God, and a russhing together as it were of an host of men. G And when they stode styl, they let dow ne theyr winges. Now when they stod styll, and had letten downe theyr wyn-ges, it thondered in the fyrmament th at was aboue theyre heades. About ỹ fyrmament that was ouer theyr head-es/there was the fashion of a seate, as it had bene made of Saphyr. Upon ỹ seate ther sate one lyke a man. I behel de him, and he was lyke a cleare lyght, as it had bene all of fyre wythin from his loynes vpwarde.
And beneth when I loked vppon hym vnder the loynes, me thought he was lyke a shining fyre, that geueth li ght on euery syde. Yea the shyne and glystre that lightened round aboute/was lyke a raynebowe, which in a ray ny day appeareth in the cloudes. Eue so was the symilitude, wherin the glory of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vppon my face, and herkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

also the fyrst martyr sawe the heauens open and Je sus standing on the right hand. &c. Act. vii. g. So are the heauens open in the faith of the beleuer, that he seith God in hys glorye. The heauens are counted in the scripture to be open when a manyfest vysion, reuelacion, sygne or token is shewed of God vnto man. Math. iii. d. Mar. i. b b* The holy goost or spirete of God, after his manifold giftes and operacions, hath many names. he is called the spirete of the father, the spreate of y sonne, the spirete of lyfe, the spirete of truth the spirete of sanctificacion, of promesse, of councell, of streghte. &c.

The prophete is sende to cal agayn the people fro theyr erroure.

The .ii. Chapter.

And then sayde he vnto me:
Stande vp vpon thy fete A (O thou sonne of man) and I wyll talke with thee.
Ezech. i. d And as he was comeninge with me, the sprete cam into me, and sette me vp vpon my fete: so that I marcked y thynge, that he sayde vnto me. And he sayde: Beholde, thou sonne of man, I wyll sende thee to the chylderen of Is-B rael, to those runnagates and obstina te people: for they haue taken parte a-gaynst me, and are runne awaye from me: bothe they and theyre forefathers vnto this daye.
Exo. xxxii. a Yea I wyll sende the vnto a people that haue rough visages and styf stomakes: vnto whome thou shalt saye o this maner: This the Lorde god hym self hath spoken / that whether they be obedient or noo (for it is a frowarde housholde) they maye knowe yet that there hathe bene a Prophete amonge them.
C Therfore (thou sonne of man) fea-Jeremy. i. c re them not / nether be afrayde of their wordes: for they shall rebell againste thee, and despise thee. Yea thou shalt dwel among scorpions: but fear not theyr wordes, be not abashed at theyr lokes / for it is a frowarde hous-holde.
Se that thou speake my wordes vn to them / whether they be obediente or not, for they are obstinate. Therfore, D thou son of man, obey thou al thinges / that I saye vnto thee / and be not thou stifnecked / lyke as they ar a styfnecked housholde. Open thy mouthe and eate that I geue thee.
Apo. v. a So as I was lokinge vp, beholde, there was sent vnto me an hande / whe rin was a closed boke: and the hande opened it before me, and it was wrytten within & without, ful of carefull mour nynges: alas, and wo.

The prophete beinge fedde wyth the worde of god, and with the constaunt boldnesse of the spirete is sent vnto the people that were in captiuite. The punishment of a curate that sheweth not the people theyr synnes.

The .iii. Chapter.

After this sayde he vnto me: 1 Thou sonne of man / eate that what soeuer it be: yee eate that closed boke and go thy waye / and spea ke vnto the chylderen of Israel so I o pened my mouthe / and he gaue me the boke for to eate / and sayde vnto me: y sone of man, thy bely shal eate / & thy bowels be fylled with the boke that I ge ue thee. Then dyd I eate thee boke, so it was in my mouth sweter the hony.
And he sayde vnto me: thou sonne of man, get thee sone vnto the house of Israell, and shewe them the wordes that I commaunde thee: for I send y not to the People that hathe straunge vnknowen or harde speache, but vnto the house of Israell: Not to manye nations, which haue diuerse speaches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstandest not: Neuertheles, yf I sent the to those people, they wol-de folowe thee: But the house of Israel wyll not folowe thee, for they wyll not folow me: yea all the house of Israell haue styf foreheades and harde hartes. Beholde therfore I wyl make thy face preuaile against theyr faces, & harden thy forehead agaynste theyr foreheades: so that thy forehead shalbe harder then an adamant or flinte stone that thou mayest feare them the lesse / & be lesse afrayede, of them, for they are a froward housholde.
He said moreouer vnto me: thou so C ne of man, take dilygente heade wyth thyne eares to the wordes that I spe ke vnto the / fasten them in thyne hert: and goo too the prysoners of the people, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner: Thus the Lorde god hath spo ken: whether ye heare, or heare not.
With that the sprete toke me vp. And I harde the noyse of a greate russhyn ge and remouinge of the moost blessed glory of the lorde out of hys place.
I herd also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, y russhed one against another, another. Yea and the ratlynge of the whele/ that were by them, whyche rushynge and noyse was very greate.

c Now when the sprete toke me up, and caried me awaye/ I went with an heuy and a sorowful mynd/ but the hād of the Lorde comforted me righe sone

And so in the beginning of the moneth Abib, I came to the prysoners, that dwelt by the water of Cobar, & remayned in that place, wher they were: And so continued I among thē seuē dayes, being very sorye.

And when the seuen dayes were expyred/ the Lorde sayd unto me: Thou sonne of mā, I haue made the a watchman unto the house of Israell: b* therfore take good hede to these wordes and geue them warning at my commaundement.

If I saye unto thee, concernynge the ungodly man, that (without doubt) he must dye, ād thou geuest hym not war D nynge, nor speakest unto hym, that he maye turne from his euell way/ and so lyue: Then shall the same ungodly man dye in his owne unrightuousnes but hys bloude wyll I require of thyne hande. Neuertheles if thou geue warninge unto the wycked/ and he yet forsake not his ungodlynes: thē shall he dye in hys owne wyckednes, but thou hast discharged thy soule.

Now if a rightuous man go from hys rightuousnes, and do the thinge that is euel: I wyll laye a stombling blocke before hym, and he shall dye, because thou hast not geuen hym warning: yea dye shall he in hys owne synne, so e that the vertu, which he did before shal not be thought upō: but his bloud wil I require of thyne hande.

Neuertheles, yf thou exhortest the rightuous, that he synne not, ād so the rightuous do not synne: then shall he lyue/ because he hath receaued thy warnynge, and thou haste discharged thy soule. And there came the hande of the Lord upon me/ and he sayde unto me:
f Stande up, and go into the felde/ that I maye talcke there with thee.

So when I had rysen up, and gon forthe into the felde: Beholde/ the glory of the lorde Gode there, lyke as I sawe it afore by the water of Cobar.

Then fell I downe upon my face, and the sprete came into me, which set me upon my fete, and sayde thus unto me: Go thy way, and sparre thy selfe in thine house. Beholde, (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be broughte for thee, to bynde thee with all, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I wyll make thy tonge cleue so to the rofe of thy mouth/ that thou shalt be dōme, and not be as a chyder wyth them: for it is an obstinate housholde.

But when I speake unto the, then open thy mouth, and saye: Thus saith the Lord God: who so heareth, let him heare: who so wyll not, let hym leaue: for it is an obstinate housholde.

a* By this watchman are fygured bisshoppes, prestes, and preachers, which must take the occasion of their speaking and exhorting at the mouth of god, and speake not in their owne, but in hys name.
b* Some reade: thou shalt herken unto the worde of my mouth, and shalt monysh them frō out of me.

¶ The besege of the cytie of Jerusalem is signifyed. The longe continuaunce of the captiuitie of Israell. An hunger is prophecyed to come in the captiuitie.

Thou sonne of man: a* take a tyle stone, and laye it before thee, & describe upon it the citie of Jerusalē: how it is beseged, ho what bulworkes ād great diches are graue on euery syde of it: descrybe also tentes/ and an host of mē rounde about it. a

Moreouer/ take an yron panne, ād set it betwyxt thee and the cytie/ in stede of an yron wall. Then set thy face towarde it, besege it, and laye ordinaūce agaynste it, to wynne it. This shall be a token unto the house of Israell. But thou shalt slepe upō the left syde/ and lay the synne of the house of Israell upon thee. Certayne dayes apointed thou shalt slepe upon that syde/ & beare theyr sinnes. Neuertheles, I will appoynt thee a time (to put of theyr sinnes) and the numbre of the days: Thre hundred ād. xc. dayes must thou beare the wickednes of the house of Israell.

When thou hast fulfylled these dayes lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy right syde.xl.dayes, and beare the synnes of the house of Juda.

J day for a yeare, a day (J saye) for a yeare, wyll J euer laye vpon thee. Therfor set now thy face against that beseged Jerusalem, and discouer thyne arme, that thou mayest prophecye agaynst it.

Beholde, J wyll laye chaynes vpō thee, that thou shalt not turne thee frō me, one syde to an other, tyll thou hast ended the dayes of thy sege.

C Wherfore/take vnto thee wheate, barley, beanes, growell sede, Millium and fytches: and put these together in a vessel, and make thee loaues of bred therof/according to the numbre of the dayes that thou must lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayest haue breade to eate, for thre hundred and.xc.dayes.

And the meate that thou eatest, shal haue a certen weyght appoynted, namelye twentye syckles euerye daye. Thys appoynted Meate, shalte thou eate daylye, from the beginning to the ende.

Thou shalt drincke also a certayne measure of water: Namelye/the sixte parte of an Hin shalt thou drinke dayly from the beginninge vnto the ende. Barley cakes shalt thou eat/yet shalt thou fyrst stryke them ouer with mans donge/that they maye se it. And with that sayde the Lorde: Euen thus shall the chyldren of Jsraell eate theyr defiled bread in the myddes of the gentiles, among whome J will scatter thē.

Then sayde J: Oh Lord God: Behold/my soule was yet neuer stayned: for, frō my youth vp vnto thys houre J did neuer eate of a deade carcase/or of that which was slayne of wylde beastes/nether came there euer any vnclene fleash in my mouth

D Wher vnto he answered me, ād sayde: well than, J wyl graunt thee to take cowes donge, for the donge of a mā and to stryke the bread ouer wyth all, before them.

And he sayde vnto me: Beholde ȳ sonne of man, J wyll mynishe all the prouision of bread in Jerusalem, so ȳ they shall weye theyr breade, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water/they shal haue a very lytle measur therof to drincke. And when they haue no more breade nor water, one shalbe destroyed with an other, and famyshe away for theyr wickednes.

a ✝ Thys is a prophecy done by an outwarde signe as in Jeremy.xiii.a. When the people are vnworthy of the worde of God, then are the Prophetes cōmaunded to vse such visible signes as here to paynte out Jerusalem and the besegyng therof in a tyle stone.

led my Sanctuary/ wyth al maner of abhominacions and w al thy shamful offences: For thys cause will I also de stroie thee. Myne eye shal not ouerse y, neyther wil I spare thee.
One third parte within the e. shall dye of the pestilence and of honger: A nother thirde parte shalbe slaine dow-ne round about the/ w the sweard: The other third part y remaineth/ wil I sca ter abrod toward al the wides/ & draw out the swerd after them. Thus I D will performe my indignacion and set my wrath against them, & ease my self.
So that when I haue fulfylled myne anger against them, they shal knowe y I am the lord, which with a feruēt gelousy haue spoken it. Morecuer I wil make thee wast and abhorred, before al the Heathen that dwel about thee and in the sight of al them, that go by the: so that when I punish thee in my wrath/in mine anger, and w the plage of my whote displeasure, thou shalt be a very abhominacion, shame, a gasing and wondring stock/ among the Heathen y lye about thee. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it, and it shal come to pas/ whē I shote among them the perlous dar tes of honger, which shalbe but death: Yea therfore shal I shote them, because I wyl destroy you. I wyl encrese hō ger & mynish al the prouision of bred a mong you.
Plages and misery wil I send you yea and wyld beastes also to destroye you. Pestilence and bloudshedīg shal cōe vpon you, & the swaerd wil I brīge ouer you. Euen I the Lord haue saide it.

The sheweth y the peple shalbe plaged for y synne of Idolatri. He prophecieth y repētaūce of the remnaūte of the people, & their delyueraūce.

The destruction of the froward is prophesied.

The. vi. Chapter.

And the word of the Lorde A came vnto me, sayīg: thou sonne of man, turne thy fa ce to the mountaines of Is rael/ that thou mayest pro Eze. xxxvi. a phecie vnto them, and saye: Heare the word of the lord god/ O ye mountaynes of Israel; Thus hath the lord god spoken to the mountaynes, hilles, val leys and dales.
Behold/ I wyl bring a swerd ouer you/ and destroye your hye places: I wyl cast downe your altars, and breke doune your temples. Your slayne men wyl I laye before youre goddes, and y deed carcases of the children of Israel wyl I caste before their ymages/youre boones wyll I destroye rounde aboute youre aulters/ and dwellynge places.
The cyties shalbe desolate, the hil B chapels layde waste: youre altars destroyed, and brokē: your gods cast dow ne, and taken awaye, youre Temples laid euen wyth the ground, your owne workes cleane roted out.
Youre slayne men shal lye among you, that ye maye lerne to know, how y Baru. iii. f.
I am the Lord. Those that among you haue escaped the swerd, wyl I lea ue among the Gentils, for I wyl scatter you among the nacios. And they y escape from you, shal thincke vpon me among the Heathen where they shalbe in captiuitie.
As for that whorysh and vnfayth-ful herte of theirs, wherewyth they tūne awaye from me, I wyll breake it; yea and put oute those eyes of theyrs/that commytte fornycation wyth their Idoles.
Then shall they be ashamed, and displeased with their selues, for y wyckednes and abhominaciōs, which they haue done: and shall lerne to knowe/how that it is not in vayne/ that I the lord spake/ to brynge such misery vpō
them.
The Lorde sayde moreouer vnto me: Smyte thyne handes together/ ād stampe wyth thy fete/ and saye:

Wo worth al the abhominacions and wickednesses of the House of Israell, for because of them/they shall peryshe with the swearde, with hunger, and wt pestilēce. Who so is farre of/shall dye of the pestilence: he that is nie at hand shall perysh with the swearde: and the other that are beseged, shal dye of hunger.

Thus wyll I satisfy my wrathfull displeasure vpon them: And so shal ye learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when your slayn men lye among your goddes, and about your aultars: vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountaynes, among all grene trees/among al thyck okes: euen in the places / where they dyd sacryfyce to all theyr Idoles I wil stretch mine hand out vpō thē, and wyl make the land waste/so that it shal lye desolate and voyde, from the wyldernesse of Deblathah forth, thorowout theyr habitacions: to learne them for to knowe, that I am the lorde.

The ende of all the lande of Israell shall sodenly come. The cause of the destruccion therof. The prophete is commaunded to shewe the summe of the euilles that are at hande.

The. vii. Chapter.

A The worde of the Lord came vn to me on this maner: Thee I cal/O thou son of man. Thus sayeth the lorde god vnto the lande of Israel:/The ende commeth/ye verely the ende commeth vppon all the foure corners of the Earth.

But now shal the ende come vpon thee: For I wyll sende my wrath vpon thee, and wil punysh thee: acordyng to thy wayes and reward thee after al thy abhominacions.

Myne eye shall not ouersé thee, nether wyl I spare the: but reward thee, acording to thy wais, & declare thy abhominacyons. Then shall ye know, that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde, one myserye and plage commeth vpon an other: the ende is here. The ende (I say) that wayteth for thee, is come already/the houre is come against B thee/that dwelleth in the lande

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedicion is hard by, and no glad tidinges vpon the mountaynes. Therfore, I wyll shortly poure out my sore dyspleasure ouer thee, ād fulfyl my wrath vpon thee. I wyll iudg thee after thy wayes, and recompense thee all thy abhominacions.

Myne ey shall not ouerse thee, nether wyll I spare thee: but reward thee after thy wayes, and shewe thy abhomynacions, to learne you for to know, how that I am the lorde that smyteth. Beholde, the daye is here, the daye is come, the houre is runne out, the rod floryssheth. wylfulnes wareth greate; malycious violence is growen vpand the vngodlye waxen to a staf. Yet shal there no complaint be made for them, nor for the trouble that shall comme of these thinges.

The tyme commeth/the day draweth nye: Who so byeth, let him not re- C iopse he that selleth/let him not be sory for why. Trouble shall comme in the middest of al these: so that the seller shal not come agayne to the byer / for nether of them both shal lyue. For the vision shall come so greatly ouer all, that it shall not be hyndered: No man also with his wickednes shall be able to saue his owne lyfe. The trompettes shall ye blowe/and make you all ready/but no man shall go to the battel, for I am wroth with all the whole multitude.

The swearde shalbe without, pestilence and hunger within, so that who so is in thee felde/shalbe slayne with the swearde: and he that is in the cytie, shall perysh with hunger and pestylence.

And such as escape & flee from amon D ge them, shalbe vpon the hylles, lyke as the doues in the feld: euery one shal be afrayed, because of his own wyckednes.

All handes shallbe let downe, and all knees shal be weake as the water: They shal gyrde them selues with sacloth feare shal fall vpon them.

Theyr faces shalbee confounded, and theyr heades balde, theyr syluer shall lye in the streates, and theyr gold shall be despised: ye theyr syluer

syluer and gold me le not deuoure thē, in the daye of the fearful wrath of the Lorde.

They shall not satisfye their hongry soules/nether fyl their em pty bellyes therwith. For it is be come their owne decaie thorow their wickednes: because they made therof not only co stly Jewels for their pompe and pryd, but also abominable imags ỹ Idoles.

For thys cause wyll I make them to be abhorred. Morouer, I wyll geue it into the handes of ỹ straū gers to be spoyled: and to the wycked, for to be robbed, and they shal destroye it.

My face wyl I turne from them/ my treasure shalbe defiled. for the theues shal go into it, and suspende it. I wyl G make cleane riddaunce, for the lande is whole defyled ŵ vnrighteous iud gment of innocent bloude, and the cy tie is ful of abhominacions. Wher fore, I wyl brīg the most cruel tyraun tes frō among ỹ Heathē, to take their houses in possessiō. I wyl make the pompe of the proude to ceas, and they shal take in their Sāctuary.

When this trouble commeth, thei shal seke peace, but they shall haue none.

One myschefe and sorow shal folowe another, and one rumoure shal come af ter another: Then shal they seke vysy ons in vayne at their Prophetes. The lawe shalbe gone from the prestes, ād wysdome from the elders. The kynge shal mourne, the Prynces shalbe clothed with heuynes/ and the handes of the people in the lande shal tremble for feare. I wyl do vnto them after their owne wayes, and accordynge to their owne iudgmentes wyll I iudge them: to lerne them for to knowe/ that I am the Lorde.

The Notes

a a The rodde flori∫sheth. This rodde signifieth the kyng of Babilon, which was in his flowers, and l(?) hys these prydes shald euen now come to destroye Jerusalem.

¶ An apperaunce of ỹ simelytud of god Ezechiel is brought vnto Jerusalē in the spyrete. The Lorde sheweth ỹ Prophete ỹ Idolatryes of the house of Israel, and chefly of the Prestes.

IT happened, that in ỹ sixt yeare the fyfth daye of the syxte moneth I set in my A house, and the Lordes of the councel of Juda ŵ me, and the hande of the Lord god fel euē there vpon me. And as I loked vp, I saw as it were a lycknes of fyre frō his loynes downe warde/ and from his loi nes vpwarde it shyned meruelous cle are. This similitude stretched out an hande, and toke me by the heayre lock es of my head, and the spryte lift me vp betwixte heauen and earth: and God brought me in a vysion to Jerusalem, B into the entry of the a a inner porte that lyeth toward the North: there stod an ymage, with whom he that hath al thin ges in his power, was very wroth.

And beholde, the glorye of ỹ God of Israel was in the same place: euē as I had sene it afore in the felde.

And he saide vnto me: Thou sonne of man/ O lift vp thine eyes, and loke towarde the north, and beholde: beside the port northward, there was an aul ter made vnto ỹ ymage of prouocaciō on ỹ very entrig i. And he said further more vnto me: Thou sonne of man/seist thou what thes do? Seist thou the greate abhominacyons ỹ the house C of Israel commit in thys place/ which ought not to be done in my sāctuary?

But turne the about, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions. And with that brought he me to the courte gate: and when I loked/ behold, there was a dore. And he sayde vnto me: Go thy waye in, and loke what wycked ab hominacyons they do there. So I wēt in/ and sawe: and beholde, there were al maner ymages of wormes ⁊ beasts al Idoles and abhomynacyons of the house of Israel paynted euery one rounde about the wall.

There stodde also before the ymmages. lxx. Lordes of the councell of the house of Israell: and in the myd-deste of them stode Jaazanyah the son ne of Saphan:

And euerye one of them had a censoure in hys hande/ and out of the in- D cense, there wente a smoke, as yt had bene a cloude.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, hast thou sene what the Senatours of the house of Israel do secretly euery one in his chãbre? For they saie: Tush the lord seyeth vs not, the lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he sayd vnto me: Turne ye yet agayne, & thou shalt se the greate abhominaciõs, that they do. And wyth that he brought me to the dore of the porte of the Lordes house, toward the north. And behold there sate women mournynge for [b] Thamus. Then saide he vnto me: hast thou sene thys, thou sonne of mã? Turne the about, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacyons. And so he brought me into the inwarde court of the lordes house, betwyxte the fore entrye and the aultar, there were fyue ãd twenty men, that turned their backes vpon the temple of the lord, & their faces toward the east, & these worshipped the sonne.

And he sayd vnto me: hast y seue this thou sonne of mã? Thynketh the house of Israel, that it is but a tryfle, to do these abhominacyons? Should they fyl the lande ful of wyckednes, ãd vndertake to prouoke me vnto ãger? Yea and purposly to cast vp their noses vpon me?

Therfore wyl I also do somthynge in my wrothful displeasure, so y myne eye shal not ouer se them, nether wyl I spare them. Yea and though they crie in myne eares wt a loud voyce, yet wyl I not heare them.

The notes.

a The hyll Sion was walled round about and that wall which compassed it was called the outwarde wall: About the temple was there another wall, that was called the inwarde wall: whych al though it were outwarde from the tẽple, yet was it inwarde from the wal whych compassed the hyl The space betwene the inwarde wall and the temple, was called the inner courte. Ther in were many portes, and in the north porte ther of was Ezechiel set: for that place was holy, and ther in dyd they vse to worshyp. So that with the fylthynes of this hateful ymage of Baal (whiche the Prophet here calleth the ymage of prouocacion because it prouoked the Lorde to vengeaunce) hadde they defyled it: so superstycion doth comonly defile euẽ the most holiest thinges, and such as appeare most godlyest.

b That is after S. Hierom, Adonides Amasius which was Venus fayrest loune, and which is fayned to haue rysen from death to lyfe, which fable the women of Iewrye dyd celebrate and holde solemnly both with myrth and teares. Some saie that it was an Image which was made to wepe by the fire. Before this Image did women also be wayle theyr separacion from their louers, & reioyced when they obtayned them agayne.

¶ The destruccyõ of Idolaters, & the conuersacyõ of the ryghtwes. They that shalbe saued are marcked. They that are vnmarked are slayne. A cõplaint of the Prophet for the destruction of the people.

¶ The .xi. Chapter.

He cryed also wyth aloude voyce in mine eares, sayig: A Come here ye rulers of the cytie, euery man wyth hys wepened hand to y slaughter. Then came there sixe men out of y strete of the vpper porte towarde the north, and euerye man a wepen in hys hande to the slaughter. Ther was one amongest them, that had on hym a lynnen rayment, & a wryters pyckehorne by hys syde.
These went in, and stode besyd the B brasen aulter: for the glory of the Lord was gone awaye from the Cherub, & was come downe to the threshold of y house, and he called the man that had the lynen rayment vpon hym, and the wryters pyck horne by hys syde, and y Lorde sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye thorow the cytye of Ierusalem, and set this marke. Thau vpon the forheades of thẽ that mourn and are sory for al the abhomynacyons, that bee done therin.
And to the other, he saide that I might C heare: Go ye after hym thorow the citie slay, ouerse none, spare none: kyll & destroie both olde men and yonge, maydens, chyldren and wyues.
But as for those, y haue this mark Thau vpon them: se that ye touch the not, and begynne at my Sanctuary.
Then they beganne at the elders, whiche were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto them: When ye haue defyled the temple, and filled the court wyth the slayne, then goo youre waye forth.
So they wente out, & slewe doune D thorow the cytye. Now when they had done the slaughter, and I yet escaped I fel doune vpon my face, and cryed, saying: O Lord, wylt thou thẽ destroy al the resydu of Israel, in thy sore dyspleasure, that thou hast poured vpon Ierusalem.

Then saide he vnto me: The wickednes of the house of Israell and Iuda, is very great: so that the land is full of blou de, and the cite is full of vnfaythfulnesse: For they say. Tush, the Lord regardeth not the earth, he seyth vs not. Therfore wyll I vppon them, myne eye shall not ouerse them, neyther wyll I spare them, but wyll recompense theyr wyckednesse vpon theyr heades. And beholde the mā that had the lynnen rayment vpon hym and the writers ynckhorne by hys syde: tolde all the matter how it happened ād sayde. Lorde/as thou hast commaunded me/so I haue done.

¶ Of the man that toke whote burning coles oute of the myddle of the wheles & of the cherubyns, in token of the burnyng of Ierusalem. A rehersall of the vision of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the cherubyns.

The .x. Chapter.

A And as I loked beholde/in the fyrmamente that was aboue the cherubyns there apeared the symilytude of a stole of Saphyr vpon them Then sayde he that sate therein/ to hym that had the lynen raymente vpon hym: crepe in betwene the wheles that are vn der the cherubyns, and take thyne hand full of hoate coles out from betwene the Cherubyns and caste them ouer the cyte And he crepte in that I myght se.

Now the Cherubins stode vpon the ryght syde of the house: when the manne went in and the cloude fylled the ynnermer courte. But the glorye of the Lorde remoued from the cherubyns, and came vpon the thresholde of the house, so that the temple was full of cloudes / and the courte was full of the shyne of the Lor-des glory. Yea and the sounde of the che rubyns wynges was heard into the fore courte/lyke as it had beene the voyce of the almyghtye God/when he speaketh.
Now/when he had bydden the man that was clothed in lynen, to go and take the hoate coales frō the myddest of the whe les, whych were vnder the cherubyns. he wente and stode besyde the wheles. Thē the one Cherub reached forth hys hande from vnder the Cherubins, vnto the fy-er that was betwene the cherubyns, and toke therof, and gaue it vntoo hym that had on the lynen rayment in hys hande: whych toke it and went out. And vnder B the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lyknes of a manshand: I sa-we also four wheles besyd the Cherubis so that by euery cherub ther stode a whe le. And the wheles were (to loke vppon) after the fashyō of the precyous stone of Tharsys. yet vnto the syght/were theye fashyoned and lyke as yf one whele had bene in an other.

When they went forthe/they wente all foure together/ not turnynge aboute in theyr goynge: but where the fyrst wen C te, thether went they after alsoo/so that they turned not about in theyr goynge.
Theyr whole bodyes, theyr backs/theyr handes and wynges, yea and the wheles also were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And I hearde hym call ye wheeles Galgell that is a rounde bou le. Euery one of them had foure faces: so that the one face was the face of a Che rub the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an Aegle. and they we re lyfted vp aboue. Thys is the beaste that I saw at the water of Cobar. Now when the cherubins went, the wheles wet with them, and when the Cherubyns sho ke theyr wynges to lyfte them selues vp warde/ the wheles remayned not behynd but were wyth them also. Shortly whē they stode, these stod also. And when thei were lyft vp, the wheles wer lyft vp also wyth them/for the sprete of lyfe was in the wheles.

Then the glorye of the Lorde was lyfte vp from the threshoulde of the temple/and remayned vpon the Cherubyns And the Cherubyns flackred with theyr D wynges and lyft them selues vp from the earthe, so that I sawe when they wet and the wheles wyth them. And they sto de at the East syde of the poorte that ys in the house of the Lorde. So the glory of the Lord was vpon them.

Thys is the Beast that I sawe vn der the god of Israel/by the water of co bar. And I perceaued that it was ye cherubyns. Euery one had foure faces and euery one four wynges/and vnder theyr wynges/as it were mens handes.

Now

Now the figure of theyr faces was, euẽ as I had sene them, by the water of Co-bar, and so was the countenaunce of thẽ: Euery one in hys goinge went streyght forwarde.

C Who they were that seduced the people of Isra el. Agaynst these he prophecieth, shewinge thẽ how they shalbe dysparpled abroade. The renewinge of the very chyrch of God, otherwise can we not wal ke in his commaundementes. He threateneth them that leane vnto theyr owne counsels.

The .xi. Chapter.

A Moreouer, the sprete of the Lord lyft me vp and brought me vnto the East port of the Lordes house. And beholde there were .xxv. men vnder the dore, amonge whome I sawe Jaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Phel tiah the sonne of Banaiah, ỹ rulers of the people. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou sonne of man: these men yma gyne mischefe, and a wycked counsell ta ke they in thys cytie, saying: tush, ther is no destructyon at hande, lette vs buylde houses: this Jerusalem is the cauldron and we be the flesh. Therfore shalt thou prophecy vnto them, ye prophecy shalte thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And with that fell the sprete of the Lorde vp on me, and sayd vnto me: Speake, thus sayeth the Lorde: On thys maner haue B ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) and I know the ymagynacions of youre hertes Many one haue ye murthered in thys ci tye, and fylled the stretes full of the slay ne. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: The slayne Men that ye haue layde on the ground in thys cytie, are the fleshe, & thys cytie is the cauldron: But I wyll Ee.xviii.a bryng you out of it: ye haue drawen out Mat.xxvi.e. the swearde, euen so wyll I also brynge a sweard ouer you, sayth the Lord god.
I wyll dryue you oute of thys cytie and delyuer you into youre enemies hande, and wyl condempne you. Ye shalbe slay ne in all the coastes of Israell / I wylbe auenged of you, to lerne you for to knowe that I am the Lord. Thys cytie shal not be youre cauldron, neyther shall ye be the flesh therin: but in the coastes of Israell wyll I punysshe you, that ye maye Leui.xviii.a knowe that I am the Lord: in whose cõ Deute.xii.b maundementes ye haue not walkedde, nor kept hys lawes: but haue done after the customes of the Hethen, that lie rounde about you.

Now when I preached, Pheltiah ỹ C sonne of Banaiah dyed. Then fell I downe vppon my face, and cryed wyth a lowde voyce: O Lord God, wylte thou then vtterlye destroye all the remnaunte in Israel? and so the worde of the Lord came to me in this maner: thou sonne of man: thy brethren, thy kynsfolcke, and the whole house of Juda, which dwel at Jerusalem, saye: they be gone farre frõ the Lorde, but the lande is geuen vs in possessyon. Therfore tell them, thus say eth the Lorde God: I wyll sende you far of among the Gentyles, and scatter you among the nacions, and I wyll hallow you but a lytle, in the landes where you shall come. Tell them also thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll gather you agai ne oute of the nacions, and brynge you from the countrees wheare you be scat tred and wyll gyue you the lande of Israel agayne: thyther shall ye com. And as for al impediments, and all your abo minacions: I wyll take them awaye.

And I wyll geue you one herte, and D I wyll plante a new sprete within youre bowels. That stonye herte wyll I take out of youre body, and geue you a * flesh ly herte that ye maye walcke in my com maundementes, and kepe myne ordynaunces, and do them that ye maye be my peo ple, and I your God. But loke whose hertes are dysposed to folowe theyr abho minacyons and wicked lyuynges: those mens dedes wyll I brynge vpon theyre owne heades, sayth the Lord God. After thys dyd the cherubins lyft vp theyr wi ges, and the wheles wente with them, & the glorye of the Lorde was vpon them.
So the glory of the Lorde went vp frõ the myddest of the city, and stode vpon ỹ mount of the cytye toward the Est. But the wynde toke me vp and in a vysyon, (which came by the sprete of God) it bro ught me agayne into caldea amonge the prisoners. Then the vision that I hadde sene vanished awaye from me. So I spa ke vnto the prysoners all the wordes of the Lorde whych he had shewed me.

The notes.

¶ The parable of ÿ vessels of the captyuytye. The exposycyon of the parable, by which the taking of kyng Zedekiah is signified. Another parable wher by ÿ distresse of honger and thyrst is signified.

¶ The.xii.Chapter.

The word of the lorde came unto me/saynge: Thou sonne of man, thou dwel-A lest in ÿ myddest of a frow ard houshold which haue eyes to se/ and yet se not: eares haue they to heare/ãd yet heare they not, for they are an obstinate houshold. Therfore(O thou sonne of man) make thy geare redy to flye/ã d go forth by faire daye light, that they maye se.
Yea, euen in their sight shalt thou go from thy place to another place: yf per adventure they wyl consider, that they be an unobedient housholde. Thy gear that thou hast made redy to flight with al, shalte thou beare out by fayre dare light, that they maye se e: and B thou thy selfe shalt go forth also at euẽ in theyr sight/as a mã doth whẽ he flit teth. Dygge thorow the wal, that they mair se, and beare thorowe it the same thing/ ÿ thou takest up in their sight.
As for thy self thou shalt go forth in ÿ darcke. Hide thy face that thou se not ÿ earth, for I haue made the a shewtokẽ unto the house of Israel.
Now as the Lord commaunded me so I dyd: the gere that I had made re dy, brought I out by dale. At euen I brake downe a hole thorow the wal w my hand & when it was darcke, I toke the gere upon my shoulders, and bare them out in their sight.
And in the morning, came ÿ word of the lord unto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, if Israel ÿ froward hou C sholde aske the/and saye: what doest ÿ there? Then tel them: Thus saieth the Lord god: This punishment toucheth the chefe rulers at Jerusalem, and all the house of Israell, that dwel amõge them: Tel them I am your shewtoken lyke as I haue done, so shal it happen unto you: Flyt shal ye also, and go into captiuite. The chefest that is amõg you shall lade his shoulders i ÿ darke and get him away. He shal breake downe the wal/to carye stuf there tho-row: He shall couer his face, that he se not the grounde/with his eyes. My lyne wyl I spread out upon him, and catch him in my net/ and carye him to Babilon, in the lande of the Caldees: which he shal not se, and yet shal he die there. As for al hys helpers/and al his hostes, that be about him/ I wyl sca-tre thẽ toward al the wyndes/ãd drawe out a swerd after them. So whẽ I haue scatred them among the Heathẽ, and strowed theym in the landes, they shal know, that I am the Lord. But I wyl leaue a lytle numbre of thẽ frõ the sweard hunger and pestilence: to tel al their abhominacions amonge ÿ D heathen, where they come/ÿ they maye know, how ÿ I am the lord.
Moreouer, the word of the Lord came un to me sayinge: Thou sonne of man: wyth a fearful trembling shalt ÿ eat thy bred, with carefulnes ãd sorow shalt thou drynke thy water. And unto the people of the landa, speake thou on this maner: Thus saieth the Lord god/to them that dwel in Jerusalem, and to the land of Israel: Ye, shal eate your bred w sorow, and drinke youre water with heuynesse. Ye the land with the fulnes therof shalbe laid wast for the wyckednes of them that dwell therin. And the cyties that now be wel occupyed/shalbe voyde, and the lande desolate that ye maye know/how ÿ I am the Lord.
Yet came the word of the Lord un- E to me /sayinge: Thou sonne of man what maner of by worde is that, which ye use in the land of Israel, say ing: Tush/seyng that the dayes are so slack in commynge, al the vysions ar of none effecte: Tel them therfore thus sayeth the lord god: I wyl make ÿ by-word to ceasse/so that it shal nomor be cõmonly used in Israel.
But say this unto them: The dai-es are at hand/that euery thig which hath ben prophecied/ shalbe fulfylled.
Ther shal no vysiõ be in vaine/nether any prophecy fayle among the childrẽ of Israel: For it is I ÿ lord, that spake it ãd whatsoeuer I ÿ lord speake it shal be performed, and not be slack in commynge.

Yea euen in youre dayes (O ye stoward housholde) wil I deuise somthig, and bringe it to passe, sayeth the lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde cam vnto me, saying: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israell saye in this maner: Tush as for the vision that he hath sene, it wylbe many a day or it come to passe: Is it farre of yet, y thynge that he prophecyeth. Therfore saye vnto them: Thus sayth the lorde God: All my wordes shall no more be slacke, Loke what I speake, that same shall come to passe, sayth the Lord.

¶ The worde of the lord agaynst false prophetes, which teache the people the councels of theyr own hertes.

A The worde of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man. Speke prophecye agaynste those prophetes, that preache in Israell: and saye thou vnto them that prophecy out of theyr owne herts: heare the worde of the lorde, thus sayethe the Lord God: Wo be vnto those folyshe prophetes, that folowe theyr owne sprete, and speke wher they se nothing. O Israel, thy prophets are lyke the foxes vpon the drye felde: For they stande not in the gappes nether make they an hedge for the house of Israell/that men myght abyde the parel in the day of the Lorde. Vayne thinges they see/ and tell lyes/to maynteyne theyr preachinges with all. The lorde (saye they) hath spoken it/whan in very deede the Lord hath not sent them. Vayne vysions haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecies/when ye saye: the Lorde hath spoken it where as I neuer sayde it.
B Therfor/thus sayth the Lord god:
Because youre wordes be vayne/ and ye loke out lyes: Beholde, I wyll vpon you, sayeth the Lorde. Myne handes shall come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thynges, & preache lyes: they shall not be in the councell of my people/nor writen in the boke of y house of Israell/nether shall they come in the lande of Israell: y ye maye knowe/ how y I am the Lorde God. And y for Iere. viii. b this cause: they haue deceaued my peple/and tolde them of peace/where no peace was. One setteth vp a wall, and they dawb it with louse clay. Therfor tell them which dawbe it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall. For there shall come a great shower of rayne, great stones shall fall vppon it, and a sore storme of wynde shal breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shall it not then be sayde vnto you? Where is now the morter, that ye dawbed it with all? Therfor thus saith the Lord god: I wyll breake out in my wrothful displeasure with a stormye wynde, so that in myne anger ther shall come a myghtye shower of rayne, and hayle stones in my wrath, to destroye with all.
As for the walle that ye haue dawbed withe vntempered morter, I wyll C breke it downe, make it euen with the grounde: so that the foundacion therof shall remoue, and it shall fal, yea & ye youre selues shall perysh in the middest therof: to lerne you for to knowe, that I am the Lord. Thus wyll I perfourme my wrath vpon this wall, and vppon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then wyll I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are the prophetes of Israell/which prophecye vnto the cytie of Jerusalem, and loke out visions of peace for them, wher as no peace is, sayth the Lord God. Wherfore (O thou sonne of man) set thy face against the daughters of thy people, which prophecy out of theyr owne hertes: and speake thou prophecy agaynst them, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto you, y sowe pyllowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the heades both of yonge and olde, to catch soules wall. For when ye ha- D ue gotten the soules of my people in your captiuitie/ye promyse the lyfe to dishonour me to my people, for an hadfull of barley, and for a pece of breade: when ye kyl the soules of them, that dye not, and promes lyfe to them/ that lyue not. Thus ye dyssemble with my people, that beleueth your lyes.
Wherfor thus saith the Lord god: Beholde, I wyll also vpon the pyllowes wherwithe ye catche the soules in fleing: then will I take from youre armes tnes/and let the soules go/that ye catch in flieng. Your bolsters also wil I teare in peces / and delyuer my people out of your hand: so that they shal cōe no more in your handes to be spoiled/and ye shal know that I am the Lord.

Seing that wt your lyes ye discō-fort the hert of the rightuous, whom I haue not discōforted. Againe: For so much as ye corage the hand of the wyc ked/so that he maye not turne frō his wicked waye/ and lyue: therfore shall ye se out nomore vanyte, nor prophe cy your owne gessin ges: for I will dely uer my peple out of your hand, that ye maie know, how that I am the Lord.

C The. xiiii. Chapter.

I Then resorted vnto me cer-tayne of the elders of Isra el/and sate downe by me.
Then came the word of ȳ lord vnto me, sayig: Thou sonne of mā, these men beare their Ido les in their hertes, and go purposly vp on the stombling blocke of their owne wickednes: hou dare they then aske coū cel at me? Therfore speake vnto them/and say, thus saieth the lord God: Eue ry man of the house of Israel that bea reth his Idols in hys hert, purposig to stomble in his owne wickednes, ād commeth to a Prophet/to enquere any thinge at me by him: vnto that mā will I the Lord my selfe geue answere, according to the multitude of his Idols: that the house of Israll maye be snared in their owne hertes/because they B be cleane gone fro me/for their Idols sakes.
Wherfore, tel the house of Israel: thus saieth ȳ lord god: Be conuerted/forsake your Idoles, and turne youre faces from al your abhominacions.
For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a stranger, that so gouerneth in Israel) which departeth fro me/and carieth Idols in his hert, purposing to go stil stombling in hys owne wyckednesse, and commeth to a Prophet, for to aske councel at me tho-row him: vnto that man wil I ȳ lorde C geue answere, by myne owne selfe. I wyl set my face against that man, and wyl make him to be an example for other, yea and a cōmen by worde: & wil rote him out of my people, that he may know how that I am the lord.
And if that prophet be dysceaued/ iii. Re. xxii. d Job. xii. when he telleth hym a word: then I the lord my selfe haue disceaued that Pro phet, and wyl stretch forth mine hand vpō him, to rote him out of my people of Israel: and they both shalbe punish ed for their wickednes. Accordinge to the synne of him that asketh, shall the Prophete be; ȳ the house of Israel be led no more fro me thorowe errour, ād be no more defiled in their wickednes: but that they maie be my people, and I their God, saieth the lord god. And the word of the lord came vnto me say ing: Thou sōne of man, when the lāde sinneth against me, and goeth forth in wickednes: I wil stretch out mine hād D vpon it/ and destroye al the prouision of their bred and sende death vpō thē/to destroye man and beast in the land.
And though Noe, Daniel and Job these thre men were amonge them, yet shal theye in their rightuousnes dely-uer but their owne soules, saieth ȳ lord God.
Yf I bringe noysome beastes into the lande, to waste it vp, and it be so desolate/that no man maie go therin for beastes: Yf these thre men also were in the lande / as trulye as I lyue (saieth the Lord god) they shal saue ne ther sonnes nor daughtes, but be only deleuered them selues: and as for the lande, it shalbe wast.
Or, yf I bring a sweard into the lande, and charge it to go thorow the land: so ȳ, I slaye downe mā ȳ beast i it, and yf these thre men were therin: As truly as I lyue (sayeth the lord God) they shal delyuer nether sonnes nor doughters, but onli be saued them selues. If I send a pestylence into the lande / and poure out my sore indignaciō vp on it in bloud / so that I rote out of yt booth man and beast, and yf Noe, Daniel and Iob were therin: as trulye as I leue (saieth the lorde god) they shall delyuer nether sonnes nor daugethes, but saue their owne soules in their ryghtuousnes. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lord God: Though I send my foure troublous plages vpō Ierusalē: the sweard honger, perolus beastes, ād pestilence / to destroie mā & beast out of it: yet shall there be a remnaunt saued therin, which shal bring forth their sōnes and daughters.

Behold, they shal come forth vnto you / and ye shal se their waie, and what they take in hand, and ye shalbe comforted, as touchyng al the plages that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem. They shal comfort you, when ye se their waie and worckes: and ye shal knowe that it is not wout a cause, that I haue done so against Ierusalem, as I dyd / saieth the lord God.

As the vnprofitable wod of ye vyne tre is cast into ye fyre, so sayeth he ye Ierusalem shalbe brent.

The word of the lord cam vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man: What cometh of ye vyne amōg al other trees & of the vyne stocke amonge all other tymber of the groaue? Do mē take wod of it, to make any worcke wal? Or maie there a nayle be made of it, to hang any thing vpon? Behold, it is cast in the fyre to be brent, the fire cōsumeth both the endes of it, ye middeste is brēt to asshes. Is it mete thē for any worcke? No.
B
Seing then, that it was mete for no worck / being whole: moch les may ther any thing be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed and brent yt.

And therfore thus saieth ye lord god: Lyk as I cast the vyne into ye fyre for to be brēt, as other trees of ye wod: Euen so wyl I do with them that dwell in Ierusalem, and set my face agaynst thē: they shal go out from the fyre, & yet ye fyre shal consume them.

Then shal ye know / that I am the Lord / when I set my face agaynst thē, and make the land waste: because they haue so sore offended, sayeth the Lorde God.

The prophet enteryng to speake of ye abhominacyons of Ierusalem: doth fyrst shew ye benefites of God toward it. Ierusalē is reproued of vnkyndnes, for her fornicacyō w Idoles. He iustyfyeth ye wyckednes of other people in cōparyson of the synnes of Ierusalē. The cause of ye abhominacyōs amongest ye Sodomites fell. Mercye is promysed to the repentaunte.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Agayne, the word of ye lorde spake vnto me, saig: Thou sonne of man, shew thy cytye of Ierusalē their abhominacyons, and saie: thus sayeth the Lord god vnto Ierusalem: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the land of Canaan / thy father was an Amoryte, thy mother a Cethyte. In ye daye of thy birth whē thou wast borne, the string of thy nauell was not cut of: thou waste not bathed in water to make the cleane. Thou wast nether rubbed with salt, nor swed dled in cloutes: No man regarded ye so much, as to do any of these thinges for the, or to shew ye such fauour, but thou wast vtterly cast out vpon the feld, yea despysed waste thou in the daye of thy byrth.

Thē cam I by ye / and sawe ye trode doune i thine owne bloud & sayd vnto ye: thou shalt be pourged frō thine owne bloud, from thyne owne bloud (I saye) shalt thou be clensed.

So I planted ye / as the blossom of the felde: thou art growen vp, and wares greate: thou hast gotten a meruelous pleasaūt beauty, thy brestes are come vp / thy hearre ys goodlye growen / where as thou wast naked and bare afore.

Now when I went by thee, and loked vpon thee: Behold, thy tyme was B come, yea euen the tyme to wow the.

Then

Then spred I my clothes ouer thee to co uer thy dishonestye:yea, I made an othe unto thee,and maryed my self with thee (sayeth the lorde God,and so thou beca-mest myne owne. Then wasshed I thee with water,and pourged thy bloude frõ thee.I annoynted thee wyth oyle, I ga-ue thee the chaunge of raymentes, I ma de thy shues of Tarus lether: I gyrthed thee aboute wyth white sylcke. I clothed thee wyth kerchues. I decked thee wyth costly apparell, I put rynges vppon thy fyngers,a chayne about thy necke,spanges vpon thy forehead,eare ringes vpon thyne eares , and set a beutyfull crowne vpon thyne heade. Thus wast thou decke wyth syluer and golde,and thy raymẽt was of fyne whyte sylke,of nedle worck and of dyuerse coloures.

Thou dyddest eate nothing but sym nels hony and oyle:maruelous goodlye wast thou and beutyfull, yea euen a bery Quene wast thou. In so much that thy-- bewty was spoken of amonge the C hethen,for thou wast excellent in my be wtye,which I put vpon thee sayeth the Lorde God: But thou hast put confid-ce in thyne owne bewtye,and played the harlot when thou haddest gotten thee a name. Thou hast commytted whordom wyth al that wente by thee, and hast ful fylled theyr desyres:yea thou hast taken thy garmentes of dyuers coloures and decked thyne aultars ther wyth,wheare vpon thou myght fulfyl thyne whordom of suche a fashyon, as neuer was donne ner shalbe. The goodly ornamentes and Jewels whych I gaue thee of myne ow ne gold and syluer,hast thou taken,and made the mens ymages therof, and com mitted whordome with all.

Thy garmentes of diuers coloures hast thou taken,and dect them therwith myne oyle and icense hast thou set before them. My meate whych I gaue them as symnels oyle and hony: (to feade the, withall that haste thou set before theme for a swete sauour. And this came alsoo to passe,sayth the Lord God: Thou hast taken thyne owne sonnes ãd daughters whome thou haddest begotten vnto me, all these hast thou offred vp vnto them, to be theyr meate. Is thys but a small whordom of thyne,thinckest thou?)that thou slayest my chyldren,and geuest thẽ ouer to be brẽt vnto theẽ. And yet i al thy abhominacions and whordomme, thou hast not remẽbred the days of thy youth how naked and bare thou wast at that tyme,and troaden downe in thyne owne bloude. After all these thy wickednesses (wo wo vnto thee sayth the Lorde,thou hast buylded thy stewes and brodel hou ses in euery place ye at the head of euery streat hast thou buylded thee an aulter.

Thou haste made thy bewtye to be abhorred/thou haste layed out thy leg ges to euery one that cameby,and multi plyed thyne whordome. Thou hast com mytted fornicacyon wt the Egiptianes thy neyghboures,which had moche fle-h D and thus hast thou vsed thyne whoredo me,to anger me.

Beholde, I wyll stretche oute myne hande ouer thee,and wyll mynysshe thy stoare of fode,and delyuer thee ouer into the wylles of the phylystines thyne e nemyes whiche are ashamed of thy abho minable waye . Thou haste played the whor also with the Assiryas .which mig ht not satisfye the. Yea thou hast played the harlot,and not had ynough. Thus hast thou styll committed thy fornicacy on from the Lande of Canaan vnto the Chaldees,and yet thy lust not sanctifyed How shuld I cyrcumcise thyne hert say eth the Lord God seyng thou doeste all these things,ỹ precious whore,bulding the stewes at the heade of euery stret,ãd thy brodell houses in al places? Thou haste not bene as an other whoore, that E maketh boast of her wynyng but as a wi fe that breaketh wedlocke,and taketh o ther in steade of her husband. Gyftes ar geuen to all other whores,but thou ge uest rewardes vnto all thy louers, and offrest them gyftes,to come vnto thee ou te of all places, andto committe fornica cyon wyth thee. It is come to passe with thee in thy whordomes contrarye to the vse of other women, yea ther hath no su che fornication bene cõmytted after thee seyng that thou profferdst gyftes vnto o ther,and no rewarde is geuen thee, thys is a contrary thynge.

Therfore heare the worde of the lor de,O thou harlot;thus sayeth the lorde God. Forso muche as thou haste spent thy moneye, ād dyscouered thy shame, tho row thy whordome wyth all thy louers, and wyth all the Idoles of thy abomina cyons in the bloud of thy chyldren whō thou hast geuen them: Beholde therfore I wyl gather together all thy louers, vn to whome ẏ hast made thy self cōmon: ye and all them whome thou fauourest and euery one that thou hatest, and wyll dis-couer thy shame before them, that they al maye se thy fylthynes.

E Moreouer I wyl iudge thee as a bre ker of wedlocke and a murtherer, and recompense the thyne own bloud in wrath and gelousy. I wyll geue thee ouer into theyre power that shall breake downe thy stewes, and destroye thy brodell hou ses: they shal stryp the out of thy clothes all thy fayre and bewtyfull Jewels shall they take from thee, and so let the sit naked and bare: yea they shall brynge thee commen people vpon thee whyche shall stone thee ād slaye the downe wyth theyr swerdes, they shall burn vp theyr houses and punysh the in the syght of many wo men. Thus wyll I make thy whordome to ceasse, so that thou shalt geue out no mo rewardes.

Should I make my wrath to be stillē take my gelousy from thee, be content ād F no more to be dyspleased seyng thou re-membrest not the dayes of thy youth but thou hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thynges: behold therfo[illegible] I wyll bri ge thyne owne wayes vpon thyne heade sayeth the Lorde God. How be it I neuer dyd vnto thee according to thy wye kednes and all thy abhomynacyons. Be holde, all they that vse cōmon prouerbes shal vse thys prouerbe also agaynst thee: Suche a mother suche a daughter.

Thou arte euen thy mothers owne doughter that hath cast of her husband ⁊ her chyldren. Yea thou art the syster of thy systers, whych forsoke theyr husban des and theyr chyldren. Youre mother is a Cethyte and your father an Ammo rite. Thyne eldest syster is Samaria, she and her doughters that dwell vpon thy left hande.

But thy youngest syster that dwelleth on thy ryght hande, is Sodoma ād her doughters. Yet haste thou not walc ked after theyr wayes, nor don after their abhominacions: but in all thy wayes ẏ hast bene more corrupt then they. As tru ly as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God: So-doma thy syster wyth her doughters, ha th not done so euel, as thou and thy dou ghters. Beholde, the synnes of thy sister Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnes of meate, aboūdaūce ⁊ ydlenes: these thyn-ges had she and her doughters. Besydes that, they reached not theyr hande to the poore and nedye, but weare proude and dyd abhominable thynges before me, ther fore I toke them awaye, whē I had sene it. Nether hath Samarye done halfe of thy synnes, yea thou hast exceaded the in wyckednes: In so much that in comparison of all the abominacyons whych thou hast don, thou hast made thy systers good women.

G As for theyr captiuitye, Namely the captiuitie of Sodoma and her doughters, the captiuyte of Samaria and her doughters, I wyll brynge them agayne so wyll I also brynge agayne thy capty uitie among them, that thou mayest take thyne owne confusyon vppon thee, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, ād to comforte them. Thus thy systers, na mely Sodoma and her doughters, Sa maria and her doughters wyth thy selfe and thy daughters, shalbe brough agai ne to youre old estate. when thou wast in thy pryde ⁊ befor thy wickednes cam to lyght thou wouldest not here speke of thy syster Sodoma vntyl the tyme that the Sirians with al theyr townes, ⁊ the philystines, wyth all that lye rounde about theym brought thee to shame and confusyon that thou myghtest bere thine owne fylthynes and abhominacions say eth the Lorde.

For thus sayth the lord God: I shoul de by ryghte deale wyth thee as thowe haste done, thou haste dispysed the othe and broken the couenaunt. Neuertheles I wyl remembre the couenant that I ha ue made w thee in thy youth, in somuch that it shalbe an euerlastyng couenaunt so that thou also remembre thy wayes ⁊ be ashamed of the: then shalt thou recea-ue of me thy elder ⁊ yonger systers whō I wyll make thy doughters and that besyde the couenaunt. And so I wyll renew fane my couenaunte wyth thee, that thou mayest knowe that I am the lord: that þ mayest thyncke vpon it, be al hamed/ ād excuse thyne owne confusyon no more: when I haue forgeuen thee/ al þ thou hast done, sayth the Lorde God.

The learned expound this whole sentence of the tribulacion that Israel suffred in egipt & after amongest the Chaldees. After the deth of Joseph, when Pharao knew them not. Exody i. were they most abiect and vyle, and no man had compassyon on them. Then was the daye o their byrth. And in lyke case after the destruccion of Jerusalem and in their imprisonment at Babylon. In both these tymes were they motherles and helplesse, concernyng the rowne strength: but were yet cared for of god and receaued by hys mercy. The prophet borowerh his fashion of speaking of the maner of mothers, after the byrth of their children: which fyrst dresse ther nauels and wash thē with salt, & thē swedle thē, &c. Such helpe had Israel none in their aduersyties in Egipt and Babilon but laye ouerwhelmed in their fylthynes and myseryes, and were regarded as bastardes and vnmorherly intreated of al men. There was no man but onli god that toke thought for thē or helpe them: & that dyd he only of his mere mercy, without any of theyr deseruynges.

c c By this bewtye are sygnified the gyftes and graces that the Lord had geuen to his people, which neuertheles was an Idolatoȝ and worshiped other goddes, or worshypped god after another maner ād waye then he had commaunded them: which thing is signified by theyr fornicacyon, as in Esa. viii. b. & after in the. xxiii. a

a The wordes of the lorde came vnto me, sayenge. Thou sōne of man put forth a darke speaking and a parable, vnto the house of Israell, and saye. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: There came a great a a Aegle wyth greate wīges, ye wyth myghtie long wynges, and full of fethers of dyuerse coloures, vpon the mount of Libanus /and toke a braūche from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of hys twygge, and caryed it into the lande of Canaan, and set it in a Cytye of marchauntes.

He toke also the braunch of the lande/ and planted it in a frutful ground, he brought it vnto grete waters / and set it as a wylye tree therby. Then did it growe, and was a greate vyne stocke, but lowe by the grounde: that is there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes, and spred out braunches.

But there was another Aegle, a greate B one, which had greate wynges and many fethers: and beholde, the rotes of thys vyne had an hunger after him, & spred out his braunches toward hym, to water his frutes: Neuertheles it was planted vpon a good ground besyde greate waters: so that (by reason) it shoulde haue broughte out braunches and frut, and haue bene a goodly vyne. Speake thou therfore, thus C saith þ lord god: Shal this vyne prosper? shal not his rotes be plucked out his frut be broken of, his grene braūches wythere and fade awaye? yea wout ether stronge arme or many peple, shal it be pluked vp by the rotes. Beholde, it was planted: shal it prospere therfore? Shal it not be dryed vp and withered, yea euē in the shuting of his blossomes, as soone as the east winde bloweth?

Moreouer, the word of the lord cam vnto me saiyng: Speake to that frow ard houshold: know ye not, what these D thynges do sygnifye? Tel thē: Behold, the Kyng of Babilon came to Jerusalem and toke the kynge and hys Princes, and ledd them to Babilon.

He toke of the kynges sede/ & made a couenaūt with hym, and toke an oth of hym: The Princes of the lande toke he wyth him also, that the land myght be holden in subieccyon/ and not to rebelle, but kepe the couenaunt, and fulfyl it. But he fel from him, and sent his Embassadoures into Egipte that he might haue horses and muche people. Shulde that prospere? Shuld he be kept safe, that doth such thyng es? Or should he escape, that breaketh his couenaunt? As truly as I lyue sayeth E the Lord god: he shal dye at Babylon, in the place where the king dwelleth, þ made hym kynge: whose othe he hathe despysed, and whose couenaūt he hath broken. Nether shal Pharao wyth hys greate host and multitud of peple maynteyne him in the warre: When they cast vp dyches, and set vp bulwarkes to destroy muche people, for seinge he hath dispysed the othe and broken the couenaunt (where as he yet gaue hys hande ther vpon) and done al those thinges, he shal not escape.

F Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue, I wyl bring myne othe that he hath despysed, & my couenaunte that he hath broken, vpon hys owne hand. I wyll cast my net aboute hym, and catche hym in my yarne. To Babylon wyl I cary hym, there wyl I punish hym, because of the greate offence that he made me. As for those that fle from him out of the host, they shalbe slayne with the swearde. The resydue shal be scatered toward all the wyndes: And ye shall knowe, that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

G Thus sayeth the lord God: I will also take* a braunche from an hie Cedre tree, and wyl set it and take the vppermost twygge, that yet is but tender and plant it vpon an hye hyl: Namely vpon the hye hil of Syon wyl I plant it: that it maye bringe forth twygges and geue frute, and be a greate Cedre tree: So that all maner of foules maye a byde in yt, and make theyr nestes vnder the shadowe of hys braunches.

And all the trees of the felde shall know that I the Lorde haue brought downe the hye tree, and set the low tree vp: that I haue dryed vp the grene tre, and made the drye tree to florysshe. Euen I the lord that spake it, haue also brought it to pas.

a *By this braunche vnderstand our ladye, and by the hye Cedre tree the trybe of Iuda, of whyche she came: by the vppermoste twygg is vnderstãd christ & by the hyl of Syon is figured the church.

¶ He sheweth that euery man shal beare his owne faute. To hym that amendeth, is saluacyon promesed. Death is prophecyed to the ryghtwese which turneth backe from the right waye

The.xviii. Chapter.

The worde of the lord came vnto me, on thys maner: what meane yee by thys cõmon prouerbe, that yee vse in the lande of Israell A saying: The fathers haue eatẽ soure grapes, and the chyldrens tethe are set on edge. As truly as I lyue sayeth the lorde God, ye shall vse thys byworde nomore in Israel.

Beholde, all soules are myne. Like B as the father is myne, so is the sonne myne also. The soule that synneth, shal dye. If a man be godly, and do the thynge that is equal and right, he eateth not vpõ the hilles, he lyfteth not hys eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyhbours wife he medleth with no menstruous womã he greueth no body: he geueth his detter his pledge agayne: he taketh none other mans good by violence: he parteth his meate with the hongrie: he clotheth the naked: he lendeth nothing vpon vsury: he taketh nothing ouer: he withdraweth his hande from doinge wrõg he handleth faithfully betwixt man & man: he walketh in my commaundementes and kepeth my lawes, and performeth them faithfully: This is a C rightuous man, he shal surely lyue saieth the lorde god.

If he now get a sonne, that is a murtherer, a shedar of bloude: yf he do one of these thinges (though he do not al) he eateth vp the hilles: he defileth his neighboures wife, he greueth the pore and nedy: he robbeth and spoyleth: he geueth not the detter his pledge agayne, he lyfteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, and medleth with abhominable thynges: he lendeth vpon vsurye, and taketh more ouer: Shal thys man lyue? He shal not lyue.
Seynge he hath done al these abhominacions, he shal dye & his bloude shal be vpon him. E Iere.xxxi. c.

Now yf thys manne get a sonne also, that seyeth all hys fathers sinnes, whyche he hath done: and feareth, neyther doth suche lyke: Namelye, he eteth not vpõ the mountaynes: he lyfteth not hys hys eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not hys neighbours wife: he ve xeth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he nether spoyleth, nor robbeth eny man, he dealeth hys meate wyth the hungrye: he clotheth the naked: he oppresseth not the poore: he receaueth no vsury, nor any thynge ouer: he kepeth my lawes/ and walcketh in my cōmaundementes: Thys man shal not dye in hys fathers synne/ but shall lyue wythout fayle. As for hys father: because he oppressed and spoyled hys brother, and dyd wyckedly amonge hys people, lo, he is deed in hys awne synne. And yet saye ye, Wherfore C then shoulde not thys sonne beare hys fathers synne? Therfor, be cause the sonne hath done equitie and ryght, & hath kept al my cōmaundementes, and done them, therfore shall he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth, shall dye. The sonne shal not beare the fathers offence nether shal the father beare the sonnes offence.

The ryghteousnes of ÿ ryghtuous shal be vpon hym, and the wyckednes of the wycked shalbe vpon hym selfe also. But yf the vngodly wyl turne awaye from al hys synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thynge that is equall and ryght, doutles he shal lyue, and not dye. As for all hys synnes that he dyd before, they a shal not be thought vpon: but in hys ryghtu ousnes that he hath done, he shal lyue.
For, haue I eny pleasure in the death of a synner, sayth the Lord God: but rather that he conuerte, and lyue? Agayne, Yf the ryghtuous turne away frō hys rygh teousnes, and do iniquitee, accordyng to all the abhominacyons, that the wycked man dothe, shall he lyue? Al the ryghtuousnes that he hath done, shal not be tho ught vpon, but in the faulte that he hath offended with al and in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye.
F And yet say ye. Tush the waye of the Lorde is not in dyfferēt. Heare therfore ye house of Israel/ Is not my way rygh te? Or, are not youre wayes rather wyc kede? When a ryhtuous man turneth a waye from hys ryghtuousnesse, and med leth wyth vngodlynes: He muste dye therin. Yea, for the vnryghtuousnesse that he hath done, must he dye. Agayne when the wycked man turneth awaye frō hys wickednesse that he hath done & doth the thynge whiche is equall and ryghte, he shal saue hys soule alyue. For in so muche as he remembreth hym selfe and turneth hym from all the vngodlynesse that he hathe vsed, he shall lyue, and not dye.
And yet saythe the house of Israell: G Tush, the way of the Lord is not equal Are my wayes vnright, o ye house of Is rael? Are not youre wayes rather vne-quall? As for me, I wyll iudge euery mā accordyng to hys wayes, O ye house of of Israell saythe the Lorde God. Ther fore be conuerted, and turne you cleane from all youre wyckednesse, so shall there no synne do to you harme. Cast away from you, all youre vngodlynesse / that ye haue done, make you new hertes, and a newe sprete. Wherfore wyll ye dye, O ye house of Israell? seynge I haue noo pleasure in the death of hym that dyeth, sayth the Lord God? Turne you then ād ye shall lyue.

The notes

a Shall not be thought vpon. The sophysters haue a proper solucion for thys texte and suche lyke, which testifye that God so forgeueth that he wyll not after cal agayn hys forgeuenes and punishe.
True it is (say they) God forgeueth the synne, but not the punyshement dewe vnto the synne. Neuer theles punishementes (as they prate) muste we a byde in Purgatorye for euery synne, when it is for geuen. If thys be not to mocke wyth God and hys holy worde, I wote not what is mockage. If God canand do (as they affyrme) geue me punyshement due vnto my synne, so that he nether geue me to mu che net to lytle payne therfore, and yet not one thi- C ke on my synne, surelye he hath a wonderfull remē braunce. And that he wyll not thyncke on it the tex te doth here openly affyrme. By thys sophistry might the kynge geue a man hys pardon for theft and after hange hym vp. For he myght saye. Syr I for gaue youre theft but not youre hangynge whyche is due vnto youre theft. Such pardon wolde they be lothe to haue that fyrst ymagyned it. If the kynge whiche is but a man, be more faythfull then to deale so with hys prisoners whome he forgeueth: How shoud god then whych is our heauenly father, and whych is euen goodnes it selfe, haue suche a subtel, fayned and vnperfect forgeuenes, that shoulde after punyshe. But hereof wyll I nowe speake no more, least ye should happely smell, that thys solucion were ymagyned to pycke mens purses, through mas se pence, Dirige grotes, Trentales, Yeare myndes, moneth myndes, &c. because that although God cā and maye forgeue synne, yet must suche thynges ob tayn the forgeuenes of the punyshement due therun to: Or that the prestes benefyces were not sufficiente for them to lyue on, without suche pyllage, or yet that the poore people could by any other meane be mylched from that thynge wherwyth they, ther wyfes, theyr housholdes and chyldren should lyue.

The xix. Chapter.

The captiuyte of Jehoahas & of Jehoacin, is sig nifyed by the lyons whelpes, and by the lyon. He setteth out the prosperytye of the cytye of Jerusalē that is paste and the myserye therof that is present

A BUt mourne thou for the prynces of Israel, and saye: Wherfore layed thy mother that lyonesse among the lyons and norysshed her yong ones amonge the lyons whelpes: One of her whelpes she brought up, and it be came a lyon: it lerned to spoyle, and to de voure folke. The heathen herde of hym/and toke hym in theyr nettes, ād brought hym in chaynes unto the lande of Egyp-te.
Now when the damme sawe, that all her hope and comfourth was awaye, she toke an other of her whelpes, and made a lyon of hym: which wente amonge the lyons/and became a fyerce lyon: learned to spoyle and to devour folke: he destroy ed theyr palaces, and made theyr cities waste. In so much that the whole lande, and every thyng therin wer utter y deso late thorow the veyce voyce of hys roa-B ryng.
Thē came the heathen together on eve ry syde out of al countrees agaynst hym/layed theyr nettes for hym, and toke hym in their pytte. So they bounde hi wyth chaynes & brought hi to the kyng of ba bylon: which put hi in preson, y hys voy ce shoulde no more be hearde uppon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy Mother she is lyke a vyne in thy bloude, plā ted by the waters syde: her frutes and braunches are growen oute of many wa ters: her stalckes were so strong, that mē myght have made staues therof for offi cers, she grue so hye in her stalckes.
So when men sawe that she exceaded the height and multytude of her braunches, she was roted out in displeasure & cast downe to the grounde. The East wynde dryed up her frute, her strounge C stalckes were broken of / wythered and brent in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wyldernesse/ in a drye and thursty grounde.
And ther is a fyer gone out of her stal kes which hath brent up her braunches and her frute: so that she hathe no moo stronge stalckes, to be staues for offy-cers. Thys is a pyteous and miserable thinge.

¶ The Lord denieth that he will answere the whē they pray, for y offense of unkindnes which he here obiecteth. He promiseth y his people shal returne from captyuite. By the wood that should be brent is signified the burning of Jerusalem.

¶ The. xx. Chapter.

IN the. xvii. yeare the. x. daye of the. v. moneth, it happened/that certaine of A the elders of Israel came unto me, for to aske councel at the Lorde, and sate them downe by me. Then came the word of the Lorde unto me on thys maner: Thou sonne of man: speake unto the elders of Israel, and saye unto them: Thus sayeth the Lord god: Are ye come hy ther to aske any thinge at me? As truly as I lyve (sayeth the lorde) I wil geue you no answer.
Wylt thou not reproue them (thou son ne of mā) wylt thou not reproue them?
Shewe theym the abhomynacyons of their forefathers, and tel thē: Thus sayeth the lord god: In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyfte up myne hād upon the sede of the house of Jacob / and shewed my selfe unto them in the lande of Egypte: Yea when I lyfte up myne hande over theym, and sayde: I am the Lorde youre God, even in the daye that I lyfte up myne hande over them/ to breake them oute of the land of Egipt, into a lande that I had prouided for them/ which flow- B eth with mylcke and honye/ and is a pleasaunte lande amonge all other.
Then sayde I unto them: Cast awaye everye Manne the abhomynacyones that he hath before hym, and defyle not youre selues wyth the Ido les of Egypte, for I am the lord your god.
But they rebelled agaynst me/and would not folow me: to cast awaie euery

uery man the abhomynacyons of hys eyes, and to forsake the Idoles of Egypte. Then I made me to poure my indygnacyon ouer them, and to satisfye my wrath vpon them: yee euen in the myddest of the lande of Egypte. But I wolde not do it, for my names sake: that it shuld not be vnhalowed before the Hethen amonge whom they dwelt, and amonge whom I shewed my self vnto them that I would brynge them out of the lande of Egypte. Now when I had caryed them out of the lande of Egypte, and brought them in to the wyldernesse: I gaue them my commaundementes, and shewed them my lawes: whych who so kepeth shall lyue in them. I gaue them also my holy dayes (to be a token betwyxte me and them) and ther by to know that I am the Lord, whych haloweth them. And yet the house of Israell rebelled agaynst me in the wyldernes. They woulde not walcke in my commaundements, they haue caste awaye my lawes (whych who so kepeth) should lyue in them, and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatlye

C vnhalowed.

Then I made me to poure out my Indignacyon vppon them and to consume them in the wyldernesse, Yet I wolde not do it for my names sake: leaste it shoulde be dishonoured before the heathen from the whych I had caryed them away / but I swore vnto them in the wildernes, that I wolde not bryng them in to the lande, whych I gaue them: A land that floweth wyth mylcke and hony, and is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabboths, for their hert was gone after theyr Idoles. Neuertheles myne eye spared them, so that I wolde not vtterlye slaye them and consume them in the wyldernes. Moreouer I sayde vnto theyr sonnes in the wyldernesse walcke not in the statutes of your forefathers, kepe not theyr ordynaunces and defyle not your selfes with theyr ydoles for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my laws and do them, halowe my sabbothes: for they are a token betwyxte me and you, that ye maye knowe how that I am the Lord.

Notwythstandynge, theyr sonnes rebelled agaynste me also: they walcked not in my statutes they kept not my lawes to fulfyl them, whych he that doth shal lyue in them, nether halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Then I made me agayne to poure out my indygnacion ouer them and to satisfie my wrathe vppon them in the wyldernesse. Neuerthelesse I wythdrewe my hande for my names sake, lest it shuld be vnhalowed amonge the Heathen before whom I had brought them forth. I lyft vp myne hande ouer them also in the wyldernesse that I wolde scatre them amonge the Heathen, and strowe them amonge the nacyons: because they had not kepte my lawes but cast asyde my commaundementes, vnhalowed my sabbothes and lyft vp theyr eyes to theyr fathers Idoles. Wherfore I gaue them also commaundementes not good, and lawes thorow the whych they shulde not lyue, and I vnhalowed them in theyr awne gyftes (when I appoynted for my selfe all theyr fyrstborne to make them desolate that they myght knowe, how that I am the Lorde

the house of Israel thus sayeth the Lorde God: Besyde all thys, youre forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatly offended agaynst me. For after I had brought them into the lande, that I promysed to geue them, when they sawe euerye hye hyll and all the thycke trees: they made there, theyre Offrynges, and prouoked me wyth theyre oblacyons, makyng swete sauoures there and poured out theyr drynckoffrynges. Then I asked them: what haue ye to do wyth all that ye go thyther? And therfore is it called the hye place vnto thys daye.
Wherfore, speake vnto the house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God Yee are euē as vnclene as youre forefathers and commytte whordome also wyth theyr abhomynacyons. In all youre ydoles, where vnto ye brynge youre oblacyons, and to whose honoure ye burne your chyldren: ye defile youreselues, euen vnto this daye, how darre ye then come / and aske any question at me? O ye housholde of Israel.

As truly as I lyue (saieth the Lorde God) ye get no answere of me: and as for the thynge that ye go about, it shal not come to passe, where as ye saye: we wyl be as the Heathē, and do as other people in the lande, wod and stone wil we worshippe.

As truly as I lyue saieth the Lord God, I my selfe wyll rule you wyth a myghtye hand, wt a stretched out arme F and with indignaciō poured out ouer you: and wyl brynge you out of the na cyons and landes, wherin ye are scate red: ād gather you together wt a mygh tye hande/ with a stretched out arme & with indignacyō poured out vpō you: and wyl brynge you into the wylder nes of the people, & there I wyl reason with you face to face. Like as I pu nyshed your forefathers i ŷ wildernes so wyll I punishe you also/ sayeth the Lorde god. I wyl brynge you vnder my iurysdiccyon, and vnder the bonde of the couenaunt. The forsakers also and the transgressours wyll I take from among you, and bring them out of the lande of your habitacion: as for the lande of Israel, they shal not come in it/ that they maye knowe, how that I am the Lord.

So know thē (saith the Lord god) ye house of Israel, cast awaye, and de stroye euerye manne his Idoles: then shal ye here me, and nomore blaspheme my hole name with your offringes and Idoles. and there wyl I requyre your heauy of feringes/ and the fyrst lynages of your oblacyons, wyth al youre holye thyn ges.

I wyl accepte youre swet sauoure when I bryng you from the nacyons/ and gather you to gether out of the lā des, wherin ye be scatered: that I maie be halowed in you before the Heathen
G and that ye maye know, that I am the Lorde, whiche hath brought you into the lande of Israell: yea into the same land, ŷ I swore to geue vnto your fore fathers. There shal ye call to remem braunce your owne wates and al your ymaginacions, wherin ye haue bene defyled: and ye shalbe dysplcased wyth youre owne selues, for al your wicked nes, that ye haue done. And ye shall know that I am the Lord: when I in trete you after my name, not after your wicked wayes, nor accordinge to youre corrupt workes: O ye house of Israell sayeth the lord.

Moreouer, the word of the lord cā vnto me, saiynge, thou sonne of man/ set thy face toward the south, and speke to the south wynd and saye to the wod toward the south: Heare the word of ŷ Lord, thus saith the lord god: Behold I wyl kindle a fyre in thee that shal cō sume the a✠ greane trees with the ŷ drye No mā shalbe able to quēch his flame but al that loketh b✠ from the southe to the north, shalbe brent therein: and all flesh shal se that I the Lord haue kyn led it, so that no man maye quenche it. Then sayde I: O Lord/ they wyl saie of me. Tush, they are but fables/ that he telleth.

a✠ By the grene trees vnderstand the sayncies & holy ones, and by the dry, synners: so that the godly shal by death escape captiuite, and ŷ wicked be sēd vnto euerlasting payne.
b✠ From the southe to the north, that is, from Ie rusalem to babylon.

¶ He threateneth the swerd, that is to saie, destruc cyon to the cytie of Ierusalem. He sheweth the fall of kyng Sedechiah. He is commaunded to prophecy the destruccyon of the children of Ammon. After the slaughter of other, at the last the Lord threatneth death vnto Nabuchodonosor him selfe.

A The worde of the Lord cam vnto me/ saiynge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face towarde Ierusalem, speke agaynst the Sanctuary, & prophecy agaynst the land of Israel: saye to the lande of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde/ I wyl vp on thee/ and wyl drawe my sweard out of the sheth, and rote out of the both ŷ ryghtuous and the wycked/ therfore shal my swearde go out of his sheathe agaynst al fleshe from the north to the south that al flesh maye know, how ŷ I the Lorde haue drawen my swearde out of the sheath, and it shal not be put in agayne.

B Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) that thy loynes crack with al, ye mourne bytterly for them: And yf thei saye, wher fore mournest thou, Then tell them, for the tydynges that cōmeth, at the whych all hertes shall melt, all handes shallbe letten downe/all stomackes shal faynte, and all knees shall waxe feble. Beholde, it cōmeth and shallbe fulfylled, sayeth the Lorde God.
Agayne the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophecye, and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: speake, the swearde is sharpened and well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it maye be bryght. * O, the destroyenge C staf of my sonne, shall brynge downe all wodde. He hath put hys swearde to the dryghtynge, that good holde maye be taken of it. Thys swearde is sharpened and bryght, that it maye be geuē in to the hande of the man slayer. Cri (O thou sonne of man) and howle, for thys swea-rde shall smyte my people, and all the rulers in Israel/whych wyth my people shall be slayne downe to the grounde tho row thys swearde: Smyte thou vpon thy thyghe, for wherfore shuld not the plage and staf of iudgmēt come? Pro phecye thou sonne of man, and smyte thi D ne handes together: make the swearde two edged, yea make it three edged, that manslayers swearde, that swearde of the grate slaughter, whych shal smyte them, euen in theyr preuye chambres: to make them abasshed and faynte at the hertes, and in all gates to make sō of them fall.
O how bryght and sherpe is it, how wel dyght and mete for the slaughter. Gette thee to some place alone, eyther vpon ŷ the ryght hande, or on the lefte, whether soeuer thy face turneth. I wyl smyte my hādes together also ād satisfy my wroth full indignacyon. Euen I the Lorde ha ue sayd eit.
The worde of the Lord came yet vn to me agayne sayenge: Thou sonne of manne, make thee twoo streates, that the swearde of the KYNGE of Babylone maye come. Bothe these streates shall goo oute of one Lande. Hee shall sette hym vp a Place, at the heade of the streate shall hee chose hym oute a corner.
Make the a streate, that the swerde may come toward Rabah of the Ammonytes E and to the strong Cytie of Jerusalem. for the Kynge of Babylon shall stande in the turnynge of the way, at the heade of these two stretes: to aske councell at the sothsayers, castinge the lottes wythe hys arowes, to aske counsell at the Idoles/and to loke in the lyuer. But the so-thsayinge shall poynte to the ryghte sy de vpon Jerusalem, that he maye set mē of warre, to smyte it with a greate noyse to crye oute Alarum/ to set batell Ram mes agaynste the gates, to caste vp dyches, and to make thee bulworckes.
Neuertheles/as for the sothsaying/they shall holde it but for vanytye/ euen as though a iest were told them: yea and they them selues remembre theyr wicked nes, so that by ryght they muste be taken yea punysh them wyl I, and destroy thē and that shall not be fulfylled vntyll hee come, to whome the iudgemente belongeth, and to whoome I haue geuen it And thou (O sonne of manne) prophecy, and speake.

Thus sayeth the Lorde GOD to the Chyldern of Ammon and to theyr blas phemye, speake thou: The swearde, the swerd, is drawe forth alredy to ŷ slaugh G ter and scoured that it glystreth because thou haste looked thee oute vanytyes,

The.xxii. Chapter.

A Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me/ and sayd: Thou Sonne of man/ wylte thou not reproue thys bloudthyrsty cytie: Shew them theyr abhominacyons, and tel the: Thus sayth the Lorde God, O thou cy-tie/ that sheddest bloude in the myddeste of thee, that thy tyme maye come also: ad makest thee Idoles to defyle thee wyth all. Thou haste made thy selfe gyltye, in the bloude that thou hast shed: and defy-led thee in the Idoles whiche thou haste made. Thou hast caused thy days to drawe nye, & made the tyme of thy yeares B to come. Therfore wyl I make thee to be confounded among the heathen, and too be despysed in al the lades whether they be nye or farre from the/ they shall laugh thee to scorne, thou that haste gotten thee so foule a name/ and art full of myschef.
Behold/ the rulers of Israel haue brought euery man hys power, to shed bloude in thee. In the haue they despysed father ad Mother/ in thee haue they oppressed the straunger/ in thee haue they vexed the wi-Deu.v.c dowe and the fatherles. Thou hast despi sed my sanctuary ad vnhallowed my Sab both. Murtherers ar ther in thee/ that she de bloude/ and eate vp on the hylles, and in thee they vse vnhappynesse.
In thee haue they dyscouered their fathe rers shame, in the haue they vexed wome in theyr syknesse. Euery man hath C dealte shamfully wyth hys neyghbours wyfe, and abhomynably defyled hys da ughter in lawe. In thee hath euery man forced hys awne syster, euen hys fathers daughter: yea gyftes haue bene receaued in thee, to shede bloud. Thou hast taken vsury and encrease, thou hast oppressed thy neighbours by extorcion, and forgot ten me, sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde/I haue smytten* my handes vpon thy couetousnesse, that thou hast vsed, and vpon the bloude whych hath bene shed i thee. Is thy herte able to endure it, or may thy handes defende them selues in the tyme that I shall brynge vpon the: Euen I the Lorde that speake it, wyll brynge it also to passe. I wyll scatre thee among the Heathe, and strow the about in the Landes, and wyll cause thy fyl-thynesse to ceasse out of thee: yea, and I wyll haue the in possessyon in the syght of the Heathen, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the Lorde.
And the worde of the Lorde came vn to me, saiynge: Thou sonne of man, the D house of Israel is turned to drosse. All they that should be brasse, tynne, yron, & leade, are in the fyre becom drosse. Ther fore thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so moche as ye all are turned in to drosse, beholde: I wyll brynge you together vn to Ierusalem, lyke as syluer, brasse, yro, tynne and leade are put together in the fournace, and the fyre blowe there vnder to melt them: Euen so wil I gather you put you in together, and melt you in my wrath and indygnacyon. I wyll brynge you together, and kyndle the fyre of my cruell dyspleasure vnder you, that ye ma ye be melted therin.
Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre so shal ye also be melted therin: that ye maye knowe, how that I the Lorde haue poured my wrath vpon you.
And the worde of the Lord came vnto me saiynge: Thou sonne of man, tell her

her: Thou art an vncleane lãd, which is not rayned vpon in the daye of the cruel wrath: the Prophetes that are in ÿ, are sworne together to deuoure sou-les, lyke as a roarynge Lyon, that lyeth by his praye. They receaue rychesse and good, and make manye widdowes in thee. Thy prestes breake my law, & defile my Sanctuary. They put no differēce betwene ÿ holy & vn holi nether discerne betwen the clean & vncleane: they turne their eyes fro my sabbothes, & I am vnhalowed amõg them. Thy rulers in thee are like rauy shyng wolues, to shede bloude, and to destroy soules, for ther owne couetous lucre.

As for thy Prophtes, they dawbe wt vntempred claye/they se vanityes, & prophecy lyes vnto them/saynge: the Lorde god sayeth so/where as ÿ Lord hath not spoken. The people in ÿ land vseth wicked extorcyon and robbery.
They vexe the poore and nedy and op presse the straunger agaynst ryght.
And I sought in the lande for a man/that wolde make vp the hedge/and set hym selfe in the gappe before me in the landes behalfe, that I shoulde not vtterly destroy it: but I could find none.
Therfore wyl I poure oute my cruell dyspleasure vpon them, and burne thẽ in ÿ fyre of my wrath: their owne way es wil I recompense vpon their hedes saieth the lord god.

The destructyon of Jerusalẽ is prophesied: The aduoutry of both the whores is founde out. Their destruction.

¶ The. xxiii. Chapter.

A The word of the Lord came vnto me/saynge: Thou sõne of mã, there were two wemẽ, that had one mother These (whẽ they were yõge beganne to playe the harlottes in Egipt. There were their breastes brosed and the pappes of their maydenheade destroyed. The eldest of them was cal led* a Oholah and her yongeste sister b * Oholibah. These two were mine, & bare sonnes and daughters. Their na mes were, Samaria, and that was Oholah: and Jerusalẽ, & that was O-holibah. As for Oholah she beganne to go a whoring, when I had takẽ her to me. She was set on fyre vpon her louers the Assirians, whiche had to do wt her, euen the prynces & lordes, that B were deckte in costly araye: faire yong men, lusty ryders of horses.

Thus thorow her whordome, she cleued vnto al the yonge men of Assy-rya: Yea she was madde vpon them, and defyled her selfe with al their Ido les. Nepher ceassed she from the fornycacyon, that she vsed with the Egipcy-ans: for in her youth they lay wyth her they brosed the breastes of her maydẽhead/and poured their whordom vpõ her. Wherfore, I delyuered her into ÿ handes of her louers/euen the Assiry-ans, whom she so loued. These discoue red her shame, toke her sõnes & daugh ters, and slew her with the sweard: In euel name gat she of al people, ãd they punyshed her.

Her syster Oholibah sawe this, & destroyed her self wt inordynate loue more then she/and exceaded her syster i whor dome: she loued the Assirians (whiche also laye with her) namely, the prynces & greate lordes, that were clothed wt all maner of gorgeous apparrel, all lusty horsmen and fayre yong personnes.
Then I sawe, that they both were defi C led alyke.

But she increased styl in whordõe For when she sawe men painted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Chaldees set forth with fresh coloures, wyth fai re gyrdles aboute them, and goodlye bonettes vpon their heades, lokynge al lyke Princes (after the maner of the Babylonyans and Caldees in their owne lande, where they be borne) ymmediatly, as soone as she sawe them, she brent in loue vpõ thẽ/and sent mes saungers for them into the lande of ÿ Caldees.

Nowe whẽ ÿ Babylonyans came to her, they laye wyth her/ and defyled her with their whordome, and so was she polluted wyth them.

And when her lust was abated frō the, her whordome and shame was discoue red and sene: then my herte forsoke her lyke as my herte was gone from her syster also. Neuertheles she vsed her whordome euer the lenger the more/ & remembred ŷ dayes of her youth/wher in she had played the harlot in the lād of Egypt: she brent in lust vpon them, whose flesh was like the flesh of Asses, and their sead lyke the sede of horses.

Thus thou haste renued the fylthy nesse of thy youth/when thy louers bru sed thy pappes, and marred thy breast es in Egypt.

Therfore (O Oholibah (thus sayeth the Lorde god) I wyll rayse vp my lo uers (with whom thou hast satisfied thi lust) agaynste the, and gather them to gether rounde about the: namely, the Babilonians, and al the caldees: Pe cod/ Schoa and Coa, with al the Assy rians; al yonge and fayre louers: pryn ces and lordes, knyghtes and gentyl men, which be al good horsemē: These shal come vpon the with horses, char rettes, and a greate multitude of peple which shalbe harnessed aboute the on euery syde/ with brest plates, sheldes & F helmettes. I wyll punishe thee before them, yea they them selues shal punish thee, accordyng to their owne iudgmēt I wyl put my gelosy vpō thee/ so that they shal deale cruelly with thee. They shal cut of thy nose and thyne eares, & the remnaūt shal fal thorow the swerd They shal cary awaye thy sonnes and daughters, & the resydue shalbe brent in the fyre. They shal stryp the oute of thy clothes/ād cary thy costly Iewels awaye with them.

Thus wyl I make an end of thy fylthynes and whordome/which ŷ hast brought out of the lande of Egypt: so that thou shalte turne thyne eyes no more after them/ and caste thy mynde nomore vpon Egypt.

For thus sayth the Lord: beholde/ I wy delyuer thee into the hādes of thē whō thou hatest: yea euen in the handes of them/ with whome thou hast fulfylled thy lust, which shal deale cruelly with the. Al thy laboure shal they take with them: that leaue the naked and bare, & thus the shame of thy filthy whordom shal come to lyght. All these thynges shall happen vnto thee, because of thy whordome, wich thou hast vsed amōg the Gentyls, with whose Idoles thou hast defyled thy selfe. Thou haste walcked in the waye of thy syster/ther fore wyll I geue thee her cuppe in thy
hande.

Thus sayeth the lorde God: Thou shalt drincke of thy systers cuppe, hou depe and far soeuer it be to the bottom Thou shalt be laughed to scorne & had as greatly i derisiō, as is possible: thou shalt be ful of dronkēes & sorow, for ŷ cuppe of thy sister Samaria is a cup of destruccion and wastynge: the same shalt thou drincke, and suppe it out e uen to ŷ dragges, yea ŷ shalt eate vp ŷ brokē peces of it, & so teare thyne owne G brests: For euen I haue spoken it, say eth the lorde god.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde god: For so much as thou hast forgot ten me/ and cast me a syd, so beare now thyne owne fylthynes and whordome.
The Lorde sayde moreouer vnto me: Thou sonne of man wylt thou not re proue Oholah and Oholibah: Shew them their abominacyons: namely, ŷ they haue broken their wedlock, & stay ned their handes with bloud: yea euen w their Idoles haue they commytted aduoutry, and offred them their owne children (to be deuoured) whome they had borne vnto me.

Yea and this haue they done vnto me also they haue defyled my Sanctu ary in that same daye and haue vnha lowed my sabboth. For when they had slayne their children for their Ido les, they came the same daye into my Sanctuary to defyle it.

Lo, thys haue they done in my house Besyde al this/ thou sent thy messaun gers for men oute of farre countrees/and when they came hast bathed, trim med and set forthe thy selfe of the best fashion: Thou settest vpon a goodly bed, and a table spred before the: where vpon thou hast set myne incense and myne oyle.

Then was there greate cheare w handes

vpon theyr handes, & set gloryous crow= nes vpon theyr heades: then thoughte I no doubte, these men wyll vse theyr harlo try also wyth yonder olde whore. And they wente into her: as vnto a common harlot: Euen so wente they also to Oho= lah and Oholibah those fylthye women.
O ye all that loue vertue and ryght= wousnes / iudg them, punysh them, as ad uouterers and Murtherers ought to be iudged and punyshed. For they are brea= kers of wedlocke / & the bloude is in their handes. Wherfore thus sayeth the Lord God: brynge a great multitude of people vpon them, and make them be scattered and spoyled: These shall stone them, and goare them wyth theyr swerdes. They shall slaye theyre sonnes and doughters, and burne vp theyr houses wyth fyre.
Thus wyll I dest toye all suche fyl= thynes oute of the lande; that all women may lerne, not todo after your vnclēnes.
And so they shall laye youre fylthynesse vpon your owne selues, and ye shalbe pu nyshed for the synnes, that ye haue com= mytted with youre Idoles: and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

¶ He proueth the fyryng of Jerusalem by a parable of a sethynge potte. The parable of Ezechyels wife beynge deade, whych he after expoundeth.

The .xxiiii. Chapter.

A IN the .ix. yeare, in the .x. mo= neth, the .x. daye of the Mo= neth, came the woorde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: O thou sonne of man, wryte vp the name of thys day, yea euen ẏ hour of thys presente daye: when the kynge of Babylon set him self agaynst Jerusalem Shewe that obstinate houshold a para= ble, and speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Set thee a potte, set it on and poure water into it: put all the peces together in it, al the good peces: the loynē and the shoulder, and fyll it wyth the best bones. Take one of the beste sheape, and an heap of bones withall let it boyle well and let the bones sethe well therin.
B Wyth that sayde the Lorde God on thys maner: Wo be vnto the bloudy cytye of the potte, wherupon the rustynes han geth, and ys not yet scoured away. Take oute the peaces that are in it, one after an other: there neade not lottes to be caste therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. Upon a playne drye stone hath she poured it, & not vpon the ground, that it myght be co uered wyth dust. And therfore haue I let ten her poure her bloude, vpon a playne drye stonye rocke, because it shoulde not be hyd, ād that I myght bryng my wrath full indygnacyon and vengeaunce vpon her.
Wherfor / thus sayth the Lord god:
O, wo be vnto that bloudthyrstye cytye / C for whom I wyll prepare a heape of wod beare thou the bones to gether / kyndle ẏ the fyre, sethe the flesshe, let al be well sod den, that the bones maye be sucte oute.
Moreouer / set the pot emptye vppon the coales, that it may be warme, and the me tell hote: that the fylth and rustynes may be consumed. But it wyll not go of, there is so muche of it / ẏ rustynes must be brēt D oute. Thy fylthynes is abhominable, for I would haue clensed thee / but thou wol dest not be clensed. Thou canst not be pur ged from thyne vnclennesse, tyll I haue poured my wrathfull indignacion vpon ẏ Euen I the Lorde haue so deuised: Yea, it is come therto alreadye, that I wyll do it. I wyll not go backe, I wyll not spare, I wyll not bee intreated but accordynge to thy wayes and Imaginacyons, thou shalt be punyshed, sayth the Lorde God.
And the worde of the Lorde cam vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, be E holde I wyll take awaye* the pleasu re of thyne eyes with a plage: yet shalt thou neyther mourne, nor weape / nor water thi chekes therto; ꝯ thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone / but vse no deadly lamentacyon. Holde on thy bo net / and put on thi shues vpon thi fete couer not thy face / and eate no mourn ers bred. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the mornynge, and at euē mi wyfe dyed, then vpon the next mor ow, I dyd as I was commaunded.
And the people sayde vnto me: wylt thou not tell vs / what that signifieth, which thou doeste I answered them, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge. Tel the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde god: beholde I wyll F suspende my sanctuary, euen the glory of your power,the pleasure of your eyes,and the thinge that ye loue: youre sonnes and daughters whom ye haue left/shal fal thorow the swerde.

Like as I haue done/so shal ye do also Ye shal not hid your faces,ye shal eate no morners bred:your bonnettes shal ye haue vpon your heades, and shues vpon your fete.Ye shall nether morne ner wepe,but in youre sinnes ye shalbe sorouful,and one repent with another Thus Ezeciel is your shewtoken.For loke as he hath done,so,when this commeth) ye shal do also:that ye may lerne to know that I am the Lord God.
But beholde,O thou sonne of manne G In the daye when I toke from them their power,their ioye and honoure)y luste of their eyes,the burthen of their bodyes:namely/their sonnes and daughters: Then shal there one escape ād come vnto thee,for to shew thee. In that daye shal thy mouth be opened/ to them wh che is escapped that thou mayest speake, and be no more domme: Yea and thou shalt be their shew token,that they maye know,how that I am the Lord.

¶ The word of y Lord vpon the sonnes of Ammō which reioysed at the fal of Jerusalē. Against the Moab & Seir. Against Idumea. Against y Philystines

A The worde of the lord came vnto me,saying: Thou sonne of man/let thy face agaynst the Amonites,prophecye vpon them,and say vnto the Amonites: heare the word of the Lord god. Thus saieth the Lord god: For so much as thou speakest ouer my Sanctuary. A ha/I trow it be nowe suspended:and ouer the lande of Israel,I trow it be now desolate:yea ād ouer the house of Juda/ I trow they be now led awaye presoners: Beholde, I wyl delyuer the to the people of the east,that they maye haue in possession these shal set their castels and houses i the. They shal eate thy frute,and drincke vp thy milcke. As for *Rabath,I will make of it a stal for camels,and of Ammon a shepfolde:and ye shal know,that I am the lord.

For thus sayeth the Lord god: In B so muche as thou haste clapped wyth thine handes,and stamped with y fete, yee reioysed in thyne herte ouer y land of Israel with despyte:beholde,I wil stretch out myne hande ouer thee also,& delyuer thee,to be spoyled of y Heathē, and rote thee out from among the people,and cause thee to be destroyed oute of al landes:yea I wyl make thee to be layde waste,that thou mayest know,y I am the Lord.

Thus sayeth the lord god: For so much as Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house of Juda,it is but like as al other Gentiles be; Therfore beholde I wyl make the cityes of Moab weapenlesse,and taken awaie their strēgth their cytyes and chefe coastes of their land,which are the pleasures of the coūtre: As namely. Bethiesimoth, Baalmeon and Cariathaim: these wyll I open vnto them of the easte,y they mate fall vpon the Ammonites:& wyll geue it them in possession: so that the Ammonites shal nomore be hadin remembraunce among the Heathen.
Eue thus wyl I punish Moab also,y C they maye know,how y I am y lord.

Morouer,thus sayeth the Lorde god:Because that Edom hath aueged and eased hym selfe vpon the house of Juda,therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: I wyl reach out mine hand vpon Edō and take awaye man and beast out of it.From Cheman vnto Dedan wyl I make it desolat.they shalbe slayn w y swerd. Thorow my peple of Israel will I auenge me again vpon Edom:they shal hādle hym,accordig to my wrath & indignacion,so that they shal know my vengeaunce,sayeth the lord god.

D Thus sayeth the Lord god:For as much as the Philistines haue done this namely taken vengaunce w dispitful stomackes,and of an olde euel wil sett them selues to destroie: Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde god:Beholde,I wyl stretche out myne hand ouer the Philistines,and destroye the destroier,and cause al the remnaunt of the sea coaste to perysh. A greate vengeauce wyll I take vpon them,and punish them cruellye that they maye knowe, how that I am the lord,which haue auenged me of them.

¶ He prophecieth that Tyrus shalbe overthrowen because it reioysed at y^e destruction of Jerusalem. The wondring and astonishment of the marchauntes, for the desolation of Tyrus.

The xxvi. Chapter.

It happened/ y^t in the .xi yeare the fyrst daye of the Moneth, the word of the Lord cam vn 3 to me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, because that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalem: A ha/ nowe I trow the portes of the people be broke/ and she turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my bely ful. Yea therfore sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde O Tyre I wyll vpon thee, I wyl brynge a greate multytude of people against thee, lyke as when the sea aryseth with his waues: These shal breake the wal les of Tyre / and caste downe her tow res: I wil scrape the grounde from her and make her a bare stone: yea as the dryenge place where the fyshers hang vp their nettes by the seasyde. Euen I haue spoken it, sayeth the lord God.
B The gētels shal spoyle her: her daugh ters vpon the felde shall perish w^t the swearde, that they maye know howe y^t I am the lord.

For thus sayeth the Lord god: Be hold, I wyl brynge hither Nabuchodo nosor (which is the kyng of Babylō/ & a kyng of kynges from the north) vp on Tyre, with horses, charetes, horsmē and wyth a grete multitude of people The daughters that are in the lande/shal be slaye with the sweard: but aga ynst thee, he shal make bulwarkes and graue vp dyches aboue thee, and lyfte vp hys shylde agaynst thee.

Hys slynges and batteirammes shal be prepare for thy walles, ād wyth his weapens breake downe thy towres.
The dust of his horses shal couer thee they shalbe so many: thy walles shall shake at the noyse of the horsemen, cha rettes and wheles: when he commeth to thy portes, as men do in to an open cytie. With the hoffes of hys horsse C fete, shal he treade doun al thy stretes.
He shall slaye thy people with the sweard/ and breake downe the pyllers of thy strength. They shal wast awaie thy ryches, and spoyle thy marchaun-dyse. Thy walles shal they breake downe, and destroye thy houses of plea sure. Thy stones, thy tymbre and foū dacyons shal they cast in the water.
Thus wyl I bryng the melody of thy songes/ and y^e voyce of thy mynstrelsy to an ende/ so that they shall nomore be herd. I wil make a bare stone of the/ yea a dryyng place for nettes/ & shalt neuer be buylded agayne. For euen I the Lord haue spoken it/ saith the Lord God: thus hath the lord god spoken concerning Tyre. The Isles shall be moued at the noyse of thy fal/and at the crye of the slayne/ that shal be murthered in thee: Al kinges of the sea shal come downe from their seates regal: they shal laye awaye their robes and put of their costly clothing. Yea with tremblīg shal they be clothed, thei shal syt vpon the grounde: they shalbe afraied at thy soden fal, and be abashed at thee.

They shal mourne for thee, and say vnto thee: O thou noble cite, that hast bene so greately occupied of olde, thou D that hast bene the strongest vpon y^e sea w^t thine inhabitoures, of whome al mē stode in feare: How art thou now so vt terly destroyed? Now at the tyme of thy fal the inhabitours of the Isles/ ye and the Isles them selues, shal stand in feare at thine ende. For thus sayeth y^e Lord god: whē I make thee a desolate citie (as other cities be that no mā dwel in) & when I brynge the depe vpon y^e that greate waters maie couer thee, thē

¶ The Prophet is moued to bewaile the desolacyō of Tyrus. He setteth out the prayse of Tirus for the hauntyng of marchaundise therin.

The .xxvii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lord came unto me, sayinge. O thou A sonn of man, make a lamen table co playnte upon Tyre, and saye upon Tyre, which is a porte of the see, that occupyeth wyth moch people, and many Iles: thus spea keth the Lorde God. O Tyre, thou hast sayd: what/ I am a noble cytye. thy bor ders are in the myddest of the see. and thy buylders haue made the maruelous goodly. All thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of the mount Sanyr.
From Lybanus haue they taken Cedre trees, to make the mastes: and the Okes of Basan to make the rowers.

Thy bordes haue they made of yuer ry/ and of costly wod out of the Ile of Cethym. Thy sayle was of whyte small nedle worcke out of the lande of Egypt, B to hange upon thy mast: and thy hangy nges of yelow sylcke purple. out of the Iles of *Elysah. They of Sydon and Arnad were thi mariners, and the wisest in Tyre were thy shypmasters. The eldest and wysest at Gebal were they, that mended and stopped thi shyppes.
All shyppes of the see wyth their shipm en occupyed their marchaundyes in the.
The Perses, Lydians and Lybians were in thyne hoost/ and helped the to fyght: these hanged up theyr shyldes and helm ettes wyth the, these set forth thy bewty.
They of Arnad were wyth thyne hoost rounde about thy walles, and were thy watchmen upon thy towres, these hãged up theyr shyldes round aboute thy wa les/ and made thee maruelous goodly.
Tharsys occupyed wyth the i all maner of wares, in sylver/ yron, tynne and lead, C and made thy market greater. Iauan, Tubal and Mesech were thy marchaun tes, which brought the men, and ornam entes of metal for thy occupyenge. They of the house of Thogarma brought un to the at the tyme of thy marte, horse hors men & mules. They of Dedan were thy marchauntes: and many other Iles that occupyed wyth the, brought the we thers, elephant bones and Pacockes for a present. The Syryans occupyed with the because of thy dyuerse worckes, and increased thy marchaundyes, wyth Sm aragdes, wyth scarlet, wyth nedle worke with white lynen cloth/ with silcke & with Christal.

Iuda and the lande of Israel occu pied with the, and broughte unto thy markettes, wheate, balme, hony oyle & triacle. Damascus used also marchaũdi es w the, in the best wine and whyt wol because thy occupyenge was so greate and thy wares so many. Dan/ Iauan, and Meusall haue brought unto thy markettes, yron redy made w *Casia and Calamus according to thy occupy enge. Dedan occupied with the, in fayre tapestry worcke and quishyns.
Arabiah & al the princes of Ceder haue occupied wyth the, in shepe, wethers & goates.
B The marchauntes of Seba and Rema haue occupied also with the. in all costly spices/ in al precyous stones & golde whych they broughte unto thy marc kettes.
Haran, Chene and Eden, the marchaũ tes of Saba, Assiria and Chelmad we re al doers wyth thee, In costly raymẽt of yelow sylcke and nedle worcke (very precyous, and therfore packt and boun de together wyth roopes) Yee and in ce dre wood, at the time of thy markettes.
The shyppes of tharsis were the chefe of thy occupieng.

Thus thou art ful and in gret wor shyppe/ euen in the myddest of the sea.
Thy mariners were euer bringing un to thee out of mani waters. But the east wynde shal ouerbeare the into the mid dest of the se so that thy wares/ thy mar chaundyes, thy rychers thy maryners thy shypmasters, thy helpers, thy occu C pyers (that brought the thynges neces sarye) the men of warre that are in thee, ye and all thy commons shall peryshe in te myddeste of the sea, in the daye of thy fall. Thy suburbes shall shake at ŷ loude crye of thy shypmen.
All whyrry men, and all maryners upõ the see, shall leape out of their boates, & set them selues upon the lande. They shall lyfe up theyr voyce because of the, and make a lamentable crye. They shall cast dust upon theyr heades, and lye do wne in the asshes. They shall shaue the selues and put sacke cloth upon them for thy sake.

They shal mourne for thee wyth hertfull sorowe and heuy lamentacions yea theyr chyldren also shall weape for thee. Alas what cyty hath so ben destroy ed in the sea as Tyre is. When thy wares and marchaundyes came frō the seas thou gauest all people ynough. The kyn ges of the earth hast thou made ryche/thorow the multitude of thy wares and occupying: But thou art now cast down into the depe of the sea, all thy resorte of people is perysshed wyth thee.
All they that dwell in the Iles are aba shed at thee, all theyr kinges are afrayd yea theyr faces haue chaunged colour.
The marchauntes of the nacyons wonder at thee: In that thou arte so cleane broughte to naughte / and commest no more vp.

The worde of God agaynste the kynge of Tyrus for hys pryde. Daniel. The prophete is moued to bewayle the kynge of Tyrus. The worde of the Lorde agaynst Sydon. The lord promyseth that he wyll gather together the chyldren of Israell.

The .xxviii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou son-A ne of man, tell the Prynce of Tyre: Thus sayth the Lord god: because thou hast a prou de herte and hast sayde I am a God, I haue my seat in the myddest of the Sea lyke a God, where as thou art but a mā and not God and yet standeste in thyne owne conceyt that thou art God. Behol de thou thynckest thy self wyser then Da niell, that there is no secretes hyd from thee.
Wyth thy wysdome and thy vnderstan dyng, thou hast gotten thee great welthi nes, and gathered treasure of syluer and golde. Wyth thy greate wysdome and occupyenge, hast thou encreased thy power/ and because of thy great ryches, thy hert is proude.
Therfore thus sayth the Lorde god B For so much as thou haste lyft vp thyne herte, as though thou were God: Behol de I wyll bryng enemyes vppon thee euē the tyrauntes of the heathen: these shall draw out theyr swerdes vpon thy bewty/and wysdome, and shal defyle thy glory They shall cast thee downe to the pytte so that thou shalt dye in the myddeste of the sea as they that be slayne. Let se, if y wylt say then (before them that sley thee, I am God: where as thou art but a man and not God) in the handes of them that slaye the, Dye shalte thou, euen. * C as the vncyrcumcysed in the handes of the enemyes: for I my selfe haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God.
Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man/ make a lamentable complaynt ouer the kynge of Tyre/ and tel him: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou art a seale of a lycknesse, ful of wysdome and excellent beuty. Thou haste bene in the pleasaunt gardē of God/ thou art decte wyth all maner of precyous stones: wyth Ruby, Topas, Chrystal, Iacyncte, Onyx, Iaspys, Saphyr, Smaragde, Carbuncle, and golde. Thy bewty and the holes D that be in thee were set forth in the daye of thy creacyon. Thou art a fayre Cherub, stretched wyde out for to couer.
I haue sett thee vpon the holy mount of God: there hast thou bene and walked monge the fayre glystrynge sto nes. From the tyme of thy creacyon thou hast bene ryght excellent, tyl wyckednesse was found in thee. Because of thi greate Esay.xi,b marchaundyse, thy hert is full of wycke dnesse, and thou hast offended. Therfore wyl I cast the from the mount of God/O thou couerynge Cherub, and destroy thee among the glysterynge stones.
Thy hert was proude in thi fayre beuty E and thorow thy beuty thou hast destroy ed thy wysdome. I wyll cast the downe to the grounde and that in the syght of kynges. Thou hast defiled thy Sanc tuary, with the great wickednesse of thy vnryghtuous occupyenge. I wyl bryng a fyre from the myddest of thee, to consu me the, and wyll make the to asshes/ in the syght of al them that loke vpon the.
All they that haue bene acquaynted wt the among the Heathen shalbe abasshed at thee; seyng thou art so cleane brought to naught, and commest no more vp.
And the word of the Lord cam vnto me sayeng: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst Sydon. Prophecye vpō it and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde o Sydon I wyll vpon y, & get me honoure in the: that it may be knowē Johel.iii.a howe that I am the LORDE.

when I punysh her, and get me ho-noure in her. For I wyl send pestilence and bloud sheddyng into her streates so that those whych be slayne wyth the swerde/shall lye rounde aboute in the myddest of her; and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. She shall no more be a prickinge thorne, and an hurteng brere vnto the house of Israell, nor vnto them that lye rounde about her and hate her: and they shal knowe, that I am the Lord. Thus sayeth the G Lorde God: whan I gather the housheholde of Israell together agayne from the nacions amonge whom they be sca-tered: then shal I be sanctified in them in the syght of the Gentyles/and they shall dwel in ye land, that I gyue to my seruaunt Iacob. They shal dwell safely therin, buylde houses/and plant vyneyardes: yea safely shal they dwel therin, when I haue punyshed all those that despyse them rounde aboute: and then shall they knowe, that I am the Lord their God.

The .xxix. Chapter.

¶ He prophecyeth agaynst Pharao. He prophecy-th the desolacyon of Egypte, and ye sparplynge abroade of the Egypcyans. The Lorde promiseth ye he wyll restoare Egypt agayne after .xl. yeares. Egipt is the rewarde of kyng Nabuchodonozor for the laboure whych he toke agaynst Tyrus.

A IN the .x. yeare vpon the Esay. xix.a. xx.a. Iere. xlvi.a. Ezechie. xxx, xxxi, & xxxii. .xii. daye of the .x. moneth/the worde of the lord cam vnto me/sayenge: O thou sonne of man set now thy face againste pharao the king of egipt Prophecye agaynst him and agaynst the whole lande of Egypte: Speake, and tell hym, thus sayeth the Lorde god: beholde, O Pharao thou kynge of Egypt, I wyl vpon thee, thou great a* dragon, that lyest in ye waters: thou that sayest; the water is myne. I haue made it my selfe. I wyll put an hoke in thy chawes, and hange all the fysh i thy waters vpon thy skales: after that I wyl draw thee out of thy waters, ye and al the fysh of thy waters ye hange vpon thy skales. I wyl cast thee out vp on the drye lande wyth the fysh of thy waters, so that ye shalt lye vpon the felde Thou shalte not be gatherd nor taken vp: but shalt be meate for the beastes of the felde, and for the foules of the ayre: that al they which dwel in Egipte maye knowe/that I am the Lorde: Be cause thou hast bene a staf of rede to the house of Israel. When they toke hold of ye with their hand thou brakest and pryckest them on euery syde: and B yf they leande vpon thee, thou brakest and buttest the reines of their backes.
Therfore/thus sayeth the Lord god: beholde/I wyl brynge a swearde vpon thee, and rote out of thee both man and beast. Yee the lande of Egypte shalbe desolate & waste: and they shal knowe, that I am the Lord: Because he sayde: ye water is myne, I my self haue made it. Beholde therfore, I wyll vpon thee, and vpon thy waters: I wil make the land of Egipt waste and desolate: from the towre of Siene vnto ye borders of the Moryans land: so that in xl yeares there shal no fote of man walke ther, nether fote of catel go ther nether C shall it be inhabyted. I wyll make the land of Egypt to be desolate, amonge other wast countrees, and her cytyes to lye voyde .xl. yeares, amonge other voyde cytyes: And I wyll scatre the Egyptians amonge the Heathen and nacions.
Agayne/thus saieth the Lord god:
When the .xl. yeares are expyred: I [illegible] wyll gather the Egipcyans together agayne/out of the nacyons/ amonge whom they were scatred, and wyl bry-nge the presoners of Egypt agayne in to the londe of Pathures their awne natyue countre, that they maye be there D a lowly small kyngdome: yea they shal be the smallest amonge other kyngdo mes, lest they exalte them selues aboue the Heathen: for I wyll so mynish them that they shall no more rule the Heathen. They shall no more be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neyther prouoke them any more to wyckednesse, to cause them turne backe, and to folowe them: and they shall knowe that I am the lorde God.
In the .xxvii. yeare, the fyrst daye of the fyrst moneth, came the worde of the lorde vnto me, saiynge. Thou son of man, Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath made hys hoost/ wyth great trauayle & laboure to com before Tyre, that euery head maye be balde, and euery Shoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre Geuen neither hym nor hys hooste any Rewarde, for the greate Trauaile that he hath taken there. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll Geue the lande of Egypte vnto Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he may take awaye all her substaunce/ robbe her robberyes, and spoyle her spoyles, to paye hys hoost theyr wages wythall. I wyll geue hym the lande of Egypt for hys labour, that he toke for me before Tyre. At the same tyme wyll I cause the b* horne of the house of Israell to growe forth, and open thy mouth agayne among them that they may knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

a* The propertie of dragons is to haunte where aboundaunce of waters ar. Therfore is the kig of egipt here called a dragon, because of the aboundaunce of water that are in Egypte, where he raygned. So is Jerusalem called a stues, because of her hauntynge of Idolatrye: as before in the xvi. c. d.

A The worde of the Lorde came moreouer vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man prophecy & speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Mourne wo worth thys daye, for the daye is here/
D the daye of the Lorde is come: the darcke daye of the heathen, the houre is at hand, the sweard commeth vpon Egipte. Whē the wounded men fall downe in Egypte, when her People are taken awaye and when her foundacions are destroyed the Morians lande shall be afrayde, yea the Morians lande/ Libia and Lidya / all theyr common people, and Chub and all that be confederate vnto them, shall fall wyth them thorow the swearde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: The maintey ners of the Lande of Egypte shall fall, the Pryde of her Power shall comme downe; euen vnto the Towere of Syenes shall they be slayne downe wyth the swearde sayeth the Lorde God among other Desolate Countrees they shallbe made desolate and amonge other waste cytyes they shalbe wasted. And they shal knowe, that I am the Lorde, When I B kyndle a fyre in Egypte/ and when all her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme, shall theyr messaungers go forth fro me in shyppes, to make the carelesse Morians afrayed, and sorowe shall come vpon them in the day of Egypte, for doubtles it shall come.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wil make an ende of the people of Egypte thorow the hande of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon. He and hys people wyth hym, yea and the cruell tyraunntes of the Heathen shalbe brought to destroye the lande. They shall drawe out theyr sweardes vpon Egypte and fyll the lande ful of slayne men. I wyll drye vp theyr floudes of water/ and sell the lande into the handes of wycked people. The lande and al that is therin, wyll I destroy thorow the enemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

And thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll destroye the Idols and brynge the ymages of a* Noph to an ende. There shal nomore be a prince of Egypte, and a fearfulnes wyl I sende into the Egyptyans Lande. As for Pathures I wyll make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in b* C Zoan. Alexandria wyl I punish & powre my wrothfulle Indygnacyon vpon c* Syn whych is the strength of Egypte. Al the substaunce of Alexandrya wyl I destroye and kyndle a fyre in Egypte.

Syn shalbe in greate heuynesse/ Alexandrya shalbe rooted out, & Noph shall haue daylye sorowe. The best men of Helyopolys and Bubasto shalbe slayne wyth the swearde/ and caryed awaye captyue. At Taphnis the day shalbe darcke When I breake there the Scepter of the land of Egipte, and when the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloud shal couer her, and her daughters shalbe led awaye into captyuytee. Thus wyll I punysh Egypte, that they maye knowe how that I am the Lorde.

It happened in the xi. yeare, vpon the seuenth daye of the first Moneth/ that the Lordes worde came vnto me, sayeng: Beholde thou sonne of man/ I wyl breake the arme of Pharao kig of Egipt: and lo it shal not be bounde vp to be healed, nether shal any plaister be layd vpō it, for to ease it, or to make it so strong as to holde a swerde. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lord god: Behold I wyl vpon Pharao ÿ king of Egipt and bruse his strōg arme (yet is it but a broken one) and wyl smyte the swerd G out of hys hande.

As for the Egypcyans I wyl scatre them among the Heathen/ & strow them in the landes aboute. Agayne, I wyl strength the arme of the kynge of Babilō, & geue hym my sweard in hys hād: but I wyl breake Pharaos arme so ÿ he shal holde it before hi piteously like a wounded man.

Yea I wyl stablish the king of Babylons arme, and ÿ armes of Pharao shal fal downe: that it may be knowne that I am the Lorde, whych gaue the kynge of Babylon my sweard in hys hande, that he maye drawe it out vpō the land of Egipt: and when I scatre ÿ Egypcians amonge the Gentyls, and strowe them in the landes about, they maie know, that I am the lord.

¶ A comparison of ÿ prosperitie of Pharao with the prosperitie of the Assirias. He prophesieth alike destruction vpon them bothe.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

A Moreouer, it happened in the. xi yeare the fyrst daie of the third Moneth that the worde of the Lord came vnto me saiynge: Thou sonne of man speake vnto Pharao the king of Egipt, and to al his people: Whom art thou lyke in thy greatnes? Behold Assur was lyke a Cedre tre vp on the mount of Lybanus with fayre braunches: So thycke, that he gaue shadowes and shot out very hygh. hys toppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym greate, and the depe set hym vpon hye. Round about the rotes of hym rane there floudes of water, he sent out hys lytle ryuers vnto al the trees of the felde.

Ezech. xxix. xxxii.

Therfore was he hier then al the trees of the felde, and thorow the multitude of waters that he sent from him, he obtained manye longe braunches. Al foules of the ayre made their nestes in his brāches, vnder his bowes gēdred B al the beastes of the felde and vnder his shadow dwelt al people. Fayre ād beutiful was he in his greatnes and in the length of his brāūches, for his rote stode beside greate waters. No Cedre tre might hide him. In the pleasaunte garden of god, there was no fayre tree lyke hys braunches/ the playne trees were not like the bowes of him. Al the trees in the garden of god might not be compared vnto him in his beuty, so fayre and goodly had I made hym w the multitude of his braunches: Insomuch that al the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God/had enuie at him.

Therfore, thus saieth the Lorde god: for so much as he hath lift vp him self so hye, and stretched his toppe into the cloudes/and seing his hert is proude i C his highnes: I wyl deliuer him into the handes of the *myghtiest amonge the Heathen, which shal rote him oute According to hys wyckednes wyl I cast him awaye, the enemies shal destroye hym, and the myghtye men of the Heathen shall so scater him, that hys braunches shall lye vpon al mountaynes and in al valleyes: his bowes shal be broken downe to the grounde thorow out the lande. Then al the people of the lande shal go from his shadowe and forsake him. When he is fallen, al the foules of the ayre shal syt vpon hi, and al wilde bestes of the feld shal go about amonge his braunches: so ÿ frō D hensforth, no tree in the water shal attayne to his hyghnesse, nor reache hys toppe vnto the cloudes, nether shal any tre of the water stande so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shal they al be deliuered vnder the earthe, and gon downe to the graue, lyke other men.

Moreouer thus saith the lord god In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue I wyl cause a lamentacion to be made. I wyl couer the depe vpon him. I wyl staunche his floudes, and the greate waters shalbe restrayned.

I shall cause Lybanus to be sorowfull for hys sake, and all the trees of the feld shal be smytten. I wyll make the heathen sha ke at the sounde of hys fall when I caste hym downe to hel, wyth them that descen de into the pytte. All the trees of Eden, wt all the chosen and best trees of Lybanus ye and all they that are planted vpon the waters shall mourne wyth hym also in y lower habytacions: for they shall go dow ne to Hell wythe hym, vnto them that bee slayn wt y swerd, whych dwelt afor vnder y shadow of hys arme among the hethen.
To whom shalt thou be lykned that art so gloryous and great amon the trees of E den? Yet arte thou caste downe vnder the Earthe, amounge thee Trees of Eden, where thou must lye among the vn cyrcumcised, wyth them that be slayne wt the swearde. Euen thus is it wyth Pharao.

¶ The prophet is commaunded to bewayle Pharao the kynge of egypte. He prophesyeth that destructiō shall come vnto egipte thorow the kyng of Babylō.

The xxxii. Chapter.

A In the .xii. yeare, the fyrst day of the .xii. Moneth the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man take vpp a lamentacyon vpon Pharao the kynge of Egypt, and saye vnto hym.
Thou art reputed as a lyon of the Heathen, and as a whalfysh in the sea. Thou castest thy waters about thee/ thou trou blest the waters wt thy fete and stampest in theyr floudes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God I wyll spreade my net ouer thee na tely, a greate multitude of people, these shall dryue the into my yarne for I wyll caste thee vppon the lande and let the lye vpon the feld, that all the foules of the ay re may sitt vpon thee: I wyll geue all the beastes of the fealde ynough of the. Thy flesh wyll I cast vpon the hylles and fyll the valleyes wyth thy hyghnesse. I wyll water the land wyth the aboundaunce of B thy bloude, euen to the mountaynes and the valleyes shal be full of thee. When thou arte put oute, I wyll couer the heauen, and make hys starres dymme. I wil spreade a cloude ouer the Sunne, and y Moone shall not geue her lyghte.
Al the lyghtes of heauē wil I put out o uer the, and bring darcknes vpon thy lande/ sayeth the Lord God. I wyl trouble the hertes of many people, whē I brynge thy destruccion amonge the Heathen/ & countrees, whō thou knou est not.
Yea I wyl make many people wyth their kinges so afrayed thorowe thee y C their hearte shal stand vp, whē I shake my swearde at their faces. Sodenly shal they be astonied, euery man i him selfe at the daye of thy fall.
For thus sayeth the lorde god: the kynge of Babilons swearde shal com vpon thee/ wt the sweardes of the worthies wyl I smite downe the people.
Al they that be mightie among y Gen tyls, shal waste the proud pompe of E gipt, and brenge downe al her people.
Al the cattel also of Egipte will I dest roy/ that they shal come no more vpon y waters: so that neyther mans fote nor beastes clawe, shall sterre them anye more.
Then wyl I make their waters clere, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle/ sayeth the Lorde god: When I make the lande of Egipt desolate/ & when the countre, with al that is therī shalbe layde waste: and when I smite al them which dwel i it/ that they mate know that I am the lord. Thys is the mourninge, that the daughters of the Heathē shal make: Yea a sorow D and lamentaciō shal they take vp/ vp-on Egypt and al her people, sayeth y lord god.
In the .xii. yeare, the xv. daye of y Moneth/ cam y word of the lord vnto me/ sayinge: Thou sonne of man.
Take vp a lamentacion vpon the peo ple of Egipt, and cast them downe, yee and the mightye people of the Heathē also, euen wyth them that dwel benethe and with them that go dowen in to the graue. Downe (how fayre so euer thou be) and lie thee with the vncircumcised Amonge those that be slayne with the sweard, shall they lye.
The swearde ys geuen all ready, he shall be drawen forthe and all hys people.

The myghtie worthyes and hys helpers that be gone downe and lye wyth the vn cyrcumcysed and wyth them that be slayn wyth the swerde shal speake to hym oute of the hell.

Assur is there also wyth hys company, and theyr graues rounde aboute, whi ch were slayne and fell all wyth the swerde/whose graues lye besyde hym in ye low pytte. Hys commons are buryed rounde aboute hys graue: al together wounded C and slayne wythe the swerde, whych men aforetyme brought feare into the land of the lyuing.

There is Elam also wyth al hys people, and theyr graues rounde about: whi ch all beynge wounded and slayne wythe the swearde are goone downe vncyrcum cysed vnder the earth, whych neuertheles sometyme brought feare into the lande of the lyuyng: for the whych they beare their shame, wyth the other that be gone downe to the graue.

Theyr buryall is geuen them and al theyr people amonge them that be slayne Theyr graues are roũd about al thẽ which be vncyrcumcised, and wyth them that be slayne wyth the swerde: for seynge that in tymes paste they made the lande of the lyuyng afrayed, they must nowe beare their owne shame wyth them that goo downe to the pytte/ and lye among them that be slayne.

There is Mesech also and Tubal, & theyr people, and theyr graues rounde about. These al are amõg al vncyrcũcysed, & them that be slayn wyth the swerd, because afore tyme they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed.

D Should not they then lye also among the worthyes, and vncyrcumcysed Gyaũ-tes/whych wyth theyr weapons are gone downe to hell: whose swerdes are layd vn der theyr heades, whose wyckednesse is v pon theyr bones: because that as worthy es, they haue brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge: yea among the vncyrcum cysed shalt thou be destroyed, and sleape wythe them, that peryshed thorowe the swearde

There is the lande of Edom, wyth her kynges and Prynces also, whyche wyth theyre strenght are layde by them that we re slayne wyth the swerde, ye amonge the vncyrcumcised and them whyche are gone downe into the pytte. Moreouer there be al the prynces of the northe, wyth all ye Sidonyans whyche are gone downe to the slayne.

Wyth theyr feare and strenght they ar Iona come to confusyon: and lye there vncyrcũ cised, amonge those that be slayne wyth ye swearde: and beare theyr owne shame w them that be gone down to the pyt. Now when Pharao seyth thys, he shallbe comforted ouer all hys people, that is slayne wyth the swearde. Both Pharao and all hys hooste, sayth the Lorde God. For I haue geuen my feare in the Lande of the lyuyng: But Pharao and all hys people shall lye amonge the vncyrcumcysed, and among them that be slayn wyth the swer de, sayth the Lord God.

¶ He setteth out the office of a curat that preacheth the Gospell, he strengtheneth them that dyspayre, and boldneth them wyth the promes of mercy. As ye former ryghtuousnes helpeth not the ryghtuous, yf he geue hymselfe agayne to synne: so the synnes done before are not imputed to the wycked that amendeth. The worde of the Lord agaynst the remnaunte of the people. Agaynste the mockers of the wordes of the prophete.

Agayne, the worde of the lord I cam vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, Speke to the chyldrern of thy people, and tell them: When I sende a swearde vpon a land yf the people of the lande take a man of theyre countree and set hym to be theyr watchman, that same man (whan he seeth the swerde come vpõ the lande) shall blowe the trompet, & war ne the people.

If a man nowe heare the noyse of the trompet and wyll not be warned, and the swearde come and take hym awaye: hys bloude shall be vpon hys owne head: for he herde the sounde of the trompet, & wol B de not take heade, therfore hys bloude be vpon hym. But yf he wyll receaue warnyng he shall saue hys lyfe. Agayn, yf the watchman se the swearde come and shew it not wyth the trompet so that the peple is not warned: yf the swearde come then, and take any man from amonge them/ye same shalbe taken awaye in hys owne sin ne, but hys bloude wyll I requyre of the watchmans hande,

And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue made thee a watchmā vnto the hou se of Israell that where as thou hearest any thyng out of my mouthe, thou mayst warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vn to the wycked, thou wycked, thou shalte surely dye: and thou geuest hym not war nyng/that he may beware of hys vngod ly waye: then shall the wycked dye in his owne synne/but hys bloude wyl I requy re of thy hand. Neuertheles yf thou warn the wycked of hys waye, to turne from it, where as he yet wyll not be turned from it, then shall he dye because of hys synne, but thou hast delyuered thy soule.

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) spe C ke vnto the house of Israel. Ye say thus:
Our offences & synnes lay vpō vs/ & we be corrupt in them: how shold we then be restored vnto lyfe? Tell them: As trulye as I lyue, sayeth the Lord God, I haue no pleasure in the death of a wycked/but much rather that the wycked turne from hys waye ād lyue. Turne you, turne you from youre vngodly wayes, O ye of the house of Israell. Oh, wherfore wyll ye dye?

Thou sonne of man, tell the chyldren of thy people: The ryghteousnes of the righteous shall not saue hym, whan soe-uer he turneth his way vnfaithfuly. Agai the wykednes of the wyked shal not hurt hym, whan soeuer he conuerteth from his vngodlynes.

And the rightuousnes of the ryghtu D ous shall not saue hys lyfe, whan soeuer he synneth.

If I saye vnto the ryghteous, that he shall surely lyue, and so he trust to hys owne ryghteousnysse, and do synne, then shall hys rightousnesse be no moare thought vpon/but in the wykednes that he hath done he shall dye. Agayne yf I saye vnto the wycked, thou shalte surelye dye, and so he turne from hys synnes/ ād do the thynge that is lawful and ryghte/inso much that the same wycked man geueth the pledge agayn restoreth that he had taken away by robbery, walke in the commaundementes of lyfe, and dothe no wronge/ then shall hee surelye Lyue and not dye. Yea the Synnes that he hathe donne, shall neuer bee thought vpon, for in so muche as he doth now the thyng that is lawful and ryght, he shall lyue. And yet the chyldren of the people saye: Tush, the waye of the Lord is not ryght, where as theyr owne way is rather vnryght.

When the ryghtuous turneth from E hys ryghtuousnes, and dothe the thynge that is wycked he shall dye therfore. But yf the wycked turne from his wyckednes, doynge the thynge that is Lawefull and ryghte, he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye saye: the waye of the Lorde is not equall. O ye house of Israell/I wyll iudge euery one of you after hys wayes.

In the. xii. yeare the. v. daye of the. x. moneth of our captyuitye, it happened th at one which was fled out of Ierusalem, came vnto me, and sayde: the cytye is des troyed.

Now the hande of the Lorde had bene vpon me the euenyng afore thys mā (whych was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntyl the mornyng that he cam to me: ye he opned my mouth, so that I was nomore domme. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto mee and sayde:

Thou Sonne of manne, these that dwell in the wasted Lande of Israel, saye: Abraham was but one mann, and he had F the lande in possessyon, no we are we many, and the lande is geuen vs to possesse also. And therfore tell them Thus sayth the Lord: In the bloude haue ye eaten, youre eyes haue ye lyfte vp to Idoles, & haue shed bloude: shal ye then haue the lā de in possessyon.

Ye leane vpon the swerdes, ye wor ke abhomynacyons, euerye one defyleth hys neyghbours wyfe: and shall ye then possesse the lande?

Saye thou these woordes vnto them.
Thus sayeth the Lorde god: As truly as I lyue, al ye that dwell in thys wil dernes, shalbe slayne wythe the swearde: what soeuer is vpon the feld wyl I geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured, those th at be in stronge holdes and dennes/shall dye of the pestylence. For I wyll make the lande so desolate and waste, ād the Pompe of her streyngthe shall comme to an ende.

walles & i ỹ dores of their houses, sayig one to another: Come, let vs heare, what worde is gone forth from ỹ lord: These come vnto thee, after the maner of a greate people: yea my people syt downe before thee, & heare the wordes, but they do not therafter: for in their mouthes they shewe theym selues / as though they were feruent / but their hert goeth after their owne couetouse lucre. And as a balet that hath a swete tune, and is pleasaunt to syng, so shalt thou be vnto thē: thy wordes shal they heare, but they wyl not do therafter.
When thys cometh to passe (for lo, it commeth in dede) thē shal they knowe, that there hath bene a prophet amōge
them.

vnto them: Thus saieth the lord god: Wo be vnto the shepardes of Israell, that fede them selues. Should not the shepardes fede the flockes?
Luc.xiiii,b. Ye haue eaten vp my fatt / ye haue clothed you wt the wol: the best fedde haue ye slayne, but the flocke haue yee not norished. The weake haue ye not holden vp, the sicke haue ye not he aled: The broken haue yee not bounde to gether / the oute castes haue yee not broughte agayne: the loste haue ye not sought, but churlishly ād cruelly haue ye ruled them. Thus are they scatered here and there with out a shepard: ye al the beastes of the felde deuoure the and they go astraye.
My shepe go wandring vpon al B mountaynes and vpon euery hye hyl.
Ye they be scatered abrode in al feldes, and there is no mā, that careth for thē, or seketh after them. Therfore O ye shepardes, heare the worde of the lord.
Thus sayeth the Lord god: As truly as I liue, for so much as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wylde beastes of the feld, hauing no shepard: and seing that my shepardes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them sel heare the word of the lord O ye shepar des: Thus saith the lord god: Beholde, I my selfe will vpon the shepardes, ād requyre my shepe from their handes, & make them ceasse from fedinge of my shepe: yea the shepardes shal fede them selues no more: For I wyll delyuer my shepe out of their mouthes, so that they shal not deuoure them after thys.

For thus sayeth the Lorde god: Be holde, I wyl loke to my shepe my selfe, and seke them. C Like as the shepharde amonge the flock seketh after the shepe that are scatered abrode, euen so wyll I seke after my shepe, and gather them together oute of al places, here they haue bene scatt red in the cloudy and darke daye.
I wyl brynge them out from al people, and gather them togther out of al lan des.
I wyl brynge them into their owne lande and / fede theym vpon the moun taynes of Israel, by the ryuers, and in al the places of the countre. I will fede them in right good pastures and vpō the hye mountaynes of Israell shall there foldes be. There shal they lye in good folde, and in a fat pasture shall they fede: euen vpon the mountaynes D

I wyll fede my shepe my self, and brynge them to their rest, sayeth ỹ lord god. Suche as be lost, wyl I seke: such as go astraye, wyll I brynge agayne suche suche as be wounded, wyll I bynde vp/such as be weake, wyll I make stronge: soch as be fat and wel lykyng, those wil I preserue, and fede the wyth the thinge that is laufull. And as for you (O my shepe sayeth the Lorde God/ I wyll put a dyfference amonge the shepe, amonge the wethers and the goates. Was it not ynough for you, to eate vp the good pa sture, but ye must treade downe the resy du of youre pasture wyth youre fete also was it not ynough for you to drynke cleare water but ye must trou ble the re sydue also wyth youre fete. Thus my shepe must be fayne to eate the thinge, that ye haue troden downe wyth youre fete, and to drincke it that ye with youre fete haue defyled. Therfore thus sayeth C the Lorde God vnto them: Beholde, I wyll seuer the fatt shepe from the leane: for so moch as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes and shoulders and runne vpon them wyth youre hornes, so longe tyll ye haue vtterly scatred the abrode. I wyll helpe my shepe, so that they shal no more be spoyled; yea I wyll discerne one shepe from another. I wyll rayse vp vnto them one only shepherde: euen my seruaunt a* Dauid, he shal fede them, and he shal be theyr shepherde. I the Lorde wyl be theyr God/ and my ser uaunte Dauyd shallbe there prynce: Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

More ouer, I wyl make a couena unt of peace wythe theym, and dryue all euel beastes out of the lande: so that they may dwel safely in the wyldernesse, and slepe in the woddes. Good fortune and prosperytee wyl I geue them and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hyl. A pros perous shower and rayne wyll I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wodde maye bryng forth theyr fruites, and the grounde her increase. they shall be safe in theyr land/ and shal knowe, D that I am the Lord, whych haue broken theyr yocke, and delyuered them oute of the handes of those, that helde them in subieccyon.

They shal no more be spoyled of the heathen, nor deuoured wyth the bea stes of the lande: but safely shall they dwell, and no man shall fraye them.
I wyll set vp an excellent plante for the so that they shall suffre no more hunger in the lande, nether beare reprofe of the heathen, any more. Thus shall they vn derstande/ that I the lord theyr God am wyth them and that they (euen the hou se of Israel) are my people sayth the lord God. Ye men are my flocke, ye are the shepe of my pasture/ and I am your god sayth the Lorde God.

that I am the Lorde.

And because thou hast sayd what/ b* both these nacyons and bothe these lan there. Therfore, thus saieth the Lorde god: As truly as I lyue, I wyl handle thee accordynge to thy wrath and gelousy, lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly with them, that I maye be knowen amonge them/how I haue punished thee. Yea and that thou also mayest be sure, that I the Lord haue hearde al thy despitefull wordes, which thou hast spoken agaist the mountaynes of Israel, saiyng: lo, they ar made waste & geuen vs to deuoure. Thus with your mouthes ye haue made your boost agaynste me, yea and multyplied your proud wordes agaist me, which I haue hearde altogether. Wherevnto, thus saieth the lord god, when the whole worlde is in wealthe, then wil I make thee waste. And lyke as thou (O mount Seyr) wast glad, because the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wyl I do vnto thee also/that thou and whole Edom shalbe destroyed, and know that I am the lord.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

A Thou sonne of man, prophecye vpon the Mountaynes of Israel/& speake: Heare the worde of the Lord/O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Because youre enemye hathe sayde vpon you: Aha, the euerlastinge places are now become ours: Prophecy therfore, and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Seynge yee be wasted and troaden downe on euery syde, and become a possessyon vnto the resydue of the Gentiles, wyche haue broughte you in to mens mouthes and vnto an euil name amonge the people. Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde god, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleyes and dales, to the voyd wyldernes and desolate cytyes, which are spoyled and had in dirysion on euery syde, amonge the residue of the Heathen. Yea, euen thus sayeth the Lorde God: In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deuyse/agaiste the resydue of the Gentyles/and agaynst al Edom: which haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possession: wiche also reioysed from their whole herte with a dispytefull stomacke, to waste it, and to spoyle it.

Prophecy therfor vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaines and hilles, to valleyes and dales, thus sayeth the lord god: Behold (this haue I deuysed in my gelowsye and terryble wrath): For so muche as ye suffred reprof of the Heathen/therfor thus sayeth the Lorde God: I haue sworne, that the Genples which lye about you/shal beare youre confusyon them selues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shal shut out youre braunches and brynge forth your frute to my people of Israel/for it is harde by, that ye wyl come. Beholde, I come vnto you and vnto you wyll I turne me, that ye maie be tylled and sowen.

I wyl send you muche people/which shalbe al of the house of Israel: the cytyes shalbe inhabited/and the decaied places shalbe repayred agayne. I wyl prouyde you wyth muche people and catell, which shall increase and brynge frute. I wil restoore you also to your old estate & shewe you more kyndnesse then euer ye had before: wherby ye shal knowe, that I am the Lord.

Yea/ people wyll I sende vnto you/ (O my folk of Israel) which shal haue thee in possessyon, & thou shalt be their inheritaunce so that thou shalt nomore be without them. Agayne, thus sayeth the lorde God: For so muche as they saye vnto you: thou art an eater vp of men, and a waster of thy people: therfor thou shalt eate no men, nether destroie thy people any more, sayeth the Lorde God. And I wyl not suffre thee, for to beare thine owne confusion amonge the Gentiles from hensforth. Thou shalte not beare the reproke of the nacions, nor caste out thyne owne people any more, sayeth the Lorde God.

Re-
ection

Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man when the house of Israel dwelt vpon theyr awne grounde they defiled them sel-ues wyth their awne wayes and ymagynacyons: so that in my syght theyr wayes was lyke the vnclennesse of a menstru-ous woman. Wherfore I poured my wrethful dyspleasure vpon the, because of the bloude that they had shed in the lande/ and because of theyr Idols, whe-D wyth they had defyled thē selues. I sca-tred them also among the Heathen, so that they were strowed about in the landes. According to theyr wayes and after theyr awne inuencyons, so dyd I pu-nysh them.

Now when they were gone vnto the Heathen, and came in amonge them, they dyshonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them: Are these the people of God, and must go out of theyr awne lande? Then spared I my holy name, whych the house of Israel had dyshono-red amonge the Gentyles, to whom they came. Therfore tell the house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I do not thys for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake, whyche ye dyshonoured among the Heathen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I wyll ha-E low my grete name agayne/ whych amō ge the Gentyles is euell spoken of: for ye youre selues haue dyshonoured it among thē. And the Gentyles shal know that I am the Lorde, whan I am honoured in you before theyr eyes/ sayeth the Lorde God.

As for you, I wyll take you from among the Heathen, and gather you together out of all countrees, and bryng you agayne in to your awne land. Then wil I poure cleare water vpon you and ye shalbe clene: Yea from all youre vnclennesse and frō all your Idols shal I clense you. A new herte also wyl I geue you, and a new sprete wyll I put in to you. As for that stonye hart/ I wyll take it out of your body, and geue you a fleshly herte. I wyl geue my spirite amōg you F and cause you to walcke in my commaūdementes, to kepe my lawes, and to ful-fyll them.

And so ye shal dwell in the lande/ that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shal be my people, and I wyl be your god.
I wyl helpe you out of al vnclenesse.
I wyl cal for the corne and wyl encreise it, and I wyl let you haue no hunger.
I wyl multyply the frutes of the trees and the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shall beare no more reprofe of honger among the heathē. Then shal ye remembre your owne wicked wayes and your ymmaginacions, which were not good so that ye shal take displesure at youre owne selues, by reasō of your synnes and abhomynacyons.

But I wyl not do this for your sakes (sayeth the Lord god) be ye sure of it. Therfore, O ye house of Israel, be a shamed of youre synnes. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: what tyme as I shal clense you from al youre offences, then wyl I make the cytyes to be occupyed agayne and wyl repayre ye places that be decayed. The desolate lande shal be buylded agayn, which a fore tyme layd waste in the syght of al them that went by. Then shal it be sayde: this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasur, and the voyde, de- G solate and broken downe cytyes, are now stronge, and fensed agayne. Then the resydue of the Heathen yt lie round about you/ shal know that I am ye lord which repayre that was broken downe & plante agayne, that was made wast Euē I the Lord haue spoken it/ and wyl do it in dede.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: I wyl yet once be founde agayne of the house of Israel, and do this for them: I shall encrease them as a flocke of men.

Lyke as the holye flocke and the flocke of Jerusalem are in the hye so lempne feastes: so shal also the wylde wasted cytyes be filled with flockes of men: and they shal know that I am ye Lord.

¶ He prophecyeth the bringing agayne of the people being in captiuitee. He sheweth the vnyon of ye ten tribes with the two. Christ is the kyng of ye Christen people alone, and the only euerlasting Shepard therof.

The Resurrection.

I The hande of the Lorde came vpon me, and caryed me out in the spirit of the Lorde/ ād set me doune in a playne feld that laye full of boones/ and he ledde me rounde aboute by them: and beholde, the bones that laye vpō the feld were verye manye, and marueilous drye also. Then said he vnto me: Thou sonne of man thynckest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? He answered: O Lord god thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: prophecy thou vpon these bones, ād speake vnto the: Ye drye bones, heare the word of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto these bones: Beholde I wyll putt

B breath into you, that ye may lyue: I wyl geue you synowes, and make flesh grow vppon you/ and couer you ouer wyth

Genesi. ii. b. skynne: and so geue you breathe/ that ye maye Lyue, and knowe, that I am the Lorde.

i. Cori. xv. a. So I prophecyed as he had cōmaunded me. And as I was prophecying ther came a noyse ād a great mocyon, so that the bones ranne euery one to an other. Now whē I had loked, behold, they had synowes/ and flesh grewe vpon them: ād aboue they were couered wyth skynne, but there was no breath in them. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man/ prophecy thou to warde the wynde: prophecy, and speake to the wynde: Thus sayth the Lord God: Come O thou ayer from the foure wyndes, and blowe vpon these slayne, that they may be restored to

C lyfe. So I prophecyed, as he had commaunded me: then came the breathe into them/ and they receaued lyfe and stode vp vpon theyr fete a marueilous gret sort

Moreouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israell. Beholde they saye: Our bones are dryed vp, our hope is gone, we are cleane cut of. Therfor prophecy thou and speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll open your graues (O my people) and take you out

Esa. xxvi. b of youre sepulchres, and bryng you into

D the lande of Israell agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I opē youre graues and brynge you out of thē My sprite also wyll I put in you and ye shall lyue; I wyll set you agayne in youre owne lande, and ye shall knowe, that I am the lorde which haue sayde it, and fulfylled it in dede.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me/ saynge: Thou sonne of man take a stycke and wryte vpon it Unto Iuda, and to the chylderen of Israell hys cōpanyons. Then take another sticke, & wryte vpon it Unto Ioseph the stocke of Ephraym, and to all the houshold of Israell hys companions. And than, take both these together in thyne hād, so shall there be one sticke therof. Now

E yf the chylderen of thy people saye vnto thee: wylt thou shewe vs, what thou meanest by these? Then geue them this answer: thus sayeth the lorde God: Beholde, I will take the stocke of Ioseph which is in the hande of Ephraim and of the trybes of Israel his felowes, ād will put them to the stocke of Iuda, ād make thē one stocke, & they shallbe one in my hand. And the two stickes wherupon thou wrytest, shalte thou haue in thyne hande that they maye se, and saye vnto them.

F Thus saythe the lorde God, beholde, I wyll take awaye the Children of Israel frō among the Heathē/ vnto whō they be gone, & wil gather thē together on euery syde/ & bring thē againe into their owne lande: yea, I wil make one people of thē in the land/ vpon ye mountaines of Israel, ād they shal haue but one kig. They shal no mor be two peoples from hense forth, nether be dyuyded into two kyngdoms: they shal also defile thē selues nomore wt their abhominations, Idoles ād al their wycked doinges. I wyl help thē out of all their dwelling places, wherin they haue sinned: & wil so clense thē, that they shal be my people, and I their God.

G Dauid my seruaūt shalbe their king & they al shal haue one shepharde only. They shal walcke in my lawes, & my commaundementes shall they both keape and fulfill. They shal dwel in the lād, ye I gaue vnto Iacob my seruaūt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yea euē i the same lād shal they, their children/ & their childers children dwel for euer more: and my seruaunt Dauid shalbe their euerlasting prīce.

Moreouer

Moreouer I wyl make a bond of peace wyth theym, whyche shalbe vnto them an euerlastinge couenaunt. I wyl satle them also/ and multiply them, my sanctuary wyll I set among them for euer-more. My dwellyng shalbe wyth them yea I wylbe theyr God/ and they shall be my people. Thus the Heathen also shall knowe/ that I the Lorde am the holy maker of Israell: when my sanctuary shal be amonge them for euermore

He prophecyeth that, Gog and Magog shall come wyth an appoynted hoste into the lande of promes theyr intent. He reherseth that the comming of gog was before prophecyed of the prophetes. The destruction of hym.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

1 And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde Gog in the Lande of Magog whyche is the chefe prynce at Mesech and Tubal: prophecy agaynste hym, and saye: Thus saieth the Lord god: O Gog thou chefe Prynce Mesech and Tuball: Beholde I wyll vpon thee and wyl turne thee aboute/ and put a byt in thy chawes: I wyll brynge thee forth & al thyne hoost both horse and horsmen, whyche be all weaponed of the best fashyon: A great people, that handle altogether speares shyldes and swerdes: the Perses, Moryans and wythe sheim the Lybians, whiche all beare shyldes and helmettes Gomer and all his hostes: the house of Thogorma out of the north quarters and al hys hoostes/ yea and muche people wyth thee.

B Therfor prepare thee, sett thy selfe in araye with all thy people, that are come vnto thee by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalte be visited, and in the latter yeres thou shalt come into the lande that hath ben destroyed with the swearde, and nowe is replenished agayne wyth dyuerse people vpon the Mountaynes of Israell, which haue longe lyen waste. Yea, they be brought out of the nacions, ãd dwel all safe. Thou shalt com vp lyke a stormy weather, to couer the lande, and as it were a darcke cloude: thou withe all thyne hostes, and a great multitude of people with thee.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shal many C thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyne myschefe, a saye: I wyl vp to yonder playne lande, seig they syt at ease, and dwel so safely (for they dwel all without any walles, they haue neither barres nor dores) to spoile them to robbe them, to laye hande vpõ their so wel inhabited wyldernesses: agaynst that people, that is gathered together from amonge the Heathen, whiche haue gotten cattail and good, and dwel in the myddest of the lande. Thẽ shal Saba, and Dedan/ and the merchauntes of Tharsis with al their worthyes saye vnto thee: Art thou come to robbe? hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spoyle? to take syluer and gold: to cary awaie cattell and good: and to haue a greate praye?

Therfore/ O thou sonne of man, ye D shalt prophecy and saye vnto Gog: Thus sayeth the lorde god: In that daye thou shalt know, that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalt com from thy place out of the north partes thou and muche people with thee/ whiche ryde vpon horses, whereof there is a grete multitude ãd an innumerable sorte: yea thou shalt come vpon my people of Israell, as a cloude to couer the lande. This shal come to passe in ye latter dayes. I wyll brynge thee vp in to my lande, that the Heathen maye know me: when I get me honour vpon thee O Gog, before their eyes.

Thus saieth the lord God: Thou art he, of whome I haue spoken afore tyme, by my seruauntes the prophetes of Israel, whyche prophecyed in those dayes and yeares, that I shoulde brig thee vpon theym.

E At the same tyme, when Gog commeth vp into the lande of Israel (sayeth the Lorde God) shal my indygnacyon go forth in my wrath. For in my gelowsye and hote displeasure I haue deuysed, that there shal be a greate trouble in the lande of Israel at that tyme The very fyshes in the sea, the foules of the ayre, the beastes of the feld/ and al the men that are vpõ the earth, shal tremble for feare of me.

The hylles also shalbe turned vp syde downe, the starres of stone shall fall/and al walles shall syncke to the grounde. I wyll call for a swearde vpon them in all my mountaynes, sayeth the Lorde God: so that euery mans swerde shall be vpon another. Wyth pestilence and bloud wyl I punysh hym: stormye rayne and hayle stones, fyre and brymstone/wyll I cause to rayne vpon hym and all hys heape, ye and vpon al that great people that is wt hym. Thus wyll I be magnyfyed, honored and knowen among the heathē: that they maye be sure, howe that I am the Lorde.

He sheweth the destruction of Gog and Magog. The graue of gog and of hys host. He prophecyeth that gog and hys company shalbe deuoured of byrdes and beastes. Wherfore the house of Israell is wasted. Theyr bryngynge agayne from captiuitee is promysed.

The .xxxix. Chapter.

A Therfore O thou sunne of mã prophecy agaynst Gog and speake: Thus sayth the lord God; Beholde O Gog: thou chefe prince at Mesech and Tuball/I wyll vpon thee/ & turne thee aboute, and carye thee forth, & leade thee from the north partes, and bryng thee vp to the mountaynes of Israell. As for thy bowe I wyll smyte it out of thy left hãd and cast thyne arowes out of thy ryghte hand. Thou wythall thyne heape, and al the people that is wyth thee/must fal vpon the mouñtaynes of Israel. Then wil I geue thee vnto the foules and wylde beastes of the felde, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God.

Into Magog and amonge those that syt so carelesse in the Iles: wyll I sende a fyre, and they shall know, that I am ye lorde. I wyll make also the name of my holynes to be knowen among my people of Israell: and I wyl not let my holy name be euell spoken of any more: but the very heathen also shall knowe, that I ã the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. Behold it commeth and shalbe fulfylled in dede sayeth the Lorde God. Thys is the daye wherof I haue spoken.

They that dwell in the cytyes of Israell shal go forthe and set fyre vpon the weapons, and burne them: shyldes/bowes and arowes/byls and clubbes: seuen yeares shall they be burnynge therof, so that they shall els brynge no styckes frõ the feld, nether haue nede to hew downe, eny out of the wodde: For they shal haue weapons enow to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoile those that spoyled them sayeth the Lord God.

At the same tyme wyll I geue vnto Gog, a place to be buryed in, in Israell: euen the valley where thorow men go from the east to ye sea ward. Those that trauayle therby/shall abhorre it. There shall Gog and al hys people be buryed: ãd it shalbe called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes long shal the house of Israell be buryenge of them that they maye clense the lande. Yea all the people of the lande shall burye them, O, it shall be a gloryouse daye, when I gett me that honoure, sayeth the Lorde God. They shall ordene men also to be dede buryers, euer goynge thorowe the land/and appoynt them certayn places to burye those in whych remayne vpon ye felde, that the lande maye be clensed. From ende to ende shal they seke and ye vii monethes longe. Now those that go thorw the land where they se a mãs bone they shall set vp a token by it/ tyll the deed buryers haue buryed it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the cytye shalbe called, Hamonah: Thus shal they make ye lande clene.

And thou sonne of man, thus sayeth ye lord God: Speake vnto al the foules and euery byrd yea and to all the wylde beastes of the felde: heape you together and come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter that I haue slayne for you: euen a greate slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israell: eate flesh, and drynke bloude. Ye shall eate the flesh of the worthyes, and drynke the bloude of the prynces of the lande: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the goates, and of the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eate the fat your belyfull, and drynke bloud, tyll ye be dronken of the slaughter, whiche I haue slayn vnto you.

Fyll

fyll you at my table, wyth horses and strong horsemen: with captaynes and all men of warre, sayeth the lorde god.

I wyl brynge my glory also amōg the Gentiles, that al the Heathen maye se my iudgement, that I haue kepte, & my hande whyche I haue layde vpon them: ye the house of Israel may know, how that I am the Lorde theyr God/ from that daye forth. And the Heathen shal knowe, that whē as the house of Israel were led into captiuitee: it was for their wickednes sake/ because they offended me.

For the which cause I hyd my face from them, and delyuered them into ye handes of their enemyes ye they might al be slayne with the swearde. Accordig to their vnclenesse and vnfaithful dealynges, so haue I entreated them/ and hyd my face from them. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Now wyl I brynge agayne the captyues of Iacob and haue mercye vpon the whole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holy names sake. All theyr confusyon and offence that they haue done agaist me/ shal be takeen awaye: and so safelye shall they dwel in their lande, that no man shal make them afrayed. And when I haue brought them againe frō among the people, when I haue gathered them together out of their enemies landes, and am praysed in them before many heathen: then shal they knowe, that I am the Lorde their god, whiche suffred them to be led into captiuytee among ye heathē, but now haue brought them agayne into their owne lād, & not left one of them yonder.

After that, wyl I hyd my face no more from them/ but wyl poure out my spirite vpon the house of Israel, saieth the Lorde God.

¶ The shewing of the restore of the temple that was to come, is shewed vnto the Prophete

A IN the. xxv. yeare of oure captyuitee, in the beginig of the yeare, the. x. daye of the moneth: that is ye xiiii. yeare, after that ye citie was smitten downe: the same daye came the hand of the Lord vpon me, & caried me forth: euen in ye lād of Israell brought he me in the vysyones of GOD and set me downe vppon a marueilous hye mountayne, wherupon there was a buyldyng (as it had bene of a Cytie) toward the north.

Thether he caryed me, and behold B there was a manne/ whose symilytude was lyke brasse whyche had a threde of flaxe in hys hande, and a meterodde also. He stode in the dore, ād sayd vnto me: marcke wel wyth thyne eyes, hercke to wyth thine eares, ād fasten it in thine herte, what soeuer I shall shewe thee: for to thintēt that they might be shewed thee, therfore arte thou brought hether. And what soeuer thou seest/ thou shalt certify the house of Israell therof.

Beholde there was a wall on the outsyd round about the house: the meterodde that he hadd in hys hande was sixe cubites longe and a spanne. So C he measured the bredthe of the buyldyng, which was a meterodde/ and the heyght also a meterod. Then came he vnto the east dore, and went vp the stayres and measured the postes of the dore wherof euery one was a meterod thick Euery chamber was a meterod longe and brode: betwene the chambers wer fyue cubites. The post of the dore wt in the porche was one meterodde. He measured also the porche of the innermer dore, whych conteyned a meterod. Then mesured he the entry of the dore that conteyned eyght cubytes, and his pyllers two cubytes: & this entry stode inwarde.

The chambers of the dore east ward D were thre on euery side: alike brode ād lōge. The pyllers also ye stode of both the sides/ wer of one mesure. After this he measured ye wydnes of ye dore which was. x. cubites, & ye depth of ye dore xiii cubites. The edge before ye chambers was one cubite brode vpō both ye sides and the chābers six cubytes wid of eyther syde. He measured the dore frō the rigge of one chābre to another, whose wydnes was xxv, cubytes, & one dore stod agaig another. He made pillers also lx cubi tes hye, roūd about ye courte dore Before ye inward part vnto ye fore entry of ye innermar dore, were L. cubites. The chambers & their pillers win round about vnto y dore, had syde wyndowes: So had y fore entries also, whose wyndowes wente rounde aboute wythin. And vpon the pyllers there stode date trees.

Then brought he me in to the fore courte, where as were chambres and paued worckes made in the fore Courte round about. xxx. chambres vpon one paued worcke.
D Now the paued worcke was a longe besyde the dores/ and that was the lower paued worcke. After this he measured the breadth from the lower dore, vnto the ynnermer courte of the out syde, which had an. C. cubytes vpon the east and the north parte. And the dore in the vttermost courte towarde the north measured he after the lenght and bredth: hys thre chambres also on ether syde/ w hys pyllers and fore entryes: whych had euen the measure of the fyrst dore. Hys heyght was fifti cubytes, the bredth xxv cubytes: hys wyndowes and porches w hys date trees, had euen lyke measure as the dore towarde the east: there were. vii steppes to go vp vpon, and theyr porche before them. Now the dore of the ynnermer court stode streyght ouer agaynst y dore, that was towarde the north east. From one dore to another, he measured, C cubytes.

After that he brought me to the south syde, where there stode a dore towarde the south: whose pyllers and porches he measured/ these had the fyrst measure: and wyth theire porches they had wyndowes round aboute, lyke the fyrst wyndowes. The heygth was. l. cubytes, the bredth. xxv. wyth steppes to go vp vpõ: hys porche stode before hym, wyth hys pyllers and date trees on eyther syde. And the dore of the innermer courte stode towarde the southe/ and he measured from one doore to another an hundred Cubytes. So he brought me in to the ynnermer courte thorowe the doore of the south syde: which he measured, & it had the measure a fore sayde. In lyke maner hys Chambres pyllers, and fore entryes, had euen the fore sayde measure also. And he had wyth hys porches rounde about, wyndowes of. L. cubytes heyght & xxv. cubites brede. The porches round about were. xxv. cubytes long, & v. cubites brode. And hys porche reached vnto the vttermost courte; vpon hys pyllers their were date trees, and. viii. steppes to go vp vpon.

He brought me also into the innmost court vpon the east syde and measured the dore acordyng to the measure afore sayde. Hys chambers/ pyllers, and porches had euen the same measure as the fyrst had: ad wyth hys porches he had windowes rounde aboute. The heygth was. l. cubites, the bredth xxv. cubites: hys porches reached vnto the vttermost courte: hys pyllers also had date trees on eyther syde/ and viii steppes to goo vp vpon. And he brought me to the northe doore, and measured it whych also had the foresayd measure. Hys chambers/ pyllers and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heyght was L. cubites/ and the bredth xxv. hys pyllers stode towarde the vttermost court and. vpon them both were date trees & viii steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambre also, whose intraunce was at the dore pyllers/ and ther the burnt offrynges were washed.

In the dore porche, there stode on either syde two tables for the slaughtynges: To sleye the burntofferinges/ synneofferinges and trespaceoffringes therevpon. And on the out syde as men go forthe to the north dore, there stode two tables. Foure tables stod on ether syde of the dore. viii. tables wher vpon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burntoffringes a cubyte and a halfe longe and brode/ and one cubite hie wherevpon were layed the vessels and ornamentes, whych were vsed to be the burnte and slayne offringes, when they were slaughted. And within, there were hokes foure fingers brode/ fastened rounde about/ to hange flesh vpon, and vpon the tables was layed the offringe flesh. On the outside of the innermer dore/ were the syngers chambers in the inward court besyde the north dore ouer against the South. There stode one also, besyde y east dore northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chābre on the north syde belōgeth to y prestes that kepe the habytatyon: And thys towarde

towarde the north, is the Preestes that wayte vpon the aulter whiche be the sonnes of Sadoch, that do seruyce before the Lord in steade of the children of Leui. So he mesured the fore court which had in length an. C cubytes, and as much in bredth by the foure corners Now the aulter stode before the house And he brought me to the fore entre of the house & mesured the walls by the entre dore which were fyue cubites long on ether syde. The thicknes also of the dore on either syde, was thre cubytes.
The length of the porche was. xx. cubytes, the bredth. xi. cubites, and vpon steppes wente men vp to yt: By the walles also wer pillers / on either syde one.

The disposycion and deuyse of buyldig again the temple, & of the other thinges therto belonging.

The. xli. Chapter.

B After thys he broughte me to the temple, and mesured the postes: which were of bothe the sides. vi cubites thicke, accordyng to the wyd nesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the dore was. x cubytes and the wal les of the dore on eyther syde fiue cubytes. He measured the length therof, which conteyned. xl cubytes / and the bredth. xx. Then went he in, and mea sured the dore postes, whiche were two cubytes thicke: but the dore it self was syxe cubytes and the bredthe of the dore was. vii. cubytes. He measured the lengthe and bredth therof, whych were euery one. xx. cubytes, before the teple And he sayde vnto me: this is the holyest of al. He measured al o the wal of the house, which was syxe cubytes.
The chambres that stode round about the house, wer euery one foure cubytes wyde, and one stode hard vpo another wherof there were. xxxiii. And there stode postes beneth by the walles round about the house, to beare them the vp: but in the wall of the house they were not fastened. The syde chambres were the hier, the wyder / and hadd steppes B thorow therm round about the house Thus was yt wyder aboue, that from the lowest, men myght go to the hyeste and myddle chambres.
I sawe also that the house was very hie rounde aboute. The foundacyon of the syxe chambres was a meterodde: that is syxe cubytes brode. The thycknesse of the syde wall wythout, conteined fiue cubi-tes, and so dyd the out wall of the chambres in the house.
Betwene the chambers, was the wide nes xx. cubytes rounde about the house.
The chambre dores stode ouer agaynst the outwall, the one dore was towarde the north, the other towarde the South: and the thycknesse of the outwall was.
v. cubytes rounde about. Now the buyl dynge that was separated towarde the west / was. lxx. cubytes wyde: the wall of the buyldyng was. v. cubytes thycke round about, and the length foure score cubytes and ten. So he measured the house whych was an. C. cubytes long & the separated buyldyng wt the wal were an. C. cubytes long also. The wydnes before the house & of it that was separated towarde the East, was an. C. cubytes.
And he measured the length of the buyldynge before and behynde wyth the chambers vpon both the sydes: & it con-teyned a. C. cubytes. The innermer tem C ple, the porche of the fore court, the syde postes, these thre had syde wyndowes, & pyllers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde vp to the windowes. The wyndowes the selues were syled ouer wyth bordes: and thus was it aboue the dore, vnto the innmost house and wyth out also. Ye the whole wall on euery syde both wythin and wythout was syled ouer wyth greate bordes.
There were Cherubyns and date trees made also, so that one date tre stode euer betwixte two Cherubyns. One Cherub had two faces / the face of a man loking asyde towarde the date tre, and a lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde aboute in al the house. Ye the Cherubyns and date trees were made D from the ground vp aboue the dore, and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.
The byposites of the temple were foure squared, and the fashyon of the Sanctuary was eue as it appered vnto me

me a fore in the by, yon. The table was of wodde, thre cubytes hye and two cubites longe: hys corners, the lengthe and the walles were of wodde.

And he sayd vnto me: Thys is the table that shall stande before the Lorde. The temple and the holyest of al had either of them two dores and euery dore had two lytle wyckettes whyche were folden in one vpon another, on euery syde two.

And vpon the dores of the temple there were mad Cherubyns & date trees, lyke as vpon the walles: a greate thycke balke of wodde was before on the out syde of the porch. Upon both the sydes of the walles of the porche, theare were made deape wyndowes and date trees, hauyng beames and balkes, lyke as the house had.

¶ Of the chambres of the temple for the Preastes & the holy thynges.

The .xlii. Chapter.

A Then caryed he me out in to the fore court to warde the north, and brought me into the chambre that stod ouer agaynst ye backe buyldyng north warde, which had the length of an C. cubytes, whose dore turned towarde the north. The widenesse côteyned .L. cubytes, ouer agaynst the .xx. cubytes of the ynnermer courte, & agaynst the pacied work that was in the fore court. Besyde al these thre, there stode pyllers, one ouer agaynst another. And before thys chambre there was a place of .x. cubytes wyde, and wyth in was a waye of one cubyte wyde, and theyr dores towarde the north. Thus the hyest chambres were alwaye narower then the lowest and myddelmost of the buyldyng: for they bare chambre vpon chambre, and stode thre together one vpon another not hauyng pyllers lyke the fore court: therfor were they smaller then those beneth and in the myddest, to reken from the grounde vp warde.

The wall wyth out that stode by ye cham
B bres towarde the vttermost court vpon the fore syde of the chambres, was .L. cubytes long: for the length of ye vttermost chambres in the fore court was .L. cubytes also: but the length therof before the temple was an C. cubytes.

These chambres had vnder them an intraunce of the east syde, wherby a man myght go into the out of the fore court, thorow the thycke wall of the fore court towarde the east ryght ouer agaynst the separated buyldynge. Before the same buylding vpon this syde ther were chambers also whych had a waye vnto them, lyke as the chambers on the north side of the same length and wydenesse.

Theyr intraunce, fashyon and dores were also of the same maner. Yea euen C lyke as the other chamberdores were, so were those also of the south syde. And before the way toward the syngers steppes on the east syde there stode a dore to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: the chambers towarde the Northe and the southe whych stande before the backe buyldyng those be holye habitations, wherein the pryestes that do seruice before the Lorde must eate the moost holy offrynges: and there must they laye the moost holy offringes: meatofferynges, synneofferynges & trespasse offrynges, for it is an holy place. When the prestes come therin, they shall not go oute into the fore courte: but (seyng they be holye) they shall leaue the clothes of theyr ministration, and put on other garmêts, when they haue any thing to do wyth the people. D

Now when he had measured all the ynnemer house, he brought me forth thorowe the east porte and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde wyth the meterodde, whych round about conteyned .v. C. meterroddes. And ye north syde measured he whych côtayned rounde aboute euen so muche. The other two sydes also to warde, the southe and ye west (whych he also mesured) conteyned eyther of them .v. C. meterroddes. So he mesured all the four sydes where there went a wal round about .v. C. meterods long, & as broade also, whych separated the holye from the vnholy.

Describeth the glorye of God goynge into the temple, from whence it had before departed. He mencyoneth the idolatrye of the chyldren of Israel, for which they were consumed and broughte to nought. He is commaunded to call them agayne to repentaunce.

The.xliii.Chapter.

A So he brought me to the dore, that turneth towarde the east. Beholde then came the glory of the God of Israell from oute of the east, whose voyce was lyke a great noyse of waters/and the earth was lyghtened wythe hys glorye. Hys sight to loke upon/was lyke the fyrst that I sawe, when I wente in, what tyme as the cytye should haue ben destroyed: ād lyke the vysion that I saw by the water of Cobar. Then fel I upon my face, but the glorye of the Lorde came into the house thorow the east doore. So a wynd toke me up, and brought me into the innermer court, and behold the house was full of the glorye of the Lorde.

I herde one speakinge unto me out of B the house, and there stode one by me, that sayde unto me: O thou sonne of man / thys rowme is my sete, & the place of my fotesteppes, wher as I wyl dwel amōg ỹ chylderen of Israel for euermore so that the house of Israell shall noo more defy le my holye name, neyther they nor theyr kynges thorow e theyre whordome, tho-row theyr hye places & thorow ỹ dead bo dys of theyr kyngs: whych haue buylded theyr thresholdes in maner herd upon my thresholdes/and theyre postes almooste at my postes/so that there is but a bare wall betwyxte me and them. Thus haue they defyled my holy name wyth their ab hominacions, that they haue committed wherfore I haue destroyed them in my wrath. But now they shal put awaye their whordome and the dead bodyes of theyr kynges oute of my syghte, that I maye dwell among them for euermore. Therfore O thou sonne of man)shewe thou the housholde of Israell a temple, that they maye be ashamed of theyr wycked-nes, and measure the selues an example thereat.

And when they bee ashamed of all C theyr worckes then shew them the forme & fashyon of the temple: the cōmyng in, ỹ goyng oute, al the maner and descryptiō thereof: yea al the uses and ordynaunces of it, that they maye keepe and fulfyll all the facyons and customes thereof.

Thys is the descrypcion of the house, Above uppon the Mounte rounde a-boute all the corners/it shalbe the holy-est of all. Beholde, that is the descryptytyon and fashyon of the house. Thys is the measure of the aultar (after the tru cu byte/whych is a panne longer then ano ther cubyte) hys bottome in the myddest was a cubyte longe and wyde, and the ledge that wente rounde about it, was a spanne broade. This is the height of the aultar: from the grounde to the lower steppes to ỹ lenght is two cubites and the bredeth one cubite, and from ỹ lo wer steppes of the hygher are foure cu-bites, and the bredth but one cubite.

The aultar was foure cubytes hye and from the Aultar upwarde stoode D foure hornes / ād it was xii. cubites lōg and. xii, cubites brode uppon the foure corners. The couueringe of the aultars was xiiii. cubites long and broade up on the foure corners, and the ledge ỹ wente rounde about/had halfe a cuby te: and the bottom therof round about one cubyte/hys steppes stode towarde the easte. And he sayde unto me.
Thou sonof man, thus sayth the lorde GOD: These ar the ordinaunces and lawes of the Aultar, in the day when it is made to offre burntofferynges / and to sprynckle bloude ther upon. To the prestes, to the Leuites that be of the se de of Sadoch/and treade before me to do me seruice, sayth the lorde God: Unto these geue thou a yong bullock/for a synne offrynge: and take the bloude of hym and sprynckle hys four hornes wythal and the four corners of the aul ter coueringe: with the ledge that goeth round aboute, here wyth shalt thou cleense it, and reconcyle it. Then shalt take the bullocke also of the Synneof frynge/and burne hym in a scorneful place without the sanctuary.

The nexte daye, take a geotbucke E wythout blemmyshe for a sinoffring to reconcyle the Aulter withe all, lyke as it was reconcyled wyth the bullock Now when thou hast made it cleane, then offre a yong bullock without ble-mysh and a ramme out of the flocke wt out blemish also. Offer them before the lorde, and let the prist cast salt therup on and geue them so unto the lorde for a burnt offring.

Seuen dayes shalt thou bringe, euery daye a gootbuck. A yonge bullocke & a ramme of the flocke (bothe withoute blemysh) shal they offer. Seuen daies shal they reconcile ād clense the alter, & offer vpon it. When these dayes are expyred/then vpon ẏ. viii. daye and so forth, the prestes shal offer their burnt offrynges and healthe offrynges vppon the aulter: So wyll I be mercyfull vnto you/sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ He sheweth what dore of the temple is shut. He is commaunded to vpbraide the people wyth their offence. The vncircumcysed in hert & in the flesh. Who are to be admitted to the seruice of ẏ people, and who to be refused. He sheweth what prestes he wold haue admitted into the holy place, and also theyr office.

The xliiii. Chapter.

After this, he brought me a gayne to the outward dore A of the Sanctuarye on the East syde, and that was shut. Then sayde the Lord vnto me: This dore shalbe styl shut, & not opened for eny mā to go thorowe it but only for the lord God of Israel: yea he shal go thorow it, els shall it be shut stil. The prince hi self shal cōe thorow it/that he maye eate breade before the Lord. At the porche shal he come in, & there shal he go out agayne. Then brought he me to the dore, vpō ẏ north syde of ẏ house. And as I loked about me, beholde, the glorye of the lord fylled ẏ house: and I fel down vpon my face. So the Lord spake vnto me: O ẏ sonne of mā, fasse this to thyne hert beholde, and take dyligent heade to all that I wyl saye vnto thee/concerning al the ordinaunces of the lorde and al his lawes: ponder wel with thine hert the cōmyng in of ẏ house & the going forth of ẏ sāctuary: & tel ẏ obstinat hou sholde of Israel: Thus sayeth ẏ lorde B god: O house of Israell/ye haue now done ynough, with al youre abhomina cyons, seynge that ye haue brought e in to my Sanctuary straungers, hauynge vncyrcumcysed heartes and fleshe, wherethorowe my Sanctuarye is defyled, whē ye offre me bread, fat, & blode.

Thus with al youre abhominaci ons ye haue broken my couenaunt/& not kepe the holy ordinaūces of my sāc tuary: but set kepers of my Sanctuary, euen after your owne minde. Ther for thus saieth the lord god: Of al the straungers that dwel among the chyl- C dren of Israel/no straūger (whose hert and flesh is not circumcised) shal com within my Sanctuary: No nor the Le uites that be gone back fro me, & haue disceaued the people of Israel with al errours/going after their ydoles: rather for shall they beare theire owne wyckednes. Shulde they be set and orde-ned to mynyster vnder the dores of the house of my sanctuary: And to do seruice in ẏ house: to slaye burntofferigs and sacrifices for the people: to stande before them, and to serue them: seynge the seruyce ẏ they do them, is befor ther Idols, and cause the house of Israel to stomble thorow their wickednes. For ẏ D which cause I haue pluckte out myne hand ouer them (saieth the Lord) for now they muste beare their owne ini-quitye, and not to com nye me, to serue me with their presthod, in my Sanctuary, and moost holyest of al: ẏ they mate bere their owne shame and abho minacyons, whiche they haue donne.
Shoulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to all the seruyce that is do ne therin: but the prestes the Leuites the sonnes of Sadoch, that kepte the holy ordynaunces of my Sanctuarye when the chylderen of Israell were go ne fro me shall come to me to do me ser uyce, to stande before me, and to offre me the fat ād the bloud/saieth the lord God.

They shal go into my sanctuarye C and treade before my table/to doo me seruice, and to wayte vpon myne ordy naunces. Now when they go in at the dores of the ynnermer court, they shal put on lynen clothes, so that no wolly ne come vpon them, whyle they do ser uice vnder the dores of the ynnermer court & within. They shal haue fayre lin nen bonettes vpon theyr heade and ly nen breches vpon theyr loynes/which in theyr labor they shal not put about them: And when they go forthe to the People into the outwarde courte: they shall put of the clothes/where in they haue ministred and laye them in the habytacion of the Sanctuarye and put on other apparell, leaste they vnhalowe the people with theyr clothes.

F They shall not shaue theyr heades, nor nourysshe the busshe of theyre heare: but rounde theyr heades onely. All the Prestes that go into the ynnost courte shall drynke no wyne. They shal mary no wyddow, nether one that is put from her husbande: but a maide of the sede of the house of Israell, or a wyddowe, that hath had a pryest before.

They shall shewe my people the dyfference betwene the holy and vnholy, be-G twyxte the cleane and vncleane. If anye dyscorde aryse, they shal dyscerne it/and geue sentence after my iudgementes.
My solempne feastes, my lawes and ordy-naunces shal they keape/and halowe my Sabbothes. They shal come at no dead person to defyle them selues (excepte it be father or mother, sonne or daughter, brother or syster that hathe had yet no Husband) in suche they maye be defyled.

And when he is clensed there shal be reckened vnto hym seuen dayes: and yf he go into the sanctuarye agayne to do seruice, he shall brynge a synne offryng sayeth the Lorde God. They shal haue a heritage: yea I my selfe wylbe theyr herytage/els shal ye geue them no posses-syon in Israeel, for I am theyr possessiō.
The meatofferyng, synneofferynge ād trespasse offrynge shal they eate: and eue-ry dedicate thynge in Israell shall be theyrs. The fyrst lynges of al the fyrst fruites, and all fre wyll offerynges shalbe the Pryestes.

Ye shall geue vnto the Pryest also the fyrstlynges of youre dowe, that GOD maye prospere the resydue. But noo deade caryon shall the pryeste eate/ nor suche as is deuoured of wyld bestes foules or catell.

The Notes.

a That is: consydre or ymmagyne thys in thyne herte.

¶ Out of all the land of promes are there separate iiii. porcions of whych the fyrst is geuen to the prestes and to the temple, the second to the leuytes. The thyrde to the cytye, the fourth to the prynce. An ex-hortacion to the heades of Israell. Of iust weyghtes and measures. Of fyrst frutes. &c.

When ye deuyde the lande by the lot, ye shal put asyde one parte for the Lord tobe holy from otheyr landes: namely A xxv. M. meterroddes longe, Eze.xlviii.b & x. M. brode. This shalbe holy, as wide as it is rounde aboute. Of thys parte there shall belonge vnto ẏ Sanctuary
v. C. meterroddes in all the foure corners and .l. cubytes wyde rounde aboute to ẏ suburbes. And frō this measure/namely of xxv. M meterroddes longe, and x. M brode, thou shalt measure, wherin the Sanctuary and the holyest of all maye stande.

The resydue of that holy grounde shall be the prestes, whych do seruyce in the Sanctuary of the Lorde, and goo in before the Lorde to serue hym/that they maye haue rowme to dwell in.
As for the Sanctuary, it shall stande B for it self: and to the Leuytes that serue in the house, there shalbe geuen .xx. haby-tacyons, of the xxv. M. length and .x. M breadth: ye shal geue also vnto the cytie a possessyon of .v. M. meterroddes brode and .xxv. M. longe, besyde the parte of the Sāctuary: that shal be for the whole house of Israel. Upon both the sydes of the Sanctuaryes part/and by the cytye there shalbe geuen vnto the prynce what soeuer lyeth ouer agaynst the cytye as farre as reacheth westward & eastwarde C whych shalbe as long as one parte, from the west vnto the east.

This shalbe his awne lande in Israel/that my prynces be no more chargeable vnto my people. And such as remaineth yet ouer in the lande shalbe geuen to ẏ house of Israel accordynge to their trybes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O ye prynces, ye haue now oppressed and destroyed ynough: now leaue of, handle now accordyng to the thynge, that is equall ād lauful: and thrust out my people no more sayeth the Lorde God. Ye shal haue a true weyght, a true a Ephah and a true b Bath. The Ephah and the Bath shalbe a lyke. One Bath shall cōteyne the tenth parte of an Homer and D so shall one Ephah do. Their measure shall be after the Homer. One Sycle maketh .xx. Geras. c Two .xx. Sycles, ād .xxv and .xv. Sycles make a pounde.

DD Thys

This is the heaueoffringe/that ye shal geue to be heaued, namely, ẏ .xvi. parte of an Ephah, out of an Homer of whete and the .xvi. parte of an Ephah, out of an Homer of barley. The oyle shalbe measured with the Bath: euen the tenth parte of one Bath out of a * Cor.

Ten Bathes make one Homer: for one Homer fylleth ten Bathes. And one lambe from two hondreth shepe out of the pasture of Israel, for a meatoffering, burnt offering and healthofferi[n]g to reconcyle them/ sayeth the lorde god.

Al the people of the lande shall geue this heaue offeryng with a fre wyl.

Agayne, it shalbe the princes part to offer burntofferynges, meat offeringes and drinckeofferinges unto the Lorde
G in the holydayes, new Mones/ Sabbothes, and in al hie fastes of the house of Israel. The synofferi[n]g, meateofferynge burntoffering and healthofferi[n]g shall be geue[n]/ to reconcyle the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God: The fyrst day of the first moneth thou shalt take a yong bullock without blemish, and clense the sanctuary. So the preste shall take of the bloude of the synofferyng, and sprynckle it upon the postes of the house, and upo[n] the foure corners of the aultar, with the dorepostes of the ynnermer courte. And thus shalt thou do also the seuenth daie of the moneth (for suche as haue sinned of ignoraunce or beynge dysceaued) to reconcyle the house withal. Upon the .xiiii. daye of the moneth ye shal kepe Easter. Seuen dayes shal the feast contynue, wherein there shal no sower ner leuened bread be eaten.

Upon the same daie shall the prince geue for him self and for al his people of the lande, a bullock for a sinofferyng And in the feaste of the seuen dayes he shal offre euery daie a bullock & a ram, that are without blemish for a burntofferyng unto the lord: and an he goote dayly for a synofferyng. For the meate offerynges/ he shal geue euer an Ephah to a bullocke, an Ephah to a ram, & an Hen of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the .xv. daye of the seuenthe Moneth, he shall kepe the seuen dayes holy one after another, euen as the other seuen dayes: wyth the synne offring/ burntoffering, meate offryng, and wyth the oyle.

a ✣ Ephah is a measure of drye thinges.
b ✣ Bath is a measure of moyste thynges.
c ✣ So .xx. sycles, and .xv. and .xxv. make a pounde That is .lx. sicles make a pounde. Howbeit euerye one of these numbers was wonte to haue hys proper name alone.
d ✣ Cor and Homer are both one.

¶ The sacryfice of the Sabboth and of the newe moone. Thorow whych dores they must go in, or out of the temple, &c.

¶ The .xlvi. Chapter.

Thus sayeth the lorde God: The doore of the ynnermer courte toward the east, shal be shut the vi worck dayes but in the sabboth & in the day of the newe Moone, it shalbe opened. The[n] shal the prince co[m]e under the dore porche, and stande still without by the dore cheke. So ẏ prestes shall offre up hys burnte and healthe offerynges And he shal worshyppe at the dore poste, and go hys waye forth agayne, but the dore shall no more bee shut tyll the euening. A

On the same maner shal the people of the la[n]d also do theyr worshyp before the Lorde, without thys dore upon the Sabbothes and new mones. This is B now the burntofferynge, that ẏ prince shall bryng unto the Lord upon ẏ sabboth: syxe lambes without blemysh, & a ram without blemish, and an Ephah for a meatoffering, with ẏ ram. As for the la[m]bes, he maie geue as many meatofferinges to them, as he wil, & an Hen of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of the newe monethe, it shalbe a yong bullocke wythout blemyshe, syxe lambes & a ram also without blemysh. With C ẏ bullocke he shal geue an Ephah, and with the ram an Epah also for a meteofferi[n]g: but to the la[m]bes, what he maie come by. And euer an Hen of oile to an Ephah. When the prince commeth he shal go under the dore porche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But whe[n] the people of the la[n]d come before the Lord in the hye solempne feastes, as many as come in by the north dore to do worship, shal go out agayne at the south dore. And they ẏ com i[n] at ẏ south Dore, shall goo Forth agayne at the North dore.

There shal none go oute at the dore where he cam in, but shal go forth ryght ouer on the oth er syde, and the prynce D shal go in and out amonge them.
Upon the solempne and hye feaste dayes, thys shalbe the meatofferyng: An Ephah to a bullock & an Ephah to a ram/and to the lambes: as many as he wil, but euer an hin of oile to an Ephah.
Now when the prynce bryngeth a burnt offerynge or an healthe offerynge wyth a fre wyll vnto the Lorde, the east dore shalbe op ned vnto hym, that he may do wyth hys burnt and healthofferynges/as he doth vpō the Sabboth, and when he goeth forth, ẏ dore shal be shutt after hym agayne. He shal daylye brynge vnto the Lord a lambe of a yere old wout blemysh for a burnt offeryng: thys shall he do euery mornynge. And for a meateofferynge he shal geue the syxte parte of an Epha/and the thirde parte of an Hin of oyle (to myngle wyth the cakes) euery mournyng. Yet hys sha: be a daylye meatofferynge vnto the Lorde for an euer lastynge ordynaunce: and thus shall the lambe, the meatofferynge & oyle be geuē euery mornynge, for a daylye burntofferynge.
Moreouer, thus saith the Lord god: If the prynce geue a gyfte vnto eny of hys sōnes, then shal it be hys sōnes heri tage perpetuall/that he maye possesse it.
But If he wil geue one of hys seruaun tes some of hys heretage, it shal be hys to the fre yeare, & thē to returne agayne vnto the prynce: for hys heretage shalbe hys sonnes only. The prynce also shall take none of the peoples enherytaunce/ner put them from theyr possessyon: but to hys owne sonnes shal he geue his pos session, that my people be not scatered abrode, but that euery man maie haue his owne.
And he brought me thorow the in-traunce at the syde of the dore to the haby tacion of the Sanctuari, that belongeth to the prestes & stode towarde the north, and beholde there was a place vpon the West syde, then sayde he vnto me: This is ẏ place, where the prestes shal dyght ẏ trespase and synofferynges, and bake the meatofferinges: that thei nede not beare them in to the out warde courte, and so to vnhalow the people.
So he brought me into the vttermost courte, rounde aboute all the foure corners. Behold in euery corner of the fore courte/theare was yet a lytle courte.
Ye in al the foure corners of the court, there was made alytle court e of xl. cu-bites longe/and. xxx. cubites broade.
These foure lytle Courtes were of one lyke measure, and there wente a rygge wall round about them al foure vnder the whyche there were harthes made rounde aboute. Then sayde he vnto me: Thys is the kytchyn/where ẏ mynisters of the house shall dyght the slayne offerynges of the people.

The vysions of the water that come oute of the temple: The coastes of the lande of promes, and ẏ dyuision therof by trybes.

The. xlvii. Chapter.

After thys he brought me a-gayne before the dore of th: A house: & behold/ther gushed oute waters from vnder the posts of the house eastward (for the house stode towarde the easte) ẏ ranne downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, whych lyeth to the aultar South warde. Then caryed he me oute of ẏ north dore, and brought me forth theare rounde about by the vttermost dore that turneth eastwarde. Beholde, there came forth the water vpon the ryght syde.
Nowe whan the man that had the mete-rod in hys hand went vnto the east dore, he measured a. M. Cubytes, and then he brought me thorow ẏ water, euē to the ā-cles: so he measured yet a thousand, and brought me thorowe the water agayne vnto the knees: yeat measured he a thou sande, and brought me thorow the water vnto the loynes. After thys he measured a thousand agayne/then was it suche a ryuer, that I might not wade thorow it: B The water was so depe, that it was nede full to haue swymmed/for it myghte not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene thys/O thou sonne of mā ād wyth that, he brought me to the ryuer banck agayne.
Now when I came there/there stode many trees vpon ether syde of the ryuer bancke. Then sayde he vnto me: Thys water that floweth out towarde the east and runneth downe into the playne felde commeth into the Sea : and from the Sea it runneth oute, and maketh the waters whole. Yea al that lyue and moue, wherunto thys ryuer commeth/ shall recouer. And where thys water cometh/theare shalbe muche fysh. For all that cometh to thys water, shalbe lusty and whole. By thys ryuer shall the fysshers stande from Engaddi, vnto En Eglaim, and there sprede out theyr nettes: for theare shall be greate heapes of fysh, lyke as in the mayne sea. As for hys claye and pyttes/they shall not be whole, for whyle it shalbe occupyed for salt.

By thys ryuer vpon both the sydes of the shore/there shall grow all maner of fruteful trees, whose leaues shal not fall of, nether shall theyr frute perysshe: but euer be rype at theyr monethes, for theyr water runneth out of theyr sanctuarye. Hys frute is good to eate and his leafe profitable for medicine. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Let thys be the G border, wherin ye shall diuyde the land vnto the xii. tribes of Israell/wyth the lyne. Part it indifferently vnto one as vnto another of the which I I swore vnto youre fathers, that it shoulde fall to youre enherytaunce.

Thys is the border of the land vpon the north syde/from the mayn sea, as men go to zadada: namely Hemath, Berotha Sabarim: from the borders of Damascus and Hemath vnto Hazar Tichon, and there lieth vpon the coastes of Heuran. Thus the borders from the sea forth, shalbe Hazar/euen the border of damascus the north, and the borders of Hemath, that is the north parte.

The east syde shall ye measure from Hauran and Damascus, from Galaad and the Lande of Israell by Jordane and so forth: from the sea coste/that lyeth eastwarde: and thys is the east part.

The southsyde is, from Thamar forth to the waters of strife vnto Cades, the ryuer, to the mayne sea: and that is the south parte.

The west parte: namely the greatte sea from the borders therof tyl a man come vnto Hemath: Thys is the Weste parte.

Thys lande shall ye haue amonge you, accordinge to the tribes of Israel; and deuide it to be an heritage for you, and for the straungers that dwell amonge you/and begette chyldren. For ye shal take them amonge the chyldren of Israell/lyke as though they were of your owne housholde and countre; and they shal haue heritage wyth you amonge the chyldren of Israell.

Loke in what trybe the straunger dwelleth, in the same trybe shall ye geue him hys heritage, sayeth the Lord God.

¶ The lottes of the vii. tribes. The partes of the possession of the prestes and of the temple, of the Leuites, of the citie, of the prynce, are rehersed. The lottes of the other tribes. The gates of the cytie.

The .xlviii. Chapter A

These are the Names of the Trybes that lye vppon the northesyde, by the waye of Hethlon, tyll thou commeste vnto Hemath and Hazar Enan, the borders of Damascus towarde the north besyde Hemath: Dan shall haue hys porcion from the east quarters vnto the west. Vpon the borders of Dan from the east syde vnto the weste, shall Asser haue hys porcion. Vpon the borders of Asser from the easte parte vnto the west shal Nepthali haue his porcion.

Vpon the bordes of Nephthali from the East quarter vnto the West/ shall Manasses haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Manasses from the east side B vnto the west, shal Ephraim haue hys porcyon. Vpon the borders of Ephraim from the east parte vnto the west, shall Ruben haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Ruben from the east quarter vnto the west shal Juda haue his porcyon: Vpon the borders of Juda from the east parte vnto the west, ye shal set asyde one porcyon .xxv. M. metrodes long & brode (lyke as another porcion from the east syde vnto the west) wherin the sanctuary shall stande.

As for the porcion, that ye shal separate out for the lord, it shalbe xxv. M longe and x. M brode. Which seperated holy porcyon shal belong vnto these: namely to the prestes, toward the north xxv. M and toward the west x M brode, toward the east x M brode also/& toward the south xxv. M long: wherin the Sanctuary of the lord shall stande. Yee this same place shalbe the prestes, that are of the chyldren of Sadoch, ād haue kept my holy ordinaūce which went not astraye in the erroure of the children of Israel, lyke as ÿ Le-uites are gone astray: and this separated pece that they haue of the land shal be the moste holy, harde vpon the borders of the leuites. And nexte vnto ÿ prestes, shal the Leuites haue. xxv M long & x M brode. This shalbe on eue-ry syde. xxv M longe, and x M brode.

Of this porcyon they shal sel nothyng nor make any permutaciō therof, lest the chefe of the land fal vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lord:

The other. v M after the bredeth ÿ lyeth by ÿ. xxv M. shalbe cōmō: it shal belong to the cytee ād to the suburbes

¶ The Boke of The Prophete Daniel.

The prophete sheweth the captiuitie of Jehoakym kyng of Juda. Of the sonnes that wer in captiuitie the kyng commaundeth to chose whych of them should be taught the learnyng and language of the Caldees They are allowed the kynges fedyng. Danyel absteneth from the meate of the kyng of Babylon. The science and instruction of these Chyldren.

The fyrst Chapter.

A In the thyrde yeare of the iiii.Re.24.a raygne of Jehoakim kyng ii.Pa.xxxvi of Juda/came Nabuchodo nosor kynge of Babylō vn to Jerusalem, and beseged it: & ÿ lord delyuered Jeoakim ÿ king of Juda into hys hande wyth certayne ornamentes of the house of god whiche he caryed awaye vnto the lande of Sennar, to the house of hys god, and ther he brought them into hys goddes treasurey. And the kyng spake vnto Aphanaz ÿ chef chamberlayne, that he should bring hym certayne of the chylderen of Israel that were come of the kynges sede, and of princes, yong spryngaldes wythout any blemysh, but fayre and welfauored instruct in all wysdome, connynge and vnderstanding, which were able to stād in the kynges palace, to rede & to learne for to speake Caldeish.

B Unto these the kynge appoynted a certayne porcyon of hys owne meate, & of the wyne whych he drancke hym selfe so to norysshe them thre yeare, that afterwarde they might stand before the king. Amonge these nowe were certaine of the chylderen of Juda: namely Daniel, Ananias, Mizael ād Azarias. Unto these ÿ chefe chamberlayn gaue other names, and called Daniel, Balthasar: Ananias Sidrach: Misael, Misach, and Azarias Abdenago. But Daniel was at apointe wyth hym selfe, that he wolde not be defyled, thorow the kynges meate/nor the wyne which he droncke. And thys he desyred of the chefe chamberlayn/least he

C shoulde defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniell fauour and grace before the cheafe Chamberlayne that he saide vnto him. I am afrayed of my Lord the kyng, which haue appoynted you your meat and drinck: lest he spie your faces to be worse lykīg then ÿ other spryngaldes of youre age, and so ye shal make me lose my headde vnto the kynge.

Then Daniel answered Melassar, whom the chefe champerlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Azarias, and sayde: O proue but ten daies with thy seruauntes, and let vs haue potage to eate/ & water to drinck then loke vpon oure faces, and theirs/ that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seist, so deale with thy seruaūtes. So he consēted to them in this matter and proued them .x. dayes. And after ÿ ten daies, their faces were better lykīg and fatter, then al the yong springaldes which eate of the kinges meate.

Thus Melassar toke awaye their meate and wyne, and gaue thē potage D therfor. God gaue now these foure springaldes conning and lernīg in al scripture and wysdome: But vnto Daniel specially, he gaue vnderstanding of all vysions and dreames. Now when the time was expired, that the king had appoynted to bring in these yong spryngaldes vnto him: the chefe chāberlaine brought them befor Nabuchodonosor, and the kyng communed with thē. But amōg al thē were found none suche as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Therfore stod they before the king which, in all wysdome and matters of vnderstanding, that he enquired of the founde them ten tymes better, then al the sothsaiers and charmers, that were in all his realme. And Daniel abode stil, vnto the fyrst yeare of king Cyrus

¶ The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto hym sothsayers, and requyreth of them both the dreame and the interpretatiō therof. They answere that they can not shew it. The kyng commaundeth al the wyse men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requyreth tyme to solue the question. The lord openeth ÿ mystery vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto ÿ king, & sheweth him his dreame & the interpretacion therof. Of the euerlastinge kyngdom of Christ. The stone, Christ. Daniel is exalted & promoted of the kyng.

In the second yere of ÿ raigne I of Nabuchodonosor, hadde Jer.xx Nabuchodonosor a dreame, where thorow his spyrte was vexed, & his slepe brake frō hī

Then the kynge commaunded to call to gether al the sothsayers, charmers, wyt-ches & Caldees, for to shewe ÿ kyng hys dreame. So they came/and stode before the kyng. And the kyng sayd unto them.
I haue dreamed a dreame, and my sprete was so troubled ther wyth, that I haue cleane forgotten, what I dreamed. Upon thys the Caldees answered the kynge in the Syryans speache: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shew thy seruauntes the dreame, and we shall shewe thee/what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Caldees theyr answere/and sayd: It is gone fro me Yf ye wyl not make me un derstande the dreame wyth the interpre-tacyon therof, ye shal dye, & youre houses shalbe pryssed But yf ye tell the dreame and the meaning therof, ye shall haue of me giftes, rewardes and greate honoure only shew me the dreame and the sygny-fycacyon of it. They answered agayne, and sayde: the kynge must shewe hys ser uauntes the dreame, and so shall we de-B clare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered saynge: I perceaue of a trueth that ye do but prolonge the tyme: for so muche as ye se the thyng is gone fro me.
Therfore ye wyl not tel me the dreame al ye shal haue al one iudgement. But ye fayne and dyssemble wyth vayne wordes whyche ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame/& so shal I know yf ye can shewe me what it meaneth. Upō thys the caldees gaue an-swere before the kyng/and sayd, there is no man upon earth that can tel the thīg, whych the kyng speaketh of, yea, ther is neyther kyng/ Prynce nor Lorde, that euer asked suche thinges at a sothsayer charmer or Caldeer; for it is a verye harde matter, that the kyng requyreth Neither is there any, that can certyfye the kynge therof, ex cepte the Goddes, whose dwelling is not among the crea-C tures.

For the whych cause the kyng was wroth wyth greate indygnacyon, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon: and the proclamacyō wente forth, that the wyse men shoulde be slayne. They sought also to slaye Danyel with hys companyons.
Then daniel enquired Aryoch ÿ kynges Stewarde, of the iudgement & sentence that was gone forth alredy to kyll suche as were wyse at Babylon. He answered and sayde unto Aryoch beynge then the kynges debytee: Why hath the kyng proclamed so cruell a sentence? So A-ryoch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon thys wente Danyel up, and desyred the kynge, that he myght haue leysoure, to shew the kynge the interpretacyon: and then came he home agayne and shewed the thynge unto Ananyas, Mysael and Asaryas hys companyōs: ÿ they should beseche the God of heauen for grace in thys secret, that Danyell & hys felowes wyth other suche as wer wyse in Babylō peryshed not. Then was the mystery shewed unto Danyel in a vysyon by D nyght. And Danyel praysed the god of heauen. Danyel also cryed loude, & sayed O that ÿ name of God might be praised for euer & euer/for wysdome & strength are hys owne: he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kynges, he setteth up kynges: he geueth wysdome unto the wyse, and understandynge to those that understande, he openeth the depe secretes/he knoweth the thynge ÿ lyeth in darcknesse, for ÿ lyght dwelleth wyth him. I thanke thee, and prayse thee (O thou God of my fathers) that thou hast lent me wysdome and strength and hast shewed me the thynge, that we de-syred of thee, for thou hast opened the kynges matter unto me.

Upon thys went Danyel in unto Aryoch, whom the kinge had ordened to E destroye the wyse at Babylon: he went unto hym, and sayd: destroye not suche as are wyse in Babylon, but brynge me in unto the kynge, and I shal shewe the kynge the interpretatyon. Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the king in al the haste, and sayd unto him: I haue found a man amonge the presoners of Juda that shall shewe the kynge the interpre tacyon. Then answered the kynge and sayde unto Danyel whose name was Balthasar: Art thou he that canst shew me the dreame whych I haue sene and the interpretacyō therof? Danyel answe red the kynge to hys face and sayde: As for thys secrete for the whych the kynge maketh inquisycion: yt is nether the wyse

wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer nor the deuell coniurer that can certyfye the kyng of it. Only God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is, that sheweth the kynge Nabu chodonosor, what is for to com in the latter dayes.

E Thy dreame/and that whych thou hast sene in thyne head vpon thy bed is thys. O kynge thou dydest cast in thy mynde, what shulde come herafter: So he that is the opener of mysteries, telleth thee/what is for to come. As for me, this secrete is not shewed me, for anye wysdom that I haue, more thē eny other lyuyng: but only that I myght shewe the kynge the interpretacyon and that he myght know the thoughtes of his awne harte. Thou kynge sawest, and beholde: there stode before the a greate Image, whose fygure was maruelous greate & hys vysage terrible. The Image head was of fyne gold, hys breast and armes of syluer, hys body and loynes were of copper, hys legges were of yron, hys fete were parte of yron/and parte of earth.

Math. xxi. / Luke xx. b — Thys thou sawest, tyll the tyme that (wyth out eny handes) there was hewen of a stone whych smote the Image vpon the fete that were both of yron & earthe and brake them to poulder: then was the yron, the earth/the copper, the syluer and golde broken altogether in peaces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the somer floures that they can no more be found. But the stone that smote the Image became a greate mountayne/whych fulfylleth the whole earth. This is the dreame And now wyl we shewe before the kyng, what it meaneth.

F — Danie. v. b — O kynge, thou art a kynge of kynges. For the god of heauē hath geuē thee a kyngdome, ryches/strength and maiesty: & hath delyuered the al thynges that are amonge the chyldren of men, þ beastes of the feld/& the foules vnder the heauē/& geuē thee domynyō ouer thē al. Thou art that golden head. After thee there shal aryse another kyngdom, which shall be lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdom shalbe lyke copper and haue domynacyon in all landes. The fourth kyngdome shall be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron broseth and breaketh all thynges: Yea, euen as yron beateth euerye thynge downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye.

Where as thou sawest the fete and toes/parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome, whych neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde myxte with it, for so moch as thou hast sene the yron myxte wyth the claye.

The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye, sygnyfyeth: that it shalbe a kyngdome, partly strōg and partely weake. And where as thou sawest yron myxte wyth claye, they shal myngle thē selues wyth the sede of symple People/and yet not contynue one wyth another lyke as yron wyll not be souldered wyth a potsherde.

G In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heauē set vp an euerlastyng kyngdome whych shall not perysh, and hys kyngdome shall not be geuen ouer to another people: yea þ same shal breake and destroye all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

And where as thou sawest, that wout any handes there was cut out of þ mount a stone which brake the yron, þ copper, the earth/the syluer and golde in peaces: by that hath the greate god shewed the kynge, what wyll come after this. This is a trew dreame, and þ inter pretacion of it is suter.

Then the kyng Nabuchodonosor fel downe vpon his face, and bowed him selfe vnto Daniel, and commaunded þ they should offer meatofferinges and swete odoures vnto hym. The kyng answeared Daniell and sayde: yea of a truth your god, is a god aboue all goddes, a Lorde aboue al kynges and an opener of secretes, seinge that thou cāst discouer thys mystery. So þ king made Danyell a greate man, and gaue hym manye and great gyftes. He made hym ruler of al the countrees of Babylon, and lord of al the nobles þ were at Babylon: Now Danyel entreated þ king for Sydrach Mysach & Abdenago, so þ he made them rulers ouer all þ offices in the lande of Babylon. But Daniell him selfe remayned styll in the courte by the king.

the chyldren

¶ The kyng setteth vp a goulden Image, which he commaundeth to be worshiped. Sydrach, Misach and Abdenago ar accused, because they dispysed y kinges commaundement. They are brought vnto y kinge, & commaunded to worship the Image. They refuse to do it, and are put into a burnyng ouen. By beleue in god they ar delyuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of god after, y syght of the myracle.

The.iii.Chapter.

A Nabuchodonosor the kyng caused a golden Image to be made, which was .lx. cubytes hye, and syxe cubytes thycke. This he made to be set vp in the felde of *Dura, in y lande of Babylon, and sent oute to gather together y dukes, lordes & nobles, y iudges & officers/debityes and shreues, with al the rulers of the land: that they might come to the dedycacyon of the Image which Nabuchodonosor y kyng had set vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers/debytes and shreues with all the rulers of the land, gathered them together, and came vnto the dedycacig of y Image/that Nabuchodonosor the king had set vp.

Now when they stode before the B ymage, which Nabuchosdonor set vp, y bedel cryed out with al hys myght: O ye people, kinredes and tonges to you be it sayde: that when ye heare y noyse of the trompetes/which shalbe blowen with the harpes, shawmes, Psalteries, Symphonies and all maner of Musick: ye fal downe and worshyp y golden Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng hath set vp. Whoso then falleth not downe and boweth hym selfe, shall euen y same houre be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Therfore, when all the folckes herde the noyse of the trompets that were blowen, wyth the Harpes, shawmes/Psalteries, Symphonies & all kynd of Melody: then al the people, kynreddes and nacyons fel downe, and bowed them selues vnto the goulden Image, y Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp.

C Now were there ceraine men of the Caldees/that wente euen then and accused the Iewes, and sayde vnto the kyng Nabuchodonosor: O king/god saue thy lyfe for euer.

Thou beyng kyng hast geuen a commaundemente/that all men when they heare y noyse of the trompettes harpes, shawmes, psalteries, simphonyes & al y other melodyes: shall fall downe and bowe them selues towarde the golden Image: who so then fall not downe and worshyppe not, that he shuld be cast into an hote burning ouen. Now are there certeyne Iewes, whome thou hast set ouer the officers, of the land of Babilon namely, Sidrach, Mysacch ad Abdenago. These men (O kynge) regarde not thy commaundemente/yea they wyl not serue thy goddes nor bowe them selues to the golden Image that thou hast set vp.

wrath and displeasure, cōmaunded, that Sydrach/Mysach & Abdenago should be brought vnto hym. So these men were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them and sayd: what O Sydrach Mysach and Abdenago, wyl not ye serue my goddes: nor bowe youre selues to the golden Image that I haue set vp: well be redy hereafter, whē ye heare the noyse of the Trompettes blowe wythe the Harpes, shawmes, psalteries, simphonyes & al y other melodyes: that ye fall downe/and worshyppe the Image whych I haue made. But if ye worshyppe it not, ye shal be cast immediatly into a hote burnyng ouen Let se, what God is there y maye deliuer you out of my handes. Sydrach Mysach and Abdenago answered the kyng, & sayde: O Nabuchodonosor we ought not to consente vnto thee in thys matter/for why: our God whom we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burnyng ouen O kyng and can ryght wel deliuer vs out of thi hādes. And though he wyll not yet shalt thou knowe (O kyng) that we wyl not serue thi goddes ner do reuerence to the Image, whyche thou hast set vp. Thē was Nabuchodonosor full of indygnacyon, so that the countenaunce of his face chaunged vpon Sydrach Mysach, and Abdenego.

Therfore he charged and commaunded, that the ouen should be made seuen tymes hoter thē it was wonte to be and spake vnto the Strongest Worthyes that were in hys hooste for to bynde

Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, and to caste theym into the hote burnynge ouen.

So these men wer bounde in their cotes, hose, shewes with their other gar mentis / and cast into the hote burnig ouen: for the kynges commaundemet was so strate, and the ouen was exceadyng hote. As for the men that put in Sydrach, Mysach and Abdenago the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre me Sydrah / Misah and Abdenago, fel downe in the hott burnig ouen, being fast bounde. Then Nabu chodonosor the kyng marueled, & stod vp in al hast: he spake vnto hys coun cel, and sayde: dyd not ye cast these thre men bound into the fyre? They answe red, and sayde vnto the kyng: Yea O kyng. He answered and sayde: lo for al that yet do I se foure me goyng lowse in the myddest of the fyre, and nothig corrupte: & the fourth is lyke an angel G to loke vpo. Upo this went Nabucho donosor vnto y mouth of the hote burnyng ouen: he spake also / and sayd: O Sydrach / Mysach and Abdenago, ye seruauntes of the hye God: go forth, & come hyther. And so Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago went out of the fyre.
Then the dukes lordes and nobles, ad the kinges councel came together to se these men / vpon whom the fyre had no maner of power in their bodyes: In so much that the very heare of their head was not burnte, and their clothes vn-chaunged: Yea there was no smel of fyre felt vpon them. Then spake Na buchodonosor, and sayd: Blessed be the god of Sidrach, Misach and Abde-nago: which hath sent hys angell, and defended his seruauntes, that put ther trust in him: that haue altered the kyn ges commaundement: And ieoparde their bodyes ther vpon: rather the they wolde serue or worshyp any other god, excepte their owne god only. Therfore I wil commaund, that al people & kyn redes and tunges / whyche speake any blasphemy agaist the god of Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago, shal dye, and their houses shalbe pryled: Because, there is no god that mate saue, as this.
So the kyng promoted Sidrach, My sach, and Abdenago, in the Lande of Babilon.

Nabuchodonosor dremeth againe, Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonosor is put out of his reime and eateth with beastes, He confesseth the power of god and is restored into his kyngdome.

The iiii. Chapter.

NAbuchodonosor kyng vn- A to al people, kinreddes and tunges that dwel vpo the whole erth: peace be multi plied amog you. I thought it good to shew the tokens and merue lous worckes, that the hye God hathe wrought vpon me. O how greate are his tokens / and howe myghty are hys wonders? His kingdome is an euer lastynge kyngdome, and hys power lasteth for euer and euer.

I Nabuchodnosor being at rest in mine house, & floryshing in my palace, sawe a dreame, which made me afrayed: and the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed with the visions of mine head, troubled me. Then sent I out a commyssion / that al they which were of wisdo at Babilo shuld be brought before me, to tel me y interpretacio of the dreame: so ther came the southsayers, charmers Caldees & coniurers of deuels to who B I told y dreame but what it betokened, they coulde not shewe me: tyl at y laste, there came one daniel (otherwyse called Balthasary, accordinge to the name of my god) whych hath y sprite of the holy Goddes / in hym: to whome I tolde the dreame, saying: O Balthasar, thou Prince of Southsayers: For so muche as I knowe, that thou haste the sprite of the holy Goddes and no Secrete is hyd from thee: tell me therfor, what the vysion of my dreame (that I haue sene maye signify. I saw a visio in my head vpon my bed: and beholde, there stode a tree vpon the grounde, whych was ex cedyng hye, greate and myghtye: the heygth reached vnto the heauen, & the bredth extended to all the endes of the earthe: hys leaues wer faier, he had very much frute, so that euery man had enough to eate therin,

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it and ye foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly al C creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a vysyon vpon my bed: and behold, * a watcher cam downe from heauen, and cried myghtely / sayng. Hewe downe the tree, breake of hys braunches shake of hys leaues and scatter his Frupte abroade: that all the beastes maye gett them awaye from vnder hym, and the foules from hys braunches. Neuerthe les leaue the grounde of hys rote styll in the earth, and bynde him vpon the plaine felde / with chaynes of yron and stele. With the dewe of heauen shal he be wette, and he shall haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beastes.

That mans herte of hys shalbe taken frõ hi, & a beastes hert shalbe geuẽ him, tyll seuen yeares be come and gon vpon hym.

D Thys erand of the watcher, is a cõ maundement grounded ãd sought out in the councel of him that is moost holy: to lerne men for to vnderstand, that the hyghest hath power ouer the kyng doms of men, and geueth them, to whõ it lyketh hym, and bryngeth the verye outcastes of men ouer them. Thys is the dreame, that I kynge Nabuchodo nosor haue sene. Therfore O Balthazar, zar, tell thou me what it signifyeth: for so moche as all the wyse men of my kig dome are not able to shewe me / what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirite of the holy Goddes is in thee.

Then Daniell (whose name was Balthasar) held hys peace by the space E of an houre & hys thoughtes troubled hym, so the kinge spake and sayde: O Balthasar, let nether the dreame nor ye interpretacyõ therof feare thee. Baltha sar answered sayng. O my Lorde this dreame happen to thyne ennemyes, and the interpretacyon to thyne aduersari es, As for the tree that ye sawest whych was so great and myghti, whose heigh reached vnto the heauen & hys breadth into all the worlde whose leaues were fayre, and the frute muche: vnder the whych the beastes of the feld had theyr habitation and vpon whose braunches the foules of the ayer dyd syt.

Euen thou (O kynge) art the tre / great and stronge. Thy greatnesse increaseth, ãd reacheth vnto the heauen, so doth thy power to the endes of the earth. But where as the kynge sawe a watcher euen an holye aungell / that came downe from heauen, and sayde: hew downe the tre / ãd destroye it: yet leaue the grounde of the rote in the earth: and bynde hym vpon ye playne feld wyth cheynes of yron & stele: He shall be wet wyth the dew of heauen, and hys parte shal be wyth the bestes of the feld, tyll seuen yeares be come and gone vpon hym: thys (O kynge) is the interpretacyon, yea it is the very deuyse of hym, that is hyest of all, & it toucheth F my lorde the kynge.

Thou shalt be cast oute fro men and thy dwellynge shalbe wyth the beastes Iob, xliiii, b, Daniel. v, a of the felde: * wyth grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet wyth the dew of the heauen: yea seuen yeares shall come, & go vpõ thee, tyl thou know that the hiest hath power vpon the king domes of men, and geueth the to whom he lyst. Moreouer, where as it was sayde Daniell. ii. c; Iere, xxvii, a that the rote of the tree shulde be left stil in the grounde: it betokeneth, that thy kyngdom shal remaine whole vnto thee after thou hast lerned to know, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfor O kyng / be content wyth my counsell, that thou mayest lowse thy synnes with ryghtuousnesse, and thine offences with mercy to pore people: for suche thynges shal prolonge thy peace.

All these thynges touche the kynge G Nabuchodonosor.

So after. xii monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of ye kyngdom of Babylon, and sayde: This is the greate cyte of Babylon, whych I my self (wych my power & strength) haue made a kynges courte, for the honour of my maiestye. Whyle these wordes were yet in ye kynges mouth there fel a voice from heauen saynge: O kyng Nabu-chodonosor to thee be it spoken: Thy kyngdome shal departe from thee / thou shalt be cast out of mens company: thy dwellyng shalbe wyth the beastes of the felde / so that thou shalt eate grasse lyke as an oxe tyll seuen yeares be come and gone ouer thee. Euen euen vntyl thou knowest, that the hiest hath power vpō the kingdomes of mē and that he maie geue them, vnto whō it pleaseth him. The very same houre was this matter fulfylled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so that he was cast out of mens company, and eate grasse lyke an oxe. Hys body was wet with the dewe of heauen, tyll his heares were as greate as Aegles fethers, & his nayles lyke byrdes clawes.

G When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lyfte vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandynge was restoared vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thankes vnto the hyghest. I magnyfied and praysed hym that lyueth for euermore, whose power endureth alwaye, and his kyngdome frō one generacyon to another: in comparyson of whome all they that dwell vpon the earthe, are to be reproued as nothing.

Dan.iii.f. He handleth accordyng to his wil among the powers of heauē, and amōg the inhabytours of the earth: and ther is none that maye resyst hys hande/or saye what dost thou? At the same tyme was myne vnderstandyng geuen me agayne, and I was restoared to the honoure of my kyngdom, to my dygnitee and to myne owne shappe agayne. My grete estates and Princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdō agayne, so that I had yet greate worshyppe.

Psal.cxxxv
Job.xii.b.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor/ loue, magnyfie and prayse the kyng of heauen: for all hys workes are trew, and hys wayes right. As for those that go on proudly, he is able to brynge thē downe.

¶ Balthazar king of Babylon, abusig the vessels of the tēple, seeth an hande wryting in the wall. The sothe saiers called of the king, can not expoūd the wrytyng. Daniel is called, which redeth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthasar beig slayne, Darius succedeth in his rowme.

A Kynge Balthasar made a greate bācket to his thousand Lordes: wyth al these thousande he made greate chere, and when he was drōken with wyne, he cōmaunded to brīg hym the golden and syluer vessels/ whyche hys father Nabuchodonosor had taken oute of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kyng and hys lordes/ his quene ād cōcubines might drinke therout.

So they brought the golden vessel, that was taken out of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kyng ād his lordes with his quene and concubynes droncke out of them: They droncke wyne, and praysed their Idoles of gold siluer, copper/yrō, wod and stone. B

In the very same houre there appered fyngers/as it hadde bene a mens hand wrytyng, ryght ouer agaynst the candelstyck vpon the playne wall in ỹ kynges palace: and the kyng sawe the palme of the hand that wrote. Then chaunged the kyng his countenaunce and his thoughtes troubled hym, so ỹ ỹ ioyntes of hys body shoke, and hys knes smote one agaynst another: Wherfore the kīg cried mightely, that they should bryng hym the charmers, Caldees and coniurers of deuels. The kynge spake also to the wise men of Babylon and sayd: who so can rede thys wryttynge, & shewe me the playne meanynge thereof, shalbe clothed with purple, haue a chayne of golde aboute hys neck and rule the thyrd part of my kyngdome.

Upon thys, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coulde neyther reade the writinge, nor shew the kyng what it signified. Then was ỹ king sore afrayd in so muche, that hys colour chaūged, & his Lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of thys matter, that had happened to the kinge and hys Lords, the quene went vp her self into the bancket house and spake vnto the kinge, sayinge: O kinge/God saue thy life for euer: Let not the thoughtes trouble thee: and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. C

For why? there is a man in thy kingdō that hath the holye spirite of the holye goddes within hym/as it was seene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge and wysdōe lyke the Goddes. Yea the kyng Nabuchodonosor thy father made thys man chefe chefe of the sothsayers, charmers / Cal-des and deuelconjurers; because that such an aboundaunt spryte, knowledge, and wysdome, to expounde dreames, to open secretes, to declare harde dowbtes) was founde in hym, yea euen in Daniel whom the kyng named Balthazar. Let thys same Danyel be sente for/ and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Danyel brought before the kynge. So the kynge spake vnto C Danyel, & sayde: Art thou that Danyel, one of the presoners of Juda, whom my father the kinge brought out of Jewrye I haue hearde speake of thee, that thou hast the spryte of the holy goddes, expe-ryence and vnderstandyng, and that there hath bene greate wysdome founde in thee. Now haue ther bene brought me wyse and cõnynge charmers/ to reade thys wrytyng and to shew me the meanynge therof: But they coulde not tell me, what thys matter sygnyfied. Then hearde I saye, that thou canst expounde darcke thynges & declare hard doubtes.
Well than, Yf thou canst reade thys wrytynge, and shew me the meanynge therof thou shalt be clothed with purple haue a chayne of golde aboute thy necke and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdõ D Danyell answered, and sayde before the kyng: As for thy rewardes, kepe thē to thy self/ or geue thy ryche gyftes to an other, yet not the lesse I wyl rede the wry tyng vnto the king/ & shew him the inter pretacion thereof. O kynge, God the hyghest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dignitee of a king, worship and honor: so that all people, kynreddes E and tonges stode in awe and feare of hi by reason of the hygh estate, ye he had let hym. For whye, he slewe whome he wold, he smote whome it pleased hym. Agayne whom he wolde he set vp: and whoom he lust, he put downe. But because hys hart was so proude and hys stomack set so fast vnto wylfulnesse he was deposed from hys kynglye trone/and hys maiestye E was taken from hym.
He was shut out from amonge men, hys harte was lyke a beastes herte, and hys dwellyng was wyth the wylde asses, he was faine to eate grasse lyke an oxe, and hys body was wet wyth the dewe of the heauen tyll he knewe, that the hyghest had power vpõ ye kyngdomes of men, and setteth ouer them/ whome he lyst.
And thou his sonne (O Balthasar) for all thys / hast not submytted thyne hart, though yu knewest al these thīges but haste Magnyfyed thy selfe aboue the Lorde of heauen, so that the vessels of hys house were broughte before thee that thou, and thy Lordes, wyth thy quene and concubynes myghte drincke wyne therout: And hast praysed the Jdoles of syluer and golde / copper and F yron, of woodde and stone. As for the God in whose hād consisteth thy breath and all thy wayes, thou hast not loued hym.
Therfore is the palme of thys hād sent hether from hym, to token vp this wrytting. And this is the scrypture: that is wryte vpõ it: Mane, Thetel, phares Now the interpretacyon of the thyng is thys: Mane / God hath numbred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetel, thou art weyed in the balaūce, and arte founde to lyght. Phares / thy kindome is dealte in parties / and geuē to the Medes and perses.
Then commaunded Balthasar, to clothe Daniell, wyth purple / to hange G a cheyne of golde aboute his necke, and to make a Proclamation concernynge him: that he shoulde be the ruler of the third parte of his kingdom. The very same night was Balthazar the kinge of the Caldees slayne, and Darius out of Media toke in the kingdome, being lxii. yeares of age.

Danyell is made ruler ouer the Lordes. The Imagi nation of an acte agaynst Daniell. The proclamaci on of the acte wherof daniel is accused vnto the kig as a transgressoure. He is put into a denne of lyons by the commaundement of the kynge. He is delyue red by fayth in God. Daniels accusers are put vnto the lyons to be torne in sonder. Darius by the proclamation of a a decree, magnifyeth the god of Da

The. vi. Chapter.

Ezr. xvii. b
Jere. xiii.

I It pleased Darius to set ouer hys kyngdome an C. and xx. Lordes/which should be in al hys kyngdome aboute. Aboue these he set thre Prynces (of whom Danyel was one) that the Lordes myght geue accomptes vnto the, and the kyng to be vndyseased.

But Daniel exceded al these Prynces and Lordes, for the spryte of God was plenteous in hym/so that the kyng was mynded to set hi ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the Prynces & lordes sought to pycke out in Danyell some quarell agaynst the kyngdome: yet coulde they fynde none occasyon nor faute vpō hym For why he was so faythfull, that there was no blame nor dyshonesty founde in hym.

Then sayde these men: we wyl get B no quarel agaynst thys Daniel excepte it be in the lawe of hys God. Upon this wente the prynces and lordes together vnto the kynge/ and sayde thus vnto hym: kyng Daryus, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Al the great estates of ye realme as the Prynces, Dukes, Senatours & Judges, are determed to put out a commaundement of the kyng, and to make a sure statute: namely that who so desyreth any petycyon either of any god or man (wyth in thys. xxx. daies) excepte it be of thee, O kyng the same person may be cast in to the lyons denne. Wherfore, O kyng confyrme thou thys statute, and make a wrytynge that the thyng which the Medes and Persies haue ordened be not altered ner broken.

So Darius made the wrytynge, and confyrmed it. Now whē Danyel vnderstode that the wrytynge was made, he wente in to hys house: and the wyndowes of hys hal toward Jerusalem stod open. There kneled he downe vpon his knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made his petycyon, and praised hys God like as hys maner was to do afore tyme.

C Then these men made searche, and founde Danyel makynge hys petycyon and prayinge vnto hys God. So they came to the kyng/and spake before him concernyng hys commaūdemēt saing: O kyng/hast thou not subscrybed the statute, that wyth in. xxx. dayes who so requireth thys petition of any god or man but onely of thy selfe, O kyng he shalbe cast into the denne of the lios The kynge answered/and sayde: yea it is true. It muste be as a lawe of the Medes and Persies, that maye not bee broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kynge: Danyell one of the prysoners of Juda, O kynge/regardeth nepther thee nor thy statute, that thou haste made, but maketh hys peticyon thre tymes a day. Whē the king herd these wordes/he was sore greued, and wold haue excused Daniel to delyuer hym and put of the matter vnto the sūne went downe to the intent that he might saue him.

These men perceauing the kinges D minde, saide vnto hym: knowe this O king, that the lawe of the Medes and Persies is, that the commaundement & statute whiche the kyng maketh, may not be altered. Then the kynge bad them bringe Danyel/and they cast hi into the lions denne

The kinge also spake vnto daniell and saide: thy GOD whome thou alwaye seruest, euen he shall defend thee And there was brought a stone, & laid vpon the hole, of the denne. Thys the kinge sealed with hys owne rynge, and wyth the signet of hys Prynces: that the kinges Commaundemente concernynge Daniel should not be broked,

So the kynge wente into his palace, and kepte him sober all night/ so that there was no table spred before hym, nether could he take any slepe. But betimes in the mourninge, at the C breake of the day, the king arose, and wente in all haste vnto the denne of ye lions.

Now as he cam nygh vnto ye denne he cried with a pitifull Uoice vnto Daniel, yea the king spake, ād said vnto Daniell: O Daniell thou seruaunt of the liuing god/ is not thy god (whō thou alwaies seruest) able to delyuer thee from the lions? Daniell sayed vnto the kinge: O kinge/God saue thy lyfe for euer. My God hath sente hys aungels, which hath shut the lios mouthes mouthes, so that they myght not hurt me. For why? mine vngyltines is foūd out before hym. And as for thee/ O kig I neuer offended thee.

Then was the king exceading glad, and commaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, and no maner of hurt was founde vpon him. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, the kynge commaunded to bring thē/ and to cast them in the lions denne: them, their chil dren and their wiues. So the Lyons had the mastry of them, and brake all their bones a sunder/ or euer they came at the grounde.
After this, wrote king Darius vnto al people, kynreddes, and tounges that dwelt i all lādes: Peace be multiplied wt you. My cōmaūdemēt is, in al my domynyon & kingdome, yͭ men feare ād stand in awe of Daniels God.
For he is the lyuyng god, which abideth euer: his kingdom shal not fail Dani.iii.f and hys power is euerlastyng. It is he that delyuereth, and saueth: he doth wonders and maruelous workes, i heauen and in earth: he hath preserued Da nyel from the power of the Lyons.
Dani.xiiii.f Thys Daniel prospered in the reygne of Daryus and Cyrus of Persya.

¶ A visiō of, iiii. bestes is shewed vnto Daniel. The vysyō is interpreted of iiii. kigdomes of yͤ worlde.
Of the power & increase of Antichrist. Of the euer lastynge kyngdome of Christe.

The. vii. Chapter.

A In the fyrste yeare of Balthazar kyng of Babylō, saw Da niel a dreame, & a vysyon was in hys head vpon hys bedde.
Which dreame he wrot, and yͤ summe of the matter is thys: Daniell spake and sayd: I sawe in my visyō by nyght, and beholde: the foure windes of the heauē stroue vpō the sea/ & foure great beastes cam vp from the sea one vnlyke another.
The first was a lyon, and yet had B he Aegles wynges. I sawe, that hys wynges were pluckte from him/and he taken awaye from the earth: yͭ he stod vpon his fete as a mā, and that ther was geuē him a mans hart.
Beholde/ the seconde beaste was lyke a beer/ and stode vpon the one syde.
Amonge hys teeth in hys mouth he had
iii. greate longe teeth, and it was sayde vnto hym: Aryse, eate vp, muche fleshe.
Then I loked, and behold, there was an other lyke vnto a leoparde: thys had wynges as a foule, euen foure vpō the backe. Thys beast had foure heades, & there was power geuen him. After thys I sawe in a visyon by night, and behold, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and maruelous stronge.
It hadd greate yron teeth, it deuoured and destroied, and stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was farre vnlyke yͤ other beastes that were before it: for yt had ten hornes, whereof I toke good C hede.
And beholde, there came vp among them another litle horne, before whom there wer thre of yͤ first hornes pluckte awaie. Beholde this horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speaking pre sumtuous thīges I loked tyl the seates were prepared, and tyll the olde aged sat hī downe. His clothīg was as white as snow, & the heares of his head lyke the pure wolle. His trone was lyke the fyrye flāme, and his wheles as the bur nyng fyre. There drewe forth a fyrye streame ād went out from him. A thousande tymes a thousand serued him. x M. times ten thousand stode before hī The iudgment was set, and the bokes opened. Then toke I heed therunto, because of the voyce of the proude wor- D des/ which that horne spake. I beheld tyl the beast was slaine, and hys body destroyed, and geuen ouer to be brent i the fire.
As for the power of thother beastes also, it was taken awaie, but their liues were prolonged for a tyme and ceason.
I sawe in a visyon by nyght, and behold ther cam one in the cloudes of hea uen lyke the sonne of a mā/ which went vnto the olde aged before, whom they brought him. Then geue he him power and dygnytie regall that all people tribes & tonges should serue hym. His power is an euerlastyng power, which shal neuer be put downe: and hys kigdom endureth vncorrupt.

My herte was vexed/ and I Danyell had a troubled spryte within me, and ye vysyons of my head made me afrayed, tyl I gat me vnto one of the that stode by, to know ye trueth, concernyng all these thynges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstand ye interpretacio of these thynges.

D These foure greate beastes, are foure kynges, whyche shall aryse oute of the earth. These shal take in the kyngdom of the sayntes of the most hyest/ & pos-sesse it styll more and more for a longe ceason. After thys I requyred dylygently to knowe the truth, concernig ye fourth beast wych was so farre vnlyke the other beastes/ and so horryble; whose teeth were of Yron, and his nayles of brasse: whych deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete I desyred also to knowe the trueth, as touchyng the ten hornes that he had vpon his head/ and this other whyche came vp afterwarde, before whose face E there fel downe thre: which horne had eyes and a mouth that spake presump tuous thynges, and loked with a grim mer vysage then his felowes. I beheld and the same horne made battel agaist the sayntes, ye and gat the vyctory of them: vntyl the tyme that the old aged cam: that the iudgement was geuen to the chyefeste Sayntes and tyll the tyme/ that the saintes had the kyngdo in possession. He gaue me this answere That fourth beaste shalbe the fourth kingdome vpon earth: it shalbe more then all other kingdomes / it shall deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes.

The ten hornes, are ten kinges, yt shal aryse out of that kyngdome after who there shal stad vp another whych shalbe greater then the fyrst. He shall subdue thre kiges, and shal speake wor des agaynst the hyest of al: he shal de stroy the sayntes of the most hiest and thynke, that he may chaung times and F lawes. They shalbe geuen vnder hys power, vntyll a time, two tymes, and half a tyme.

But the iudgment shalbe kept, so that his power shalbe taken from him for he shal be destroyed/ and perysh at the last. As for the kyngdom, power and all myghte that is vnder the heauen: it shalbe geuen to the holy people of the moost hyest/ whose kingdom is euerlastyng, yea al powers shal serue and obeye him. Thus farre extend the wordes. Neuertheles I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenaunce chaunged, but the wordis I kepte styl in my hart.

A vysyon of a stryfe betwene a ramme and an he goat. The vnderstandyng of the vysio is of the battel betwene the king of Persia and the kynge of the Grekes. Of the shameles kyng Antichrist.

The. viii. Chapter.

In the thyrde yeare of the raygne of king Balthazar there appered a vysyo vn to me Daniel, after that I had seane the fyrste I A sawe in a vision (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chef cytee/ which lyeth in the land of Elam) and in the vysio, me thought I was by the ryuer of Vlai.

Then I loked vp, and sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer/a ramme, whyche hadde hornes:
And these hornes were hyghe, but one was hier the another, and the hyest cae vp last. I sawe yt thys ramme pusshed wyth hys hornes, agaynst the west, a-gaynst the north, and agaist the south so that no beastes might stand before him, nor defende them from his power but he dyd as him lysted, & waxed grea tly. I toke hede vnto this, and then cae there an he goate from the weste ouer the whole earthe / and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruelous goodly horne be twyxte his eyes/ and came B vnto the ramme, that had the two hor-nes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpo him wyth his myght. I sawe hym drawe neygh vnto the ramme beyng very fearce vpon hym: yea he gaue hi such a stroke that he brake his two hornes: Nether had the ramme so much strength as to stand before him: but he cast him doune troden him vnder hys fete: and no man was able to delyuer the ramme out of his power.

C The goate waxed exceadynge great and when he was at the strongest hys greate horne was broken also. Then grewe ther other four suche lyke in the steade/towarde the .iiii. wyndes of the heauen. Yea, out of one of the least of these hornes, there cam vp yet another horne, which waxed maruelous great: towarde the south/towarde the east, & towarde the fayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoost of heauen wherof it dyd caste some downe to ŷ ground and of the starres also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yea, it grewe vp vnto the prynce of the host/frō whō the daylye offerynge was taken, and the place of hys Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayn season was geuen vnto it agaynste the daylye offerynge (because of wyckednes) ŷ it myght cast downe the veryte to the grounde, and so to prospere in all thynges, that it wente aboute.

Upon this, I herd one of the saintes
D speakynge, whych sayncte sayde vnto one that asked this questyon: How longe shall this vysyon of the daylye sacryfice and of the wastyng abhomynacyon endure: that the Sanctuary & the power shal so be troden vnder fete, And he answered hym: Unto the euenynge and the mornynge, euen two thousande and thre Hundreth dayes: Then shall the Sanctuarye be clensed agayne.

Now when I Daniell had sene this vysyon/and sought for the vnderstandynge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I heard a mans voyce in the ryuer of Ulay, whych cryed/and sayde: O Gabryel, make this man vnderstande the vysyon. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his commynge and fell downe vpon my face.

E Then said he vnto me: O thou sōne of man, marcke well, for in the last time shall this vysyon be fulfylled.

Now as he was speakynge vnto me/ I waxed faynte so that I suncke downe to the grounde: But he toke hold vpō me, and set me vp agayne, saiynge: Beholde, I wyll shew thee, what shal happen in the last wrath: for in ŷ time appoynted it shalbe fulfylled

The ramme whiche thou sawest wt the two hornes, is the kyng of the Medes ād Perses: but the goote is ŷ king of Greke land: the greate horne ŷ stode betwyxt his eyes/that is the principal Kynge. But where as it brake, & foure other roose vp in the stead: it sygnyfieth/that out of this people shal stande vp foure kyngdoms (but not so myghtye as it.

F After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynes is a growing) ther shal aryse a kyng of an vnshamefast face, whiche shalbe wise in darck speakynges.

He shalbe myghtie and strong, but not in his owne strength. He shal destroye aboue mesure, and al that he goeth about shal prospere: he shal slaie the strong and holy people. And thorow his craftynes, falshed shall prospere in his hand: his hart shalbe proud and many one shall be put to death in his welthynes. He shal stād vp against the Prynce of prynces, but he shall be destroyed without hande. And thys vysiō that is shewed vnto thee, is as sure as the euening and the morning. Therfore wryte thou vp thys syghte/ for it wilbe longe, or it come to passe.

Upō thys was I Daniel very faint so that I laye sicke certaine dayes: but when I rose vp, I went about the kinges busynes, and marueled at ŷ visiō neuerthelesse no man knew of it.

C Daniell desyreth to haue that performed of God which he had promysed concernynge the returne of the people from their banyshement in Babilon. A true confession. Daniels prayer is herde. Gabriel ŷ Angel expoundeth vnto hym the vysion of the lxx. weakes. The anoyntyng of Christ. The buyldynge againe of Jerusalem vnder Nehemiah. The dethe of Christ. The castyng out of the wycked Jewes

C The .ix. Chapter.

IN the fyrste yeare of Darius the sonne of Assuerus which was of the sede of ŷ Medes, & was made king ouer the realme of the Caldees: yet euen in the fyrste yeare of his raigne, I Danyel desyred to knowe ŷ A perfyte numbre out of the bokes, wherof the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye the Prophete: that Jerusalem shoulde lye waste.lxx.yeares: and I turned me unto God the Lorde/for to praye and make myne intercessyon/with fastig, sack clothe and asshes. I prayed befo re the Lorde my God, and knowledged , sayinge:

O Lorde, thou greate and fearfull god thou that kepeste couenaunt and mercy with them, whych loue thee, and do thy commaundementes: We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue ben dysobedyēt and gone back/ye we haue departed from all thy preceptes & iudg mentes.

We wolde neuer folow thy seruaũ-tes the prophetes, ÿ spake in thy name E to oure kynges and prynces, to oure forefathers/and to al the people of the lande. O Lord, rightuousnes belōgeth unto thee, unto us pertayneth nothig but open shame; as it is come to passe thys daye unto euery man of Juda/& to them that dwel at Jerusalem: Yea unto al Israell, whether they be farre or nere: thorow out al landes: wherin ÿ hast strawed them, because of the offen ces that they had done agaynste thee.
Yea O Lorde/unto us, to our kinges and Prynces, to oure Forefathers: euen to us al, that haue offended thee, belongeth upon shāme. But unto the O Lord our God pertayneth mercy & forgeuenes. As for us, we are gone backe from him, and haue not obeyed the voice of the Lord our god/to walk in his lawes, which he layde before us by his seruauntes the Prophetes/ye al Israell, haue transgressed, and gone backe from the lawe, so that they haue not herkened unto thy voyce.

F Wherfore the curse and othe that is wrytten in the law of Moyses the ser uaunt of god (agaynst whom we haue offended) is poured upon us. And he hath performed his wordes, which he spake agaynste us, and agaynste oure iudges that iudged us: to brynge upon us suche a greate plage, as neuer was under heauen, lyke as it is nowe come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea, al this plage, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moyses/is come upon us.
Yet made we not oure prayer before the Lorde oure God, that we myght turne agayne from oure wyckednesse, and to be lerned in thy verytie. Therfore hath ÿ Lorde made haste, to brynge thys plage upon us: for the Lord oure God is righ tuous, in al hys workes whych he doth: for why? we would not hercken unto his voyce.

And now O Lorde oure God, thou that wyth a mightie hande hast brought thy people oute of Egypte, to gett thy self a name, whych remayneth thys day/we haue synned O Lord/and done wyc kedly agaynst all thy ryghtuousnes: yea let thy wrathfull dyspleasure be turned a waye (I beseche ÿ) frō thy cite Jerusalem thy holy hyll. And why? for oure synnes sake, and for the wickednesse of oure fore fathers is Jerusalē & thy people abhorred/of al them that are aboute us. Now therfore. O oure God, heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and hys intercessyon. O let thy Face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeth waste.

O my God, enclyne thine eare, and her G ken (at the leest for thyne owne sake) ope thyne eyes: beholde how we be desolated ye & the cytye also, whych is called after thy name: for we do not cast our praiers befor thee in our owne ryghteousnes no but only in thy greate mercyes. O Lord heare, O forgeue Lord: O Lord cōsidre, Tarye not ouer long: but for thine owne sake do it, O my God, for thy cytee and thy people is called after thy name.

As I was yet speakynge at my prayers, knowledging myne owne sines and the synnes of my people, makyng so myne intercessyon before the Lorde my God, for the holy hilles sake of my God: Yea, whyle I was yet speakyng in my prayer, beholde, the man Gabryel (whom I had sene afore in the vysiō) came flyig to me and touched me aboute ÿ offerigs tyme in the euenynge. He informed me and spake unto me: O Danyel (sayd he) I am now come to make the understand it: For as soone as thou beganest to make thy prayer, it was so deuysed, and therfore am I come to shew thee.
And why? For thou art a man greatly beloued.

Wherfore ponder the matter well,
that

that thou mayest lerne, to understande the vysyon. LXX. * wekes are determed over thy people, and over the holy citie:
that the wickednes maie be consumed, that the synne maye have an ende, that the offence maye be reconcyled, and to brynge in everlasting ryghtuousnes/to fulfyl the vysions and the Prophetes, and to anoint the moost holy ōde. Un-derstande this then, and marke it wel: that from the time it shalbe concluded to go & repayre Jerusalē agayne/unto Christ (or the anoynted) prynce: there shalbe seven wekes. Then shal the strites and walles be bulded agayne lxii. wekes, but with harde troublous tyme. After these lxii. wekes, shal christ G be slayne, and they shall have no pleasure in hym. Then shal there come a people with the Prince and destroye ỹ cytie and the Sanctuary: and his end shal come as the water floud. But the desolacyon shal contynue tyl the ende of the battayl.
He shall make a strong bond with many, for the space of a weke: and whē ỹ weke is half gone, he shal put doune the slayne and meatofferynge.
And in the temple there shalbe an abho-mynable desolacyon/tyll it have destroy ed all. And it is conclᵘded that thys wastyng shall contynue unto the ende.

The notes.
* A weke is here taken for seven yeare, as in Levitic.
xxv. Wherfore the lxx. wekes are foure. C. and. xx. yeares.

¶ There appeareth unto Daniell a man clothed in lynen which sheweth hym wherfore he is sente.

¶ The. x. Chapter.

3 IN the thyrde yeare of kynge Cirus of Persia, ther was shew ed unto Daniell (otherwyse called Balthasar) a matter, ye a true matter, but it is yet a long tyme unto it. He understoude the matter wel, and perceaued what the vi sion was. At the same tyme. I Daniel mourned for the space of thre weakes, so that I had no luste to eate bread: as for flesh and wyne there came none wi-in my mouth: No, I dyd not ones an-noynt my self, til the whole thre wekes were out.
Upon the xxiiii. day of the fyrst mo-neth, I was by the great floud called Tigrys. I lyft up myne eyes, and loked/and beholde a man clothed in ly-nen/whose loynes were gyrded up wt fyne gold of Araby/his body was lyke the Chrisolyte ston, hys face (to loke up on) was lyke lyghtenynge, hys eyes as the flāme of fyre, hys armes and feate were lyke fayre glysterynge metal, but B the voyce of hys wordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude.
I Daniel alone sawe thys vysion, the men that were wyth me, sawe it not:
but a greate fearefulnesse fel upon thē so that they fled away & hyd thē selues.
I was left there my selfe alone/& sawe thys greate vysyon so longe tyll there remayned no more strength wythin me yea I lost my coloure cleane. I wasted awaye and my strength was gone. Yet herde I the voyce of hys wordes: and as sone as I hearde it, fayntnesse came uppon me/ and I fell downe flat to the ground upon my face.
And behold an hand touched me, which set me up upon my knees and upon the palmes of my handes saying unto me O Daniel, thou wel beloued man: take good hed of the wordes that I shal say unto thee, and stand ryght up/for unto thee am I now sente. And when he had said these wordes, I stode up tremblig Then sayde he unto me: feare not Da nyel: for whyle sence the fyrst daye that thou set thyne herte to understand, and dyddest chasten thy selfe before thy god thy wordes have bene heard. C And I had come unto thee when thou begānest to speake had not the Prynce over the kyngdome of the Perses wythstande me xxi dayes. But lo Mychael one of the chefe Prynces, came to helpe me, hym have I left by the kyng of Persya/and am comme to shew thee what shall happen unto thy people in the latter dayes. For it wil be longe yet or the vysion be fulfilled.
Now when he hadde spoken these wordes unto me/I cast doun my head to the ground and held my tong. Behold there touched my lyppes elk very lyke unto a man. Then opened I my mouth: And sayde unto hym that stoode before me: O my lorde, my ioyntes are loused

The kynges of Persia.

in the vysion, & ther is no more strenght wythin me. How maye my Lordes sernaunt then talke wyth my Lorde?
Seyng there is no strenght in me / so ye I cannot take my breath. Upon thys ther touched me agayne one muche lyke a man, and comforted me saying: O thou man so well beloued / feare not: be content, take a good heart unto thee / ad be stronge. So when he hadde spoken unto me, I recouered and sayde: speake on my Lorde, for thou hast refreshed me Then sayde he: knowest thou wherfore I am come unto thee? Now wyll I go agayne to fyght wyth the prynce of the Perses. As sone as I goo forthe / lo, the Prynce of Grekelande shall come. Ne-uertheles, I wyll shewe thee the thynge that is fast noted in ye scripture of truth And as for all yonder Matters, there is none that helpeth me in thẽ, But Mi-chaell youre prynce.

¶ A prophecy of the kynges of Persia. Of the kingdome of Grece. Of the kyngdom of Egypt, and of the bonde therof, and of the batell wyth the kingdome of Syria. Of the Jewes that flye unto the kynge of Egipte, whome Antiochus the kyng of Syria persecuteth, which fygureth unto us Antichryste. The pryde of Antiochus.

A And in the fyrst yeare of Darius of Medea, I stode by hym to comfort hym, and to strength hym, and now wyl I shewe thee the truethe.
Beholde, there shall stande up yet three kynges in Persia, but the fourth shalbe farre rycher then they all. And when he is in the chefest power of hys ryches / he shall prouoke euery man agaynst the realme of Grekeland. Than shal there aryse yet a myghtye kyng that shal rule wyth great dominion and do what him lyst, and as sone as hys kyngdome com meth up, yt shalbe destroyed and deuyded toward the foure wyndes of the hea uen. They that come after hym shal not haue suche power and domynyon as he:
but hys kyngdome shalbe scattered, yea euen amonge other then those. And the kynge of the southe shalbe myghtyer, B then hys other Prynces. Agaynste hym there shall one make hym selfe stronge & shal rule hys dominiõ wt great power But after certayne yeares, they shalbe ioyned together, ad the kynges daugh ter of the south shal come to the kyng of the Northe, for to make frendshyppe, but she shall not obtayne the power of that arme, neither shal she be able to endure thorow his myght: but she, and such as brought her (yea ad he that begat her, and cõforted her for his tyme) shalbe delyuered up. Out of the braunches of her roote, there shall one C stande up in hys steade: whyche wyth power of armes shall go thorow the kynges land of the north / and handle hym accordyng to his strength. As for their Idols ad princes, wt their costly Jewels of goulde and sylver, he shal cary the awaye captiues into Egypte, and he shall preuayle agaynst the king of the north certayne yeares. And whe he is come into the kynges realme of ye south / he shalbe fayne to turne agai into hys awne lande: Wherfore hys sonnes shalbe displeased, & shal gather together a mighty greate hoost of people: and one of them shal come / and go thorow lyke a water flowed: then shal he returne, and go forth with defiynge and boastynge unto his awne lande.
Then the king of the south shalbe D angry, and shall come forth to fight a gaynst the kyng of the north: yea he shal brynge a greate multytude of peo ple together, and a greate heape shalbe geuen into his hande: these shal he cary away with greate prid, for so muche as he hath cast downe so many thou sãdes, neverthelss he shal not preuaile.
For the kynge of ye north shall gather (of the new) a greater heape of people then afore, and cõ forth (after a certaine tyme and yeares) with a mighty hoste and exceadynge greate good.
At the same tyme ther shal many stande up agaynste the kynge of the south, so that the wicked chyldre of thy people also shall exalte them selues (to fulfyll the vysyon) and then fall. So ye king of the north shal com to laie sege and to take the strong fensed cytyes.
And the power of them of the south, C shall not be able to abide him, and the best men of the people shal not be so strong as to resist hi. So hortly, when he cõmeth he shal hãdle hi as he lyst & no man shalbe so hardi as to stãd agaist hi he shall stande in the pleasaunt coũ-trye, which throw hym shalbe destroyed He shall set hys face wythall hys power to obtayne hys kyngdom, and to be lyke it. Yea that shal he do, and geue hym vn to the daughters among women, to destroye hym. But he shal fayle, nether shal he obtayne hys purpose. After thys shal he set hys face vnto the Iles, & take ma B ny of them. A prynce shall stoppe hym, to do hym a shame, besyde the confusion ŷ els shall come vnto hym. Thus shall he turne agayne to hys owne lande, stõble and fall / and be no more founde: so he that came vpon hym, and dyd hym vyo lence, shall stande in hys place, and haue a pleasaunt kyngdomme, and after fewe dayes he shalbe destroyed. & that neyther in wrath nor in battall. In hys steade there shall aryse a vyle person, not holdē worthy of a kynges dygnyty: thys shal come in craftely/and obtayne the kyngdome wyth fayre wordes: he shall fyght agaynste the armes of the myghtye and destroy them, yea & agaynst the prince of the couenaunt.

So after that he hath taken truce wt C hym, he shall handle disceatfully: that he maye get vp, and ouercome hym wyth a small flocke: and so wyth craftines to get hym to the fattest place of the lande and to deale otherwyse then other hys fa thers or graundfathers dyd. For he shal destroye the thyng/that they had robbed and spoyled /yea and all theyr substaũce Imagininge thoughtes agaynste the stronge holdes/ and that for a tyme.
Hys power and herte shalbe styrred vp wyth a great armye agaynste the kynge of the south, where throw the kynge of the south shalbe moued then vnto battell wyth a greate and myghtye hooste also Neuerthales he shal not be able to stand for they shall conspyre agaynst hym. Ye they that eate of hys meate shal hurte hi so that hys hoost shall fall/and many be D slayne downe.

These two kynges shalbe mynded to do myschefe and talke of dysceyte at one table but they shal not prospere: for why the ende shal not come yet, vnto the tyme appoynted. Then shall he go hom agayn into hys owne lande wyth greate good.

and set hys harte agaynst the holy coue uenaut, he shalbe busy agaynste it/ and then returne home. At the tyme appoyn ted he shal come agayne, and go toward the south: So shal it happen other wyse then at the fyrste, yet ones agayne And why: the shyppes of Cythym shall come vpon hym: that the man be smit ten and turne agayne that he maye take idignation against the couenaut of holy nes to medle agaynste yt. Yea he shall turne hym and drawe suche vnto hym/as leaue the holy couenaunt.

He shall set myghty men to vnhalow the sanctuary of strengthe, to put downe the dayly offerynge, and to set vppe the E abhomynable desolation. And suche as breake the couenaunt shall he flatter wt fayre wordes. But the peple ŷ wyl know theyr God, shall haue the ouerhande ād prosper. Those also that haue vnderstã ding amonge the people shall enforme ŷ multitude and for a long ceason, they shalbe persecuted wyth the swearde, wyth the fyer, wyth captyuitye and wyth the ta-kyng away of theyr Goodes. Now whē they fall they shalbe set vp wyth a lytell helpe: but many shall cleue vnto them faynedly.

Yea some of those whych haue vnderstandyng shalbe persecuted also ŷ they maye be tryed, puryfyed and clensen, til the tyme be oute: for there is yet another tyme appoynted. The kynge shall doo what hym lyst, he shall exalte and magnyfye hym selfe agaynst al, that is God F Yea, he shal speake marueilous thynges agaynst the God of all goddes, wherin he shall prospeare/so long tyl the wrath be fulfylled, for the conclusyon is deuy sed already. He shal not regarde the god of hys fathers, but hys lust shalbe vpon women; Yea, he shal not care for any god for he shall magnifye hym selfe aboue all. In hys place shal he worship the mighty Idoles and the god whom hys fathers knewe not/shall he honor wyth golde and syluer, with precious stones and pleasaunt Iewels.

This shall he do, seking helpe and soccour at the mighty Idols & straũge goddes. Suche as will receaue him, and take him for god he shal geue thē great

reate worshyppe and power: yea and make them Lordes of the multytude, & geue them the lande wyth rewardes.
In the latter tyme, shall the kynge of the Southe stryue wythe hym: and the kynge of the Northe in lyke maner shal comme agaynste hym wyth Charettes, horsmen & wyth a greate nauy of shyppes He shall come into the Landes, destroye and go thorowe: he shall entre also into the fayre pleasaunt lande. Many cyties and countres shal decaye, excepte Edom/Moab/and the best of the Chyldren of Ammon, whyche shall escape from hys hande. He shall stretch forth hys handes upon the countries & the land of Egypt Apocal. xii. shal not escape him. For thorow hys goyng in he shall haue domynion ouer the treasures of sylver and golde, and over all the precious Jewels of Egypte. Lybya and Ethiopya. Neuerthelesse the tydynges out of the east ād the north shall trouble hym: for the whych cause he shal go forthe to destroye and curse a greate multytude. The tents of his palace shal be pytcht betwene the two seas, vpon ŷ Apocal. xi. hyll of the noble sanctuarye, for he shall come to the ende of it and then shall no man helpe hym.

¶ He prophecieth the resurrection of ŷ dead. The darckenes of the propecy of Daniell.

¶ The .xii. Chapter.

A The tyme wyl come also, that Job. v. C the great prynce Mychael, 1. Cor. xv. whych standeth on thy peoples syde, shal aryse vp: for there shall come a tyme of trouble, suche as neuer was sens ther be-ganne to be any people, vnto that same tyme. Then shall thy people be delyuered, yea al those that be founde wrytte in the boke. Many of them that slepe in the dust of the earth shall awake: some to the euerlastyng lyfe, some to perpetual shame and reproofe. The wyse (suche as haue taught other) shall glyster as ŷ shynyng of heauen and/those that haue Instructe the Multytude vnto Godly-nesse, shalbe as the starres, worlde wythout ende.
B And thou O Danyel/shutte vp these wordes and seale the boke tyll the laste tyme. Many shal go about here & there and then shal knowledge encrease. And J Danyell loked, & beholde, there stode other two one vpon this shore of the water, the other vppon yonder syde.
And one of them sayde vnto him whych was clothed in lynen/ and stodde aboue vpon the waters of the floude: How lōg shal it be to the ende of these wonderous workes?
C Then herde J the man wyth the lyne clothes whych stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: when he helde vp hys Apoca. x. ryght and lefte hande vnto Heauen, and sware by hī whych lyueth for euer: that it shall tary for a tyme two tymes and halfe a tyme, and when the power of the holy people is cleane scattered abroade, Apoca. xi. then shall all these thynges be fulfylled.
J hearde it well, but J vnderstode it not. Then sayde J: O my Lorde what shal happen after that? He answered: go thy waye Daniell/for these wordes shal be closed vp and sealed tyll the laste tyme: and many shalbe puryfied, clensed and tryed. But the vngodlye shall lyue Apoca. wyckedlye, and those wycked as manye of them as they be, shall haue no vnderstandynge. As for suche as haue vnder-standing, they shall regard it. And frō the tyme forthe that the daylye offringe shalbe put downe, and the abhominable desolatiō set vp, ther shalbe a thousande two hundred & .xc. dayes.
O well is hym/that wayteth and commeth.
to the thousand .iii.
C, and .xxxv. dayes. Go thou thy way now,
tyll yt be ended,
take thy rest and byde
in thy lot/tyll the dayes haue an ende.

¶ The ende of the Prophecy of Danyel.

¶ The Boke of the Prophete Oseas.

¶ The tyme wherin Oseas prophecyed. Oseas by takinge an harlot to his wife, signifieth ye Idolatry of the people. The destructiō of ye offspring of Iehu, and of the Israelytes, is prophecyed.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

This is the word of the Lord, that came unto Oseas the A sonne of Beery, in ye dayes of Ozias, Ioathan / Ahas & Iezekiah kynges of Iuda: and in ye tyme of Ieroboam the sonne of Ioas kyng of Israel.

Fyrst, when the Lord spake unto Oseas he sayde unto hym: Go thy waye, take an harlot to thy wyfe / and get children by her: for the lande hath committed greate whordome agaynst the Lorde. So he wente, and toke a* Gomer the daughter of b* Deblaim: which conceaued / and brought forth a sonne. And the Lord sayde unto hī: cal hys name: * Israel, for I wyll shortlye avenge the bloude of Israel upon the house of Iehu, and wyl bring the kigdome of the house of Israel to an end. Then wyl I breake the bow of Israel, B in the valleye of Israel.

She conceaued yet agayne / and bare a daughter. And he saide unto hī: Cal her name d* Loruhamah (that ys / not obtayning mercy) for I wyll haue no pyte upon the house of Israell, but forget them, and put them cleane out of remembraunce. Neuertheles I wyll haue mercy upon the house of Iuda, & wyl saue them, euen thorow the Lorde their god. But I wyll not delyuer thē thorow any bowe, swearde, batel, horse or horsmen.

Now when she had weaned Loruhamah / she conceaued againe, ād bare a sonne. Then saide he: cal his name. e* Lommy: For why: ye are not my peple, therfore wyl not I be youres. And though the numbre of the chyldren of Israel be as the sande of the sea, which can nether be measured nor tolde: yet i the place where it is sayde unto thē, ye be not my people: euen there shal yt be thus reported of them: they be ye childrē of the lyuing god. Then shal the chyldren of Iuda and the childrē of Israel be gathered together againe / ād chose thē selues one head, and then departe out of the lande: for greate shalbe the daie of Israel.

The notes.

a* That is, consummacion because the kyngdom of Israel and Iuda should shortly be consumed.
b* That is, grape offrynges: because of the greate delycyousnes and voluptuousnes ye Iuda and Israel were in. c* That is the sead of God.
d* That is, hauyng no mercy.
e* That is, not my people.

¶ The people is called to repentaunce.

Tel your brethren, that they are my people: & your sisterē A yt they haue optained mercy. As for youre a* mother, ye shal chyd wt her / & reproue her: for she is not my wife, nether am I hir husbande, unlesse she put away her whordome out of my syght / ād her advoutry from her brestes. If no I shall stryppe her naked, and set her euen as she came into the worlde: yea I shal lay her waste, and make her lyke a wyldernesse, & slay her for thirst. I shal haue no pytie also upō her children / for they be the chylderen of fornicacion.

Theyr mother hath broken her wed B locke, and shee that bare them, is come to confusyon. For she sayde: I wyll go after my louers / that geue me my water and my bread, my wolle and flaxe, my oyle and my drincke. But I will hedg her away with thornes, and stop it, that she shall not fynde her fotesteppes: and though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not get thē, she shall seke thē / but not find them. Then shal she saye: well, I will go turne againe to my firste husbande, for at that time was I better at ease, then now. But this wolde she not knowe / where as I yet gaue her corne, wine, oyle, silver and golde, which she hath hanged upon Baall.

Wherfore now wil I go take my corne and wyne again in their ceason, and t. e againe my woll and my flaxe whyche I gaue her, to couer her shame.

And

And now wyll J discouer her foolysh-nesse, euen in the syght of her louers/and no mā shall delyuer her out of my Eze.xvi.b handes. Morouer/ J wyl take awaye al her myrth, her holy dayes/ her newemones, her Sabbothes and al her so-Jere.xiii. lempne feastes. J wyl destroye her vynyardes ād fygge trees, though she saeth: lo, here are my rewardes that my louers haue geuen me. J wyl make it a wodde / and the wylde beastes shall eate it vp. J wyl punysh her also for ỹ dayes of Baal, wherin she censed him deckīg him with her earinges & cheynes: when she folowed her louers/ and forgat me, sayeth the Lord.

Wherfore behold J wyll cal her againe, bryng her into a wyldernes, and speake frendely vnto her. There wyl J geue her, her vynyardes agayne, yea & the valley of Achor also to shewe her hope and comfort. Then shal she synge there as in the tyme of her youth/ and C lyke as in the daye when she came out of the land of Egypt. Then (sayeth the Lord) she shal saye vnto me: O my husband and shal cal me nomore Baal: for J wil take away those names of Baal from her mouth, yea she shal neuer remembre their names any more. Then wyl J make a couenaunt with theym, with the wilde beastes, with the foules of the ayr/ and with euery thing ỹ cre-peth vpon the earth.

As for bowe, swearde, and batell/ J wyl destroy suche out of the land, and wyl make them to slepe safely. Thus wyl J mary thee vnto myne owne self for euermore: yea euen to my selfe wil J mary thee, in ryghteousnes, in equy-tee/ in louyng kyndnesse and mercy.
Jn fayth also wyll J mary thee vnto my self, and thou shalt know the Lord.
At the same time wyl J shew my selfe frēdly and gracious vnto the heauēs, sayeth the Lord: and the heauens shall helpe the earth / and the earthe shall helpe the corne, wine and oyle/ ād they shal helpe Jsraell. J will sowe theym vpon earthe, for a sede to myne owne selfe, and will haue mercy vpon her, that was without mercy.

And to theym whyche were not my people, J wyll saye: Thou arte my people. And he shal saye: thou arte my God.

¶ Of the loue of god toward the people.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

Then sayde the Lorde to me: Go yet thy waye and wow an aduouterous woman, A whom thy neighboure lo-ueth, as the Lord doth the children of Jsrael: how be it they haue respect to straunge goddes, and loue ỹ wine kannes. So J gat her for xv siluerlinges, and for an Homer and an half of barlie, & saide vnto her: Thou shalt bide with me a longe season, but se that thou playest not the harlot, and Loke thou medle wyth none other man, and then wyll J kepe my selfe for thee.

Thus the children of Jsrael shal sit a greate while without kīg & prince B without offering and aultar, without prest and reuelation. But afterwarde shal the children of Jsrael conuerte & seke the Lorde their God, and Da-uid their king: a in ỹ latter dayes they shal worship the Lorde, and his louīg kyndnes.

¶ A cōplaint agaīst ỹ people & ỹ prestes of Jsrael

¶ The.iiii. Chapter

Heare the word of the Lord O ye childrē of Jsrael: for the Lord must punish thē A that dwel in the lād. And why? there is no faithfulnes there is no mercy/ ther is no knoweledg of God in the lande: but swearynge, lyeng, manslaughter, theft, and aduou-try haue gotten the ouer hand, and one bloudgiltines foloweth an other.
Therfor shal ỹ lād be in a miserable case and all they that dwell therein, shall mourne. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and the fysshes in ỹ sea shal dye. Yet is there none that will chasten nor reproue another: he prestes which shoulde reforme other men, are become lyke the people.

Therfore stomblest thou in the day tyme

Therfore stomblest thou i ẏ daye time and the prophet with thee i the night.
I wyll bring thy mother to sylence, ād whye my people perysshe/ because they haue no knowledge. Seyng then that thou hast refused understanding ther fore wyl I refuse thee also: so that thou shalt nomore be my prest. And forso muche as thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wyll also forget thy chyldren. The more they increased in the multytude, the more they synned agaynst me, therfore wyl I chaunge their honoure into shame. They eate up the synnes of my people, and corage them in their wyckednesse. Thus the prest is be C come lyke the people. Wherfore I wyl punysh them for their wycked wayes, ād rewarde them accordynge to their awne ymagynacyons. They shall eate/ād not haue ynough: They haue a * used whor-dome/ therfor shall they not prospere: ād why: they haue forsaken the Lorde/ and not regarded hym.

Whordom, wyne and dronckennesse take the harte awaye. My people aske counsayl at their stockes, their staf must tell them. For an whoorysh mynde hath deceaued them/ so that they cōmytte fornycacyon agaynst their God. They make sacryfyces upon the hye moun tay-nes, and burne theyr incense upon the hylles, yea amonge the okes, groues ād busshes, for there are good shadowes.
Therfore youre daughters are become harlottes, and youre spouses haue broke D theyr wedlocke. I wyll not punysh your daughters for beynge defyled, and your brydes that be come whores: seyng the fathers them selues haue medled wyth harlottes/ and offered wyth buthryftes: but the people that wyl not understande must be punysshed.

Though thou b * Israel art disposed to playe the harlot, yet shuldest not thou haue offended, O Juda: thou shuldest not haue runne to Galgal, nor haue gone up to Bethauen nor haue sworne, ẏ lord lyueth. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lord therfore shal make her fede, as the lambe that goeth a straye. And where as Ephrayim is becō partaker of Idols/ wel, let hi go. Theyr dronkennes hath putt them backe, and brought them to whordom.
Their rulers loue rewardes, bring (say they) to their owne shame. A wynde shal take hold of their fethers, ād they shall be confounded in their offringes.

a * To use whordom or fornicacyon thorow out ẏ prophetes, is, to take another god thē the true god & to serue images or to beleue in them.

b * Israell and Ephraim, for the moost part in the Prophetes are taken for the .x. trybes. Psal. lxx viii. b. Ye reade in the .iii. of the kynges .xii. c that x. trybes folowed Jeroboam, where as only Juda & Beniamin abode by Rehoboam. Those .x. trybes are cōmonly called Israel in the Prophetes: & Beniamin is rekened with Juda.

¶ Agaynst the Prestes & rulers of Israel. The help of man can do nothyng against god.

¶ The .v. Chapter.

O Ye prestes: heare this/ take hede, O thou housholde of A Israel: geue eare/ O thou kyngly house: for this pu nisshment wyl come upon you/ that are become a snare unto Miz phah, and a spred net unto the mounte of Tabbor. They kyll sacryfices by hepes, * to begyle the people therwith: therfore wyll I punysh them all. I know Ephraim wel ynough, and Israel is not hid fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot: and Israel is defiled They are not mynded to turne unto their God, for they haue an whorysshe hearte, so that they can not knowe the B Lorde.

But the pryde of Israell wyll be rewarded him in hys face, yea both Is Osee. vii. b rael and Ephraim shal fal for their wic kednes, and Juda with them also. Jeremy. iii. b Deute. iiii. e Ezech. xiiii. a They shal come with their shepe and bullockes to seke the Lorde, but they shal not fynd hym, for he is gone from them. As for the lord, they haue refused him and brought up bastard chyldren a moneth therfore shal deuoure them with their porcions. Blowe wyth the shawmes at Gabea/ and with the trōpet i Ramah. Cry out at Bethauē upō yōsyde of Ben Jamyn. In the tyme of the plage shal Ephraim be layde waste therfore dyd I faithfully warne the tri bes of Israel. Yet are the princes of Juda become lyke them, that remoue the lādemarkes, therfore wyl I poure out my wrath upon them lyke water.
Ephraim is oppressed, and can haue no ryght of the lawe: for why: they fo-low

lowe the doctrynes of men. Therfore wyl I be vnto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Juda as a caterpiller.

D iiii.Re.xvi.b Deu.xxviii.b When Ephraim sawe his sycknes and Juda his dysease: Ephraim went vnto Assur, and sent vnto kyng Jareb: yet could not he helpe you, nor ease you of your payne. I am vnto Ephraym as a Lyon, and as a lyons whelpe to the house of Juda. Euē I, I wyl spoile thē and go my waie. I wyll take them wt me, and no man shal rescue them. I wil go, & returne to my place, til they waxe faynt, and seke me.

¶ The.vi.Chapter.

A Job.v.b In theire aduersytee they shal seke me, and saie: come let vs turne agayne to the Lord: for he hath smytten vs, and he shal heale vs: He hath wounded vs, and he shal bid vs vp agayne: *a after two dayes shal he quicken vs, in the third daye he shal rayse vs vp, so that we shal lyue in hys syght. Then shal we haue vnderstandyng & endeuoure oureselues to know the Lorde. He shal go forth as the spryng of the day, & come vnto vs as ye euenyng and mornyng rayne vpon ye earthe.

O Ephraim, what shal I do vnto thee? O Juda, how shal I entreate thee? seynge your loue is lyke a mornig cloud B and lyke a dewe that goeth early away. Therfore haue I cut downe the Prophetes, and let them be slayne for my wordes sake: so that thy punishmente shal come to lyght. For I haue pleasure in louyng kyndnes, and not in offeryng: yea in the knowledge of God, more then in burnt sacrifice. But euen lyke as Adam dyd, so haue they broken my couenaunt, and set me at naught.

Galaad is a citie of wycked doers, of malycious people and bloudshedders. The multitude of the Prestes is lyke C an heape of theues, murtherars & bloud thurstye: for they haue wrought abhomynacyon. Horryble thinges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israell is defyled: but Juda shall haue an haruest for himselfe, whē I returne the captyuytye of my people.

a * After two dayes shall he quicken vs, and in the thyrd daye shall he rayse vs vp, &c. That is, for a certen space wyll he afflict and trouble vs but he wyll heale vs agayne and restoare vs to (?) The thyrde daye that is wythoute longe delaye or long taryaunce.

¶ Of the vyces and wantonnes of the people.

¶ The.vii.Chapter

A When I vndertake to make Israell whole, then the vngracyousnesse of Ephraim and the wickednes of Samaria commeth to lyght, then go they aboute wyth lyes. At home they be theues, and wythout, they fall to robbyng, they consyder not in theyr hertes that I remembre all theyre wyckednes. They go about wyth theyr owne inuencions, but I se them wel ynough. They make the kyng and the prynces, to haue pleasure in theyr wyckednesse and lyes. All these burne in aduoutery, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth, whē B he hath lefte knedynge, tyll the dowe be leuened: Euē so goeth it thys day with oure Kynges and Prynces, for they begyn to be wod drōke through wyne: they vse familyaritye wyth suche as deceiue them. They wyth the ymagynacyon of theyr herte are lyke an ouen, theyr sleape is all the nyght lyke the slepe of a baker, in the mornyng is he as hote as ye flame of fyre: they at altogether as hote as an ouen.

C They haue deuoured theyr owne iudges: all theyre kynges are fallen: yet is ther none of them that calleth vpon me. Therfor must Ephraim be myxte amōg the Heathen. Ephraim is become lyke a cake, that no Man turneth: straungers haue deuoured hys strenght, yet he regardeth it not: he wareth full of gray heares, yet wyl he not know it: and the pryde of Israel is cast down before theyr face, Osee.v.a yet wyll they not turne to the Lord their God, nor seke hym for all thys.

Ephraym is lyke a doue, that is begyled, and hath no harte. Now call they vpon the Egypcians, nowe goo they to the Assyryans: but whyle they be going here and there, I shall spreade my nette ouer them & draw them downe as the foules of the ayre. and accordynge as they haue bene warned, so wyll I punysh them.

wo be unto them, for they haue forsaken me. They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at naught. I am he that haue redemed them, and yet they dissem ble wyth me. They call not upon me wt theyr hertes/but lye howlynge upō their beddes/where as they come together, it is but for meate and drynke, ād me wyll they not obey. I haue taght thē, & defēded their arme, yet do they ymagyn mischefe agaynst me. They turne them selues but not a ryght. and are become as a broken bowe. Theyr prynces shal be slaine with the swerde for the malyce of theyr tūges suche blasphemyes haue they lerned i the lande of Egypte.

The destruccyon of Juda and Israel, be cause of their Idolatrye.

The. viii. Chapter.

Set the horne to thy mouth/and blowe: get the swyftlye a as an Aegle, unto the house of the Lorde, for they haue broken my couenaunt and transgressed my lawe. Israell can saye un to me: thou art my God, we knowe thee: but he hath refused the thynge that is good, therfor shall the enemy folowe up on hym. They haue ordened kynges, but not thorow me: they haue made prynces and I must not knowe of it. Of theyr syluer and golde haue they made them Images, to brynge them selues to des-truccyon. Thy calf, O Samarya, shalbe taken awaie, for my wroth ful indignaciō is gone forth agaist thee. How long will it be, or they can be clensed? For the calfe came from Israel, the worckeman made it, therfore can it be no God, but euen to a spyders webbe shall the Calfe of Sa-marya be turned. a* They haue sowne wynde/therfore shall they reape a storme b Theyr sede shall beare no corne. there shall no mele be made of theyr increase: though they reape yet shall straungers deuoure it up. Israell shal perysh, the Gentiles shall intreate hym as a foule vessell. Synce they went up to the Assyryans, they are become lyke a wilde asse in the deserte.

Ephrayin geueth rewardes to get louers, therfor are they scatred amōg the heathen there wil I gather them up They shall soone be werye of the bur then of kynges and Prynces. Ephraim hath made many aultars to do wyckid nes: therfore shall the aultars turne to hys synne. Thoughe I shewe them my lawe neuer so much, they counte it but straunge doctryne. Where as they doo sacrifice/offeryng the flesh and eating C it: the lorde wyll haue no pleasure there in but wyll remembre theyr wickednes ād punysh their synnes. Israel turneth againe into Egipt: they haue forgotten him that made thē they build churches, ād Juda maketh many strōg cities: therfore wyll I sende a fyre into their cyties and it shall consume theyre places.

The Notes.

a* That is, They haue geuen themselues to vayne and tryflynge thynges, therfore shall they falle into great trouble and Jeopardy. To sowe wynde is as much to say among the Hebrues, as to labour in vai and to lese the labour.

Of the hunger and captiuitie of Israel

The. ix. Chapter.

Do not thou tryumphe, O Israell, make no bostinge more then the Heathen, for thou hast commytted ad- A uoutry agaynst thy God: straūg rewardes hast thou loued more thē al the corne floures. Therfore shal they no more enioye the corne floures & wynepresses, and their swete wyne shal fayle them. They wyl not dwel in the Lordes lande, but Ephraim turneth a gayne into Egypt, and eateth uncleane thynges amonge the Assirians. They powre out no wyne for a drinckoffering unto the Lord nether gaue they hi their slayne offeringes: but they be unto thē as mourners meate, wherein all they that eate them, are defyled: For ye bred that they haue suche lust unto, shal not come into the house of the lord. What wyll ye do then in the solempne day-es/and in the feast of the lorde? lo, they shal get them awaye for the destrucciō: Egypte shall receaue them, and Noph B shal bury them.

The nettels shall ouergrowe their pleasaunt goodes, and burres shalbe i their tabernacles. Be ye sure (O Israel) the tyme of vysytaciō is com/the dayes the Prophete, ye holde hym for a foole: and hym that is riche in the sprete, for a self a watchman of my god, a Prophet that is become a snare to do hurt in eue-ry strete, and abhominacyō in the house of hys God: They be gone to farre, ād haue destroied them selues, like as they did afore time at Gabaa. Therfore their wickednes shalbe remembred, ād their sinnes punyshed.

I fouude Israel lyke grapes in the

But they are gone to Baall Peor/and as their louers. Ephraim[b] * flyeth like G a byrde, so shal their glory also. In so much, that they shall neyther be gette) conceaue nor beare children. And though they brynge vp anye, yet wil I make the childles among mē. Yea wo shal come to them, when I departe frō them. Ephraim (as me thinke) is planted in welthynes, lyke as Tyrus, but now must she brynge her owne childrē forth to the manslayer.

O Lorde ẏ shalt geue them: what shalt thou geue them? geue them an vn frutful wombe ād drye breastes. All their wyckednes is done at Galgall, there do I abhorre them. For the vngra ciousnes of their owne inuencyons, I wyl dryue them out of my house. I wyl loue thē nomore, for al their prynces ar vnfaythful. Ephraim is hewen doune their rote is dryed vp so that they shal brynge nomore frute: yea and though they bring forth any, yet wyll I slaye/euē the best beloued frute of their body My god shal cast them awaye, for they haue not bene obediēt vnto hi, therfore shall they go astraye among ẏ heathē.

princes. wel, I gaue thee a king in my wrathe, and in my displeasure wyll I take him from thee agayne.
The wickednesse of Ephraim is bounde together, and his synne lyeth hyd. Therfore shall sorowes come vpon hym as vpon a woman that trauayleth. An vndyscrete sone is he: for he consydreth not, that he shuld not haue bene able to haue endured in the tyme of hys byrth, had not I defended hym from the graue/ and delyuered hym from death.
O death, I wil be thy death: O hell D I will be thy stynge. Yet can I se no cõ-forte: for when he is now the goodlyest amonge the brethren, the East wynde (euen the wynde of the Lord) shall come downe from the wyldernesse/ and drye vp hys condytes, and drycke vp hys welles: he shall spoyle the treasure of all pleasaunt vessels.
As for Samarya, they shalbe made waste, and why? they are dysobedient vnto theyr God. They shall perysh wyth ÿ swerde, theyr chyldren shalbe slayne/ ãd theyr wemen great wyth chylde shalbe ryped vp.

¶ The .xiiii. Chapter.

O Israel/ turne thee now vnto the Lorde thy God, for thou A hast taken a greate fall tho-row thy wyckednesse. Take these wordes with you, whẽ ye turne to the Lord, and saye vnto hi[m]: O forgeue vs all oure sines, receaue vs gracyously, and then wyl we offre the bullockes of our lippes vnto thee. Assur shalbe nomore oure helper, neither wyl we ryde vpon horses eny more. As for ÿ B worckes of oure handes, we wyl nomore call vpon them: For it is thou that art oure God, thou shewest euer mercy vnto the fatherlesse.
O (yf they wold do this) I should heale theyr sores: yea, wyth all my herte wold I loue theym: so that my wrath shoulde cleane be turned awaye from the. Yea, I wold be vnto Israel as the dewe/ and he shulde growe as the lylye, and hys rote shoulde breake oute as Lybanus. Hys braunches should sprede out abrode, ãd be as fayre as the olyue tre, and smell as Lybanus. They that dwel vnder hys C shadowe, shuld come agayne, and growe vp as the corne, ãd floryssh as the vyne: be he shoulde haue as good a name/as the wyne of Lybanus.

O Ephraym, what haue I to do wt Idoles anye more? I wyll graciouslye heare hym, and leade hym forth: I wyll be vnto thee as a greane fyrre tre, vpon me shalt thou fynde thy frute. Who so is wyse, shall vnderstande thys: and he that is ryght instructed, wyl regarde it.
For the wayes of the Lorde are ryghtuous, suche as be godly wyl walke in thē.
As for the wycked / they wyll stomble therin.

¶ The .i. Chapter.

Thys is the worde of the Lord that came vnto Joel the sonne
A of Phatuel: Heare
O ye elders: pondre thys well, all ye that dwell in the lande, if euer there happened suche a thyng in youre dayes, or in the dayes of youre fathers. Tell your chyldren of it/ & let them shewe it vnto theyr Chylderen, and so they to Certifye theyr posterytie therof. Loke what the Caterpiller hath left, that hath the greshopper eaten vp: what the greshopper left, that hath the locuste eaten vp: and what the locust hath left, ẏ hath the blastyng consumed. Wake vp ye Dronckardes, and wepe: mourne all ye Wyne suppers, be-B cause of youre swete wyne for it shalbee taken away from youre mouthe. Yea, a myghtie ād an innumerable people shal come vp into my lande/ these haue teeth lyke the teeth of lyons, and chaft bones lyke the lyonesses. They shall make my vyneyarde waste, they shal pyl of the bar kes of my fygge trees/ stryppe them bare, cast them awaye/ and make the braunches whyte.
Make thy mone as a vyrgin doth that gyrdeth her self with sack, because of her bryde grome. For the meate and drynckoffryng shalbe taken awaye frō ẏ house of ẏ Lorde: & the prestes the lordes ministers shall mourne. The feld shal be wasted, the land shalbe in a miserable case: for ẏ corne shalbe destroyed, ẏ swete wyne shal come to confusyon, & the oyle vtterly desolate: The housbande men and the wyne gardeners shall loke pyte ously and make lamentacyon for the C wheate, wyne and barely/ and because ẏ haruest vpō the feld is so clene destroyed. The grape gatherers shall make greate mone, when the vyneyard and fygetrees be so vtterly wasted. Yea, all the pomgarnettes/ palmetrees, apletres, and the other trees of the felde shall wyther awaye. Thus the mery cheare of ẏ chyldren of menne shall come to confusyon.
Gyrde you, and make your mone/O ye prestes: mourne ye mynysters of the aulter: goo youre waye in, and slepe in sack cloth, O ye offycers of my God: for the meate and drinkeofferyng shalbe taken awaie from the house of your god.
Proclayme a fastynge, call the congrega D Joel.ii.d cyon, gather the elders and all the inhabyters of the land together in the house of the Lord your God, and crye vnto ẏ Lorde: alas, alas, for thys daye. And why? the day of the Lorde is at hande, and commeth as a destroier from the al-myghtye. Shal not the meates be takē awaye before oure Eyes, the myrth also and ioye from the house of our God?
The sede shall perysh in the grounde: ẏ graners shal lye waste/ ẏ floores shalbe broke downe, for ẏ corne shalbe destroied O what a syghynge make the catel? ẏ bullockes are very euel lyking, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are E famysshed awaye.
O Lord, to thee wyll I crye: for the fyre hath cōsumed the goodly pastures of the wildernesse/ and the flāme hath brent vp al the trees of the felde. Yea, ẏ wylde beastes crye also vnto thee: for the water ryuers are dryed vp and the fire hath consumed the pastures of the wildernes.

Before hym shall be a consumynge fyre, and behynde hym a burnyng flāme. The lande shalbe as a garden of pleasure before hi, but behynde hym shal it be a very waste wyldernesse and there is no mā, that shal scape hym. They are to loke vpon/ lyke

Sophonias i, Amos v, c

The Lorde shall shewe hys voyce before hys hooste for, his hooste is greate, stronge and myghtye to fulfyll hys commaundement. Thys is that great and marueilous fearfull day of the lord, And who is able to abyde it?

Now therfore sayeth the Lorde: Turne you vnto me with al youre hartes wyth fastyng, weppyng and mournynge, rente your hertes, and not your clothes. Turne you vnto the Lorde youre God, for he is gracyous and mercyfull/ long sufferyng and of greate compassyon: ād because of my people and herytage of Israel: whome they haue scattered a bout in the nacions and parted my lād yea they haue cast lottes for my people, the yonge men haue they set in the bor-

¶ The Boke of the Prophet Amos.

¶ The tyme of the Prophecy of Amos. The word of the Lord agaynst Siria, Agaynst Tyre, agaynste Edom, and agaynst the sonne of Ammon.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

A These are y sermons that wer shewed vn to Amos (whyche was one of the shepardes at Thecua) vpon Israell/ in y tyme of Osiah kig iiii.Re.xvi.b of Juda, and in y tyme of Jeroboam the sonne of Joas kynge of Israell/two yeare before the earth quake. And he sayd: The Lorde shal roare out of Syon, and shewe hys voyce from Jerusalem: so that the pastures of the shepardes shall be in a myserable case, and the tope of Char-mel dryed vp. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre, and foure wickednesses of Da mascus, I wyll not spare her: because they haue threshed Galaad with yron flayles: But I wyl send a fyre into the house of Hazael, the same shal consume the palaces of Benadab.
B Thus wyl I breake the barres of Da mascus, and rote out the inhabiters frō the felde of Auen, and him that holdeth the scepter out of the pleasaunte house, so that the people shalbe dryuen out of fayre Siria, sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wic kednesses of Gaza I wyl not spare her because they make y prisoners yet more captyue and haue dryuen them into the lande of Edom. Therfore wyll I sende a fyre into the walles of Gaza whych shall deuoure her houses. I wyl rote out them that dwell at Asdod and hym that holdeth the scepter of Ascalon and stretche out myne hande ouer Accar ron that the remnaunte of the phylystij nes, shall peryshe, sayeth the Lorde.
Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wyckednesses of the citie of Tire I wyll not spare her: because they haue encreased the captiuitee of the Edomy tes ād haue not remembred the brother ly conuenaunte. Therfore wyll I sende a fyre into the walles of Tyre that shal consume her palaces.
Thus sayth the Lord, for thre and four C wyckednesses of Edom I wyl not spare hym / because he persecuted hys brother wyth the swerde, destroyed hys mo thers wombe, bare hatred very longe, and so kepte indignacion alwaye by hi Therfore wyl I sende a fyre into The-man/whych shall deuoure the palaces of Bosra.
Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre ād foure wyckednesses of the chyldren of Ammon I wyl not spare them: because they ryppe vp the wemen greate wyth chylde in Galaad, to make the borders of theyr landes the wyder. Therfore I wyll kyndle a fyre in the walles of Rab bath that shall consume her palaces wt a great crye in the day of Battel, in tēpest and in the day of storme so y theyr kynge shall go into captiuitye he and hys prynces together, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ Agaynst Moab Juda, and Israell.

¶ The .ii. Chapter.

Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wyckednesses of Moab I wil not spare hym: because he brent the bones of the kynge of Edom to asshes Therfore wyl I send a fyre into Moab whych

which shall consume the palaces of Carioth: so that Moab shal perysh wyth a noyse and the sounde of a shawme. I B wyll rote out the iudge frō amonge thē and slaye al hys prynces wyth hi, sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wyckednesses of Juda, I wyll not spare hym: because he hath cast a syde the lawe of the Lorde / and not kepte hys commaundementes: for why?
They wolde nedes be deceaued wyth the lyes, that theyr forefathers folowed.
Therfore will I sende a fyre into Juda whych shall consume the palaces of Jerusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre & foure wyckednesses of Israel, I wil not spare hym: because he hath sold the rygh-tuous for money, and the pore for shues.
C They treade vpon poore mens heades/in the dust of the earth/ and croke the wayes of the meke. The sonne and the father go to the harlot, to dishonoure my holy name, they a * lye besyde euery aultar vpon clothes taken to pledge/ ād in the house of theyr goddes they drynke the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the Amorytes before theym, that was as hye as the Cedre trees, ād as stronge as the okes; notwythstandyng I destroyed hys frute from aboue and his roote from vnder.

Agayne: I brought you out of the lande of Egypte, and led you xl. yeares thorow the wyldernisse, that yee myght haue the Ammorytes land in possessyon I raysed vp Prophetes amonge youre chyldren/ and absteyners amonge youre D yonge men. Is it not so, O ye chyldren of Israel, sayeth the Lorde? But ye gaue the absteyners wyne to drynke, yea yee commaūded the prophetes, saiyng: Prophecy not. Beholde/ I will crashe you in sonder, lyke as a waine crassheth, that is full of sheaues: so that the swyfte shall not escape, nether the stronge be able to do eny thynge: no, the gyaunte shall not saue hys owne lyfe. The archer shall not abyde, and the swyfte of fote shall not escape. The horsman shall not saue hys lyfe, and he that was manly of stomacke as a gyaunte, shall in that daye be fayne to runne hys waye naked, sayeth the Lorde.

The Notes

a * To lye besyde euery hyl aulter vpon clothes taken to pledge, is, to serue their Idoles of goodes ta-

The .iii. Chapter.

HEare, what the Lord speaketh vnto you (O ye chyldren of Israel) namely, vn- A to all the trybes, whome I brought out of Egypt, and sayd: you only haue I excepted from al the generacyons of the earth: therfore wil I visit you in al your wickednesses May twayne walcke together excepte they be agreed amonge them selues?
Doth a lyon roare in the wodde, except he haue a prey? Or crieth a liōs whelp out of his denne, except he haue gottē somthyng? doth a byrde fall in a snare vpon the earth, where no fouler is?
Taketh a man hys snare vp from the grounde, afore he catch somwhat? Cry they out Alarum with the trompet in y cytye, and the people not afrayed? Commeth there anye plage in a cytie wythout it be the Lordes doynge?
Now dothe the Lorde God no maner of thynge, but he telleth hys secretes before vnto hys seruauntes the prophetes. B When a lyon roareth, who wyll not be a frayed? Seyng then that the Lorde God hym selfe speaketh/ who wyll not * Pro- * or, ye shal not Prophecy Preache in the palaces at Azod/ and in the palaces of the lande of Egypte and saye: gather you together vppon the mountaynes of Samarya, so shall ye see greate murther and vyolent oppressyon amonge them, for why? they regarde not the thynge that is ryght, sayth the Lord: they gather together euel gotten goodds and laye vp robbery in theyr houses.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God:
This lande shalbe troubled and beseged rounde aboute: thy strength shalbe plucte from thee, and thy palaces robed. Thus sayeth the Lorde: lyke as an hyrdeman taketh two legges or a pece of an eare out of the lyons mouth: Euen so the chyldren C of Israell (that dwell in Samarya/ hauing theyr couches in the corner, ād their beddes at Damascus) shalbe plucked away.

iii. Re. xvi, xvii. Heare, and beare recorde in the house of Jacob (sayeth the Lorde God of hostes) that when I begyn to vysyt the wickednesse of Israel / I will visyt the aultars at Bethell also. so that the hornes of the aultar shalbe broken of / and fall to the grounde.

As for the wynter house and somer house, I will smyte them downe: and the houses of Iuery, yea, & many other houses shall perysh, and be destroyed, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ Agaynst the governours of Samarya.

¶ The. iiii. Chapter

O Heare this worde a * ye fat kine / that be upon the hyl of Samarya: Ye that doo poore Men A wronge, and oppresse the nedy: ye that saye to youre Lordes: brynge hyther, let us drincke. Therfore the Lorde hath sworne by his holynesse: The dayes shal come upon you, that ye shal B be lyfte up upon speares / and youre posterytye caryed awaye in fysshers panyers. Ye shall gett you oute at the gappes one after another, and in Armon shal ye be cast awaye, sayeth the Lorde.

Esai. xvi. a. iii. Reg. xii. e. Osee. iiii. c. Osee. xi. c. xii. Ye came to Bethel for to worke ungraciousnes / and have increased your B synnes at Galgall; ye brought your sacryfyces in the mornynge, and youre tythes unto the thyrd daye. Ye made a thanck offeryng of leven / ye promysed fre wyl offerynges, and proclaymed thē.
Suche lust had ye O ye Children of Israell, sayth the Lord God. Therfore have I geven you ydle teth in al youre cyties and scarsenes of bread in al your places, yet wyll ye not turne unto me sayeth the Lord. When there were but thre monethes unto the harveste / I wythelde the rayne from you, yea I rayned upon one cytie and not upon an other, one pece of C grounde was moysture wythe Rayne and the grounde that I rayned not upō, was drye. Wherfore two, yea, thre cytyes came unto one to drincke water: but they were not satysfyed, yet wyll ye not turne unto me sayeth the Lord.

I have smytten you wyth drouthe ād blasting, and loke how many orchardes, vyne yardes, fygge trees & olyuetrees ye had: the caterpyller hath eaten them up: But yet wyll ye not turne unto me, saith the Lord. Pestylence have I sent amōg you: as I dyd in Egypte: your yong mē Exo. ix. have I slayne wyth the swerde, & caused your horsis to be taken captyue. I made the stynckynge savoure of youre tentes to come up into your nosthrels: Yet wyl ye not turne unto me, sayeth the Lord.
Some of you have I overthrowē, as I overthrew Sodō & Gomor: so ÿ ye were as a brande plucked out of the fyre. Yet Gen. xix. wyl ye not turn unto me, sayth the Lord. D Therfore thus wyl I handle thee again (O Israel) yea even thus wyll I handle thee. Make thee readye then to mete thy God, O Israell. For lo, he maketh ÿ mountaynes, he ordeneth the wynde, he sheweth man what he is aboute to do: he maketh the mornynge and the darcknes, he treadeth uppon the hygh places of the earth: the Lorde God of Hoostes is hys name.

¶ A complaynte of the captiuytie of Israel.

The. v. Chapter.

Heare thys woorde O ye house of Israel, and why? I musste make thys moone for A you: The Vyrgyn Israel shall fall, and never ryse up agayne, she shalbe cast downe uppon her owne grounde / and no man shall healpe her up. For thus sayeth the Lorde God: Where as ther dwelt a thousand in one cytie, there shalbe left scarse an hundred therein: and wher there dwelt an C. ther shall scarse ten be left for the house of Israell. Neverthelesse thus sayeth the Lord unto the house of Israel: Seke after me and ye shall lyve, but seke not after Bethell. Come not at Galgal, and go not to Bersaba: for Galgal shalbe caryed away captiue, and Bethel shal com to naught.
Seke the Lorde that ye maye lyve: least the house of Joseph be brente wyth fyre and consumed, and least there be none to quenche Bethel.

Ye turne the lawe to wormwood, and cast downe ryghteousnes unto ÿ groūd.

The Lorde maketh the vii. starres ad the Oryons, he turneth the nyght into daye, and of the daye he maketh darcknesse. He calleth the waters of the sea, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde. The Lord is his name. He cau seth destruccyon vpon the myghty peo ple, and bryngeth downe the stronge holde: but they owe him euel wyll, that E reproueth them openly: and who so tel leth them ye playne trueth, they abhorre hym. For so muche then as ye oppresse ye poore, ad robbe hym of his best susse naunce: therfor / whet as ye haue buyl ded houses of square stone / ye shal not dwell in them. Maruelous pleasaunt vyneyardes shall ye plante, but the wyne of them shal ye not drynke: and whereas for ye multitude of youre wyckednesses and your stout synnes, I knowe them rightwell. Enemyes ar ye of the ryghtous / ye take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgemement.
Therfor the wyse muste nowe be fayne to holde his tounge, so wycked a tyme is it.
Seke after the thynge that is good & F not euell, so shall ye lyue: yea the Lord God of hostes shall be wyth you, accor dyng to youre own desyer. Hate the euel and loue the good, set vp right agayn in the portes: & (no doubte) the Lorde G O D of hoostes shall be Mercyfull vnto ye remnaunt of Joseph. If not (sayth the Lorde God / the God of host es) ther shal be mournyng in al stretes yea they shall saye in euery strete: alas alas. They shall call ye housbandman to lamentacyon, & such as can mourne to mournynge. In al vyneyardes ther shall be heuynesse, for I wyll comme a monge you, sayeth the Lord. Wo be vn to them that desyre the daye of the Lor de. Wherfor wolde ye haue it? As for the daye of the Lorde, it shalbe darcke and not cleare: Yea lyke as when a mā runneth from a Lion and a Beere me teth with him: or when he cometh into the house / and leaneth his hand vpon the wall, a serpent byteth hym. Shall not the daye of the Lorde be darcke, ād G not cleare? shall it not be cloudy, ād no shyne in it?
I hate ād abhorre your holydayes and where as ye cense me when ye come together / I wyl not accepte it. And though ye offre me brentofferynges & meatofferyngs, yet haue I no pleasure therin. As for your fat thanckofferinges I wyll not loke vpon them. Away wyth that noyse of thy songes, I wyll not heare thy playes of musick: but se that equyte flow as ye water, and ryght uousnesse as a myghtye streame. O ye house of Israel / gaue ye me offrynges and sacryfices those. xl. yeares longe in the wyldernesse? yet haue ye sette vp tabernacles to youre Moloch and Images of your Idoles, yea and the star of your God Rempha / fygures whych ye made to worshyppe them. Therfore wyll I cause you be caryed awaye beyonde Damascus, sayth the LORD / whose name is the God of hostes.

Agaynst the prynces of Israel lyuing in pleasures.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

O, Wo be to the proude wel- A thy In Syon to suche as thynke them so sure vpon ye mount of Samaria: which holde theymselues for the best of the worlde and rule the house of Israel, euen as they list. Go vnto Calne and se: and fro thence get you to Hemath the greate cytie, ād so go downe to Gath of the Philistines: be they better at ease then these kyngdomes, or the border of their lande wyder then yours? Ye are ta ken out for the euel daye, euen ye that sit in the stole of wylfulnes. Ye that lye vp on beddes of Juery, and vse youre wantonnes vpon your couches: ye that eate ye best lambes of the flocke, and the fattest calues of the droue: ye that synge to the lute, and in playnge of instrumentes cō pare youre selues vnto David ye that drinke wine out of gobilettes, and anoint youre selues wyth the beste oyle, but no man is sory for Josephes hurte. Therfor nowe shal ye be the fyrste of them ye shal be led awaye Captyue / and the Lustye Chere of the wylfull shall come to an ende.
The Lorde God hath sworne euen B by hym self (sayeth the Lorde God of hoostes) I hate the pride of Jacob/ ād I abhorre his palaces: and I wyl geue ouer the citie, wyth al that is therin: so that though there remayne ten men in one house, they shall dye. So theyr nexte kynsfolckes and the dead buriers shal take them, and cary awaye theyr bones and saye vnto hym that is in the ynnermer houses: is there yet eny mo by thee? And he shal answere: they ar al gone, holde thy tunge (shall he saye) for they woulde not remembre the name of the Lorde.

Beholde the Lorde is mynded to smyte the greate houses, so that they G shall decaye, and the lytle houses, that they shal cleue a sunder. Who can rune with horses, or plowe with oxen vpon the herde rockes of stone? For why? ye haue *turned true iudgment in to bitternesse, ād the frute of ryghtuousnesse into wormwod: Yea euē ye, that reioyse in vayne thynges: ye that saye: haue not we obtayned hornes in oure awne strength? Wel, take hede, O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lord God of hostes: I wyl brynge a people vpō you, which shall troubl e you, from the waye that goeth toward Hemath, vnto the broke in the medowe.

Of the captyuytie of Israel and Juda

The. vii. Chapter.

THe Lorde God shewed me suche a vysion: beholde, there A stod on that made gresshoppers, euen when the corne was shutynge forth, after the kyng had clypth his shepe. Now when they vndertoke to eate vp all the greue thynges in the lande, I sayde: O Lorde God, be mercyful, I beseche thee: who shoulde els helpe vp Jacob? that is brought so lowe? So the lorde was gracyous therin, and the Lorde sayde: wel, it shal not be.

Agayne, the Lorde shewed me thys vision: beholde, the Lorde God called the fyre to punysh withall, and it deuoured the great depe: yea it consumed a parte all redy. Then sayde I: O Lorde God holde thyne hande: for who shulde els help vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lord was mercyful therin, and the Lord god sayd: well, it shall not be.

Morouer, he shewed me this vysion: beholde, the Lorde stode vpon a B plastered wal and a masons* trowel in hys hande: And the Lorde saide vnto me Amos, what seyst thou? I aswered a masōs trowel. Thē said ÿ lord: beholde, I wyll laye the trowell amonge my people of Israell, and wyl nomore ouer see them, but the hye hylchapels of Isaac must be layed waste and the churches of Israell made desolate. ād As for the house of Jeroboam, I wyll stande vp agaynst it with the swerde. Upon thys sent Amasyah the prest to Bethel vnto Jeroboam the kynge of Israel, saiynge: Amos maketh the house of Israel to rebel agaynst thee, the lande can not awaye with hys wordes. For Amos saieth, Jeroboam shal dye wyth the swerde, and Israell shall be led awaie captiue out of theyr owne lande. And Amasyah said vnto Amos Gett thee hence (thou that canst se so well) and fle in to the lande of Juda: gett thee there thy lyuing, ād prophecy there, and prophecy nomore at Bethel for it is the kynges chapell, and the kynges courte.

Amos answered and sayde to Amasiah As for me I am neyther prophete, nor C Prophetes sonne, but a keper of Catell Now as I was breakynge downe molberyes and goyng after the catel, the lord toke me, and sayd vnto me: Go thy way and prophecy vnto my people of Israell And therfore, heare thou now the word of the Lord: Thou saiest: prophecy not agaynst Israell, and speake nothynge agaynst the house of Isaac.

Wherfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Thy wife shalbe defiled in the cytie, thy sonnes and daughters shalbe slayne with ÿ swerde, and thy lande shalbe measured out with the lyne. Thou thy selfe shalte dye in an vnclene land, and Israel shal be dryuen out of his owne countre.

The. viii. Chapter.

Agaynst the rulers of Israel. The Lorde sweareth that he wyl fulfill the thynges which he hath determined against Israel

The

The Lorde God shewed me thys vysyon: and beholde/A there was a maunde wyth sommer frute. And he sayde: Amos, what seyst thou? I answered: a maunde wyth sommer frute Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: the ende commeth vpon my people of Israel, I wyll nomore ouerse them. In that daye shall the songes of the temple be turned into sorow, sayth the Lord God. Many dead bodyes shall lye in euery place, and be cast forth secretly. Heare thys, O yee that oppresse the poore, and destroye the nedy in the lande, saynge: When wyll the new moneth be gone, that we maye sell vytale, and the Sabboth, that we maye haue scarcenesse of corne: to make the busshel lesse, and the sycle greater: we shall set vp false wayghtes/ that we maye get the poore vnder vs wyth their money, and the nedy also for shues: ye let vs sell the chaffe for corne.
B The Lorde hath sworne agaynst the pryde of Jacob: these workes of theyrs wyl I neuer forget. Shall not the land tremble/ and all they that dwell therin/mourne for this? Shal not their destruc tyon com vpon thẽ lyke a water streame and flowe ouer them/ as the floude of Egypte? At the same tyme (sayeth the lord god) I shal cause the Sunne to go downe at none, & the lande to be darcke in the cleare daye. Your high feastes wyl I turne to sorowe, and youre songes to mournynge: I wyll brynge sacke clothe vpon all backes, & baldenes vpon euery heade: yea/ suche a mournynge wyll I sende them, as is made vpon an only begotten sonne/ and they shall haue a miserable ende.
Beholde, the tyme cõmeth (sayeth ÿ C Lorde God) ÿ I shall send an hũger ĩto ÿ earth: not the hũger of breade, nor the thyrste of water: but an hunger to heare the worde of the Lorde. So ÿ they shal go from the one Sea to the other/yea, from the north vnto the easte, run-nynge aboute to seke the worde of the Lorde, and shall not fynde it. In that tyme, shall the fayre Virgins and the yonge men perysshe for thyrste. Yea, euen they ÿ sweare in ÿ offence of Samaria, and saye: as truly as thy God lyueth at Dã, and as truly as thy God lyueth at Bersaba, These shal fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne.

¶ Threatenynges agaynst Israel. No man can escape the hande of God.

¶ The.ix. Chapter.

I Sawe the Lord standyng vpõ the aulter, and he sayd smyte the dore cheke/ that A ÿ postes maye shake with-all. For their couetousnesse shall fall vpon all their heades, & their posteritee shalbe slayn with the swerd.
They shal not fle awaye, there shal not one of them escape, nor be delyuered.
Though they were buryed in the hell/my hande shal fetch them from thence:
though they clymme vp to heauen, yet shall I cast them downe: though they hyde thẽ selues vpõ ÿ toppe of Carmel, yet shall I seke them out/ and brynge them from thence: Though they crepe downe fro my syght in to the depe of ÿ sea/ I shall commaunde the serpente/euen ther to byte them.
If they go awaye before theyr enemies into captiuitee, then shall I commaũd the swerde there to slaye them.
Thus wyll I set myne eyes vppon them, for their harme and not for their welth. For whẽ the Lord God of hostes B toucheth a lande/ it consumeth awaye/and all they that dwell therin/ must ne des mourn. And why? theyr destructiõ shall aryse as euerye streame and rũ ne ouer them, as the floude in Egypt.
He that hath hys dwellyng in heauẽ/and groundeth hys tabernacle in the erth he that calleth the waters of ÿ sea and poureth them oute vpon the plat ne grounde: hys name is the Lorde. O ye childeren of Israell, are ye not vnto me, euẽ as the Morians, saith ÿ lord/haue not I brought Israel out of the lande of Egypte, the Philistines, from Capthor/ and the Syrians from Cyre?
Beholde, the eyes of the Lord are vpõ

the realme that synneth, to rote it clene out of the earth: Neuertheles, I wyll not vtterly destroye ÿ house of Iacob, sayeth the Lorde.
For lo, this I promyse: though I F sylte the house of Israel amonge all nacyons (lyke as they vse to syft in a syue) yet shal not the smallest grauell stones fall vpon the earth: But al the wycked doers of my people, that saye: Tush, the plage is not so nye, to come so hastely vpon vs: those shall perysh wyth the swerde. At that tyme wyll I buyld agayn the tabernacle of Dauid that is fallen downe, and hedg vp his gappes: ād loke what is broke, I shal repayre it: Yea, I shal buylde it agayne, as it was a fore tyme, that they maye possesse the remnant of Edom, yea and al suche people as call vpon my name wyth them, sayeth the Lorde, whych doth these thynges.
Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayeth the Lorde) that the plowman shal ouer G take the mower, & the treader of grapes him that soweth sede. The mountaines shall droppe swete wyne, and the hilles shall be frutefull, and I wyll turne the captiuyte of my people of Israel: they shal repayre the waste cytyes, and haue them in possessyon: they shal plant vine yardes, ād drynke the wyne therof: they shall make gardens, and enioye the frutes of them.

And I wyll plante them vpon theyr owne grounde, so that I wyll neuer rote them out agayne from theyr lande whych I haue geuen them, sayeth
the Lorde thy God.

¶ The ende of the prophecy of Amos.

¶ The boke of
The Prophete Abdy.

Agaynst Edom, ād the trust that they had in riches.

Thys is the vysyon that was shewed vnto Abdy: Thus A hath the Lord god spoke vpō Edom:
We haue herde of the Lord that there is an Embassage sent amonge the Heathen: Up, let vs aryse, a fyght against them. Beholde, I wyl make thee small amonge the Hea then, so that thou shalt be vtterlly despised. The pryde of thine herte hath lyft thee vp, thou that dwellest in the strong holdes of stones, and hast made the an hye seate: Thou sayeste in thyne herte: who shall cast me downe to the grounde? But though thou wentest vp as hye as the Aegle, and madist B thy nest aboue amonge the starres: yet wolde I pluck thee downe from thence Yf the theues and robbers com to thee by nyght, thou takyng thy rest: should they not steale tyl they had ynough?
Yf the grape gatherers com vpon thee wold they not leaue thee some grapes?
But how shal they trye Esau, and seke out his treasures?
Yea, the men that were sworne vnto thee, shal dryue thee out of the borders of thyne owne lande. They that be now at one with thee shal dysceaue thee and ouercome the: Eue they ÿ eate thy bred shall betray thee, or euer thou perceaue it. Shal not I at the same tyme destroy the wyse Men of Edome, and those C that haue vnderstandyng frō the mout of Esau? Thy gyauntes (O Theman) shalbe afrayed, for thorow ÿ slaughter they shalbe all ouerthrowne vpon the mount of Esau. Shame shall come vp on the, for ÿ malice that thou shewedst to thy brother Iacob: yea, for euermore shalt thou perysh, and that because of the Tyme, when Thou dyddeste set thy Selfe agaynste HYM: Euen when

Edom. Abdiue.

when the enemyes caryed awaye hys hooſt/and when the aleaunts came in at hys portes, and caſt lottes vpon Jeruſalem, and thou thy ſelfe waſte as one of them.

Thou ſhalt nomore ſe the daye of thy brother, thou ſhalt nomore beholde the tyme of his captiuitee: thou ſhalt no more reioyſe ouer the chyldren of Juda in the daye of theyr deſtruccyon, thou ſhalt tryumphe nomore in the tyme of theyr troble. Thou ſhalt no more com in at the gates of my people in the tyme of theyr decaye: thou ſhalt not ſe theyr myſery in the daye of theyr fall.

Thou ſhalt ſende out noman agaynſt theyr hoſte in ý daye of theyr aduerſytee f nether ſhalte thou ſtand waytynge any more at the corners of the ſtretes, to murther ſuche as are fled, or to take them preſoners, that remayne in the daye of their trouble. For the day of the Lord is hard by vpon all the Heathen. Lyke as thou haſt done, so ſhalt thou be dealte wythal, yea, ý ſhalt be rewarded euen vpõ thyne head. For lyke wyſe as ye haue dronckẽ vpon myne holy hyll, ſo ſhall al Heathen drynke contynually: yea drynke ſhal they, and ſwalowe vp, ſo that ye ſhalbe/ as though ye had neuer bene.

But vpon the mount Syon, there ſhal a remnaũt eſcape: these ſhalbe holy and the houſe of Jacob ſhal poſſeſſe euẽ thoſe, that had them ſelues afore in poſſeſſyon. Moreouer, the houſe of Jacob ſhalbe a fyre, ý houſe of Joſeph a flãme, and the houſe of Eſau ſhalbe the ſtrawe: G which they ſhal kyndle and conſume, ſo that nothynge ſhalbe left of the houſe of Eſau, for the Lorde hym ſelf hath ſayde it. They of ý South ſhal haue the mount of Eſau in poſſeſſyon: & loke what lyeth vpon the grounde, that ſhal the Philiſtines haue: the playne feldes ſhal Ephraim and Samarya poſſeſſe: and the mountaynes of Galaad ſhal BenJamin haue. And this hoſt ſhalbe the children of Iſraels preſoners. Now, what ſo lyeth frõ a* Canaan vnto b* Sarephath and in c* Sepharad, that ſhalbe vnder the ſubieccyõ of Jeruſalem: and the cytyes of ý ſouth ſhal enherete it. Thus they that eſcape vppon the hyll of Syon, ſhal goo vp to punyſh the mount of Eſau/and the kyngdome ſhalbe the Lordes.

¶ The ende of the booke of the Prophecy of abdy

The Prologe

¶ The Prophete Jonas wyth

In introduccyon before, teachinge to vnderstande hym and the ryghte vse also of all the scrypture, and why it was wrytten, and what is therin to be sought: and shewynge where wyth the scrypture is locked vp, that he which readeth it can not vnderstande it, though he studye therin neuer so muche: and agayne wyth what keyes it is so opened, that the reader can be stopped out wyth no subteltie or false doctryne of man, from the true sence and vnderstandinge therof.

W. T. vnto the Christen reader.

AS the enuyous philistines stopped the welles of Abraham and filled them vp with earth, to put the memorvall out of mynde, to the entente that they myght chalenge the grounde: euen so the fleshlye minded ypocrytes stoppe vp the vaynes of lyfe whiche are in the scrypture, wyth the earth of their tradicyons, false similitudes and lienge allegoryes: and that of lyke zeale to make the scripture their owne possession and marchaundise: and so shutte vp the kyngdome of heauen which is gods worde, neither entrynge in them selues nor sufferyng them that woulde.

¶ The scripture hath a body without, and within a soule, sprite and lyfe. It hath without, a barcke, a shel, and as it wer an hard bone for the fleshly minded to gnaw vpon. And within it hath pith, cornel, mary and al swetenes for gods electe whiche he hath chosen, to geue them his spirite, and to wryte hys lawe and the fayth of his sonne in their hertes.

¶ The scrpture conteyneth .iii. thinges in it: fyrst the lawe to condempne al fleshe: secondarely the gospel, that is to saye, promises of mercye for all that repente and knowledge their synne at the preachynge of the lawe, and consente in their hertes that the lawe is good, and submyt thē selues to be scolers to learne to kepe ye lawe and to lerne to beleue the mercy that is promysed them: and thyrdly the storyes and lyues of those scolers, bothe what chaunces fortuned theym, and also by what meanes their scolemaster taught them and made them perfecte, and howe he tryed the true from the false.

¶ When the ypocrites came to the lawe, they put gloses to, and make nomore of it then of a worldly lawe which is satisfyed with the outward work and which a turk maye also fulfyl. When yet Gods lawe neuer ceaseth to cōdempne a man vntyll it be wrytten in hys harte and vntyll he kepe it naturally without cōpulsion and al other respecte saue onely of pure loue to god and hys neighboure as he naturally eateth when he is an hongred, without cōpulsion and all other respect, saue to slake hys honger only.

¶ And when they came to the Gospel, there they mingle their leuuen and say, god now receaueth vs no more to mercye, but of mercye receaueth vs to penaunce, yt is to wete, holy dedes that make them fatt belies and vs their captiues, both i soules body. And yet they faine their Idole the pope so merciful yt if ye make a litle mony glister i hys Baalames eyes ther is nether penaunce nor purgatory nor any fastig at al but to fle to heauē as swifte as a thought and at the twinklinge of an eye.

¶ And the liues storyes and gestes of men which are contayned in the bible, they reade as thinges nomore pertaynyng vnto them, then a tale of Robyn hode, and as thinges they wot not wherto they serue, saue, to faine false descāt and iugling allegoryes, to stablish their kyngdome withal. And on of ye chefest and fleshliest study they haue, is to magnifye ye saintes aboue measure and aboue ye truth and wt theyr poetry to make thē greter thē euer god made thē. And if they fide any infirmite or sine ascrybed vnto saintes yt they excuse wt al diligēce, diminishyng ye glory of the mercye of God and robbyng wretched synners of all theyr comforte, and thyncke therby to flat-

ter tle sayntes/and to obteyne theyr fauour, & to make specyall aduocates of the euen as a man would obteyne the fauour of worldly tyrauntes as they also fayne the sayntes muche more cruell then euer was any heathen man ad more wicke-full and vengeable, then the poetes fayne theyr goddes or theyr furyes y tourment the soules in hell, yf theyr euens be not fasted & ther Images visited & saluted wt a pater noster (whiche prayer only our lyppes be acquaynted wt, our hertes vnderstandinge none at all) and worshipped with a candel/ and that offerynge of our de uocion in the place which they haue chosen to heare the supplicacions and meke peticions of theyr clyentes theryn ☞ But thou reader thinke of the law of God how that it is altogether spirituall and so spirituall, that it is neuer fulfylled wyth dedes or workes, vntyl they flow out of thyne hert wyth as greate loue toward thy neyghbour, for no deseruynges of hys yea though he be thyne enemy as Chryst loued thee and dyd for thee, for no deseruynge of thyne, but euen when thou waste hys Ennemye. And in the meane tyme throughout all our infancy and chyldehode in Chryst tyll we be growen vp into perfecte men in the full knowledge of Chryst and full loue of Chryst agayne and of our neyghbours for hys sake, after the ensample of hys loue to vs, remembre that the fulfyllynge of the lawe is a fast fayth in Chrystes bloud, coupled wyth our profession and submytting our selues to lerne to do better.
☞ And of the Gospell or promyses whych thou metest in the scrypture, beleue fast that God wyll fulfyll them vnto thee and that vnto the vttermost iote, at the repentaunce of thyne herte, when thou turnest to hym and forsakest euill, euen of hys goodnes and fatherly mercye vnto thee, and not for thy flatterynge hym wyth ypocrytysh workes of thyne owne faynynge. So that a fast fayth onely wythout respecte of all workes, in the forgeuenes both of the synne which we dyd in tyme of ignoraunce wyth lust & consent to synne, and also of al the sinnes whych we do by chaunce & of fraylete, after that we are come to knowledge and haue professed y lawe oute of oure hertes. And all dedes serue onelye for to helpe our neibour & and to tame our flesh that we fall not to synne agayne, and to exercyse our soules in vertue, and not to make satisfaction to Godwarde for the Synne that is ones paste.
☞ And all other storyes of the Byble, wythoute exception, are the practysynge of the lawe of the Gospell and are true and faythfull ensamples and sure earnest that God wyll euer so deale wyth vs, as he dyd wyth them, in all infyrmytyes, in all temptacyons and in all lyke cases and chaunces. Wherin ye se on the one syde how fatherly and tenderly and wyth all compassyon GOD entreateth hys electe whych submytte them selues as Scollers, to learne to walcke in the wayes of hys lawes and to kepe them of loue. If they forgat them selues at a tyme and wente astraye, he sought them out and fet them agayn wyth all mercye. If they fell and hurte them selues, he healed them agayne wyth all compassyon and tendernes of herte, he hath oft brought great trybulacyon and aduersytee vpon hys electe: but all of fatherly loue onely to teache them and to make them se theyr owne hertes and the synnes that there laye hydde, that they myhgt afterward feale hys mercy.
For hys mercye wayted vpon them, to rydde them out agayne, as soone as they were learned and come to the knowledge of theyr owne hertes: so that he neuer cast man awaye how depe soeuer he had synned saue them onely, whych had first cast the yocke of hys lawes from theyr neckes, wyth vtter despyaunce and malyce of herte. Whych ensamples how comfortable are they for vs when we be fallen into synne and God is com vpon vs wyth a scourge, that we dispeare not, but repent wyth full hope of mercye after the ensamples of mercy that are gone before. And therfore they were wrytten for oure learnynge, as testyfyeth Paule Roma. xv. to comforte vs that we myght the better put oure hope, and truste in God, when we se howe mercyfull he hath bene in tymes paste vnto our weake bretheren that are gone before, in all theyr aduersities, neade, temptacions, yea, and horryble synnes into whych they nowe and then fall.

¶ And on ye other syde, ye se how they that hardened their hertes and synned of malice and refused mercye that was offered them, and had no power to repente perysshed at the latter ende with all confusyon and shame mercylesslely.
Whych ensamples are very good and necessary, to kepe vs in awe and drede in tyme of prosperyte as thou mayest se by Paul. i. Cor. x. that we abyde i ye feare of God, and wax not wylde & fal to vanities and so synne and prouoke God & brynge wrath vpon vs.

¶ And thyrdly ye se in that practise, how as god is mercyful and longsufferig, euen so were al his true prophetes and preachers, berig the infirmyties of their weake brethren and their owne wronges and iniuries with al pacyence & long-sufferynge, neuer casting any of them of their backes, vntyl they synned against the holy gost, malyciously persecuting the open and manyfest trouth: contrarye vnto the ensample of the Pope, which in synnyng agaynst God, and to quench the truth of hys holy spiryte, is euer chefe captayne and trompetblower, to set other a worcke, and seketh only his owne fredom, lybertee, pryuilege, welth, prosperyte/profyte/pleasure, pastyme, honoure and glory, with the bondage, thraldome, captiuyte, mysirie, wretchydnes and vyle subiectyon of his brethren: and in hys owne cause is so feruent, so styffe & cruel, that he wyl not suffer one word spoken against his false maiesty, wyly inuencyons and iuglyng ypocrisy to be vnaduenged, though al christendom should be set together by the eares: & shuld cost, he cared not how many hundred thousand their lyues.

Now that thou mayest reade Jonas frutefully, & not as a poetes fable, but as an oblygation betwene God and thy soule/as an earnest pennye geuen thee of God/that he wyll helpe thee in tyme of nede, yf thou turne to hym, and as the worde of God the onely fode and lyfe of thy Soule, thys marke and note. Fyrst counte Jonas the frend of God, and a man chosen of God to testify hys name vnto the world, but yet a yong scoller, weake and rude, after the fashiō of the Apostles: whyle Chryst was yet wyth the bodyly. Whych, though Christ taught them euer to be meke and to humble them selues, yet oft stroue amonge them selues, who shoulde be greatest. The sonnes of zebede woulde syt the one on the ryght hande of Chryst/and the other on the left. They wolde pray that fyre myght descend from heauen, and consume the Samaritanes.

¶ When Chryste asked: who say men that I am: Peter answered/thou art the sonne of the liuing God, as though Peter had bene as perfect as an aūgel. But immediatly after, when Chryst preached vnto them of hys deathe and passion, Peter was angrye, and rebuked Christe, and thought earnestly, that he had raued and not wyste what he sayde: as at another tyme, when Chryst was so feruent in healynge of the people/that he had no leysure to eate, they wentte oute to holde hym, supposyng that he had bene besyde hym selfe. And one that caste out Deuilles in Chrystes name, they forbad, because he wayted not on them, so glorious were they yet.

And though Chryste taughte alwaye to forgeue, yet Peter after long goyng to schole, asked whether men shoulde forgeue. vii. tymes, thynckyng that vii. times had bene to muche. And at the laste souper, Peter woulde haue dyed wythe Chryste, but yet within fewe houres after, he denyed hym both cowardlye and shamefully: and after the same maner, though he had so longe herd that no mā myght auenge hym selfe, but rather turne the other cheeke too, then to smyte a-gayne: yet when Chryste was in takynge, Peter asked whether it were lawful to smyte with the swearde, and taryed none answere, but layed on rashely.

So that/though when we come fyrste vnto the knowledg of the trueth, and the peace is made betwene god and vs, and we loue his lawes and beleue and trust in hym, as in oure father and haue good hertes vnto him, and be borne a newe i the spirite: yet we ar but children and yonge scolers, weake and feble/and muste haue leysure to grow in the spirite, in knowledg, loue and in the dedes therof, as younge

younge chylderen must haue tyme to growe in theyr bodyes.

And God oure father and scholemaster feadeth vs and teacheth vs accordyng vnto the capacitee of oure stomackes and maketh vs to growe and waxe perfect and fyneth vs, and tryeth vs as gold, in the fyre of temptacions and trybulacions. As Moyses wytnesseth Deutero. viii. saiynge: Remembre all the waye by whych the Lorde thy God caryed thee thys .xl. yeares in the wyldernesse, to humble thee, and to tempte or proue thee that it myght be knowen what were in thyne harte. He brought thee into aduersytye and made thee an hungred and then fedde thee wyth Manna, whych neyther thou, nor yet thy fathers euer knewe of, to teach thee that a man lyueth not by breade onely, but by al that proceadeth out of the mouth of God. For the promyses of God are lyfe vnto all that cleaue vnto them, muche more then is bread and bodyly substaunce: as the iourneye of the chylderen of Israell oute of Egypte into the lande promysed them, ministreth the notable ensamples, and that aboundauntly as doth al the rest of the byble also. Howe be it, it is impossible for flesh to beleue and to trust in the trueth of gods promyses, vntyll he haue lerned it in muche trybulacion, after that God hath delyuered hym out therof agayne.

God therfore to teache Jonas, and to shewe hym hys owne harte/and to make hym perfecte, and to instructe vs also by hys ensample, sent hym out of the lande of Israel, where he was a Prophete, to go among the heathen People, and to the greatest and myghtyest citye of the woorlde then, called Niniue: to Preache that wythin .xl. Dayes they shoulde all peryshe for theyr Synnes, and that the Cytie shoulde be ouerthrowen. Whych message the frewyll of Jonas had as muche power to do as the weakest harted woman in the worlde hathe power, yf she were commaunded to leape into a tobbe of lyuing Snakes and Adders: as happelye, if God had commaunded Sara to haue sacrificed her sonne Isaac, as he dyd Abraham, she woulde haue disputed wyth hym yet she hadde done it, for though she were stronge ynough, yet many an holy Saynte, coulde not haue found in theyre hartes, but wolde haue dysobeyed and haue runne awaye from the presence of that commaundement of god wyth Jonas, if they had bene so strongly tempted.

For Jonas thought on this maner: lo, I am here a prophet vnto Gods people the Israelites. Which though they haue gods worde testyfied vnto them dayly, yet dispice it and worshyp God vnder the likenes of calues and after all maner facions saue after hys owne worde, and therfore are of al nacions the worste and moste worthy of punishment. And yet god for the loue of fewe that are amonge them, and for hys names sake, spareth them and defendeth them. How then shoulde god take so cruel vengaunce on so greate a multitude of them to whome his name was neuer preached to, and therfore are not the tenth parte so euel as these? If I shall therfore go preache, so shal I lye, and shame my selfe and god therto and make them the more to dyspyse GOD, and sette the lesse by hym, and to be the more cruel vnto hys people.

And vpon that imagynacyon, he fled from the face or presence of god: that is, out of the contre where god was worshypped in, and from persecutynge of Gods commaundement, and thought, I wyl get me another waye amonge the heathen people and be nomore a prophet, but lyue at rest, and out of al combraunce. Neuertheles the God of al mercy which careth for hys electe children, and turneth al vnto good to them/and smyteth them, to heale them agayn, and killeth them, to make them alyue agayne, and playeth with theym (as a father dothe somtyme with hys yong ignoraunt children) and tempteth them, and proueth them, to make them se their owne hertes prouided for Jonas, how al thinges shoulde be.

When Jonas was entred into the shyppe he layd hym down to slepe and to take hys reste, that is, hys conscience was tossed betwene the commaundment of God/ whyche sente hym to Niniue, and hys fleshlye wysdome, that dyssuaded and counseled hym the contrary and at the last preuailed agaist the commaundement and caried hym another waye, as a shepe caught betwene .ii. streames/ and as poetes faine the mother of Meleager to be betwene diuers affeccions, while to auenge hir brothers death, she sought to slaye her owne sonne. Wherevpon for very payne and tediousnes, he laye downe to slepe, for to put the commaundement which so gnew and freat his consience, out of minde, as the nature of al wycked is when they haue synned a good, to seke the al meanes with riot, reuell and pastyme / to dryue the remembraunce of sine out of their thoughtes or as Adam dyd, to couer their Nakednesse wyth aprones of pope holye workes.

But God awake hym oute of hys dreame, and sette hys Synnes before hys face.

¶ For when the Lott had caught Jonas, then be sure that hys synnes came to remembraunce agayne, and that hys conscyence raged no lesse then the waues of the sea. And then he thoughte that he onelye was a Synner ād the Heathen that were in the shyppe none in respecte of hym, and thought also, as verely as he was fled from God, that as verely god had cast hym awaye. For the sight of the rodde, maketh the naturall chylde not onelye to see and to knowledge hys faute, but also to forget al hys fathers olde mercye and kyndnes. And the he confessed his sinne openly, and had yet rather perysshe alone, then that the other shoulde haue peryshed wyth hym for hys sake: and so of very desperacion to haue lyued any lenger, bad cast hym into the sea betymes, except they would be lost also.

¶ To speake of lottes, how farre forth they are lawful, is a lyght questyon. Fyrst to vse them for the breakyng of stryfe, as when partteners, theyr goddes as equally diuided as they can, take euerye man hys parte by lot, to auoyde all suspycyon of disceytfulnes, and as the Apostles in the fyrst of the actes, when they sought an other to succede Judas the traytoure, & .ii. persons were presente, then to breake stryfe and to satisfye all partyes, dyd caste lottes, whether shoulde be admitted, esprynge God to temper them and to take whoome he knewe mooste mete, seynge they wyst not whether to preferre, or happely could not al agre. Another, is lawful and in all lyke cases. But to abuse them vnto the tempting of God, ād to compell hym therewyth to vtter thynges wherof we stande in doubte, when we haue no cōmaundemente of hym so to do as these heathen here dyd, though God turned it vnto hys glorye, can not be but euell.

¶ The heathen shipmen astonyed at the syght of the miracle, feared God prayed to hym offered sacryfice and vowed vowes. And I doute not, but that some of thē, or happely all, came therby vnto the true knowledge and true worshyppyng of God, were wōne to god i their soules. And thus god which is infinite mercyfull in al hys wayes wrought their soules health out of the infirmitie of Jonas, euen of his god wyll and purpose, and loue, wherwith he loued them before the worlde was made, and not of chaunce, as it appeareth vnto the eyes of the ignoraunt.

☞ And that Jonas was .iii. dayes and .iii. nyghtes in the belye of hys fyshe: we cannot therby proue vnto the Jewes and infydels or vnto any mā, that christ must therfore dye and be buried and ryse agayne. But wee vse the ensample and lykenesse to strength the faythe of the weake. For he that beleueth the one can not dout i the other: in as much as the hande of god was no lesse mightye i preseruing Jonas alyue agaynst al natural possibilitee and in delyueryng hym safe oute of hys fysh, then in reysynge vp Chryste agayne out of hys sepulchre. And we maye describe the power and vertue of the resurreccyon therby/ as Christ him selfe boroweth the symilytude thereto Mat. xii sayenge vnto the Jewes, that cam about hi and desired a signe or a wonder from heauen to certyfy them that he was christ: thys euel & wedlocke breakyng nacyon (which breake the wedlocke of fayth wherw they be maried vnto god, and beleue in their false workes) seke a signe, but ther shal no signe be geuē the saue ÿ sygne of the prophet Jonas: for as Jonas was .iii. dayes & .iii. nyghtes in the belye of the whale, euen so shall the sonne of man be .iii

dayes and .iii. nyghtes in the herte of the erthe. Which was a watch word as we saye, and a sharpe threatenyng vnto the Jewes and as muche to saye as thus / ye harde herted Jewes seke a signe: loo, thys shalbe youre sygne, as Jonas was rysed out of the sepulchre of his fishe and then sent vnto the Niniuites to preache yͭ they shoulde perysh / euen so shal I ryse agayne out of my sepulchre, and come ãd preache repentaunce vnto you. Se therfore when ye se that signe that ye repent or els ye shal surely perysh & not escape. For though the infirmiteys which ye now se in my flesh be a let vnto youre faythes, ye shal yet then be without excuse, when ye se so greate a myracle and so greate power of god shed out vpon you. And so Christe came agayne after the resurrection in hys spyrite ãd preched repẽtaũce vnto them, by the mouth of his apostles and disciples, and with miracles of yͤ holy gost. And al that repented not peryshed shortly after & were for the most part slain wͭ swerd and the rest caryed away captiue into al quarters of the world for an ensã-ple, as ye se vnto this daye.

And in lyke maner, sens the worlde beganne, wheresoeuer repentaunce was offered and not receaued, there god toke cruel vengaunce immediatly: as ye se in the floud of Noe in the ouerthrowynge of Sodom and Gomor & al the contre aboute and as ye se of Egypt, of the Amorytes, Cananites, and afterwarde of the very Israelites and then at the last of the Jewes to, and of the Assyrians and Babyloniãs and so throughout al the imperes of the worlde.

Gyldas preached repentaunce vnto the olde Brittaynes, that inhabited ẽglãd, they repented not, and therfore God sent in theyr ennyes vpon them on euery side and destroyed them vp and gaue the lande vnto other naciõs. And greate vẽgaũce hath bene taken in yͤ lande for sinne syns that tyme.

Wicleffe preached repentaunce vnto oure fathers not longe sens: they repented not: for their hartes were indurate and their eyes blinded with their own pope holye ryghtuousnesse, wherewythe they hadde made their Soules gaye agaynste the receauing agayne of the wycked spirite that bryngeth .vii. worse then hymself wyth hym, and maketh the latter ende worse then the begynnynge, for in opẽ sines, there is hope of repentaũce, but in holy ypocrysy none at al. But what folowed: they slewe theyr tru and ryght kynge and set vp .iii. wronge kynges arowe, vnder whych all the noble bloude was slayne vp and halfe the commõs therto, what in Fraunce, and what wyth theyr owne swerde, in fyghtinge amonge them selues for the crowne and the cityes and townes decayed, and the lande brought halfe in to a wyldernesse in respecte of that it was before.

And now Chryst to preache repentaunce is rysen yet ones agayne oute of hys sepulchre in whych the pope had buryed hym and kepte hym downe wyth hys pyl-lers and pollaxes and al disguisynges of ypocrysy, wyth gyle, wyles and falshede and wyth the swerd of al prynces, whych he had blynded wyth hys false marchaũ-dyse. And as I doubte not of the Ensamples that are paste soo am I sure that greate wrath wyll followe, excepte repentaunce turne it backe agayne, and cease it.

When Jonas had ben in the fysshes bely a space, and the rage of hys conscience was somewhat quieted and swaged, and he come to hym selfe agayne, and had receaued a lytle hope: the qualmes and panges of desperacyon whyche wente ouer hys hert, halfe ouercome, he prayed, as he maketh mencion in the text, saying: Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde hys God oute of the belly of the fysh. But the wordes of that prayer, are not here set. The prayer that here stãdeth in yͤ text is the prayer of prayse & thanckesgeuyng / whych he prayed and wrote, when he was escaped ãd past all ieopardy.

In the ende of whyche prayer he sayethe, I wyll sacryfyce wyth the voyce of thanckesgeuynge and paye that I haue vowed, that sauyng commeth of the lord For verely to confesse out of the herte, that all benefytes come of God, euen oute of the goodnesse of hys mercye, and not deseruinge of our dedes, is the onely sacryfyce that pleaseth God, and to beleue that God onlye is the sauiour, is the thynge that all the Jewes vowed in theyr cyrcumcysion, as we in our baptysme. Which vowe Jonas now taught wyth experyence, promyseth to paye. For those outward sacryfyces of beastes vnto whych Jonas had happelye ascrybed to muche before, were but feble and childish thynges and not ordeyned, that the worckes of them selues shoulde be a seruyce vnto God but vnto the people, to put them in remembraunce of thys inwarde sacryfyce of thankes and of fayth, to truste and beleue in God the onelye sauiour. Whych sygnification whē it was awaye, they were abhominable and deuelysh ydolatrie and ymage seruice: as oure ceremonies and sacramentes, are become now to all that truste and beleue in the worke of them and are not taught the sygnifycacyons, to edifye theyr soules wyth knoweledge and the doctryne of God.

¶ When Jonas was cast vpon the lande agayne, then hys wyll was fre, and had power to goo whether God sent hym, and to do what God badde, hys owne ymaginacyons layd apart. For he had bene at a new schole, yea and in a fornace where he was purged of muche refuse and drosse of fleshlye wysdome, whych resisted the wysdome of God, and led Jonas his wyl contrarye to the wyl of God. For as farre as we be blynde in Adam, we cannot but seke and wyll oure owne profytte pleasure and glory. And as farre as we be taught in the spyrit, we can not but seke and wyll the pleasure and glory of God onely.

¶ And as for thre dayes iourneye of Niniue, whether it were in lenght or to goo rounde about it, or thorowe all the streates, I comit vnto the discretion of other men: But I thyncke that it was then the greatest citie of all the worlde.

¶ And that Jonas went a dayes iourney in the cytye, I suppose he dyd it not in one daye: but went fayre and easely preachyng here a sermon and there another and rebuked the synne of the people, for whych they must perysh.

¶ And whē thou art com vnto the repentaunce of the Niniuites, there haste thou sure earnest, ŷ how so euer angry god be, yet he remembreth mercy vnto al ŷ truly repent and beleue in mercy. Which ensample oure sauioure Christe also casteth in the teeth of the indurate Jewes saiynge: the Niniuites shall rise in iudgement wt this nacion and condempne them, for they repented at the preaching of Jonas, and beholde a greater then Jonas here, meaninge of him selfe. At whose preachig yea, though it were neuer so myghtye to perse the herte, and for al his miracles therto, the harde herted Jewes coulde not repent: when the heathen Niniuites repented at the bare preachinge of Jonas, rebukinge theyr synnes without any miracle at all.

¶ Why: For the Jewes had leuended the spiritual lawe of God, and with their gloses had made it al togeth er earthly and fleshly, and so had set a vayle or couerynge on Moses face to shadow and darken the glorious brightenesse of his countenaunce. It was synne to stele: but to robbe wedowes howses vnder a coloure of longe prayinge and to polle in the name of offerynges and to snare the people wt intollerable constitucions against al loue, to catche their money out of their purses, was no synne at all.

¶ To smite father and mother was synne. But to withdraw helpe from them at theyr nede for blynd zeale of offeryng, vnto the profyt of the holye pharises, was then as meritorious as it is now to let al thy kinne choose whether they wyl sinck or swime, while thou buyldest ād makest goodly foundaciōs for holy people which thou haste chosen to be thy Christe, for to sowple thy soule with the oyle of theyr swete blessinges, and to be thy Jesus for to saue thy soule from the purgatory of ŷ bloud that only purgeth synne, with their watchinge, fasting, wolwarde goyng & rysynge at mydnighte. etc. wherwith yet they purge not them selues from their couetousnesse pryde lechery, or any vyce that thou seyest amonge the laye people.

¶ It was greate synne for Chryste to heale the people on the Sabbothe daye unto the glorye of God hys father, but none at all for them, to helpe theyr catel but to theyr owne profyte.

☞ It was synne to eate with unwasshen handes, or on an unwasshen table, or out of an unwasshen dysh: but to eate out of that puryfyed dish, that which came of bribery, theft and extorcion, was no synne at all.

☞ It was exceadynge meritorious to make manye disciples: But to teache them to feare God in hys ordinaunces had they no care at all.

☞ The hyghe Prelates so defended the ryghte of holy Churche, and so feared the people wyth the curse of God and terryble paynes of hell, that no man durste leaue the vylest herbe in hys garden untithed. And the offerynge and thynges dedicate unto God for the profytte of hys holye Vicars were in suche estimacion and reuerence, that it was muche greater synne to sweare trulye by them, then to forsweare thy selfe by God: what vengeaunce then of God, and how terryble and cruel dampnacion thynke ye, preached they, to fal on them that had stolen suche holy thynges? And yet sayth Chryst, that ryghtuousnes and fayth in kepynge Promyse, mercye and indifferent iudgemente, were utterlye trodden under fote and cleane dyspysed of those blessed fathers, whych so myghtely maynteined Aarons patrimony, and had made it so prosperous, and enuyroned it and walled it aboute on euery syde wyth the feare of God that no man durst touche it.

¶ It was greate holynesse to garnysh the sepulchres of the Prophetes and to condempne theyr owne fathers for sleing of them: and yet were they them selues for blynde zeale of theyr owne constitucions, as ready as theyr fathers to slea who so euer testifyed unto them, the same truth, which the prophetes testified unto theyr fathers. So that Chryst compareth al the ryghtuousnes of those holy patriarkes unto the outwarde bewtye of a paynted Sepulchre, full of stynche and all uncleanesse wythin.

☞ And finally to begyle a mans neyboure in subtyl bargaynyng and to wrappe and compasse him in with cauteles of the lawe, was then (as it is nowe) in the kyngedome of the Pope. By the reason wherof they excluded ye lawe of loue out of ther hertes, and consequently all true repentaunce: for how coulde they repente of that they coulde not se to be synne?

¶ And on the other syde, they had set up a ryghtwesnesse of holy workes, to clese their soules withal: as the Pope sanctifieth us with holy oyle, holy bred, holy salte holy candels holy dome ceremonies and holy dome blessynges, and with what so euer holynes thou wilt, saue with the holynes of Gods word which onlye speaketh unto the herte, and sheweth the soule her fylthynes and unclenesse of synne and leadeth her by the waye of repentaunce unto the fountayne of Christes bloud to wash it awaye thorow fayth. By the reason of which false rightwysenes they were dysobedient unto the rightousnesse of god, which is the forgeuenes of synne in Christes bloude and coulde not beleue it. And so thorow fleshly interpretynge the lawe and false imagined righteousnesse their hertes were hardened and made as stony as claye in an hote furnace of fyre, that they coulde receaue neyther repentaunce nor faith or any moyster of grace at all.

☞ But the heathen Niniuites, though they were blynded with lustes a good, yet were in those .ii. poyntes uncorrupt and unhardened and therfore with the onelye preachyng of Jonas came unto the knowledge of their synnes, and confessed them and repented truly and turned euery man from his euel dedes, and declared theyr sorow of hert and true repentaunce, with their dedes, which they dyd out of faith and hope of forgeuenes, chastisyng their bodies with prayer and fastyng, and with takinge all pleasures from the flesh: trustynge as God was angry for their wyckednesse euen so shoulde he forgeue them of his mercie, yf they repented and forsoke their mysse lyuynge.

☞ And in the last ende of all, thou hast yet a goodly ensample of learnynge, to se how earthly Jonas is styll for all hys tryinge in the whales bellye. He was so sore displeased because the Niniuites peryshed not, that he was werye of hys lyfe, and wyshed after the death for very sorow and payne, that he had lost the glory of hys prophesyinge, in that hys prophecye came not to passe. But God rebuked hym w a lykenes, sayinge: it greueth thyne herte for the losse of a vyle shrobbe or spraye, wheron thou bestowedst no labor or cost, neyther was it thyne handworke: How muche more then shoulde greue myne hert the losse of so greate a Multitude of innocentes as are in Niniue, which are all myne handes worcke. Naye Jonas, I am God ouer all, and father, as well vnto the Heathen, as vnto the Jewes, and mercyfull to all, and warne, yet I smyte: neyther threate I so cruelly by any Prophete, but that I wyl forgeue if they repent and aske mercye: neyther on the other syde, what socuer I promyse wyll I fulfylle it, saue for theyre sakes onely, which truste in me and submytte them selues, to kepe my lawes of very loue, as natural chylderen.

ON thys maner to reade the Scrypture, is the ryght vse therof, and why the holyghoost caused it to be wrytten. That is that thou fyrst seke out the law what God wyll haue thee to do, interpretinge it spiritually wythout glose or couerynge the bryghtnesse of Moyses face, so that thou fele in thyne herte, how that it is damnpnable synne before God, not to loue thy neyghboure that is thyne enemye as purely as Chryst loued thee: and that not to loue thy neygbour in thyne herte is to haue committed already all synne agaynst hym. And therfore vntyll that loue be come, thou muste knowledge vnfaynedlye, that there is synne in the best dede thou doest. And it must earnestlye greue thyne herte and thou must wash all thy good dedes in Chrystes bloude, yer they can be pure, and an acceptable sacryfice vnto God, and must desyre God the father for hys sake, to take thy dedes a worth, and to pardonne the imperfectnesse of them, and to geue thee power to do them better, and wyth more feruent loue.

☞ And on the other syde, thou must search dylygently for the promyses of mercye whyche God hath promysed thee agayne. Whyche .ii. poyntes, that is to were, the lawe spiritually interpreted, how that al is dampnable synne that is not vnfayned loue out of the grounde and bottome of the herte after the ensample of Chrystes loue to vs, because we be all equally created and fourmed of one God oure father and indifferentlye boughte and redemed wyth one bloude, of our sauioure Jesus Chryst: and that the promyses be geuen vnto a repentinge soule that thyrsteth a longeth after them, of the pure and fatherly mercye of god thorow oure faythe only wythout all deseruyng of oure dedes, or merytes of oure worckes, but for Chrystes sake alone/and for the merytes and deseruinges of hys worckes/deathe and passyons that he suffered altogether for vs and not for him self: whych .ii. poyntes I saye if they be written in thyne hert, are the keies whych so open al the scrypture vnto thee, that no creature can locke thee out, and wyth whych thou shalt go in ad oute and fynde pasture and fode euery where.

And yf these lessons be not written in thyne herte, then is al the scrypture shutt vp, as a cornel in the shale, so that thou maiest rede it & cómon of it & reherse al the stories of it and dispute subtilly and be a profound sophyster, and yet vnderstand not one iote therof.

☞ And thyrdelye that thou take the storyes and lyues whyche are contayned in þ byble, for sure and vndoubted ensamples that God so wyl deale wyth vs vnto þ worldes ende.

☞ Here with Reader fare well and be commended vnto God & vnto the grace of his spirite. And first se that thou stoppe not thyne eares vnto the callynge of god, and that thou harden not thyne herte, begyled with fleshly interpretaunge of the lawe & false imagined and ypocritysh rightuousnes, and so the Niniuites ryse w thee at the day of iudgement and condempne thee.

¶ And secondarily, if thou find ought amisse, when thou seist thy selfe in the glasse of Gods worde, thynke it compendious wisdome to amende the same betymes, monisshed and warned by the ensample of other men, rather then to tary untill thou be beaten also.

¶ And thirdly, if it shal so chaunce that the wilde lustes of the flesh shal blinde thee and cary thee cleane awaye with theym for a tyme: yet at the later ende, when the god of al mercy shal haue compassed thee on euery side with temptacions, trybulacions, aduersities and combraunce, to bryng thee home agayne unto thine owne herte, and to set thy sinnes which thou woldest so faine couer and put out of minde with delectacion of voluptuous pastimes, before the eyes of thy conscyence: then call the faithful ensample of Jonas and al lyke stories unto thy remembraunce, & withe Jonas turne unto thy Father that smote thee: not to caste thee a waie but to laie a scorosife and a freatyng plaister unto the pocke that laye hid and fret inwarde to drawe the disease oute and to make it appeare, that thou myghtest feale thy syckenes and the daunger therof and come and receaue the healyng plaister of mercy.

¶ And forget not that what soeuer ensample of mercye god hath shewed sens the begynnynge of the world, the same is promysed thee, yf thou wylte in lyke maner turne agayne, and receaue it as they dyd. And wyth Jonas be acknowen of thy synne and confesse it and knoweledge it unto thy father.

¶ And as the lawe which fereth thy conscience, is thine hert, and is none outward thynge, euen so seke wythin thyne hert the playster of mercye, the promises of forgeuenes in our sauiour Jesus Chryste accordyng unto al the ensamples of mercy that are gone before.

¶ And wyth Jonas let them that wayte on vanities and seke god here and there and in euerye temple, saue in theyr hertes, go: and seke thou the testament of god in thyne harte. For in thyne harte is the word of the law, and in thyne hart is ẏ word of fayth in the promyses of mercye in Jesus chryst. So that yf thou confesse with a repentinge herte and knowelidge and surely beleue that Jesus is Lorde ouer al synne, thou art safe.

¶ And fynally when the rage of thy conscience is ceased and quieted wythe faste fayth in the promyses of mercye, then offre wyth Jonas the offerynge of prayse and thankesgeuinge, and paye the vowe of thy baptisme, that God only saueth, of his only mercy, and goodnesse: that is, beleue stedfastlye and preache constauntlye that it is god onely that smyteth, and God onely that healeth: ascribynge the cause of thy tribulacion unto thyne owne synne, and the cause of thy delyueraunce unto the mercye of God.

¶ And beware of the leuen that sayth, we haue power in our free wyll before the preachynge of the Gospell to deserue grace, to kepe the lawe, of congruitee, or god to be unryghtuous. And saye wyth John in the fyrst: that as the lawe was geuē by Moyses, euen so grace to fulfyll it, is geuen by Chryste. And when they saye oure dedes wyth grace deserue heauen, saye thou wyth Paule Ro. vi. that euerlastyng lyfe is the gyfte of God thorow Jesus Chryst our Lord and that we be made sonnes by fayth Jhon. i. and therfore heyres of God wyth Chryst. Rom. viii. And saye that we receaue all of God thorow fayth that foloweth repentaunce, and that we do not oure worckes unto God but either unto our selues, to slaye the synne that remayneth in the flesh and to waxe perfect, ether unto our neyghbours which do as muche for us agayne in some other thynges. And when a man excedeth in gyftes of grace let hym understande that they be geuen hym as wel for hys weke bretheren as for hym selfe: as though all the breade be committed unto the panter yet for hys felowes wyth hym, whych geue the thanckes unto theyr lorde and recompense the panter agayne wyth other kynde seruice in theyr offices. And when they saye that Chryste hath made no satisfaction for the synne we do after our baptysme, saye thou wyth the doctryne of Paule, that in oure baptisme we receaue the merites of Chrystes death, through repentaunce and faith, of which two, baptisme is the sygne. And though when we synne of frailtie after our baptisme we receaue the sygne no more, yet we be renewed agayne, through repentaunce and faythe in Chrystes bloude, which twayne, the sygne of Baptisme euer contynued amonge vs in baptysinge our younge chylderen, doth euer kepe in mynd and call vs backe agayne vnto oure profession if we be gone astraye, and promiseth vs forgeuenes.

Neyther can at all synne be wasshed awaye wyth oure workes, but wyth Chrystes bloude: neyther can there be anye other sacryfyce or satisfaction to Godwarde for them, saue Chrystes bloude. For as muche, as we can do no workes vnto God, but receaue onelye of hys mercye wyth oure repentinge, fayth, through Jesus Chryste oure Lorde, and onely Sauiour: vnto whome, and vnto hys holye spirite, that only purgeth, sanc-tifyeth and wassheth vs in the innocent bloude of oure redemption, be prayse
for euer.

¶ The Ende of the Prologe vpon the Prophete Jonas.

¶ The Boke of The Prophete Jonas.

Of the flyght of Jonas when he was sent to preach. A tempest aryseth and casteth him in the sea for his disobedience.

The fyrst Chapter.

THe word of the lord
A came vnto Jonas, the sonne of Amithai saynge: Aryse and get thee to Niniue that greate cytye: & preache vnto them how that their wickednesse is come vp before me. And Jonas made hym ready to fle vnto * Tharsis, from the presence of the Lorde, and gat hym downe to Joppa: wher he foūd a shyppe ready for to go vnto Tharsis.
So he payed his fare, and went aborde that he myght go with them vnto Thar sis, from the presence of the Lorde. But the Lorde hurled a great wynde into the sea, and there was a myghtye tempeste in the sea: so that the shyppe was in ieo-pardy of going in peces. Then the mari B ners were afrayde, and cryed euery man vnto his God: ād the goodes that were in the shyp, they cast into the sea, to lighten it of them. But Jonas gat hym vnder the hatches/ where he layd hī downe and slombred.

So the Master of the shyppe came to hym, and sayde vnto hym: why slomberest thou? Up, call vpon thy God: yf God (happely) wyll thyncke vpon vs, ÿ we perysh not. And they sayde one to an other: come, let vs caste lottes: ÿ we may know, for whose cause we are thus trou bled. And so they cast lottes, and the lott fell vpon Jonas.

Then sayde they vnto hym: tell vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thyne occupacion? whence commest ÿ? what contreman art thou? and of what nacyon? He answered them: I am an He brewe, and I feare the Lorde God of hea C uen whych made both sea and drye land Then were the men excedyngly afrayed and sayde vnto hym: why dyddest thou so? (for they knewe that he was fled frō the presence of the Lorde because he had tolde them) and sayd moreouer vnto hī: What shal we do vnto thee, that the sea maye ceasse from troublynge vs? (for ÿ sea wrought and was troublous) he answered them: take me and caste me into the sea, so shall it let you be in rest: for I wote it is for my sake, that thys greate tempest is come vpon you.

Neuertheles the mē assayed with row ynge, to brynge the shyppe to lande, but D it wold not be, because ÿ sea wrought so and was so troublous agaynst them.
Wherfore they cryed vnto the Lorde, & sayde: O Lord let vs not perish for this mans death, neyther laye thou innocent bloude vnto oure charge, for thou / O Lorde, haste done, euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas, and cast hym into the sea, and the sea left ragyng. And the men feared the Lorde excedyngly, doing sacryfyces & making vowes vnto the Lorde.

The Notes.

* Under the name of Tharsis (as some thinck) is sygnifyed some sea that was farre of, and whose voiage was verye longe: so that the saylers therin, coulde se no thynge but the sea and the ayre.

Joppa is an hauen of Jewry, where was sometime a goodly cytie of whych there remayneth nowe but a porcion.

¶ Jonas is swalowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas.

The .ii. Chapter.

BUt the Lorde prepared a greate A fyshe, to swalow vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the bely of ÿ fysh, thre dayes and thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto the lorde his god out of the fysshes bely, and sayd: In my trouble I called vnto the lorde, and he herde me out of the bely of * hel, I cry-ed/ and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the mid dest of the sea/ and the floude compassed me aboute: yea all thy waues and roules of water wente ouer me. I thought that I had ben cast awaie out of thy sight: but I wil yet againe loke towarde thy holy temple. B

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye about me and the wedes were wrapte about mine head. I went downe to the botome of ÿ hylles, and was barred in with earthe for euer. But thou, O lord my god, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corrupcion. When my soule fainted within me me, I thought vpon the Lorde: ãd my prayer came into thee, euen in to thy ho ly temple. They that hold of vayne va nyties, will forsake his mercy. But I wyl do the sacryfyce with the voyce of thankesgeuinge/and wyl paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluaciõ cometh of the Lord. And the Lorde spake vnto the fysh and it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The notes.

* The Scripture speaketh of hel commenly as of a place comen for all them that goo downe into the earth, as into a graue, or to the depe of the see. &c. as ye haue in Genesis and in the Psalmes.

¶ Jonas is sent againe to Niniue. The repẽtaũce of the kinge of Niniue.

The. iii. Chapter.

Then came the worde of the A Lorde vnto Jonas againe, saiynge: vp, and get thee to Niniue that greate cytie, & preache vnto them the prea chinge which I bad thee. So Jonas arose, and went to Niniue at the lordes commaundement. Niniue was a grete cytie vnto God, namelye, of thre dayes iourney.
B And Jonas went to, and entered i to the cytie: euen a dayes iourney, and cryed, saiynge: There are yet. xl. dayes and then shal Niniue be ouerthrowen And the people of Niniue beleued god and proclamed fasting, and arayed thẽ selues in * sacke cloth, as wel the greate as the smal of them. And the tidinges came vnto the kinge of Niniue, which arose out of his seate, and dyd his ap parel of, & put on sackcloth, and sat hi C downe in asshes.
And it was cryed and commaunded in Niniue, by the auctoryte of the king & hys lordes, saiynge: se that nether mã or beast/oxe or shepe taste ought at all: and that they neyther fede nor drynke water: but put on sack cloth both man and beest/and cry mightely vnto god: yea se that euery mã turn from hys euel waye, and from the wickednes, that he hath in hande.
D Who can tel? God maye turne, ãd repent, and cease from his fierce wrath, that we perish not. And whẽ god sawe ther workes, how they turned frõ theyr wycked wayes: he repented on the euel, which he sayde he wolde do vnto them and dyd it not.

The notes.

* The arai yng them in sackcloth was an outward signe of greate repentaunce, as in ii. Reg. iii. c ¶ Jonas is reproued of God.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Therfore Jonas was sore dyscõ tent & angry. And he prayed vnto A the Lorde, and sayde: O Lord, was not this my saiynge (I praye thee) when I was yet in myne owne countre?
Therfore I hasted rather to flee vnto Tharsis, for I know well ynough that thou arte a mercyfull God, full of com passion, longe sufferyng, and of greate kyndnes, and repentest when thou shoul dest take punishement. And now, O Lord take my life fro me (I besech thee) for I had rather dye thẽ lyue. Then said the Lorde: arte thou so angrie? And Jo nas gate hym oute of the cytye, and sate downe on the east syde therof: and there made hym a boothe, and sate vnder it in the shadow/tyl he myght se, what should chaunce vnto the cytye.
And the Lorde God prepared a wyl de vine, which sprang vp ouer Jonas, B that he myght haue shadowe aboue hys heade, to delyuer hym out of hys payne.
And Jonas was exceadinge glad of the wylde vyne.
But vpon the next morowe agaynste the spryng of the daye. The Lorde orde ned a worme, which smote ye wylde vine, so that it wethered awaye. And when the sunne was vp, God prepared a feruente east wynde: and the Sũne bett ouer the heade of Jonas that he fainted agayne ãd wysshed vnto hys soule, that he might dye, and sayde: it is better for me to dye then to lyue. And god said vnto Jonas: C Art thou so angry for the wylde vyne?
And he sayde: yea very angry am I euẽ vnto the death. And the Lord sayd: thou hast cõpassion vpõ a wylde vyne/wher on thou bestowedst no laboure, nor ma dest it growe: whyche sprange vp in one night and perysshed in an other: ãd shuld not I then haue compassion vpõ Niniue that great cytee, wherin there are aboue an. C. & xx. thousand persõs, that knowe not theyr ryght hand from the left: besi des muche catel?

¶ The ende of the prophecy of Jonas.

The Prophete Micheas

Of the destruction of Samaria because of theyr Idolatrye.

The fyrst Chapter.

3 This is the woorde of the Lorde, that came vnto micheas the morasthite/in the dayes of Jothan, Ahas and Jeheze-kiah kinges of Juda:whych was shewed hym vpō Samarya and Jerusalē.
Heare all ye people, marcke thys well O earth and all that therin is: Yea the Lorde God hym selfe be wytnes amōge you, euen the Lorde from hys holy temple. For why? beholde the Lorde shal goo oute of hys place, and come downe, and trede vpon the hygh thynges of the erth.
The mountaynes shall consume vnder hym and the valleys shal cleue asunder: lyke as waxe consumeth at the fyre, and as the waters runne downward. And all thys shalbe for the wickednes of Jacob B and the synnes of the house of Israell.
But what is the wyckednes of Jacob? Is not Samaria? Which are the hye places of Juda? is not Jerusalem?
Therfore I shall make Samaria an heape of stones in the feld, to lay about the vinyarde: her stones shal I caste in to the valeye, and dyscouer her foun-dacyons.
All her Images shalbe broken downe and all her wynninges shalbe brente i the fyre: ye al her Idoles wyl I destroy for why? they are gathered oute of the hyre of an whore / and into an whores hyre shall they be turned agayne.
Wherfore I wyl mourne and make la-mentacion, bare and naked wyl I go: I must mourne lyke ẏ dragōs/ & take sorow as the Estriches: for their woūd C is past remedy: And why? it is come in to Juda, and hath touched the porte of my people at Jerusalem alreadye.
Wepe not, lest they at Geth perceaue
it.
Thou at Betaphra, welter thy selfe i ẏ dust and ashes. Thou that dwellest at Sephir, get thee hence with shame.
The proude shall boost nomore for very sorowe: and why? her neyghboure shall take from her what she hath. The rebel-lyous cyty hopeth, that it shal not be so D euel: but for al that, the plage shal come from the Lorde, euen in to the porte of Jerusalem. The greate noyse of ẏ cha-rettes shal feare them, that dwell at Lachis, whiche is an occasyon of ẏ synne of ẏ daughter of Sion for in thee came vp the wyckednesses of Israel. Yea she sent her cursers in to the lande of Geth.
The houses of lyes wyll dysceaue the kings of Israel. And as for thee (O ẏ ẏ dwellest at Moraffa) I shal brynge a possessioner vpon thee, and the plage of Israel shal reach vnto Odolla. Make the balde, & shaue the, because of thy ten der chyldren: Make thee cleane bald as an Aegle, for they shalbe caryed awaye captyue from thee.

Thretenynges agaynst the sinful people.

The .ii. Chapter.

O Wo vnto them, that ymagyn to do harme, & deuyse vngracyous nesse vpon their beddes to per fourme it in ẏ cleare daie: for their power is agaynst God. When they couet to A haue land, they take it by vyolence, they robbe men of their houses.
Thus they oppresse a mā for his house, and euery man for his heritage. Ther fore thus sayeth ẏ Lorde: Beholde agaist this housshold haue I deuysed a plage, wherout ye shal not plucke your neckes: Ye shal nomore go so proudly, for it wyl be a perlous tyme. In that daye shal thys terme be vsed & a mour-nynge shalbe made ouer you on this ma ner: We be vtterly desolate, the porcion of my people is translated. When wyl he parte vnto vs the lande that he hathe taken from vs?
Neuertheles there shalbe no man to B diuide thee thy porcion in the congregaci on of the Lorde. Tush, hold youre tong (saye they.) It shal not fal vpon thys people, we shal not come so to confusion, sayeth the house of Jacob. Is the spirite of the Lorde so cleane awaye? or is he so mynded?

C Truthe it is, my wordes are frendly vnto them y liue right: but my people doth the contrary, therfore must I take parte agaynst them: for they take awaye both cote and cloke from the symple.
Ye haue turned youre selues to fyght, y women of my people haue ye shut out from their good houses, ad take awaie my excellent gyftes from their children Up get you hence, for here shal ye haue
no rest.
Because of their Idolatry they are corrupte, and shal miserably perishe. If I were a fleshly felowe and a preacher of lies, and tolde them that they myght lyue bybbyng and bollyng and be droncken: O that were a Prophete for this people D But I wil gather thee in dede O Iacob and dryue the remnaunt of Israel all to gether. I shal cary them one w another as a floke in the folde, and as y catell in their stalles, y they maye be dysquyeted of other men. Who so breaketh the gap he shall go before. They shal breke vp the porte, & go in and out at it. Their kynge shal go before them, ad the Lord shalbe vpon the heade of them.

Agaynst the tyranny of Prynces and false prophetes

The .iii. Chapter

HEre O ye heades of y house of Iacob & ye leders of y A house of Israell: Shulde not ye know what were law full and ryght: but ye hate the good, and loue the euel: ye plucke of mennes skynnes, ad the flesh from their bones: ye eate the flesh of my people, & flay of their skyn: ye breake their bones ye choppe them in peces as it were in to a cauldron, & as fleash into a pot. Now the tyme shal come, that when they call vnto the Lorde, he shall not heare them but hyde his face fro the because that throwe their owne immagynacyons they haue dealte so wyckedly And as concernynge the prophetes that dysceaue mi people, thus the Lorde sayeth agaynst them: When they haue B anye thinge to byte vppon : then they preach that all shalbe wel: but yf a man put not some thinge in to their mouthes they preach of warre agaynst hym Therfore youre vysyon shalbe turned to night, and your prophecyeng to darkenes. The Sunne shall go doune ouer those prophetes, and the daie shal be darcke vnto them . Then shall the vysyon seers be ashamed, and the sothsayers confounded: yea they shal-be fayne all the pack of them, to stoppe their mouthes, for they haue not gods worde. As for me, I am ful of strength C and of the spirite of the Lorde, full of iudgement and boldnesse: to shew the house of Iacob their wickednes, and y house of Israel their synne.
O heare this ye rulers of the house of Iacob, and ye iudges of the house of Israel: ye that abhorre the thynge that is lawful, and wraist asyde the thyng y is streight: Ye that bould vp Sion w bloud, ad Ierusalem with doyng wrog O ye iudges, ye geue sentence for gyf-tes: O ye preastes, ye teache for lucre.
O ye prophetes, ye prophecy for money.
Yet wyll they be taken as those y hold vpon god, and saye: Is not the Lorde amonge vs? Tush there ca no misfortune happe vs. Therfore shal Sio (for youre sakes) be plowed lyke a felde: Jerusalem shal be com an heape of stones and the hil of the temple shalbe turned to an hye wodde.

Of the callyng of the Gentiles, and conuersyon of the Iewes.

The .iiii. Chapter.

BUt in the Latter dayes it A wyl come to passe, that the hyll of y lordes house shal be set vp hier the any moun taines or hylles: Yea the people shal preasse vnto it, and the mul titude of the Gentiles shall haste them thither, saiynge: Come, let vs go vp to the hyl of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Iacob: that he maye teache vs his waye, and that we maye walke in his pathes. For the lawe shall come out of Sion, and the worde of god fro Ierusalem, and shall geue sentence amonge the multitude of the Heathen & refourme the peope of farre countrees so that of their swerdes they shall make plowshares, and sythes of their speares.
One people shal not lyfte vp a swerd B agaynst another, yea they shal nomore learne to fyghte: but euery man shall syt vnder hys vyneyarde and vnder his fygge tre and no man to fray him away: for the mouth of the Lord of hostes hath spoken it. Therfor, wher as al the people haue walked euery man in the name of his owne God, we wyll walcke in the na me of oure God for euer and euer. At y same tyme, sayeth the Lorde, wyl I gather vp the lame & the outcastes, & suche as I haue chastened: and wyl geue issue vnto the lame, and make of y out castes a great people: and the Lorde him selfe shalbe their kyng vpon the mount Siō from this time forth for euermore. And vnto thee (O thou tower of Eder, thou F strong holde of the daughter Syon) vnto thee shal com, euen the lordshippe and kyngdome of the daughter Jerusa lem. &c Why then art thou now so heuy? is ther no kyng in thee? are thy counsaylers away that thou art so payned, as a wo man in her trauayle? And nowe (O y doughter Syon) be sory, let it greue y as a wife laboring wt chylde: for now must thou get thee out of y cytie, and dwel vp on that playne feld. Yea vnto Babylon shalt thou go, ther shalt thou be delyue red, and there the Lorde shal lowse thee from the hande of thyne enemyes.

Now also are ther many people gathered together agaīst y, saying: what G Sion is cursed, we shal se oure lust vpō her. But they know not the thoughtes of the Lorde they vnderstande not hys councel, that shal gather them together as the sheues in the barne. Therfore get the vp, O y daughter Syon, and thresshe oute the corne: For I wyll make thy horne yron and thy clawes brasse that thou mayest grynde many people: their goodes shalt thou appropriate vnto the Lorde and ther substaunce vnto the ru ler of the whole worlde.

Of the destruction of Jerusalem.

A After that shalt thou be robbed thi self, O thou robbers doughter: they shal lay sege agaynste vs and smytte the iudge of Israell wyth a rod vpon the cheke.

And thou Bethleem Ephrata, art litle amonge the thousandes of Juda. Out of thee shall come vnto me, which shal be the gouernour in Israel: whose out goynge hathe bene from the begyn-nyng, and from euerlasting. In the meane while he plageth them for a season, vntyl the time that she which shal beare (haue borne) the shal the remnaūt of his bretherne be converted vnto the children of Israel. He shall stande fast and geue fode in the strength of y lord and in the victory of the name of y lord his god: and whē they be converted, he shal be magnifyed vnto y farthest par-tes of the worlde.

Then shall there be peace, so that the B Assirian maye come in to oure lande, & treade in our houses. We shall brynge vp vii. sheperdes and, viii. prices vpon them: these shal subdue the lande of Assur with the swearde, and the lāde of Nymrod with their naked weapēs.
Thus shal he deliuer vs from the Assi rian / when he commeth within oure lande, and setteth hys fote within oure borders.

And the remnaunt of Jacob shalbe amonge the multitude of people, as y dewe of the Lorde, and as the droppes vpon the grasse, that tarieth for no mā and waiteth of no body. Yea y residue of Jacob shalbe amonge the Gentiles and the multitude of people, as y lion C amonge the beestes of the wodde / and as the Lions whelpe amonge a flocke of shepe: which (when he goeth thorow) treadeth downe / teareth in peces / and there is noman that can helpe. Thyne hand shalbe lift vp vpō thine enemies, and thyne aduersaries shall perish al.

The tyme shal come also, sayeth the Lord / that I wyl take thyne horses frō thee / and destroye thy charettes. I wil breake downe the cyties of thy land, & ouerthrow all thy stronge holdes. All witchcraftes will I rote oute of thyne hand, there shal no mo sothsaiynges be within thee. Thyne Idoles & thyne Images will I destroye out of thee: so that thou shalte nomore bowe thy selfe vnto the workes of thyne owne han-des. Thy groues will I pluck vp by the rotes, and breake downe y cities.

Thus wyl I be avenged also, vpon all the Heathen that wyll not heare.

¶ The.vi.Chapter.

Herken now what the Lord A saieth: Up, reproue ye moun-taynes / & let ye hilles heare thy voyce. O heare the punishment of the Lorde / ye mountaynes, and ye mightye founda cions of the earth: for the lorde wyll re-proue his people, and reason with Israel. O my people what haue I done vnto thee? or wherin haue I hurt thee? geue me answere. Because I brought thee from the lande of Egipt and delyuered thee out of ye house of bō dage? Because I made Moyses Aarō and Miriam to leade thee? Remembre (O my people) what Balach the kinge of Moab had immagened against thee and what answere that Balaā the sonne of Beor gaue hym from Sethim vnto Galgal that ye maye know the louyng kindnesses of the Lorde.
What acceptable thynge shall I B offer vnto the Lord? shal I bowe my knee vnto the hye god? Shall I come before him withe Brente Offeringes and with calues of a yeare olde? Hathe the lorde a pleasure in many thousand rāmes, or inumerable streames of oyle?
Or shal I geue my fyrst born for myne offences, and the frute of my body for the synne of my soule? I wyl shew thee, O man / what is good, and what ye lord requyreth of thee: Namely, to do right to haue pleasur in louig kindnes, to be lowly, and to walke with thy god: that thou maiest be called a cytie of the lord C and that thy name maye be ryghteous-nesse.
Heare (O yee trybes) who woulde els geue you suche warnynge?
Shoulde I not be dyspleased for the vnryghteous Good in the houses of the wycked, and because the measure thys wynyshet? Or shoulde I iusty-fye the Faulse Balauncys and the bagge of dysceatful weyghtes amon g those that be full of ryches vnryghtu ously gotten, where the cytezyns deale with falshead / speake lyes, & haue disce atfull tunges in ther mouthes?
Therfor I wyll take in hande to pu- D nysh thee, and to make thee desolat, be cause of thy sinnes Thou shalt eate, and not haue ynough: yea thou shalt bring thy self downe. Thou shalt fle, but not escape: and those that thou woldest saue wyl I delyuer to the swerd. Thou shalt sowe, but not reape: thou shalte presse out olyves but oyl shalt thou not haue to anoynte thy selfe withall: thou shalt treade out swete must / but shalt drynk no wyne. Ye kepe the ordinaunces of Amri, & al the customes of the house of Ahab: ye folow their pleasures, therfore wyll I make thee wast, ād cause thy inhabyters to be abhorred, O my people: & thus shalte thou beare thyne owne shame.

A complaynt of the lytle numbre of the ryghtuous. Against the trueth ought we not to hold with oure greatest frendes.

Wo is me: I am become as one, that goeth a gleanyng A in the haruest. Ther are no mo grapes to eat, yet wold I fayne (wt all my haste) haue of the shede blode & euery ma n hunteth his brother to death: yet they saye they do wel whē they do euel. As the price wyl, so sayth the iudge: ye he maye do him a pleasure agayn. The great man spea keth what his hart desireth & the hearers allow hym. The best of them is but as a thistle & the most righteous of them is but as a brear in the hedge. B But when the daye of thy preachers cō myth ye thou shalt be visyted: than shal they be wasted awaye. Let no man beleue his frend / nor put his confidence i a prince. Kepe the porte of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy bosome: for the sonne shal put his father to disho-noure, the daughter shal ryse agaynst her mother / the daughter in lawe a-gaynst her mother in lawe: & a mans foes shalbe eue they of his owne hou-

Neuerthelesse I wyl loke vp vnto the Lorde, I wyll paciently abyde god my Sauyoure: my God shall heare me. O thou enemye of myne/ reioyce not at my fall, for I shal get vp agayne and and though I lye in [b]* darcknesse, yet the Lorde is my lyght. I wyl beare the punishmente of the Lorde (for why I haue offended hym) tyl he syt in iudgement vpon my cause [c] & se that I haue right. He wyl bring me forth to ẏ lyght & I shall se his rightuousnesse.

D She that is myne enemy shal loke vpon it & be confounded, whiche now saieth: Wher is thy Lord God? Myne Eyes shal beholde her, whan she shall be troden downe as ẏ claye in ẏ streetes The tyme wyll come/ that thy gappes shalbe made vp, & ẏ law shal go abrode and at ẏ tyme shal they come vnto thee frō Assur vnto the strōg cytyes, & frō ẏ strong cityes vnto ẏ ryuer: from ẏ one sea to ẏ other, from the one mountayn to the other

Not wythstandyng ẏ land must be wasted/ because of them that dwel therin and for the frutes of theit owne Ima-

E ginacyons. Therfor fede thy people w thy [c]* rodde, the flocke of thyne heretage whiche dwel desolate in ẏ wodde that they maye be fedd vpon the moūt of Charmell / Basan and Galaad as afore tyme. Maruelous thynges wyl I shewe them, lyke as when they came oute of Egypt. Thys shall the Heathen se, and be ashamed for all their power, so that they shall [d]* laye their hande vpō their mouth, and stop their eares. They [e]* shal lycke the dust lyke a serpent, & as the wormes of the earth ẏ tremble in their holes. They shalbe afrayde of the Lord our God, & they shal feare thee.

F Wher is there suche a God, as ẏ that pardonest wyckednes, & forgeuest ẏ offences of the rēnaūt of thine heretage? He kepeth not his wrath for euer. And why? his delite is to haue compassion: he shal turne agayne, and be mercyful to vs: he shal put downe oure wycked nesses, & cast all our synnes in to the botome of the see.

Thou shalt kepe thy trust with Iacob and thy mercye for Abraham, lyke as thou haste sworne vnto oure Fathers longe agoo.

The Note.

a* To labour to shede bloud, or to lye in wayte for bloud, is, to make mennes lyues laborous and myserable, by threatnynges murtherers, and violence. Prouer. i b b* By darkenes vnderstande the sadnes & miseries of this worlde, and by lyght the comforth & reioysyng of the conscience. Iob. xv. c

¶ Of the destruction of Niniue and of the delyueraunce of Israel.

The fyrste Chapter.

This is ẏ heuy burthen of Nynyue, whiche Nahum of Elchos dyd wryte as he sawe it. A

The Lorde is a gelous God, and a taker of vēgeaūce yea, a taker of vengeaunce is the lord, and wrothful. The Lorde taketh vengeaunce of his enemies, and reserueth dyspleasure for his aduersaries. The Lorde suffereth longe, he is of great power and so innocent, that he leaueth no man fautles before him. The lorde goeth forth in tempeste and stormy wether, the cloudes are ẏ dust of his fete. When he reproueth the sea, he dryeth it vp, and turneth al the floudes to drye lande. Basan is desolate/ Charmel & the pleasure of Libanus wasteth awaie

The mountaynes tremble for him, the B hilles consume. At the syght of him, the earth quaketh: yea the whole worlde, & al that dwel therin. Who maye endure before his wrath? Or who is able to abyd his grimme displeasur? His anger taketh on like fyre, and the hard rockes burst in sunder before him.

Ful gracious is the lord, & a strong holde in the tyme of trouble, he knoweth them that put their trust in him: whē the floud runneth ouer, and destroyeth the

the place, ād whē the darckenesse foloweth styll vpon hys enemyes. What do ye Imagyne then agaynst ÿ Lorde on this maner? Tushe, when he hath ones made an ende, there shal come no more trouble. For lyke as the thornes that sticke together/ & as the dry strawe so shall the Drounckardes be consumed together, euen when they be full.
G There come out of thee suche as Imagyn mischefe, and geue vngracious counsail agaynst the Lord.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Lett them be as well prepared, yea and as many as they can, yet shall they be hewen downe, and passe away. And as for thee I wil vexe thee, but not vtterly destroye thee. And now wyl I breake his rodde from thy back, and burst thy bandes in sonder. But the Lorde hath geuen a commaūdement concernyng ÿ that ther shall come nomore sede of thy name. The carued and casten Images wyl I rote out of the house of thy God. Thy graue shal I prepare for thee, and thou shalt be confounde ¶ He descrybeth the victory of the Chaldees agaist the Niniuites.

The .ii. Chapter.

A Beholde, vpō the mountaines come the fete of hym ÿ bryngeth good tidinges/ & preacheth peace. O Iuda, kepe thy holye dayes, performe thy promises: for Belial shal com nomore in thee/ he is vtterly roted out.

The scaterer shall come vp agaynst thee and lay sege to the castell: Loke ÿ wel to ÿ stretes, make thy loyns strong Arme thy selfe wythe all thy Myghte: for the Lorde shal restoore agayne the glory of Iacob, lyke as the glory of Israel. The destroyers haue broken them downe, and marred ÿ vyne braunches The shylde of his gyauntes glistereth: hys men of warre are clothed in purple His charettes are as fyre, when he maketh hym forwarde, his archers are wel decked and trimmed The charettes rolle vpon the stretes, ād welter in the hye wayes.

They are to loke vpon like cressettes of fyre, and go swyftely, as the lyghtenynge B When he doth but warne his gyauntes they fall in theyr araie and hastely they clymme vp ÿ walles: yea, the engins of the warre are prepared al redy. The water portes shalbe opened, and the kinges palace shal fal. The quene her self shal be led awaye captiue, and her gentlewemen shall mourne as the doues, & grone within their hertes. Niniue is lyke a pole full of water/ but then shall they be fayne to fle. Stand stande, (shall they crye) and there shal not one turne back.

Awaye with the siluer awaye with the golde: for here is no ende of treasure. There shall be a multitude of al maner costly ornamentes. Thus must she be spoyled, emtyed and cleane stryped oute: that their hertes maye be melted awaie, theyr knees tremble, all theyr loynes be weake, and theyr Faces blacke as a pot.

Where is nowe the dwellyng of ÿ lyons, and ÿ pasture of the lyons whelpes/ where the lyon & the lyonesse wet w̄

Beholde, I wil vpon thee saith the Lorde of hostes, ād wyl set fyre vpon thy charettes that they shal smoke wyth all, and the Swearde shall deuoure the yonge lyons. I wyl make an ende of thy spoylynge from out of the earthe and ÿ voyce of thy messaunger shal nomore be hearde.

¶ The fall of Niniue.

The. iii. Chapter.

The Boke of
The Prophete Abacuc.

A complainte agaynst Israel.

The fyrst Chapter.

This is the heuy bur then, which ẏ pro- A phet Abacuc did se.
O lord, how longe shal I crye, & thou
wylt not heare?
How long shal I cõplaine vnto thee sufferynge wronge, and thou wylt not helpe? why lettest thou me se weartnes and laboure? Tyranny and violence ar before me, power ouer goeth right: for the lawe is torne in peces, and there can no right iudgement go forth. And why? the vngodlye is more set by then the rightuous: this is the cause, ẏ wrõg iudgement proceadeth. Beholde amõg the Heathen, and loke well: wonder at it, and be abashed: for I wyl do a thĩg in your tyme, which though it be told you, ye shall not beleue.
For lo, I wyl rayse vp the Caldees, ẏ bytter and swyfte people: whych shall go as wide as ẏ land is, to take posses- B syõ of dwellĩg places / that be not their owne. A grymme & boysterous people is it / these shal sit in iudgemẽt & punish.

C Their horses are swyfter then the cattes of the mountayne, and byte sorer then the wolues in the euenig. Ther horsmen come by greate heapes from farre, they fle hastely to deuour as the Aegle. Thei come all to spole: out of them commeth an east wynd, which bloweth & gathereth their captyues lyke as the sandde. They shall mocke the kynges, and laughe the princes to scorne. They shal not set by any stronge holde, for they shal laye ordi naunce agaynst it, and take it. Thē shal they tak a fresh corage vnto them, to go forth and to do more euel and so ascribē that power vnto their God.

But thou O Lord my God, my holy D one thou art from the begynnyg, therfor shall we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordened them for a punisment, and set thē to reproue the myghtye. Thyne eyes are clene, thou mayst not se euell, thou canst not behold the thing y is wycked. Wher fore thē doest thou loke vpon the vngod ly, and holdest thy tunge, when the wyc ked deuoureth the man that is better thē hi selfe. Thou makest mē as the fyshe in sea/and lyke as the crepyng beestes that haue no gyde. They take vp al wyth ther angle, they catch it in their net, and gather it in their yarne: wher of they reioise & are glad Therfor offre they vnto theyr net, & do sacrifyce vnto their yarne: because that thorowe it their porcyon is become so fat and their meate so plenteous. Wher fore they cast out their net agayne, and ne uer cease to slaye the people.

And though he tary/yet wayte thou for hym, for in very dede he wyll come, and not be slacke. Beholde, who so wyll not beleue, his soule shall not prospere: but y iuste shal lyue by his faith. Lyke as the wyne disceaueth the dronckard, euen so the proude shal fayle and not endure.
He openeth his desyre wyde vp as the hell, and is as vnsaciable as death. Al heathen gathereth he to hym, and hea-peth vnto him al people.

B But shal not all these take vp a pro-uerbe agaynst him, and mocke him with a byworde, and saye: wo vnto hym that heapeth vp other mens goodes. How longe wil he lade him selfe with thycke claie. O how sodenly wil they stand vp, that shal byte, and awake, that shal tere thee in peeces. yea y shalt be their praie.
Seing thou hast spoiled many Heathē, therfore shall the remnaunt of the people spoile thee: because of mens bloud, & for the wronge done in the lande, in the cytie and vnto all them that dwell ther-

What help then wyl the Image do, whō the workeman hath fashioned? Or the vayne cast Image, wherin because the crafteman putteth his trust, therfor maketh he domme Idols? Wo vnto hym, ẏ sayeth to a pece of wod: arise, and to a domme stone: stand vp. For what instruccyon maye suche one geue? Behold it is layed ouer with gold and syluer, & ther is no breth in it. But ẏ Lord in hys holy temple is he, whom al the worlde should feare.

The.iii. Chapter

I O Lorde, when I hard speke of ẏ, I was afrayed. The worck that thou hast taken in hand, shalt ẏ perfourme in his tyme, O Lorde: & whē thy tyme commeth, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath thou thinckest vpō mercy. God commeth from Theman, ād the holy one from the moūt of Pharan. Selah. His glory couereth the heauens and ẏ earth is ful of his prayse. His shinyng is as the sonne/and beames of lyght go out of his handes, ther is his power hyd. Destruccion goethe before him, and burnyng creffettes go from his fete. He standeth, & measureth the earth. He loketh, ād the people consume awaie, the mountay-B nes of ẏ world faul downe to poulder, & the hilles are fayne to bowe them selues/ for his goinges are euerlastyng ād sure.

I sawe that the pauilyons of the Morians and the tentes of the lande of Madian were verid for wetynes. Wast thou not angry, O Lord, in thy waters: was not thy wrath in that floudes, and thy displeasure in the seeyes/when thou satest vpō thyne horse, and whē thy chare-Deut. xxxiii. a tes had ẏ victory. Thou shewedst thy bowe openly, like as thou haddest promised with an othe vnto the trybes. Selah.

Thou dydest deuyde ẏ waters of the earth. When the mountaynes sawe thee, they were afrayed, the Water Streame wente awaye: the depe made a noyse at the lyftyng vp of thyne hande. The Sūne and Moone remayned styl in their ha-C bytacion. Thyne arowes went out glysteryng, and thy speares as the lyght of ẏ lyghtnyng. Thou trodest downe ẏ lande in thyne anger, and diddest throsshe the Heathen in thy displeasur. Thou camest forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thyne anoynted. Thou smotest downe ẏ head ther house of ẏ vngodly, & dyscoueredest his foūdacions, euē vnto ẏ necke of him. Selah. Thou cursest his septers, the captayne of his men of warre: whiche come as a stormy wynd to scatre me abrode & are glad when they may eat vp the poore secretly. Thou makest awaye for thyne horses in the see, euen in the moudd of greate waters. When I heare this, my body is vered, my lippes tremble at the voyse ther of, my bones corruppte, I am afrayed wher I stand. O/ that I myght rest in the daye of trouble that I might go vp vnto our people, which ar alredy prepared.

Iosue. x. c

For the fygg etrees shall not be grene, and the vynes shall beare no frute. The Labour of the olyue shal be burlost and the lande shal brynge no corne: the shepe shalbe taken out of the folde, and there shalbe no catel in the stalles. But as for me, I wyl be glad in the lord; and wyll reioyce in God my Sauioure. The Lord God is my stegthe, he shal make my fete as the fete of hertes: and he which geuethe the vyctorye/shall brynge me to my hye places/ syngynge vpon my Psalmes.

ye day of the Lordes slayne offring: I wil visit ye princes, the kynges chyldrẽ & all suche as weare straung clothig. In the same day also wil I visit al those, ye trede ouer the threshold so proudly, which fyll theyr lordes house wt robbery & falshed.
At ye same time (saith the lord) there shal be herd a great crye frõ ye fish port, & an houlig frõ ye other port, & a grett murther frõ the hylles. Howle ye ye dwel in ye myl, for all the marchaũt people are gone & all xxi. daye of the seuenth mo neth, came the worde of the Lorde by the prophet Aggeus, sayinge: speake to Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prynce of Iuda/ and to Iesua the sonne of Iosedech the hye prest and to the resydue of the people, and saye: Who is left among you, that sawe this house in her fyrst beawtye?

But what thincke ye now by it? Is it not in your eyes, euë as though it were nothig. Neuerthelesse be of good chere O Zorobabel (saieth the Lord) be of good comforte, O Jesua ye sonne of Josedech ye hie prest: take good hartes vnto you also, al ye people of the land, sayeth the Lord of hostes: and do acordyng to the worde (for I am wyth you, sayeth the Lorde of hostes) lyke as I agreed wt you, when ye came out of ye land of Egypte: ãd my sprete shalbe amõge you, feare ye not.

B For thus sayth the Lord of hostes. yet once more wyl I shake heauen and earth, the sea and the dry land yea I wil moue all Heathen, and the comforte of all Heathen shall come, and so wyll I, fyll this house wyth honoure, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes. The siluer is myne ãd the gold is myne, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Thus the glory of the last house shalbe greater then the fyrst, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: ãd in this place wyl I geue peace sayeth the Lord of hostes.

The, xxiiii. daye of the. ix, moneth i ye seconde yeare of kyng Darius, came ye C worde of the Lorde vnto the Prophete Aggeus, saiyng: Thus sayeth th Lord God of hoostes. Aske the prestes concernyng the law, & say: if one bere holy flesh in his cote lappe & wt hys lap touch the bred-potag, wyne, oyl or eny other meat shal it be holy also? The prestes answered and sayde: No. Then sayd Aggeus Now yf one beyng defyled with a dead carcase, touch eny of these: shal it also be vnclene? The Prestes gaue answer and say: yea, it shalbe vnclene. The Aggeus answered ãd sayd: eue so is this people and this nacion before me, sayeth the Lorde: and so are al ye workes of their handes, yea & all yt they offre, is vnclen.

And now (I praye you) considre frõ this daye forth, and how it hath gõe wt you afore: or euer ther was laid one stõe vpon another in the temple of ye Lorde: ye whe ye came to a corne heape of xx. bushels, ther were scarse ten: & ye whe ye cãe to ye wyne presse for to poure out. L. pottes of wyne, ther were scarce. xx. For I smote you with heate, blasting ãd hayl stones in all the laboures of your handes: yet was there none of you, yt would turne vnto me, saieth the lord. Considre then from this daye forth and afore, namely from the. xxiiii. daye of the. ix. moneth, vnto the daye that the foundacion of the lordes temple was layed: marcke it well, is not the sede yet in the barne? D haue not the vines, ye figetrees, ye pomegranates and olyue trees bene yet vnfrutful? but from this day forth, I shal make them to prospere.

Moreouer the. xxiiii. daye of the moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto Aggeus againe, saiyng: Speke to Zorobabel the prince of Juda, and saye: I wil shake both heauen and earth, and ouerthrowe the seate of the kyngdomes, yea and destroie the mightie kingdome of ye Heathen. I will ouerthrow the charettes and those that syt vpon them, so yt both horse and man shal fal downe, euery mã thorow his neghboures swearde. And as for thee, O Zorobabel (sayeth the Lord of hoostes) thou sonne of Salathiel my seruaunt: I wyl take thee, saieth ye Lord at the same tyme, & make thee as a seale for I haue chosen thee, saieth the Lord of hoostes.

ẏ stod among the Myrte trees, answered & sayde: These are they, whom the Lord hath sent to go thorow the worlde. And they answered the aungell of the Lorde, that stod amonst the Myrte trees, & sayd.
We haue gone thorow the worlde: and behold al the worlde dwel at ease ãd are carelesse

Then the Lordes angel gaue answer Jerem. xxv. b xxix. b, i. Esdr. i. a and sayde: O Lorde of hostes, how lõge wylt thou be vnmerciful to Jerusalem and to the cyties of Juda, with whom ẏ charet were whyte horse/ in the fourthe Charette were horses of diuers coloures and stronge. Then spake I & saide vnto the aungel that talked with me: O Lord, what are these. The angel answe red, and sayde vnto me. These are the.

.iiii. windes of the Heauen, which become B forth to stand before the ruler of all thee Jerem... earth. That with the blacke horse wēte in to the lande of the north, and the whit followed them, and the speackled horses went forth toward the south. These hor ses were very strong, and went out: and soughte to goo and take their iourneye ouer the whole earth. And he sayde: get you hence, and go thorow the worlde.
So they went thorowe out the worlde.
Then cried he vpon me, and spake vnto me, sayenge: beholde, these that go tow-arde the north, shal styll my wrath in ŷ north countre.

And the word of the lorde came vnto me, saying: Take of the presoners that C are come from Babilō: namely, Heldai.
Tobiah and Idaia: and come thou the same daye, and go into the house of Jo siah the sonne of sophony. Then take gold and siluer, and make crownes ther of, and set them vpon the head of Jesua the sonne of Josedech, the hye preste, and speake vnto him: Thus saith the lord of hoostes: Beholde the man whose name Zach.iii.b is the braunche: & he that shall springe Psal.cx vp after him, shall buylde vp the temple Apo.iiii.b of the Lord. Yea euen he shal buyld vp the temple of the lord. He shal beare the prayse, he shal sit vpon the lordes trone, and haue the domination.

A prest shal he be also vpō his trone, & a peacable councell shall be betwyxte

them both. And the crownes shalbe in the temple of the lord, for a remembraūce vnto Helem, Tobiah, Idaia and Hen the sonne of Sophony. And such as be farre of, shall come and buylde the temple of the lorde, that ye may know, how that the Lorde of hoostes hath sent me vnto you. And this shall come to passe, yf ye will herken dilygently vnto the voyce of the lord your god.

¶ The estimation of fasting without mercye. The dyspysynge of charyte, and the obstynacye of the people.

The .vii. Chapter.

A It happened also in the fourth yeare of kinge Darius, that the word of the Lorde came vnto zachary in the fourthe daye of the .
ix. moneth, whych is called *Casleu: what tyme as Sarasar and Rogomelech and the men that were with them sent vnto Bethel for to praye before the Lord: and that they shoulde saye vnto þ preastes, whiche were in the house of the Lord of hoostes, and to the Prophetes: Shoulde I wepe in the fyfte moneth, & abstayne, as I haue done now certaine yeares? Then came the word of þ Lorde of hoostes vnto me, saying Speake vn B to al the people of the lande, and to the prestes, and saye: when ye fasted & morned in the v and vii. moneth (nowe this.
lxx. yeares) did ye fast vnto me? When ye ate also and dronke, did ye not eate & drinke for your owne selues? Are not these the wordes, which þ lord spake by his prophetes afore tyme, when Jerusalem was yet inhabited and welthy, she & the cyties rounde about her: when there dwelt men, both toward the south and in the playne countrees?
C And the word of the Lord came vnto zachary, sayeng: Thus sayeth þ lord of hoostes: Execute true iudgemente: shewe mercy and louinge kindnes, eue-ry man to hys brother. Do the wyd-dowe, the fatherles, the straunger, and poore no wronge: And let no man ymmagyn euell agaynste hys brother in hys herte. Neuertheles they wolde not take hede, but turned their backes, and stopped theyr eares that they shold not heare: ye they made theyr hertes as an Adamant stone, least they shoulde ii.Pet.i.d. heare the lawe and wordes, whyche the Lorde of hoostes sent in hys holy spirite by the prophetes afore tyme.
Wherfore the Lorde of hostes was D very wroth at them. And thus is it come to passe, that lyke as he spake, and they would not heare: euen so they cryed, and Jere.xi.b.
I woulde not heare (sayth the Lorde of hoostes) but scattered them amonge all Gentyles, whom they knewe not. Thus the land was made so desolate, that ther trauayled no man in it, neyther to, nor fro, for that pleasaunt land was vtterly layed waste.

Of the returne of the people vnto Jerusalem, and of the mercy of God toward them, Of good workes. The Callyng of the gentyls.

The viii. Capter.

So the worde of the lorde ca- A me vnto me, sayeng: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: I was in a great gelousy ouer Syon, yea I haue bene very gelous ouer her in a great displeasure, thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: I wyll turne me agayne vnto Syon, and wyll dwell in the myddest of Jerusalem: so that Jerusalem shalbe called a faythefull and true cytye, the hyll of the Lorde of hoostes, yea an holy hyll.
Thus saythe the Lorde of hostes:
There shal yet olde men & women dwel agayne in the stretes of Jerusalem: yea, and such as go wyth staues in theyr hādes for very age. The stretes of the cyty also shalbe ful of young boyes and dā-sels, playnge vpon the stretes.
Thus sayth the Lord of hoostes: if B the resydue of thys people, thynk it to be inpossible in these days, should it therfor be vnpossible in my sight, sayth the lorde of hoostes? thus sayth þ Lord of hostes: Beholde, I wyll delyuer my people frō the lande of the east & weste, & wyl bring them agayne: þ they maye dwel at Jerusalem. They shalbe my people, & I wyl be their God, in trueth ād ryghtuousnes.
Thus saythe the Lord of hoostes: let youre handes be stronge, ye that now heare these wordes by the mouth of the prophetes prophetes which be in these dayes that the foundacion is layed vpon the lord of hoostes house, that the temple maye be bulded. For why: before these daies nether men nor catel could wynne any thynge, nether myght any man come in and out in rest, for trouble: but I let E euery mã go agaynst his neyghboure: Neuertheles I wyl now intreate the resydue of this people nomore as afore tyme, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, but they shalbe a sede of peace. The vinarde shal geue her frute/the ground shal geue her increase, and the heauẽs shal geue their dewe: and I shall cause the remnaũte of this people, to haue al these in possession. And it shall come to passe/that lyke as ye were a curse a monge the Heathen (O ye house of Ju da and ye house of Israel) Euen so wil I delyuer you, that yey shall be a blessynge: feare not/but let your handes be stronge.

For thus sayeth the lord of hostes: F lyke as I deuysed to punish you, what time as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath/sayeth the Lorde of hoostes/and spared not: euen so am I determed nowe in these dayes/ for to do wel vnto the house of Juda and Jerusalem/therfore feare ye not. Now the thinges that ye shal do, are these: Speke euery mã the treuth vnto his neighboure, exe cute iudgement truly, a peaceably win youre portes, none of you ymagin euel in his hert agaynst his neyghboure/ & loue no false othes: for all these are the thinges that I hate, sayeth the Lorde.
And the worde of the Lorde of hoostes came vnto me, saiynge: thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: The faste of the fourth moneth/the fast of the fyfth the fast of the seventh / and the faste of the tenth, shalbe ioye and gladnes, ãd pros perous hye feastes vnto the house of Juda: Only, loue the truth and peace.
G Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes:
There shall yet come people, and the ihabiters of many cyties: and they that dwel in one cyte, shal go to a nother sai ynge: Up, let vs go, and praye before y Lorde, let vs seke the lorde of hoostes:
I wyll go with you: yea suche people & mightie heathen shall come & seke the Lorde of Hoostes at Jerusalem and to praye before the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: In that tyme shall ten men (oute of all maner of languages of the Gentyles) take one Jewe by the hem of hys garmente, and saye: We wyll go wyth you, for we haue hearde, that god is among you.

The .ix. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde shal 1 be receaued at Adrach, a Da mascus shalbe hys offering for the Eyes of all men and of the trybes of Israel, shal loke vp vnto the Lorde, The borders of Hemath shalbe hard therby Tyrus also and Sydon, for they are verye wyse. Tirus shall make her selfe stronge, heape vp sylver as the sande and golde as y claye of the streates. Beholde the Lorde shall take her in, and haue her in possessi on: he shal smyte downe her power into y sea, and she shall be consumed wyth fyre, Thys shal Ascalon see, and be afrayde.
Gaza shalbe very sorye, so shall Accarõ also because her hope is come to confu- B syon. For the kynge of Gaza shal perysh and at Ascalon, shal no man dwell.
Straungers shall dwel in Asdod, ãd as for the pryde of the Philistines I shall rote it oute.
Theyr bloude wyll I take awaye frõ theyr mouth and theyr abhominacyons from among theyr teeth. Thus they shal be left for oure God: yea they shalbe as a prynce in Juda and Accaron lyke as Jebusi and so wyl I compasse my house rounde about wyth my men of warre going to and fro: that no oppressoure come vpon them anye more. For that haue I sene nowe wyth myne eyes.
Reioyce thou greatlye/ O doughter Sion: be glad, O doughter Jerusalem For lo thy kyng commeth vnto thee, eue the ryghtuous and sauyour: Lowly and symple is he, he rydeth vppon an asse: I wyl rote out the Charettes from Ephraim and the horse from Jerusalem the ba tayle bowes shalbe destroyed. He shal geue doctrine of peace vnto the Heathen, and his dominion shalbe frō the one see to the other, and from the floudes to the endes of the worlde.

Thou also thorow the bloud of thy coue naunt: shalt lette thy presoners out of ỹ pitte wherin is no water. Turne you now to the stronge holde, ye that be in preson, and longe sore to be delivered: And this daye I bringe thee worde, that I wyll reward thee double agayne. For Juda haue I bent out as a bowe for me and Ephraim haue I filled. Thy sonnes (O Sion) wil I raise vp against ỹ Grekes B and make thee as a giauntes swearde, ỹ Lorde God shalbe sene aboue them, & his dartes shal go forthe as the lyghte-nyng. The Lord God shall blow ỹ trū pet, and shal come forth as a storme out D of the south.
The Lord of hostes shal defend them, they shal consume and deuoure, and sub due them with slinge stones. They shal drincke ād rage, as it were thorow wyne. they shalbe fylled lyke ỹ basēs/ & as the hornes of the aulter. The Lorde theyr God shal deliuer them in the daye, as ỹ flock of his people: for the stones of his Sanctuary shalbe set vp in his lande.
O how prosperous ād goodly a thinge shal ỹ be? The corne shal make the yong men chearefull, ād new wyn ỹ maydens.

Out of Juda shal come the helmet the naile: the battelbowe, and all the prynces together. They shalbe as the giauntes which in the battel treade downe ỹ myre Esai.xxii.d. Gene.xlix.b vpon the stretes. They shal fyght, for ỹ Lord shalbe with them, so that the horsmen shalbe confounded.
I wyll comforte the house of Juda and preserue the house of Joseph. I wil turne them also, for I pitie them: & they C shalbe lyke as they were, when I had not cast them of. For I the Lord am their god and wyl heare them. Ephraim shal be as a giaunt, & their herte shalbe chere ful as thorow wyne: yea, their children shal se it, and be glad, and their hert shal reioyce in the Lord. I wyl blowe for thē, and gather them together/ for I will redeme them. They shall increase, as they increased afore. I wyl sowe them amōg the people, that they may thyncke vpon me in farre countrees: they shal lyue wt their chyldren, and turne agayne. I wyl bringe them agayne also from the land D of Egipt, and gather them out of Assiria.
I wyl cary them into the lād of Galaad, and to Libanus and they shal want no thynge. He shal goo vpon the sea of Esay.x.a Ezec.xxix trouble, and smite the sea waues: so that al the depe floudes shalbe dried vp. The proude boostig of Assur shalbe cast do-wne, and the scepter of Egipt shalbe taken awaye. I wyll comforte theym in the lord, that they maie walke in his name, saieth the lord.

¶ The people is moued to requyre ỹ doctrine of tru th of ỹ Lord. The lord promeseth to vyset & cōforth the house of Israel.

The x. Chapter.

Pray the Lord then bytimes A to geue you ỹ latter rayne, so shal ỹ lorde mak cloudes and geue you raine ynough for al the increace of ỹ felde: For vayne is the answere of Idols. The sothsayeres se lies, ād tel but vayne drea mes: the comforth that they geue, is nothing worth. Therfore go they astray ly-ke a flocke of shepe, and are troubled, be cause they haue no shepherd: My wroth ful displeasure is moued at ỹ shepherdes, and I will vyset the goates. For the B Lord of hostes will graciously vise this flocke the house of Juda, and holde thē as a goodly fayre horse in the batel.

¶ The destructiō of the tēple. The care of the fayth ful is cōmytted to Christ, by the father. A greuous vysion agaynst Jerusalem & Juda.

The xi. Chapter.

Open thy doores, O Liba-nus, that the fyre maye con sume thy Cedre trees. A Howle ye Fyrre trees, for the Cedre is fallen, yea all the proude are wasted awaye. Howle (O ye oke trees of Baasan) for ỹ migh-tye stronge wodde is cutt downe. Men may heare the Shepherdes mourne for their glory is destroyed. Men maye heare the lyons whelpes roare for ỹ prid of Jordane is wasted awaye.

Thus sayeth the Lord my God: fede the shepe of the slaughter, whiche shalbe slayne of those þ possesse them: yet they take it for no synne, but they that sel thē saye: The lord be thanked I am rich: yea their owne shepherdes spar thē not. Ther fore wyll I nomor spare those that dwel in the lande (sayeth the Lord) but lo, I wyll deliuer the people, euery man in to his neyghbours handes and in to þ hād of his king: yt they maye smyte the land, C and out of their handes wil not I deli-uer them.

I my selfe fedde the slaughter shepe (a poore flock verely) and toke vnto me two staues: þ one I called louyng meke nesse, the other I called wo, and so I kept the shepe. Thre shepherdes destroyed I in one moneth, for I myght not awaye with thē, nether had they eny delyt in me Then sayde I: I wyll fede you nomore, the thing that dyeth, let it dye: ād þ wyll perishe let it perish/ and let the remnaūt eate/ euery one þ flesh of his neyghbour.
I toke also my louig meke staf, & brake it that I myght disanul the couenante, which I made wt al peple. And so it was broken in that daye.

Then the poore symple shepe that had a respecte vnto me, knewe therby, that it D was the worde of the Lorde. And I said vnto them: yf ye thinked it good, bringe hyther my price: if no, then leaue. So they wayed downe .xxx. syluer pens, þ valu that I was prysed at. And þ Lord sayde vnto me: cast it vnto the potter (a goodly price for me to be valud at of the and I toke þ .xxx. siluer pens/ ād cast them to the potter in the house of þ Lord Then brake I my other staf also (namely wo) that I myght lowse the brother head betwyxte Juda and Israel. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: Take to the also þ of a foolish shepherde: for lo, I wyll raise vp a shepherde in the lande, which shall E not seke after þ thinges that be lost, nor care for suche as go astraye: he shal not heale the wounded, he shall not norishe the thing that is whole: but he shal eate the flesh of suche as be fat, and tear their clawes in peces.

O Idle shepherde / that leaueth the flocke. The sweard shall come vpon his arme, and vpon his ryght eye. Hys arme shal be cleane dried vp, ād his right eye shalbe sore blynded.

Of the destruction and buyldyng agayne of Jerusalem.

The .xii. Chapter.

The heuy burthen, whych the A Lorde hath deuised for Israel. Thus sayth the Lord/whych spred the heauens a broade, layde the foundacion of the earth, ād geueth man the breth of lyfe: beholde, I wyll make Jerusalē a cuppe of surfet vnto al the people that are round aboute her: yea Juda hym sel fe also shalbe in the seage against Jeru salem. At the same tyme, wyll I make Jerusalem an heuy stone for al people, so that all suche as lyft it vp, shalbe tor ne & rente/ & all the people of the earthe shalbe gathered together against it.

In þ daye, sayeth the Lorde, I wyll make al horses abashed, and those that ryde vpon them, to be out of their wittes.
I wyll open myne eyes vpon the house of Juda, and smyte al the horses of the B people, with blyndnes. And the prynces of Juda, shal saye in their hertes: The inhabiters of Jerusalem, shal geue me consolacion in the Lord of hostes their GOD. In that tyme wyl I make þ pryn-ces of Juda, lyke an hote burnyng ouen wt wodd, and lyke a cresset of fire amōg the strawe: so that they shal consume al the people round about them, both vp on the ryght hande and the lefte.
Jerusalem also shalbe inhabited again: namely in the same place, wher Jerusalē standeth.

The lord shal preserue the tentes of Juda, lyke as a fore tyme: so that þ glory of the house of Dauid, and the glory of the cytisins of Jerusalem, shalbe but lytle regarded, in comparyson of þ glory of Juda. In that daye shal the lorde C defend the cytisyns of Jerusalem: so that the weakest then among them shalbe as Dauid: and the house of Dauid shalbe lyke as gods house, and as the Aungell of the lord before them.

At the same tyme wyl I go about to destroy destroy all such people as come against Jerusalem. Moreouer, vpon the house of Dauid, and vpon the citisens of Jerusalem, wyl I powre oute the sprete of grace and prayer so that they shal loke vpon me, whome they haue pearsed: and they shall bewepe hym, as men mourne for theyr onely begotten sonne: yea and be sory for hym, as me are sory for their fyrst chylde.

Then shal there be a greate mour-D nynge/at Jerusalem, lyke as the lamen tacion at Adremmon, in the felde of Ma gadon. And the lande shal bewayle eue-ry kinred bi them selues: the kinred of y house of Dauid/them selues alone, and theyr wyues by them selues: The kynred of the house of Nathan them selues alone, and theyr Wyues by them sel-ues: The kindred of the house of Leuy, the selues alone, & theyr wiues by them selues: The kired of y house of Semei the selues alone, & theyr wyues by them selues: In lyke maner al the other generacios, euerychone by them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues.

¶ Of the wel of grace & truth Christ. Of y clene rid dance of Idolatry, & of false prophetes.

The .xiii. Chapter.

A Zach. xvi. ... xiiii. b ... I N that tyme shal the house of Dauid and the cytysens of Jerusalem haue an ope wel, to wash of sinne ad vn clenes. And then (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) I wyl destroye the na mes of Idoles oute of the lande: so that they shal nomore be puet remembraunce.
As for the false Prophetes also and the vncleane sprete, I shall take them out of the lande: So that yf any of the B prophecy any more, his owne father ad mother that begat hym, shal saye vnto hym: Thou shalt dye, for thou spakest e lyes vnder the name of the lord: yea, his owne father and mother that begat hi, shal woud hi, whe he prophecyeth. And then shal those prophetes be cofouded e uery one of his visio whe he prophecieth nether shal they weare sact clothes any more to disceaue wi al. But he shalbe faie to say: I am no Prophete: I am an husbondman, for so am I taught by Ada fro my youth vp.

And yf it be sayde vnto him: how came C these woundes thene i thyn handes? He shal answere: Thus am I wounded in the house of myne owne frendes.
Aryse/O thou swearde, vpon my shepherde, and vpon the Prynce of my people, sayeth the Lord of hostes: Smit the shepherde/ & the shepe shalbe scatred abrode, ad so wyl I turne myne hande to the lytle ones. And it shall come to passe (sayth the Lorde) y in all the lande two partes shalbe roted out, but the thyrde D parte shal remayne therin. And the same thyrd parte wyl I bringe thorowe the fyer, and wyl clense them, as the syluer is clensed: yea and trye them lyke as golde is tryed. The shal they cal vpo my name, and I wyl heare them: I wyl saye: it is mi people. And they shall saie: Lord, my God.

¶ The wasting of the church vnder the figure of Jerusalem. Of the kyngdome of the lorde.

The .xiiii. Chapter

B Eholde, the daye of y Lorde commeth, that thou shalt be spoyled and robbed: for I A wyl gather together all the Heathen, to fight agaynste Jerusalem: so that y citie shalbe wonne, the houses spoyled, & the wemen defiled.
The half of the citie shal go awaye in to captyuite, ad the residue of y people shal not be caried out of the citie. After y shal the Lord go forth to fight against those Heathen, as men vse to fight in the daye of battel. Then shal his fete stande vpon the mount oliuet, that lieth vpo the east side of Jerusale. And the mounte oliuete shal cleue in two, eastward & westward, so that ther shalbe a greate valley: ad the half mount shal remoue toward y north, and the other towarde the south. And ye shal fle vnto the valley of my hylles, for B the valley of the hilles shal reach vnto Asal. Ye fle shal ye, like as ye fled for y earth quake in the dayes of Osiah kige of Juda. And the Lord my God shal co, ad al sayntes w him. In that daye shal it not be lyght, but colde and frost. This shalbe that specyal daye, which is knowe vnto the Lorde: nether daye nor nyght, but about y euenig time it shalbe lyght.

In that tyme shal there ᵃ* waters of lyfe runne out from Ierusalem: the halfe parte of them ᵇ* towarde the east see, & the other halfe towarde the uttermoste see, ād shal contynue both somer & wīter.
And ẏ Lord hym self shal be kinge ouer all the earth.
At that tyme shal there be one Lorde B only, and hys name shalbe but one. He shall go aboute the whole earth, as vpō a felde: from Gybea to Remmon, ād frō the south to Ierusalem. She shalbe set vp, and inhabyted in her place: frome Ben Iamyns porte, vnto the place of ẏ fyrste Porte, and vnto thee Corner porte: and from the tower of Hananeel, vnto ẏ kynges wyne presses. Ther shal men dwel/and there shalbe no more cursinge, but Ierusalem shalbe safely inhabyted. This shalbe the plage, wherwith the Lorde wyl smyt al people, that haue fought agaynste Ierusalem: Namelye, there flesh shall consume awaye/though they stand vpō there feet: ther eyes shal be corrupt in ther holes, and their tunge shal consume in ther mouth.
In that daye shall the Lorde make a C great sedycion among them, so that one man shal take a nother by the hande, ād laye his handes vpon the handes of his neyghbour. Iuda shal fyght also agaīst Ierusalē, and the goodes of al Heathē shalbe gathered together round about: golde and syluer and a very great multitude of clothes. And so shal this plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, & al the beastes that shalbe in the host, lyke as yonder plage was. Euerye one that remayneth then of all the people, which came agaynst Ierusalem, shal go vp yearly, to worshep the king (euen ẏ Lord of hostes) & to kepe ẏ fest of tabernacles.
And loke what generacyon vpon earth goth not vp to Ierusalem, for to worshippe the king (euen the lord of hostes) vpon the same: shal come no rayne. Yf the kynred of Egypte go not vp, and come not, it shal not rayn vpō thē nether.
This shalbe ẏ plage wherwith ẏ Lord D wyl smyte al Heathen, that come not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles: yea thys shalbe the syme plage of Egipte and the syme plage of all people, that goo not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles.

At that time shall the riding geer of the horses be holy vnto the Lorde, and thy kettels in the Lordes house shall be lyke the basens before the aultar: yea all the kettels in Ierusalem and Iuda, shal be holy vnto the lorde of hoostes: and al they that slaye offeringes, shal come take of them, and dight them therin. And at that tyme there shalbe no mo Cananites in ẏ house of the Lorde.

The heuye burthen, which ẏ Lord shewed agaynst Israel by Malachy. I haue loued you, sayeth the Lord: ād yet ye saye: wherin hast thou loued vs?
Was not Esau Iacobs brother, sayeth the Lorde: yet haue I loued Iacob, and hated Esau: yea I haue made hys hylles waste, and his herytage a wildernes for dragons. And though Edom sayde, wel, we are destroyed, we wyll go buylde vp agayne the places that be wasted: yet (saieth the lord of hostes) what they bulded, that brake I downe: so that it was called a cursed lande, and a people/whome the Lorde hath euer bene angry wal.

Youre eyes haue sene it, ād ye your selues confesse, that the Lorde hath brought the land of Israel to greate honor. Should not a sonne honour his father, and a seruaunt hys master? If I be be now a father/wher is mine honoure?

If I be the lord, where am I feared? sai eth the lorde of hostes.

Now to you prestes, that despyse my name. And yf ye say: wherī haue we dispi sed thy name? In this, that ye a* offer vncleane bred vpon myne aultar. And if ye wyl saye: wherī haue we offered any vncleane thyng vnto thee? In this that ye saye: the aulter of the Lorde is not to be regarded. If ye offer the blynde, is not that euell? And yf ye offre the lame & sicke, is not that euell? Yea offer it vnto thy prince, shal he be content with the, or accepte thy person, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes?

And nowe make your prayer before god, that he maye haue mercy vpon vs: for suche thinges haue ye done. Shal he D regarde your persounes, thincke ye, say eth the Lorde of hoostes? Yea what is he among you, that wyl do so much/as to shutt the dores, or to kyndle the fyre vpon myne aultar for naught? I haue no pleasure in you, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: and as for the meate offering, I wyl not except it at your hande. For frō the rysyng vp of the sonne to the goyng downe of the same, my name is greate a mōg the Gentyles: yea/in euerye place shall there sacryfice be done/and a clene meatofferynge offered vp vnto my na me: for my name is greate among ẏ hea then, sayth the Lorde of hoostes. But ye haue vnhalowed it, in ẏ ye saye, ẏ aultar of ẏ Lorde is not to be regarded, and b* ẏ thing that is set thereupon, not worthye to be eaten.

Now saye ye: It is but laboure and C trauayle, & thus haue ye thought scorne at it (sayeth the Lord of hostes) offerig robbery, yea the lame and the sycke. Ye haue brought me in a meatofferynge, shulde I accepte it of your hand, sayeth the Lorde? Cursed be the dissembler/which hath in his flock one that is male and when he maketh a vowe, offereth a spoted one vnto the Lord. For I am a greate kyng (sayeth the lorde of hostes) And my name is fearefull amonge the heathen.

The notes.

a * To offer defyled bred is to do any thyng by hyp pocrisy, & not to glorify god, as he hath cōmaunded in his worde, but accordinge to the imagynacions and dreames of men.

b * Or hys worde and his meat are despysed.

The .ii. Chapter

And now (O ye prestes) this A commaundement toucheth you: yf ye wyl not here it, nor regarde it, to geue the glori vnto my name, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, I wyl sent a course vpō you, and wyl curse youre blessynges: ye curse them wyl I, yf ye do not take heded.
Behold, I shal corrupte youre sede, and cast donge in your faces: euen the dong of your solempne feastes and it shal cle ue fast vpon you. And ye shal knowe, ẏ I haue sent this commaundment vnto you: that my couenaunt whyche I made w Leui, myght stand, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes.

I made a couenaunt of life ād peace w him: this I gaue hym, that he myght B stand in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me, and had my name in reuerēce.
The lawe of treuth was in his mouth, and ther was no wickednesses found in his lippes. He walked with me in peace & equite, and dyd turne many one away from ther synnes. For the prestes lippes shoulde be sure knowledge, ẏ men may seke the lawe at his mouthe, for he is a messaunger of the Lord of hostes. But as for you/ye are gone clene out of the waye, and haue caused the multytud to be offended at the lawe: ye haue broken the couenaunt of Leui, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Therfor wyl I also make you to be despised, ād to be of no reputaciō among al ẏ people: because ye haue not C kept my wayes, but bē parcial ī ẏ lawe.
Haue we not al one father? hath not on God made vs? why doth euery on of vs then despise his owne brother, a so breke ẏ couenaunt of oure fathers? Now hath Iuda offended: ye the abhominaciō is don in Israel & in Ierusalem, for Iuda hath defiled the Sanctuary of the Lord, whiche he loued, and hath kept ẏ daugh ter of a strong God. But the Lorde shall destroye destroye them, that doth this (yea both ÿ master & ÿ scoler) oute of ÿ tabernacle of Jacob, with hi that offereth vp meat offerynge vnto the lord of hostes. Now haue ye brought it to this point againe, that the aulter of the Lorde, is couered with teares, wepyng, and mournyng: so that I wyl nomore regarde the meateofferyng, nether wil I receaue or accept any thinge at youre handes. And yet ye saie: wherfore? Euen because that where as the lord made a couenaunt betwyxt thee & thy wyfe of thy youth, thou hast depised her: Yet is she thine owne companion and maried wyfe.

So dyd not ᵃ the one, and yet had D he an excellent sprete. What dyd then ÿ one? He sought the sede promysed of god. Therfor loke wel to your sprete, and let noman dyspyse the wyfe of his youth. If thou hatest her put her away, sayeth the Lord god of Israell & geue her a clothing for the scorne, sayeth the lorde of hostes. Loke well then to youre sprete, and dispise her not. Ye greue the Lorde with your wordes, and yet ye saye: wherwith al haue we greued hym?
In this, that ye saye: All that do euell are good in the syght of god, and suche please him. Or els where is the god ÿ punisheth?

Beholde, I wyll sende my of his commyng? who shall be able to endure, whē he appeareth? For he is like a goldsmythes fyre / and lyke washers sope. He shall syt hym downe to trye ād to clense the syluer, he shal purge ÿ chyldren of Leuy, and puryfy theym lyke as goulde and syluer: that they maye brig meatoffe rynges vnto the lord in righ-teousnes. Then shall the offerynge of Juda and Jerusalem be acceptable vnto the Lord, lyke as from the begin-nynge, and in the yeares afore tyme.

I wyl come and punish you, and I my self wyll be a swyfe wytnes agaynst the witches, agaynst the aduouterers, agaynst false swearers: ye ād agaynst those that wrongeously kepeback the hyrelynges dewty: which vex the wyddowes and the fatherlesse, and oppresse ÿ strager, and feare not me, sayeth the Lord of ge not / ād ye (O children of Jacob) wyll not leaue of: ye are gone away, fro myne ordinaunces, and sens the tyme of your forfathers haue ye not kept them.

Turne you now vnto me, & I wyl turne B me vnto you, sayeth the Lord of hostes ye saye: wherin shal we turne? Shuld ye vse falshed and disceate with me? yet ye saye, wherin vse we disceate with the?

In Tithes & heaue offeringes. Therfor are ye cursed with penury / because yee

Bringe euery Tithe in to my barne, that there maye be meate in my house: ād proue me wͭ al (sayth the lord of hostes) yf I will not open the wyndowes of he-that he shall not eate vp ÿ frute of your baren in the felde, sayeth the Lord of hostes: In so moch that al people shal saie, that ye be blessed, for ye shall be a pleasaunt lande, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Ye speake hard wordes agaynst me,

sayde:
It is but lost laboure to serue God / What profit haue we for kepynge hys C Therfor may we say, that the proud are happie, and that they which dele wͭ vngodlynesse, are set vp: for they tempte godly: betwyxte hym that serueth god, And hi that serueth hym not.

For marke the daye commeth that shall burne as an ouen: and all the pro ude/yea and al suche as do wickednes, shalbe strawe: and the daye that is for to come, shall burne them vp (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) so that it shall leaue them neyther rote nor braunche.

But vnto you that feare my name shal

IN consideracion that the bokes before, are found in the hebrew tonge, receued of al men: & that the other followyng, whych are called Apocripha (because they were wont to be redde, not openly and in comen, but as it were in secret and aparte) are nether found in the Hebrew nor in the Calde: in whych tonges, they haue not of longe bene wrytten (in lesse then it were haply the boke of sapience) wherupon it were now very hard to repayre and amende them: And that also they are not receaued nor taken, as legitymate and leafull, as well of the Hebrues, as of the whole Church, as S. Hierome sheweth: we haue separate them, and set them asyde, that they may ÿ better be knowen: to thintent that men maye know of which bokes, witnes ought to be receued and of which not. For the sayde saynt Hierome, speakinge of the boke of Judyth (which is apocriphe) sayth, that the auctoritee therof is not estemed worthye and sufficient, to confyrme and stablish the thynges that lyght in disputacion. And generally of al the bokes called Apocrypha, he sayeth, that men maye reade them to the edyfyyng of the people, but not to confyrme and strengthen the doctryne of the Churche. I leaue out here the lawe (as they cal it) of Canon. c. Sancta Romana xv. distinct, where he shewed his iudgement. Lyke wyse the glose of. c. Canons xvi, distinct. whych sayth, that men reade them, but not in generall: as thoughe he should saye, that generally and thorouly they are not alowed. And not wythout a cause: For that they haue bene corrupted and falsifyed in many places, it appeareth sufficiently by Eusebius in hys boke called hystoria Ecclesiastica: whych thyng is easy to be knowen, euen now a dayes in certen pointes, namely in the bokes of ÿ Machabees, whose second boke saynt Hierome confesseth that he founde not in the hebrewe, by the meanes wherof it is become vnto vs the more suspecte, and the lesse receaued.

In lyke maner is it of the thyrd and fourth boke of Esdras, which S. Hierom protesteth that he wold not haue translated / estemyng them for dreames: where as Josephus yet in his boke of his Antiquities declareth ÿ summe of the matter after ÿ maner of a story, as wel of ÿ boke of Machabees as of the iii. of Esdras although he esteame the bokes compyled from the raigne of kyng Artaxerses vnto hys tyme, to be Apochripha.

Wherfore then, when thou wylt mayntayne any thing for certen, rendring a reason of thy faythe, take hede to procede therin by the lyuyng and pytthy Scriptures, folowyng. S Peter / which sayth: He that speake, let him speke as thoughe he spake the word of god. He sayeth the word of god, as a thing most treue & certen, opened by the prophetes and Apostles, inspired with the holy gost: of whome we haue wytnes moare cleare then the daye. Lawers hauing greate desyre to confyrme and stabish their opinyons by the lawe of man, saye, ÿ they shame to speake without lawe: How muche more feare and dreade then ought he to haue, that sayeth he is a Christian, the which holdeth not hym selfe, or resteth not in the lawes of the lyuyng god: But in mennes inuencyons, iudgyng of al thynges accordyng to the, and leauyng to an vncerte immaginacyon and phantasye. Let vs therfore that are buylded on the foundacyon of the holy prophetes and Apostles, and on the head corner stone (one which they them selues were founded, on which they preached / that is Jesus Christ, the sure stone) leaue the thynges that are vncerten to folow the certen: holding vs and restyng vs in the, and fastenig our ancre there, as in a sure place. For our christen faith consisteth not in doutful thynges, but in playn and most certen assurauñce, and in most certen preseruaciõ taken and cõfyrmed by infallyble veritee. In which god graunte vs to walcke perpetually, to the intent that accordig to it (fulfyllyng hys holy wyll in vs, and settyng asyde al inuensiõs contrary vnto hym) we maye lyue to his honoure, and to the edyfieg of his church.

The thyrde boke of Esdras.

Josias boldeth passeouer. After his deth, is Jechonias his sonne made king in hys stede who the kinge of Egipt putteth out, & setteth in his brother Joachim. Jerusalem is destroyed, & Sedechiah taken.

The fyrst Chapter.

A AND Josias helde the feaste of Easter in Jerusalem vn to the Lorde, and slewe the Passe ouer the .xiiii. daie of the fyrst moneth. He set the prestes also in ordre (accordinge to their dayly courses) being araied in long gar mentes in the temple of the Lord. And he spake vntoo the Leuites the holye minysters of Israell/that they shoulde halow them selues vnto the lorde, to set the holy arcke of the lorde, in the house that kynge Salomon the sonne of Da uid had buylded, and sayde: Ye shal no moare beare the Arke vpon youre shul ders. Now serue your lord and take the charge of hys people of Israell, after your villages ād your trybes: accordig as kyng Dauid the king of Israel hath ordened, and accordig as Salomon his sonne hath honorably prepared: ye loke that ye al do seruyce in the temple, accor dinge to his ordrynge and destribucion of the principal men, which are appoyn ted out of the trybes, to do seruyce for ÿ children of Israel. Kyl the Passeouer & prepare offerynges for your brethren & do accordinge to ÿ cōmaundement of ÿ Lord, which he gaue vnto moses. And vnto the people that was founde. Josy as gaue .xxx. thousande of sheepe lam bes, kyddes and goates, and thre thou sande oxen. These the kynge (of his kyngly lyberalytye) gaue vnto the peo B ple, according as he had promysed: and to the prestes of the Passeouer, he gaue two thousand shepe, and an hundreth ox en. Moreouer, Jechonias & Semeias, and Nathanael brethren and Hasabias Jehiel, and Josabad gaue theym to the Passeouer .v. M. shepe and .v. hundreth bullockes:

And when these thinges were brou ght to passe, the Prestes and the leuites stode goodly in theyr ordre, and had the vnleuened bread throughout the tribes.
And after the ordering of the princypal men in the tribes, they offered vnto the the lorde, in the syghte of the people, ac cordyng as it is wrytten in the booke of Moyses, and so they rosted the Easter lambe as accordinge was. As for the thanckoffrynges, & the other they dight them in kettels and pottes and set them before the People, wyth good wyll, and afterwarde before them selues, and the Preastes. For the prestes offered the fat vntyll the tyme was expyred: but the le uites prepared for them selues, and for theyr bretheren the chyldren of Aaron.
The syngers also the chyldren of Asaph stode in theyr ordre, accordynge as Da uid had deuised. So dyd Asaph, zacha ry and Jduthun, whych were apoynted by the kynge. Moreouer the porters ād dore kepers, stod by the dores and that dylygentlye, so that none wente out of hys standing and seruice/for theyr bre thren (the Leuites) prepared for them. C Thus were al thynges performed, ÿ belō ged to the offering of the Lord. In that day they held the passeouer, and offred thanckofferynges, besyde the sacryfice of the Lorde, accordynge to the cōmaū dement of kyng Josias.

So the chyldren of Israell, whyche were then presente helde an honourable Passeouer, and the feaste of swete bread vii. dayes longe. Yea such a Passeouer was not kepte in Israell, from the tyme of the Prophete Samuell. And all the kynges of Israell, helde not such an ea ster, as thys which kyng Josias helde/and the preastes, the Leuites, the Jew es, and all Israell, of all them that we re at Jerusalem. And in the .xviii. yeare of the raygne of Josias was thys passe ouer kepte. And wythe a perfecte harte, dyd kyng Josias ordre all hys worckes, before the Lorde, and the thynges that were wrytten of hym in Tymes paste concernyng those that synned, and were vngodly agaynste the Lorde before all people, and that sought not the word of the Lorde vpon Israel. + After all these actes of king Josias, Pharao the king of Egipte, wente vp/and came towarde Carcamis by Euphrates, and Josias were went to mete him. Then sent the kynge of Egypte unto Josyas/saiyng: what haue I to do with thee/O king of Juda?

I am not sent of the lord to fight agaist thee, for my warre is upon Euphrates, go thou thy waye home agayne in all ẏ haste. And Josias wolde not turne agayn upon hys charet, but undertoke to fyght agaynst him, and harkened not unto the worde of the prophet, which he tolde him out of the mouth of God, but pytched a battell agaynst him in ẏ feld of Mageddo. And the princes preassed to kynge Josias. Then sayde the kynge unto his Seruauntes: Carye me awaye out of the battell, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke hym awaie, out of the front of ẏ bat D tell. Then sate he up uppon the second charet, came to Jerusalem, dyed, & was buryed in his fathers sepulcre. And in al Jewry they mourned for Josias/ ye the rulers also with their wyues, made la-mentacion for him unto this daye: And this was done euer still in Israel.

These thynges are written in the boke of the stories of the kynges of Juda, namely, al the actes & workes of king Jo-sias, his kingly power and maiesty, hys understanding in the lawe of god, and what he dyd, yea thynges which are not wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Juda. And the people toke Je-chonias the sonne of Josias, and made him kynge in stede of Josias his father when he was xxiii. yeares olde. And he reigned ouer Israel iii. monethes. And the kynge of Egipte put hym downe, ẏ he shoulde not raygne in Jerusalē, and E raysed up a taxe of the people: namelye, an C. talentes of syluer and one talente of golde. The king of Egypt also, made Joakim hys brother kyng of Juda & Jerusalem. As for them of the kynges Councel, with the kynge him selfe, and Zaracles hys brother, he toke them, & caried them awaye presoners into Egipt.
Fyue and twentye yeare olde was Jeoachim, when he was made kynge in the lande of Juda and Jerusalem, and he dyd euel before the Lord. After this, Na-buchodonosor the kyng of Babilon cāe up, bounde hym wyth bandes of yron, & caryed hym unto Babilon.

Nabuchodonosor also toke all ẏ vessels that were halowed in the temple of the Lorde, and all the Jewels, and caryed them unto Babylon, and brought them into hys owne temple at Babylon. Of hys uncleanes and ungodlynes it ys written in the booke of the Actes of the kynges. And Joachim hys sonne rayg-ned in his stede: He was made kynge beinge. xviii. yeare olde, and raygned F but thre monethes and x. dayes in Jerusalem, and dyd euel before the Lorde.

So after a yeare, Nabuchodonosor sent and caused hym be brought unto Babylon, with the holy vessels of the lord and made Zedekiah his brother kyng of Juda and Jerusalem, when he was
xxi. yeare olde: and he reygned. xi. yeare.
And he did euell also in the syght of the Lord, and cared not for the wordes that were spoken unto hi by the prophet Jeremy at the mouthe of the Lorde. And wheare as he had made an othe unto kynge Nabuchodonosor, he mansworne hym selfe, and fell from hym, hauinge a stifnecke and a harte, and transgressed all the statutes and ordinaunces of the Lorde god of Israell. The rulers also and heades of the people of the Lorde, dyd muche euell, and became ungodly more then the Heathen, beinge defyled in all maner of abhominacions: Yea, & defyled the holy temple of the Lorde at Jerusalē. And the God of theyr fathers sent hys messangers unto them, to turne them backe, and to call them agayne from theyr synnes: for he wold fayne haue spared them for hys holy tabernacles sake: Neuertheles, they had hys Mes-saungers in derysyon: And looke, what god spake unto them by his prophetes, they made but a sporte of it. Thys drew on so longe, tyl the Lorde was wrothe with hys people for theyr ungodlynesse: & tyl he caused the kynges of the calders G to come up, which slewe theyr yong mē with the swerde, yea euen in the compasse of theyr holy temple, ād spared nobody, neyther yonge nor olde/ neyther mayde nor yong man: but they were al delyuered into the power, of the kinges of the caldees, and all the holy vessels of the Lorde and the kynges treasures toke they, and caryed them unto Babilon. As for fyre vpon her towres, destroyed all her noble buildinges, and brought them to naught: and the People that were not slayne wyth the swearde, they caryed vn to Babylon.

Thus became they prisoners and bondmen of the king of Babilon, tyll they were delyuered and Raygned for them selues, * when the wordes of the Lorde were fulfylled, whyche he promi sed them by the mouth of the prophete Jeremy, and tyll the lande had her rest: namelye, all the time that it laye waste had it rest and quyetnes .lxx vii. yeares.

¶ Cirus geueth lycence to the Jewes, to returne to Jerusalem, & restoreth them the vessels of the temple. After that are ther letters sent to Artaxerses, which accuse the Jewes for buylding of the Citie: and so is the buylding byd of, vntyll the .ii. yeare of Darius.

The .ii. Chapter.

A N* Ow when kynge Cirus raigned ouer the Persians, and when the Lord would perfourme the worde ye he had promysed by ye mouthe of the prophete Jeremy: the lord raysed vp the sprete of Cirus, the kyng of Per sians, so that he caused this writinge to be proclaymed therow oute his whole realme, saiynge: Thus sayeth the kynge of Persians: The lorde of Israell that hygh lorde hathe made me kynge of the Lande, and commaunded me to buylde hym an house at Jerusalem in Jewrye.
If there be any now of youre people, ye the lorde be wyth hym, and go vp wyth hym to Jerusalem. And all they that dwell roside aboute that place, shall hel pe them, whether it be wyth golde, w sil uer w giftes, w horses & necessary catel and all other thynges that are brought wyth a fre wyll to the house of the lord at Jerusalem.
Then the principall men oute of the B tribes and vyllages of Juda and Ben jamin stode vp: so dyd the prestes also ãd ye leuites (whome the Lorde had mo ued, to go vp, and to buyld the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, and they that were aboute them helped them wyth all maner of gold, and syluer, and catell al so and wyth many lyberall gyftes, and thys dyd many one, whose mynde was styrred vp therto. * Kynge Cirus also brought forth the vessels & ornamentes, that were halowed vnto the Lord (which Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Baby lon had caried awaye from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to hys idoll and ymage) and delyuered them to Mithri dates hys Treasurer. and by hym they were delyuered to Salmanasar, the de brtie in Jewry. And thys was the num bre of them: Two thousand, and .iiii. C. syluer boules. xxx. syluer basens. xxx. ba sens of golde. ii. M. and .iiii. C. vessels of syluer, and a thousande besyde. All the vessels of golde and syluer were. v.
M. viii. C. and .lx. These were numbred vnto Salmanasar, and them that were come agayne wythe hym to Jerusalem oute of the captyuitye of Babylon.* C Now in the tyme of kynge Artaxerses the king of Persia, these men: Balemus & Mithridatus, Sabellius Rathimus, Balthemus Semellius the scrybe and other that dwelt in Samarya and in o ther places vnder the dominion therof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerses, wherin they complayned vnto the king of them in Jewry and Jerusalem.
The letter was made after thys maner: Syr, thy seruauntes Rathimus, the story wryter, Sabellius the Scribe and other iudges of the courte in Celo syria and Phenyces. Be it knowen and manifest to our Lord the kyng, that the Jewes which are com vp from you vn to vs into the rebellyous and wycked cy tie, begynne to buylde it agayne, and ye walles about it, and to set vp the teple D of the new. Now yf thys cytye and ye walles therof be set vp againe, they shal not only refuse to geue trybutes & taxes, but also rebell vtterly against the king.
And forsomuch as they take this in hand now about the temple, we thought it reason, to think no scorne of it, but to shew it vnto our Lord the kyng, and to certyfy him therof: to the intent that if it please the kynge, he maye cause it to be sought in the bokes of olde: and ye shalt fynde suche warning wrytten, and shalt vnderstande, that the cytie hathe all waye bene rebellyous and disobedient, that it hath subdued kinges and cyties, and that the Jewes which dwel therin, haue

haue euer ben a rebellious, obstinat, vn faythfull, a fighting peple, for the which cause this cite is wasted. Wherfor now we certifye our Lorde the kynge, that if thys cite be builded, ād occupied again, and the walles therof set vp anewe, þ canst haue no passage into Celosyria ād Phenices.
Then wrote the kyng to Rathimus the story writer, to Balthemus, to Sa D bellius the scrybe, and to the other offi cers and dwellers in Siria & Phenices after this maner: I haue red the Epistle, which thou sentest vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligent searche/and haue founde that the cytie hath e uer resisted kynges, that the same peo ple are disobediente, and haue caused muche warre, and that myghty kinges haue raigned in Jerusalem, which also haue raysed vppe Tares of Siria and Phenices. Wherfore I haue commaū ded those people, that they shal not buil de the citie, that they make nomore in it, and that they procede no further wyth the buyldinge: for so muche as it myght be the cause of warre, and displesure vn to kynges.
Now when Rathymus and Sabel lius, the Scrybe, and the Rulers in the lande, had red the wrytinge of kyng Ar taxerses, they gat them together/and ca me in all the hast to Jerusalem, with an hooste of horsmen, and with much peo ple of fote, & forbad them to build. And so they lefte of from buyldinge of the tē ple, vnto the seconde yeare of kynge Da rius.

(Darius maketh a feast. The iii. sentences of the iii. young men, of which the fyrst is declared.)

The iii. Chapter.

a KYng Darius made a great feast vnto his Seruauntes, vnto all hys courte, ād to al the Officers of Medea and Persia, yea to al the debites and rulers that were vnder hym/from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred and xxvii. countreyes. So when they had ea ten and dronken being satisfyed, and we re gone home agayne. Darius the king wente into hys chamber, layed hym dou ne to slepe, and so awaked.
Then the thre younge men, that kepte the kynges person and watched hys bo dy, communed amonge them selues, and spake one to another: let euery one of vs saye sumthing, and loke whose sentence B is wyser and more excellent than the o ther/vnto hym shal king Darius geue greate giftes, and clothe him with pur ple. He shall geue hym vessels of goulde to drinke in, clothes of gold and coue rynges: he shal make him a costly charet and a bridle of golde, he shal geue hym a bonet of whit sylke, & a chayne of gold about his necke: yea he shalbe the secōd and principal nexte vnto kynge Da rius, & that because of his wysdome, and shalbe called, the kinges kynsman.
So euery one wrote his meanynge, sealed it, and layde it vnder the kynges pelowe, and sayde: when the kynge ary C seth, we wyl geue him our wrytinges: & loke whose wordes the kyng & his chefe lordes iudge to be the moste wysely spo ken, the same shal haue the victory. One wrote: Wyne is a strong thinge.
The seconde wrote: The kynge is stron ger. The thyrde wrote: Wemen haue yet more strength, but aboue al thinges the treuth beareth awaye the victory.
Now when the king was rysen vp, they toke theyr wrytynges and delyuered thē vnto him, and so he red them. Then sent he forth to cal al his chefe lordes, all þ debytes and chefe rulers of the contrees of Medea and Persia. And when they were set downe in the councell, the wry tinges were red before them. And he cō maunded, to cal for the yonge men, that they myght declare their meninges thē selues by mouth. So whē they were sēt for, and came in: the kynge sayde vnto them: shewe vs and make vs to vnder stande, what the thiges are that ye haue written.
Thē be ganne the fyrst (which had spoken of the strength of wyne) & sayde: O ye men, wyne is marueilous stronge, and ouercommeth them that drynke it: it dysceaueth the mynde, and bryngeth bothe the poore manne and the kynge to dotage and vanitie.
Thus dothe yt also with the bonde man and wyth the free, wyth the poore and D ryche: It taketh awaye their vnder standynge, and maketh theym carelesse and merye/so that none of them remem breth any heuynesse, dett or dewtye: It causeth a man to thyncke also that the thinge which he doth, is honest & good: and remembreth not that he is a kyng, nor that he is in auctorytie, and that he ought not to do suche thynges. More-ouer, when men are drynkyng they forget al frendshyppe all brotherly fayth-fulnes and loue: but as soone as theye are dronken, they drawe out the swerde and wyl fyght: and when they are laid downe from the wyne, and so rysen vp agayne, they can not tel, what they dyd: iudg ye now, is not wyne the strongest?

For who wolde els take in hande to do suche thynges? And when he had spoken this, he helde his tonge.

The declaration of yͤ .iii. last sentences of yonge men, propounded in the Chapter before, of which the last, that is, that veryte beareth yͤ victory in al thinges, is most commended & alowed. Darius wryteth letters to al yͤ rulers vnder him, that they should ayde Zorobabel to the buildinge of Jerusalem.

The .iiii. Chapter.

A Then the seconde (which had sayde that the kynge was stronger) began to speake, sayinge: O ye men/are not they the strongest/and most excellent, that conquere the yͤ land and the sea, and al that is in the sea & i the earth? Now is the kyng lorde of all these thinges/and hath dominiõ of thẽ al: and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. If he sende hys men forth a warfare, they go, and breake downe hylles, walles and towres. They ar slayne and slaye (other men) thẽ selues, & ouerpasse not yͤ kynges word. If they get the vyc-tory, they bringe the kyng al the spoyle.
Like wise the other that medle not with warres and fyghting, but tyl the groũd: when they reape, they bringe tribute vn to the kyng. And yf the kyng alone do but commaunde to kyll, they kyll: yf he commaunde to forgeue, they forgeue: yf he cõmaũd to smyte, they smyte: if he bid dryue awaye they dryue awaye: if he cõ maunde to buylde, they buylde: yf he cõ maunde to breake downe, theye breake downe: yf he commaunde to plant, they plant. The commen people and the rulers are obedient vnto hym. And the kynge in the meane season sytteth hym downe, eateth, and drinketh, and taketh his rest then kepe they watch rounde aboute the kyng, and not one of them darre get hi out of the way, to do his owne busynes, but must be obedient vnto the kyng at a worde. Judge ye now, O ye men, howe should not he go farre aboue, vnto whõ men are thus obedient? And when he had spoken this, he helde hys tonge.
The third whose name was Zorobabel/ B which had spoken of wemẽ and of truth, beganne to saye after this maner: O ye men, it is not the greate kyng, it is not yͤ multitude of men, nether is it wyne that excelleth: Who is it then that hath the lordshippe ouer them? Haue not wemen borne the kynge, and all the people that rule those thynges? Haue not we-men borne theym, and broughte theym vp, that plante the vynes, whereout the wine commeth? They make garmen tes for al men, they geue honoure vnto al men, and wythoute wemen can not men lyue. If they gather golde and siluer and all precyous thynges, and se a fayre wel fauoured womã, they leaue all to gether, and turne their eyes only vnto the woman, and gape vpon her, and haue more desyre vnto her, then vnto yͤ syluer and golde, or any maner of precyous thynge. A man leaueth hys Father that brought hym vp, he leaueth his o-wne naturall countree, and cleaueth vnto the woman: yea he ieopardeth hys lyfe wyth the woman, and remembreth nether father, nor mother, nor countree.
By thys then ye must nedes know, that women haue the dominion ouer you.
Doth it greue you? A man taketh hys swearde/and goethe hys weye too C steale, to kyll to murther, to saile vppon the sea, and seith a lyon, and goth in the darcknes: and when he hath stollen, disceaued and robbed, he bringeth it vnto hys loue. Agayne, man loueth hys wyfe better, then father and mother: yea ma ny one ther be, that runne out of theyr wyttes and become bondmen for theyr wyues sakes: many one also haue perished, and haue bene slayne, and haue si-ned because of women.
And now beleue me, I know a kig/which is great in hys power, and all lan des stand in awe of hym, and no man da re laye hande vpon hym: yet dyd I se, that Apame (the daughter of the great kyng Bartacus) ye kynges concubine sat besyd the kyng, vpon the ryght hā de, and toke of his crowne frō his head and set it vpon her owne head, & smote the kynge with her lefte hande. More D ouer, the king loked vpō her with open mouth: yf she laughed vpō him, he lau ghed also: but yf she toke any dyspleа sure wt hi, ye king was faine to flatter her, and to geue her good wordes tyl he had gotten her fauoure agayne.

O ye men, are not wemen then stronger?
Greate is the earth / ād hye is the heauē that do these thinges. Then the kyng & the Princes loked one vpō another. So he began to speake of the truth: O ye men / are not wemen strongar? Greate is the earth, hye is the heauen, swyft is the course of the sounde, he compasseth the heauen rounde aboute, and fetcheth his course agayn to his own place in ōe daye. Is he not excellent that doth this Ye great is the truth and stronger thē all thinges. All the earth calleth vpon the truth, ye heauen prayseth it, al wor kes shake and tremble at it, and with it is no vnrighteous thing. Wyne is vn righteous: the kyng is vnrighteous women are vnrighteous: al the childrē of men are vnrighteous, ye al their wor kes are vnrighteous, & ther is no truth in them, in there vnrighteousnes also shal they be destroied and perish. As for truth, it endureth and is al waye strōg: it lyueth and conquereth for euermore E worlde without ende.
The truth accepteth no parsonnes, it putteth no difference betwixte riche or poore betwexte the myghtye or simple but doth right vnto euery man whether they be euel or good and all men are so uyngly dealt wt al in the workes of it.
In the iudgement of it there is no vn-righteous thing, but strength kyngdō and power & maiesty for euermor. Bles sed be the God of truth.
And wt that he helde his tonge and all the people cried and sayde: Great is the truth, & aboue al. Then sayde the king vnto him: Aske what thou wylt more then is appoynted in the wrytyng and I shall geue it thee, for thou arte found wyser then thy companyons:

ye shalt sit next me and be my kinsman.
Then sayde he vnto the kynge: Remem bre thy promyse and vowe, whyche thou haste vowed and promysed (in the daye when thou camest to the kyngdome) to builde vp Jerusalem, and to sende agai F ne al the vessels and Jewels, that were taken awaye out of Jerusalem: whyche Cyrus separated, when he offered in Ba bylon, and would send thē agayne. And thy mynde was to buyld vp the temple / whych the Edomites brent, when Jeru salem was destroyed by the Calders.
Thys onely, O kyng / is the thynge that I require, thys is the maiestie, whych I desyre and aske of thee: that thou perfor me the vowe, which thou wyth thyne o-wne mouth hast made vnto the kyng of heauen.
Then Darius the king stode vp, ād kyssed hym, and wrote a letter vnto all the Debytes and Shreues, to all the lordes and Nobles, that they shoulde conueye hym forth, and all them that would go vp wyth hym. He wrote a letter also vn to al the Shreues that were in Celosiria and Phenices, and vnto Lybanus, that they shoulde drawe Ceder trees from lybanus vnto Jerusalem, to buylde the citye wyth all. Moreouer he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone out of his realme into Jewry, because of the fredom ye no offycer, nor ruler, nor shreue, shulde come to theyr dores: and that all their lā-de whych they had conquered, should be free and not tributary: And that the Edomytes shoulde geue ouer the cytyes and vyllages of the Jewes, whyche they had taken in: yea and that they shoulde yearely geue. xx. talentes to the buylding of the temple vntill the tyme that it we- G re fynisshed: and to the daylye halowinge of the brent offeryngꝭ (as it is comaun-ded) ten talēts yearely also: And that all they whych com from Babylon to build the Cytie, shoulde haue free Lybertye, they and theyre Chylderen, and all the Preastes:
He wrote the greatnesse also and commaunded that the holye Garmentes shoulde be geuen them, wherin they mi-nistred: and wrote that commaundemen tes shoulde be geuen to the Leuites, vn tyl the daye, that þ house were fynisshed and Jerusalem buylded vp: and cōmaūded that al they þ watched þ cyte, shold haue their porcyons and wages.

He gaue out also all the vessels that Cyrus had separated from Babylon: & all þ Cyrus had geuen in cōmaūdement, the same charged he also, that it shulde be done and sent vnto Jerusalem. Now when this yonge man was gone forth he turned his face toward Jerusalem, and praysed the kyng of heauen, & sayd Of thee commeth the victorye, Of thee commeth wysdom and clearenesse and I am thy seruaunt. Blessed art thou which hast geuen me wysdome: the wyll I prayse, O Lorde, thou God of oure fathers.

And so he toke the letters/and wente vnto Babylon: And when he came ther he tolde this vnto hys bretheren that were at Babylon, and they praysed the god of ther fathers, that he had geuē the refresshing & lyberti to go vp, & to build Jerusalem and the temple (whiche ys there called after the name of þ Lord) and they reioysed with instrumētes ād gladnesse seuen dayes longe.

¶ They þ returne to Jerusalē are nombred. They begyn to lay þ foundacion of þ tēple, but are let by meanes of enemyes & so is þ buylding stayed by þ space of two yeare.

a After this were the principal men of al the vyllages chosen in the trybes and kynredes, that they shuld go vp with their wyues & childrē with their seruauntes & maydens with al their catel and substaunce. And Darius the kyng sent wt them a thousāde horsmen, to conueye them safely vnto Jerusalem: and their brethē were glad, playeng vpon instrumentes & singing

And these are the names of the men, whiche wente vp out of the villages, accordyng to the trybes. Of the Prestes þ sonne of Phinehes, þ sōne of Aaron: Jesus the sonne of Josedec Joachim the sonne of zorobabel þ sonne of Salathiel (of the kynred of Dauid, out of þ kinred of Phares, of the trybe of Juda) which spake wonderful thinges vnder Darius the kyng of Parsia/in þ secōd yeare of his rayne in þ fyrst moneth of Nisan.

These also are they of Jewry, which came vp/and turned agayne vnto Jerusalem, oute of the captyuyte that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylō had brought vnto Babylon. And euery man sought hys porcion agayne in Jewry, his cite, they that came wyth zorobabell, and with Jesus, Nehemias Sarasias, Raelaias, Elenëus, Enmanius, Mardocheus, Beelserus, Mechpsa, Rochor, Olîorus, Emonias/one of theyre princes.

Their heades also and the rulers in the trybes, when they came to Jerusalem and wolde buylde and set vp the temple of God agayne in his place, they gaue (after their abilitye, vnto the temple, to the treasure and to the seruyce of the Sanctuary.xii.M poundes of golde, v M of syluer, and an.C. Prestes garmentes. And so dwelt the Prestes and the Leuites, and the peple that went out to Jerusalem, and in the countre ther about the syngers also and the porters, euery one of Israel in his owne lande.

i.Esd.iii.a So when the seuenth moneth came, and when the chyldren of Israel were euery man at his busynes, theye came all w one consent in to the court, which was before the East dore. And ther stod Jesua the sonne of Josedeck and his brethren the Prestes, and Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and his brethrē, settyng vp an aulter, to offre brent sacrifices vpon it, as it is wrytten in the law of Moyses.

There came people also of other countrees, and the Heathen oute of all landes to set vp the aulter in his place, ād offred sacrifices and brent offringes vnto the Lorde in the mornynge. And so they helde the feaste of tabernacles, as it is commaunded in the lawe. And dayely offred they as accordyng was, and made the sacryfyces appoynted the offrynges also of the Sabbathes and of the new Mones, and all holy feastes. And all they that vowed offringes vnto the Lord, beganne at the new Mone of the .vii. moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the Lord was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto y masons
F and Carpenters, moneye, meate, and drynke with chearfulnesse. Vnto them of Sidon also and Tyre, they gaue carres, that they shulde carry Cedre trees from Libanus to briades and beames, and that they shoulde make shyppes in the hauen of Joppe accordyng as it was appoynted and ordeyned by Cirus kynge of the Persians.

And in the seconde yeare they came into the temple of God at Jerusalem. In the seconde moneth beganne Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, ād Jesua the sonne of Josedec & their brethren the Prestes & Leuites, ād al they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of the captyuite of Babilon, and layed the fondacyōs of the temple in the newe moone of the second moneth in the second yeare that they were come into Jewry and Jerusalem. And they appoynted the Leuites (y were aboue .xx. yere old) vnto the seruyce of the Lorde: so Jesua and his sonnes and his brethren & also Leuites stode to gether and perfourmed the law & ordinaunce in the house of the Lorde. And the Prestes stode, and had their garmentes and Trompettes and the Leuytes/the sonnes of Asaph had Cimbales, geuyng thankes and prayses vnto the Lord, accordynge as Dauyd the kynge of Israel had ordeyned. And the songe that they dyd synge vnto the Lorde/was after this maner: O sing vnto the Lord for he is gracyous, and hys goodnes vpon Israel endureth for euer. And al the people blowe out wyth trompettes, and songe with loud voice, prayseyng the lorde together in the rearyng vp of the house of the lorde.
G There came also from amongst the prestes and leuytes the rulers and elders, accordyng to the trybes and kynredes (suche as had sene the house afore) to y buylding of the temple with greate crie and greate mournyng, many also wyth trompettes and great ioye: Inso much, that the trōpettes might not wel be herd for the wepyng and mournyng. For the commen people blow goodly vpon the trompettes.

*Then came the enemyes of the trybes of Juda and Ben Jamyn, to know what that trompetyng & noyse of shawmes myght be. And they perceaued, that it was they whych were come agayn oute of captiuitee/ and woulde buylde the temple vp anew vnto the Lorde god of Israell. So they wente to Zorobabell and Jesua, and to the rulers of the vyllages, and sayde vnto them: Shall we buylde wyth you also? For we lykewyse haue hearde youre Lorde, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Asbazareth the kynge of Assiria which brought vs hether. Then Zorobabell & Jesua & y rulers of the vylages of Israell sayde vnto them: It is not mete/that ye shoulde buylde the temple of our god wyth vs: we oure selues alone wyll bulde vnto the LORD/lyke as Cirus the kynge of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

But the heathen in the lande layed themselues agaynste those that were in Jewry/helde vp the Buyldinge from them, laied wayte vppon them preuylye stopped suche as broughte anye thynge to them forbodde them to buylde, and hindred those that made them passage y the buyldyng shoulde not be fynysshed: and thys contynued so longe as kyng Cirus lyued: and so they put of the buyldinge for the space of .ii. yeares, untyl the ray gne of kyng Darius.

Aggeus and zachery prophecy. They build the temp is without let or hyndraunce, by the commaundement of Dauid.

A Not wyth standynge in the seconde yeare of the raigne of Darius, Aggeus and za charye the sonne of Addo prophecyed upon the Je wes and Jerusalem, in the name of the god of Israell. Then zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and Jesua the sonne of Jose dec, stode up/and begane to buylde the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, whe the Prophets of the Lord helped them.
At the same tyme came Sysennes the under Shreaue in Syrya and Phenyces, with the land lordes and hys companyens, and sayde unto them: Who hathe byd[d]en and commaunded you to buylde the house, to make the rofe, and al other thynges agayne? And who are the workemen, that buylde them? Ne uertheles the elders of the Jewes had suche grace of the lorde, that they wold not be let (though they were prouoked therto) but buylded on styll, untyll the tyme that kyng Darius were certyfied thereof, and an answere receaued from hym. The letter that these men sente unto kyng Daryus, was after thys maner.

Sysennes the under Shreaue in Syria and Phenyces/and the landlor des wyth their companyons, whych are head rulers in Syrya and Phenyces, sende their salutacyon unto Darius the kyng. We certyfye oure Lorde the kynge, that we came into the lande of Jewry, and wente to Jerusalem: wh ere we founde them buyldyng the great house of God and the temple, wyth greate costly free stone and wyth goodly tymbre for the walles: yea they make greate haste wyth the worke, and helpe one another, and it goeth forth prosperously in their handes, and with greate dylygence and worship is it made.
Then asked we the elders/who had com- B maunded them to make up the House and the buylding, and thys we dyd to the intent that we myghte certifye thee perfectlye, and wryte unto thee/the names of those that were the rulers of the wor ke. So they gaue us thys answere: we are the seruauntes of the Lorde, whyche made heauen and earth: and as for thys house, it hath bene buylded and set up a fore tyme by the greate and Myghtye kyng of Israel. But when our fathers prouoked God unto wrathe, and sinned agaynste the God of Israel, he gaue the ouer into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, the kynge of the Chaldees, whyche brake downe the hou se, and brent it, and caryed away the people prisoners unto Babylon.
*Neuertheles, in the fyrste yeare * 1 Esd. v. a that kyng Cyrus raygned at Babylon, Cyrus the kynge wrote and commaunded to buyld up thys house agayne: and all the ornamentes that Nabuchodono sor caryed awaye from Jerusalem unto Babylon, and appropriated untoo hys owne temple: these brought Cirus forth agayne/and delyuered them to zorobabel, and to Salmanasar the under shre ue, commaundinge them that they shuld de bryng those same ornamentes agayn, to Jerusalem into the temple, and to begyn ne from the tyme forth, to buylde the tem ple agayne in hys owne place. Then Salmanasar layed the foundacion of the Lordes house at Jerusalem, and euer C sence haue they buylded, and yet it is not ended. And therfore/O kyng, if thou thinkest it good, let it be sought in the lybra ryes and rolles of kynge Cyrus: yf it be founde then, that it is don wyth the cou sell and consente of kyng Cyrus, and yf our Lorde the kynge be so mynded, lette hym wryte unto us therof.
*Then commaunded kyng Darius, * 1 Esd. vi. a to seke in the Lybraries: and so at Eg- * ii Esd. ... bathanis, in a lytle cytie in Media there was founde suche a wrytinge: In the fyrst yeare of the raygne of Cirus the sa me kinge Cyrus commaunded that the house of the Lord at Jerusalem shold be buylded agayn, and odoures to be made there

there continually vnto the Lord) whose heyght shalbe .x. cubites, ãd the bredthe .xl. cubites and .iiii. square with thre hewen stones, wyth a lofte of tymber of the same cuntre, yea with a new lofte, and yͤ expences therof to be geuẽ of the house of kyng Cyrus. And the ornamentes of gold and sylver, that Nabuchodonoser toke out of the house of the lorde at Jerusalem, shallbe sett agayne in the temple at Jerusalem, whe͂ they were afore. Sysennes also the vndertreasurer i Syria and Phenyces, the Phenyces and their companions, and the other that be hed rulers in Syria and Phenices, shal not medle nor haue any thing to do wͭ that place.

G I Cyrus have commaunded also/ that they shall buylde the house of the LORDE whole vppe, and haue ordeyned them, to helpe these that be come oute of captiuyte: till the house of the Lorde be finished: and out of the tribute and taxing that is yearly raysed vp in Syria and Phenyces/ dylygentlye to geue them a certayne summe to the offeryng of the Lorde: and the same to be delyuered vnto Zorobabell the offycer: that he therwythal maye ordeyne oxen, rammes, lambes and corne, salt, wyne & oyle/ and that continually euery yeare: after the expences which the prestes that be at Jerusalem, shewe to be made dayly, thys shalbe geuen vnto them wythout delaye that they may offre sacrifices dayly to the hyest God for the kyng and for hys seruauntes/ and to praye for their lyues.

Lett it be proclaymed also on euery syde, that whosoeuer breketh or dispiseth this commaundement of the kynge, shalbe hanged vpon a galou (made of hys owne good) and all hys goodes shalbe sesened vnto the kyng. The Lorde therfore (whose name is there called vppon) rote out and destroy all the kynges and people that vndertake by violence too hynder the same, or to deale vncurteously wyth the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. I Darius the kynge haue ordeyned, that these thynges shalbe don with all dilygence.

¶ The temple is finished, and dedicat: and the feast of vnleuened breed is holden.

The .vii. Chapter.

Then Sysennes the vndertreasure Celosiria, Phenices/ and the other Land lordes wͭ their compaynons, obeied the thinges that kyng Darius had ordened, were dilygent in the holy worckes, ãd were felowhelpers wͭ the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so yͤ worcke of the Sanctuary went forth & prospered/ whe͂ Aggeus & zachary prophecyed. And they perfourmed al thinges thorow the commaundement of the Lorde God of Israel, ãd after yͤ deuise of Cyrus, Darius, ãd Artaxerses kynges of Persia. A

And thus was oure house fynyshed vnto the .xxiii. daye of yͤ moneth Adder in the .vi. yeare of kynge Darius. And the chyldren of Israel the Prestes and yͤ Leuites and the other that were come out of captiuite, and soch as wer ioyned vnto them/ dyd accordyng as it is written in the boke of Moses. And in yͤ dedycacyon of the temple they offred, an hundred oxen, an hundred rammes .iiii. hundred lambes, and .xii. getes for the synne of al the people of Israel, after yͤ nomber of yͤ trybes of Israel. The Prestes also and the Leuites stod arayed in theyr presly garmentes/ after yͤ trybes, ouer al the workes of yͤ Lord God of Israel accordyng to the boke of Moses, and yͤ porters by all the dores. B

And the chyldren of Israel (wͭ those yͤ were come out of captyuyte) helde their passeouer the .xiiii. day of the fyrst moneth when the prestes and the Leuites were sanctified. They that cam out of captyuite, were not al sanctified together: but the Leuites were al sanctyfied together. And so al they that came out of captiuite, kylled the easter lambe, for their brethren, for the prestes and for the selues. And the chyldren of Israel that came out of capituit, & escaped from al yͤ abhominacions of the Heathen, sought the Lord, & kept the feast of vnleuened bred .vii. dayes longe, eatyng & drinckyng ãd were mery befor the Lorde that yͤ Lord had turned the deuyce of the kynge of Assyria, ãd comforted their handes to yͤ worckes of the Lorde God of Israel.

Esdras causeth the people to assemble com toge ther, & the redeth them the lawe. They kepe ÿ feast of Tabernacles.

AND after him, when Artaxerses the kynge of the Persians
A raigned, there wēt vnto him Esdras the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonnes of Helchiah, the sonne Sallum/the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Bocsus, the sonne of Abisu, the sonne of Phinees, the sonne of Eleaziar, the sonne of Aron the fyrst prest. This Esdras went vp from Babylon (for he had good vnderstanding in the lawe of Moses, that was geuen of the lord god of Israel, to be taught and done in dede.) And the kynge fauoured hym, & dyd hym great worship and honoure, after al hys desyres. There went vp with him also certayne of the chyldren of Israell, of ÿ Prestes, of the Leuites, of the syngers, porters and mynysters of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the.vii.yeare of the raygne of kynge Artaxerses, in the.v.moneth, that is in the.vii. yeare of the raigne/they wente from Babylon in the new moone of the.v moneth, and came the fyve way to Jerusalem after this commaundemēt lyke as the Lord had prospered their iorney. For in these Esdras gat greate instructyon, that he shoulde leaue none of the thinges behynde, whiche are i the Lawe and commaundementes of God. And taught whole Israel al righteousnes and iudgment.

Then came the Secretaries of kig
B Artaxerses, and delyuered the wrytinges (that were come from Artaxerses the kyng) to Esdras the prest and reder of the lawe of the lorde: And thys is the copy of the letter. Kyng Artaxerses sendeth his gretynge vnto Esdras the prest and reder of the lawe of the Lord: Of frendshyp and good wyl I haue ordyned and charged/yf there be any of the Jewes/of the prestes and Leuytes in my realme, whiche desyreth & is content to go wyth thee vnto Jerusalem, ÿ he maye do it. Therfore if any be wiled to beare thee company, let them come together, and goo with the (lyke as I am contente and my.vii.fryndes my coūcelers:) to se what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewrye, and kepe the thinges acording as thou hast in the lawe of the lorde: and to bryng the gyftes vnto the lord of Israel, that I and my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem/and all ÿ sylver and golde that is in the countre of Babylon, vnto the Lord at Jerusalem, with the thinge that is geuen for ÿ People in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem: Yea that the same sylver & golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rammes, shepe and goates and other, that belōg to these thynges: and that they maye offer sacryfyces vnto the lorde, vpon the aulter of the lorde/whych is at Jerusalem.

And what soeuer thou and thy Brethren, wyll doo wythe the Sylver and Golde, that doo after thy Mynde, and after the Commaundemente of the Lorde thy GOD: and lykewyse withe all the holye vessels, that are geuen thee for the Seruice of the House of the Lorde/ thy GOD and other thynges, what soeuer is necessary for thee to the worke of the temple, that shalbe geuen thee of the kynges treasure: and looke what thou with thy Bretheren wylte doo wyth the Golde, and sylver, that do after the wyll of the Lorde.

And I kynge Artaxerses haue commaunded, the kepers of the Treasures in Syria and Phenices, that wheresoeuer Esdras the preast and reader of the lawe, of the Lorde doth wryte, it shalbe geuen hym, tyll an hundreth, Talentes of Sylver and of golde in lyke manere: Of corne also an hundreth measures, and tyl an hundred vessels of wyne ād other plenteous thinges without nomber.

Let al thinges be done after their lawe of the hyghest GOD, that the wrath of God aryse not in the realme of the kyng and of his sonnes

I cōmaunded you also, that ye require no taxe nor trybute of the prestes, Leuytes, singers, and ministers of the temple, nor of the wryters: and that no mā haue auctorytie to medle any thinge agaynste C them. As for thee (O Esdras) set thou iudges and arbytters in the whole land of Siria and Phenyces, after the wysdome of god: and learne al suche as are ignoraunt in the lawe of God thy Lord, and let al them that offende against the lawe be punished: whether it be wt deth, wt paine, to be condempned in mony, or to be banished.

1. Esdr. vii, b — Then sayde Esdras the wryter. * Blessed be the God of our fathers, that hath geuen so good a mynde and wyll, in to the herte of the kyng, to magnyfye his house that is at Jerusalem, a hath made me to be accepted in the syght of ye kynge / of his councel, of hys frendes & of his nobles. And so I was stedfast in my minde, according as the Lord my god helped me, and I chose out men of Isreael to go vp with me. * And these 1. Esdr. viii * are the heades (after their kynredes ād houses of their fathers) that went vp wt me from Babylon, out of the kyngdom of Artaxerses: Of the sonnes of Phares, Gersonius. Of the sonnes of Siemarith, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid, Accus / the sonne of Cecilia.

Of the sonnes of Phares, zachary: and with hym there turned agayne an. C. and fyftie men. Of the sonnes of the captayne of Moabilon, zaraei, & with him. ii. C and. l. men. Of the sonnes of zachues, Jechonias zecholy / and wt hym. ii. C. and l. men. Of the sonnes of Malamaasias, Gotholie, and. lxx. wyth hym Of the sonnes of zaphacia, zarias, Micheli and with hym. lxxx. Of the sonnes of Job / Abdias, Jehely, and wyth hym ii. C. and. xii. men. Of the sonnes of Bania, Salimoth the sonne of Josaphia, and with him an C. and lx men. Of the sonnes of Beer, zachary Bebi, and with hym. ii. C and viii men. Of the sonnes of Esead, Johannes Ezechan, and wyth hym. C. and x. men. Of the sonnes of Adonicam, those ye were the last, and these are their names: Eliphalam the sonne of Gebel, and Semeias, and wyth hym. lxx. men.

All these called I together by the water Thya, where we pytched oure tentes thre dayes and there I mustered them. D

As for the sonnes of the prestes and Leuites, I founde none there. Then sent I unto Eleazar, and Ecelom, & Mesman and Malobam / and Enathan, & Samea, and Joribimathan, Eunagā, zachary, Mosollamum (these were the leaders and men of experyence) and I sent them word that they shoulde come vnto Loddeus, which was by the place of the treasury, and commaunded them that they shoulde speake vnto Loddeus and to hys brethrē, and to those that were in the treasurye / to sende vs suche men / as might execute the prestes office in the house of the Lord our God. And with the myghty hand of our lord god, they brought vnto vs men of good experience, from among the sōnes of Mooly us / the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebebiam and ye sonnes & his brethrē Asbin and anin, of whom ther were xviii. From among ye chyldren of the sonnes of Cananus, and theyr sonnes, were xx. men.

And of them that serued in the Temple, whome Dauid had ordened, and the pricipall men that ministred for the work vnto the Leuites in the temple. ii. C. and xx. men whose names are all tokned vp in wrytinge.

Then commaunded I a fastinge vnto the young men before the Lorde, that I myght desyre of hi a prosperous iourneye and a good way for vs / yea for vs / for our children & for the catel, because of the layinges awayt, & I durst not require of ye king men of horse & of fote, to conuey vs safely agaynst our ennemyes, for we had sayd vnto the kyng, that the power of the Lorde oure god shoulde be wyth them that seke hym wyth theyr whoole herte.

And therfore we besought oure lorde earnestly because of these thynges, and he was mercyfull vnto vs, and he arde our prayer. And I separated from amonge the rulers of the People and from the Pryestes of the Temple twelue menne / and Sebeia, and Asania

and ten men of their brethren with them. And I weied them the gold and the sylver, and al the Prestly ornamentes of ye house of oure God, whyche the kyng & hys councel, and hys Prynces, and whole Israel had geuen.

And when I had weyed it, I gaue them an. C. & l. talentes in sylver, & .C. talētes of sylver vessel, an .C. talentes of golde, & of golden vessell seuen tymes twenty, and vessels of other metall (yee of good E metal) xii. glysteringe as the golde, and sayde unto them: ye also are holy unto ye Lorde, and the vessels are holy, and the golde and the sylver is promised unto ye Lord the god of our fathers. Be diligēt now, and kepe it, untill the tyme that ye delyver it to the rulers of the people, to the Prestes to the Levites, to the principal men of the cyties of Israel in Jerusalem, ād in the chamber of the house of oure God.

So the Prestes and the Levites which receaued of me the golde, the silver and the vessel, brought it to Jerusalē into ye temple of the Lord. And from Thia we brake up the .xii. daie of ye first moneth, till we came to Jerusalem. And when ye thyrdday was past, the weyed golde and sylver was delyuered in the house of ye lorde the fourth daye, unto Marimoth the sonne of Jor the Prest, ād whi was Elezar ye sōne of Phineas, & wt thē were Josabdus the sonne Jesued, Medias & the sonne Banus, and certayne of the Levites to the nomber ād to the wayght ād the wayght of them was written up ye same tyme. As for those that were com out of captyuitie, they offered sacrifyce unto the lord ye God of Israel: euen .xii. oxen for al Israel lxxxvi. rammes .lxxii shepe .xii. goates for synne .xii. kyne for a thankoffryng, al to the sacrifyce of the lorde. And the kynges commissyon delyuered they unto the stewardes and debytes of the kyng, and the undertresures in Celosyria and Phenices.

Now when these thinges were done, the rulers came unto me, ād said: The generacyon of Israel, the prynces ye Prestes and Levites, thee Straunge people and in dwellers of the land, haue not put awaye their uncleannesse, from ye Cananites, Hethites, Pheresites, frō the moabites, Egypcyans, and Edomytes. For bothe they & their sonnes haue myngled thē selues wt ye daughters of them, & the holy sede is myxte wyth the outlandish heathen, and sens the begynnynge of theyr raygne, haue the Rulers and heades bene partakers of theyr wickednesse.

* As soone as I hadd hearde these F thynges, immediatlye I rent my holye garmentes, and pulled out the heare of my head & my beard, & sate me downe sorowful & heuy. So al they ye wer moued thorow the worde of the God of Israel, came unto me: and I satte styll full of heauynesse untyll the euenynge Sacrifice. Then stode I up from fastinge, hauing rēt clothes and the holi garment kneled downe upon me knees, held out my handes unto the Lorde, and sayde: O Lorde, I am confounded and ashamed before thy face, for oure synnes are become many upon our heades, and our wickednesses are exalted untoo the heauen: for sens the tyme of our fathers we are in greate synne unto thys day. And for the synnes of us and our fathers, we with oure brethern and with oure prestes, haue bene delyuered unto the kynges of the earth, into the swearde, and into captiuitie, and became a spoyle wyth confusion and shame unto thys daye.

* i. Esdr. ix. a

And nowe, O Lorde God, howe greate is the mercy that we haue gotten of thee: in that thou hast left us a rote and a name in the place of thy sanctuari, to discouer oure lyght in the house of the Lorde oure God, and geuen us meate at all tymes of oure ministracion. And when we were in Captiuitee, we were not forsaken of the Lorde oure god: But he made the kynges of Persya gracious and fauorable unto us, soo that they gaue us vitayles and meat, yea and leaue to bulde up the temple of oure Lorde GOD agayne, to repayre the wasted places of Sion, and to dwel in Jewry and Jerusalem. And now, O lord, what shall we G saye/hauing all these thynges in possession? For we haue broken thy commaūdementes, whyche thou gauest unto us by the handes of thy seruauntes the prophetes, saiynge.

The land that ye go vnto, ād þ is geuen you for anheritage to haue in possessiō, is defyled with the vnclennes and filthines of the Heathen, and with their abhominaciō haue thei poluted it al together, Therfor shall yee not ione your daughters vnto theire sonnes, ner mary youre sonnes vnto ther daughters: Moreouer, ye shal neuer seke to make peace wt thē, that ye maye increase and eate the beste in the landes, and that ye maye deuyde the inherytaunce of the land vnto youre chyldren for euermore. As for the thige that now happeneth vnto vs, it cōmeth all for oure wicked workes and greate synnes, yet haste thou geuen vs suche a rote, þ we are com agayn into our owne lande, and we ar so wicked that we haue broken thy statutes and cōmaundementes agayne, ād mengled oure selues wt the vnclennes of the outlandish hethen. O Lord, art þ angry wt vs, wylt þ rote vs cleane out, that oure rote and name remayne nomore? O Lord God of Israel thou art true, for our rote endureth yet vnto this present daye. And behold, now are we before þ in our synnes, now can we not stand before the in them.

*1.Esd.ix.a * And when Esdras wt this prayer had knowledged the synne, weping, & lyēge flat vpon the ground before the temple, ther gathered vnto hym from Ierusalē a great multitud of men, and wemen, of yonge men and maydens, for ther was a very great weping and mournyng in þ congregacyon. So when Iechonias þ sonne of Iehely on of the children of Israel cryed, he sayd vnto Esdras: we haue synned agaynst the Lord, because we haue maried outlandish wemen of þ Heathen. Now art þ ouer al Israel. We wil sweare an othe therfore vnto the Lord, þ we shal put awaye al oure wyues, whiche we haue taken of the Heathen, with ther children: lyke as it is appointed þ by oure fore elders. Stande vp then, open thou it, and declare it playnely vnto vs (according to the lawe of the lorde: for þ mater belongeth vnto the, & we wyl help the, quyet thi selfe manly. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers of þ Prestes/and of the Leuytes; and of Israell, to do after these thynges: and thei sware.

¶ After Esdras had read the lawe, þ people put away theyr straunge wyues: & the returneth euery man merely vnto his owne dwellyng.

The. ix. Chapter.

Then Esdras stod vp from þ A courte of the temple wout, *1.Es. and wente into the chambre of Ionathas the Sonne of Nasabus, & remained there & ate no meate nor dranke no drinke, for the multitud of the wyckednes of þ people. And there was made a proclamacyon in al Iewry and at Ierusalem, for all suche as were gathered at Ierusalem oute of captiuite, that whosoeuer came not to Ierusalem wythin two or iii. dayes according to the iudgement of the olde Lordes of councell) his goodes shoulde be taken from him, and be excluded from the congregacyon of the captyuyte. And in thre dayes were all they of the trybe of Iuda and Ben Iamin gathered together at Ierusalem, þ xx. daye of the .ix moneth. And the whole multitude sat trymblynge in the courte of the temple, for it was wynter.

So Esdras arose vp, and sayde vnto them: ye haue don vnrighteosly in, that ye haue taken outlandish wyues to mariage, and so to increace the synnes of Israell. And now knowlegde the same, & geue prayse vnto the Lorde God of our fathers, and perfourme hys wyll, departing from the Heathen of the lande, and from the outlandish wyues. Then cried B the whole multitude with loude voyce and sayde: lyke as thou hast spoken, soo wyll we do: but for so muche as the people are manye, and the wynter here, we maye not stande withoute the house: agayne, this worcke is not a thyng, that can be fynished in a day or twoo, for we be many that haue synned in these thinges: Ordeyne therfore, þ þ rulers of the multitude, and all they that dwell wyth vs, ād as many as haue outlandish wyues, the Prestes also and iudges of euery place may stande in the tyme appointed, tyl they lowse vp þ wrath of þ lord in hys busines.

Then Ionathas the sonne of Ezeli, and Ozias and Thecam receaued the charg of this mater Bozoramus, Leius, & Sabatheus help the therto. After this al they stod vp that were com out of cap tyuite. And Esdras the Prest chose vn to him the principall men from amonge the fathers accordyng to their names, & in ÿ newe mone of the tenthe moneth they satt together, to examen this mat= ter. And so the matter was a determyng (concernyng the menne that had outlan dish wyues) vntill the new mone of the C fyrst moneth. And of the Prestes that had myxte them selues wt outlandysh wyues, there were founde: Of ÿ sõnes of Jesu the sonne of Josedec ãd his bre= thren Mazeas, Eleazar, Joribus and Joadeus, which offred them selues to put awaye theire wyues, and to offre a ramme for ther ignoraunce. And of the sõnes of Semmeri Massias, & Esses & Jeelech Azarias. Of the sonnes of Fo sera, Limosias Hismaen/ Mathanea, Jussio, Jeddus, & Talsas. And of ÿ Le uites Josabdus, Semeis, & Colnis/

All these hadd taken oute landyshe women to mariage, and they put them a waye with theyr chylderen. The prestes E and leuites, and al they that were of Js= raell dwelt at Jerusalem & thorowout all the lande, in the new moone of the se uenth moneth/ and the chylderen of Jsra el were in theyr dwellyngs. And the who le multitude came together vpon the flo wer at the easte syde of the holy porte of the temple, and they spake vnto Esdras the hye preast and reader, that he wolde brynge the lawe of Moyses whych was geuen of the Lorde God of Israell. So Esdras the hye pryest brought the lawe vnto the whole multitud, to man and wo man, and to all Prestes, that they myght heare the lawe, in the new mone of the xii. Esdr. iiii.a / ii. Esdr. viii.a vii. monethe. And he red in the flore that is before the holy porte of the temple, frõ the mornyng earlye vnto the euenynge, before men and women. And they apply ed theyr mynd all vnto the lawe.
And Esdras the pryeste and reader F of the lawe stoode vp vpon a scaffolde of wodde, whych was made therfore: and vpon hys right hande there stode by him Mathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azari as, Urias, Ozechyas, and Balsamus: Upon hys left hande stode Faldeus Mi sael, Malachias/ Abuschas, Sabus Na badias and zachary. Then toke Esdras the boke before the whole multitude: for he was the principal and had moste ho= nour of them all. And when he had red oute the lawe, they stode all streyght vp pon theyr feate. So Esdras praysed the Lorde the moost hye God, the almyghty God of hoostes. And al the people answe red: Amen: and helde vp theyr handes, fell downe flat vpon the earth/ and pray sed the Lorde. And Jesus, Beneas, Sa rebias, Jaddinus/ Acubus, Sabbathe us, Catythes, Azarias, Jozabdus, Ana= nias, and Philias the Leuites lyft their handes vpward, and bowed theyr faces to the grounde and praysed the Lorde: Those were they which taught the law of the Lord, ãd red the lawe of the lord in the congregacion: and euery man set those before that vnderstode the lawe.
Then spake Athacates vnto Esdras G the hie prest & reader, and to the Leuites that taught the multitud, saying: This daye is holy vnto the Lorde: and all they that had hearde the lawe, wept. So Esdras sayde: Departe youre waye then, and eate the best / and drincke the swetest / and sende gyftes vnto them that haue nothing: for thys day is holy vnto the Lorde, and be not ye sorye: Then wente they theyr waye euery chone, ate and droncke, and were merye, and sente rewardes vnto them that had nothinge that they also myght eate wyth gladnesse: for they were exceadingly reioysed thorow the wordes that were red vnto them in the lawe: And so they were all gathered together at Jerusalem to holde the feaste, accordinge to the couenaunte of the Lorde God of Israell.

The .iiii. boke of Esdras.

The people is reproued for theyr vnthanckfulnes, God wyll fynde another people if these wyll not be reformed.

The fyrst Chapter.

The seconde boke of y prophete Esdras ( the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchia, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoc, y sonne of Achitob the sonne of Amerias, y sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Maraioth, the sonne of Zaraias the sonne of Ozi the sonne of Bocius, the sonne of Abisu, the sonne of Phinees, the sonne of Eleazar the sonne of Aaron, of the trybe of Leuy) which was presoner in the lande of Medes, in the raygne of Artaxerxes kynge of Persia.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: go thy way, and shew my people theyr synnfull dedes, and their wyckednesses, which they haue done agaynst me, that they may tel their chyldren the same: for the synnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why? they haue forgotten me and haue offered vnto straunge goddes. Am not I euen he that brought them out of the lande of Egypte, from the house of bondage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath and despysed my councels. Pull thou out then y heare of thy heade, & cast al euel ouer them / for they haue not bene obedient vnto my lawe.

It is a people without lernyng and nourtour. How long shal I forbere them vnto whom I haue don so moch good? * Many kinges haue I destroyed for their sakes: * Pharao with his seruauntes and al his power haue I smyten downe & slayne: Al the nacions haue I destroyed and roted out before them, & in the east haue I brought two landes & people to naught, euen Tyre and Sidon and haue slayne al their enemyes. Speake y therfore vnto them, saying: Thus sayeth the Lord: * I led you thorow the sea, and haue geuen you sure stretes sence the begynnyng. * I gaue you Moses to be youre captaine, and Aaron to be y prest: I gaue you lyght in a pyller of fyre and great wonders haue I done amōg you: yet haue ye forgotten me / sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the almighty Lorde: * I gaue you quayles to eate and tentes for your succoure: Neuerthelesse ye murmured / and ascrybed not the victori of youre enemies vnto my name: yee this same daye do ye yet murmure.

Where are the benefites, that I haue done for you? Where ye were hongrye in y wyldernes, dyd ye not cry vnto me? Why hast y brought vs into this wyldernes to kyl vs? It had ben better for vs, to haue serued the Egipcians, then to dye in this wildernes. B Then had I pytye vpon youre mournynges, and gaue you Manna to eate. * ye ate āgels foode. When ye were thyrstye did not I hew y hard ston / and caused water to flowe therout? For the heate I couered you with the leaues of the trees: A good pleasaunt fat land gaue I you: I cast out the Cananites, the Pherezites and Philistines before you.

What

What shal I do moare for you, sayeth
the Lorde.
Thus sayth the Almyghty Lorde: when ye were in the wyldernes, in the water of the Amorites, beyng a thyrsty, and blasphemyng my name, I gaue you not fyre for your blaspemyes, but cast a tree into the water, and made the ryuer swete. What shal I do unto thee O Ja cob. Thou Juda woldest not obey me.
I wyl turne me to another people/ and unto those wyl I geue my name, ye they may kepe my statutes. Seyng ye haue forsaken me, I wyl forsake you also. when ye desyre me to be gracious unto you, I shal haue no mercy upon you.* when ye call upon me, I wyl not here you. For ye haue defyled youre handes wt bloud/ and youre fete are swift to com myt mansaughter. Ye haue not forsaké me (in a maner) but your own selues, sai eth the lorde.
Thus sayeth the almyghty Lord:
haue I not prayed you, as a father hys sónes, as a mother her daughters, & as a nursse her yong babes, that ye wolde be my peple, and I shuld be your god: ye ye wold be my childré, & I shuld be your owne father.* I gathered you togyther as an henne gathereth her chekens under her wynges. But now what shall I D do unto you. I shal cast you out fro my face.* When ye offer unto me I shal turne my face from you: for your solempne feast dayes, youre new moones, ãd youre circumsisions haue I forsaken. I sent unto you my seruauntes the Prophetes/ whome ye haue taken and slai, and torne their bodyes in peces, whose bloude I wyl require of youre handes sayeth the lord.
Thus sayeth the Almighty Lord: youre house must be desolate. I wyl cast you out as the wynde doth the strawe: your childré shal not be frutful, for they haue despysed my commaundement, ãd done the thing that is euel before me.
Youre houses wyll I geue unto a peo ple that shal come, and they that neuer heard me shal beleue in me: And they unto whome I neuer shewed token, shal do the thynge that I commaund them.
They haue sene no Prophetes, yet shal they cal their synns to remembraunce, and knowledge them.
I reporte me unto the grace, that I wil do for the people which is to come/ who se chylderen reioyce in gladnes: and tho ugh they haue not sene me with bodyly eyes, yet in spirit they beleue the thyng that I saye. And nowe brother, beholde what greate worshyppe, and se the people that commethe from the Easte unto whome I wyll geue the dukedome of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, of Oseas Amos and Micheas, of Joel, Abdi, Jo nas Naum and Abacuc, of Sophony, Aggeus, zachary and Malachy (whych is called also an angell or messenger of the Lorde.)

Thus sayethe the Lorde: I brought thys people oute of bondage, I gaue them my commaundementes by my seruauntes the Prophetes, whome thou woldest not heare, but despysed my councels. The mother that ba re them, sayth unto them: Go youre waie ye chylderen, for I am a wyddow and forsaken: I broughht you up with glad nes, but with sorow and heuynes haue I lost you: for ye haue synned before the Lorde youre God, and done the thynge that is euel before hym. But what shall I nowe do unto you. I am a wyddow and forsaken: goo youre waye, O my chylderen, and aske mercye of the Lord.
As for me, O Father, I call upon thee for a wytnesse ouer the Mother of these chylderen, which wolde not kepe my co-uenaunte: that thou brynge them to cõ fusion, and theyr mother to a spoyle, ye she beare no more. Let theyr names be scattered abroade amonge the Heathen, lete them be putt oute of the Earthe, for they haue thoughte scorne of my Coue-naunt.
Wo be unto thee Assur, thou that hydest the unrighteuous by thee. Thou wycked people, remembre what I dyd unto Sodome and Gomorre/ whose land is turned to pytch and asshes: Euen soo also also wyll I do vnto all them, that heare me not, sayth the almyghtye Lorde.

Thus sayth the lorde vnto Esdras: tel my people, that I wyll geue theym the kingdome of Jerusalem, which I wol de haue geuen vnto Israel. Their glo rye also wyl I take vnto me and geue thē the euerlasting tabernacles, which I had prepared for those.

The tree of lyfe shall be vnto them B a swete smellyng oyntment: they shall nether laboure nor be weri. Go ye your waye/ and ye shal receaue it. Praye for your selues a fewe Dayes, that they maye dwel therin. Now is the kingdō prepared for you, therfore watch. Take heauen and earthe to wytnesse, for I haue broken the euell in peaces and created the good, for I lyue sayth the Lorde. Mother embrace thy chylderen and brynge them vp wyth gladnesse: make theyr fete as fast as a pyller, for I haue chosen thee sayth the Lorde.

And those that be dead, wyll I rayse vp agayne from theyre places, and brynge theym out of the graues, for I haue knowen my name in Israell. Fea re not thou mother of the chyldren for I haue chosen thee/ sayth the Lorde.
And for thy helpe, I shall sende thee, my seruauntes Esay and Jeremy/ after whose councell, I haue sanctifyed and prepared for the xii. trees wyth dy-uerse frutes, and as many welles, floe wyng wyth mylke and hony, and seuē mountaynes, where vpon there growe roses and lylyes, wherin I wyl fyl my chylderen wyth ioye. Execute iustice for the wydow, be iudge for the father lesse: geue to the pore: defende the comfortlesse: cloth the naked: heale the woū ded & sick: laugh not a laine man to scor ne: defend the crepel, & let the blynd co me into the syght/ of my clearenes. Ke pe the olde and young wythin thy wal les: where soeuer thou fyndest the ded, take theym, and bury them, and I shal geue thee, the fyrst place in my resurrec tion. Holde styll (O my people) and ta ke thy rest, for thy quietnes is come.
Fede thy chylderen O thou good nor C se, stablysh theyr fet: As for the seruaū tes whoome I haue geuen thee, there shall not one of them perysh/ for I wil seke theym from thy numbre, vexe not thy self. For when the day of trouble ād heuinesse commeth, other shall weape and be sorowful, but thou shalt be me ry and plentuous.
The heathē shalbe gelos but they shal be able to do nothing against the sayth the Lorde. My handes shal couer thee so that thy chylderen shal not se the fy re euerlasting. Be ioyfull O thou mother wyth thy chylderen, for I wyll de lyuer thee, sayth the Lorde. Remembre thy dead chylderen, for I shall brynge them out of the earth, and shew mercy vnto them, for I am mercyfull, sayth ỹ Lorde almyghty.

Embrace thy chylderen, vntyl I co me, and shewe mercy vnto them, for my welles runne ouer, and my grace shall not fayle.

I Esdras receaued a charge of the Lorde vppon the mount Oreb, that I shoulde go vnto Israel. But whē I camme vnto Israell, they set me at naught, and despysed the commaunde dement of the Lorde. And therfore I saye vnto you, O ye heathen that here and vnderstande: Loke for your shepherd, he shal geue you euerlasting rest, for he is nye at hand, ỹ shal come in the ende of the worlde. Be ready to the re-warde of thy kingdome/ for the euerlasting light shall shyne vpon you for D euermore. Fle the shadow of this worl de, receaue the ioyfulnes of youre glory. I testifye my sauioure openly: O re receaue the gyfte that is geuē you, and be glad, geuynge thanckes vnto hym, that hath called you to the heuenly ki-dome.

A ryse vp, and stande fast: beholde the nombre of those that be sealed in the feaste of the Lord, which are departed from the shadow of the worlde, & haue receaued the glorious garmentes of the Lord. Take thy nombre, O Siō, & shut vp thy purifyed, which haue fulfylled ỹ lawe of the Lorde. The nomber of thy children whom thou longedest for is fulfylled: besech the power of the Lor de, that thy people which haue bene cal led frō the begynning, may be halowed

I Esdras sawe vpon the mont Sy on a great people, whom I could not numbre

wombe and they al praysed the lorde wt songes of thankesgeuinge. And in the myddest of them there was a yong man of an hyghe stature, moare excellent then al they, and vpõ euery one of their heades he sett a Crowne and was euer hygher and hygher, which I marueled at greately. So I asked the angel, and sayde: Syr what are these? He answered and saide vnto me: These be they that haue put of the mortall clothynge/ and putte on the Immortall, and haue testified ꝛ knowledged the name of god. Nowe are they crowned, and receaue ẏ rewardes.

Then sayd I vnto the angel: what yonge personne is it, that crowneth the, and geueth them the palmes in their hãdes? So he answered and sayde vnto me: It is the sonne of god, whome they haue knowleged in the world. Then began I greately to commende them, that stode so styfly for the name of the Lorde. And so the aungel sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, and tell my People/ what maner of thynges, and howe greate wonders of the Lord thy god, thou hast sene.

¶ The wonderous workes, which god ded for the people are recited. Esdras marueleth ẏ god suffereth the Babilonians to haue rule ouer his people, which yet are sinners also.

1 IN the thyrde yeare of the fall of the cytie, I was at Babylõ, ꝛ lay troubled vpon my bed, ꝛ my thoughtes cam vp ouer my herte: for I sawe the desolaciõ of Sion, and the plenteousnes wealthe of thẽ that dwelte at Babilon: and my spirete was sore moued so that I began to speake fearefull wordes to the mooste hiest. and said: O Lord Lord, ẏ spakest at the beginning, when thou plantedste the earth (and that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundement vnto thy people, and a body vnto Adam, which was a creature of thy handes and hast breathed in hym the breth of lyfe: and so he lyued before the/ and thou leddest him into paradice/ which garde of plesure thy right hand had planted, or euer ẏ earth was made. And vnto him thou gauest commaundement to loue thy waie, which he transgressed and immedyatelye ẏ appoyntedest deathe in him, and in hys generacions. Of him came nacions trybes, people and kynredes oute of nũbre. And euerye people walked after their owne wyll, and dyd nyce thynges before thee: And as for thy Commaundementes, theye dyspysed them.

But in processe of tyme thou broughtest the water floud, vpon those that dwelt in the world/ and destroiest them. And lyke as the death was in Adam so was the water floud also in these. Neuertheles one of them thou leftest: namely Noe, wyth his houssholde, of whome came al ryghtues men. And it happened that when they that dwelte vpon the earth, began to multiply/ ꝛ had getten many children, and were greate people, they beganne to be more vngodlye then the fyrste.

Now when they al liued so wickedly B before thee, thou dyddest chose the a mãne from amonge them, whose name was Abraham. Hym thou louedst, and vnto hym onely thou shewedste thy wyll, and madest an euerlastinge couenaunt with hym, promysinge hym, that thou wouldest neuer forsake hys sede. And vnto hi thou gauest Isaac, vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob ꝛ Esau. As for Jacob thou dyddest chose hym, and putte backe Esau, and so Jacob becam, a grete multitude.

And it happened, that when thou leddest his sede out of Egypt, thou broughtest them vp to the mount Syon, bowynge down the heauens, setting fast the earth Mouinge the Grounde, Makynge the depthes to shake/ and troublinge the worlde: And thy glorye wente thorowe foure portes of fyre and earthquakes, and wyndes, and colde, that thou myghtest geue the law vnto ẏ sede of Jacob, and Dylygence vnto the Generacion of Israel.

And yet tokest thou not awaye from them that wicked herte, that the lawe myght bringe forth frute in them. For the fyrst Adam bare a wycked hert, transgressed and was ouercome/and so be al they that are borne of him. Thus remayned weaknes with the law in ẏ herte of the people, with the wyckednesse of ẏ rote: so that the good departed away, and the euel abode styll. So the tymes passed awaye, and the yeres were brought to an ende. Then dydest thou rayse the vp a seruaunt called Dauid/whom thou commaundedst to bulde a cite unto thy name, and to offer up incense ād sacryfyce unto thee therin. Thys was done now many yeares. Then the inhabyters of the cyte forsoke the, and in al thinges dyd euen as Adam and al his generacions hadde done: for they also had a wycked harte.

D And so thou gauest thy cyte ouer into the hands of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babilon then better & more righteous then thy peple, that they shal therfor haue the domynyon of Sion? For when I came there, and sawe their ungodlynes and so greate wyckednesse, that it coulde not be nombred: yee when my soule sawe so many euell doers (in the .xx. yeare) my harte fayled me, for I sawe, howe thow sufferest them in suche ungodlines, and spared the wicked doers: but thyne owne people hast ẏ rooted out and preserued thyne enemies, and this hast thou not shewed me.

I can not perceaue howe this happeneth. Do they of Babylon then better, then they of Sion? Or is there any other people, that knoweth the, sauynge the people of Israel? Or what generaciō hath so beleued thy couenauntes, as Jacob? And yet their rewarde appeareth not, and their labour hath no frute.

For I haue gon here and ther thorow the Heathen, and I se that they be rich and wealthy/and thinke not upon thy commaundementes.

Weye thou therfore oure wyckednes now in ẏ balāce, & theirs also that dwell in the worlde, and soo shall thy name be no where founde but in Israel.

Or where is there a people upon earth, that hath not synned before thee? Or what people hath so kept thy commaundementes? Thou shalte fynde, that Israel by name hath kept thy precepties, but not the other people and heathen.

The Aungell reproueth Esdras, because he semed to enter into the profounde iudgmentes of god.

And the aungell that was sente unto me (whose name was Uriel) gaue me an answer, & sayd: Thy hert hath A taken to muche upon yt in this worlde, and thou thynkest to comprehende the waye of the hiest. Then sayde I: Yea my lord. And he answered me, and sayde: I am sente to shewe thee three wayes, and to set forth thre simylytudes before thee: wherof if thou canste declare me one, I wyl shew thee also the waye/that thou desyreste to se: And I shal shewe the from whence the wycked herte commeth.

And I sayde: Tell on my Lorde; Then sayde he unto me: Go thy waye, weye me the weyghte of the fyre, or measure me the blast of the winde, or cal me agayne the daye that is past.

Then aunswered I and sayde: What manne borne is able to do that? Why requirest thou suche of me? And he sayd unto me: If I shoulde aske thee, howe depe dwellynges are in the Sea: Or howe greate water sprynges are upon the Firmament? Or howe great water Sprynges are in the begynnynge of the depe? Or whych are the outgoinges of Paradise? Perauenture thou woldest saye unto me: I neuer wente downe yet into the depe nor hell/neyther dyd I euer clymme up into heauen. Neuertheles now haue I asked thee but only of fyre and wynde and of the daye, where thorow ẏ hast trauayled, ād from the whyche thou canst not be separated: ād yet canst thou geue me no aunswere of them.

He sayd morouer unto me: Thyne owne thynges, and suche as are growne up with the cāst thou not know how shoulde thy vessel then be able to cōprehende the way of the hiest, and now out wardly in the corrupte worlde / to vnderstande the corrupcion that is euidēt in my syght? Then sayde I vnto hym: It were better that we were not at all, then that we should lyue in wyckednes, and to suffre, ād not to know wherfore, B he answered me, and sayde: I went in a wod, and the trees toke such a deuyce and sayde: Come let vs go, and fyghte agaynst the sea, that it maye departe awaye before vs, and that we may make vs yet more woddes.

The floudes of the sea also in like maner toke this deuyce, and sayde: com let vs go vp / and fyght agaynst the tre es of the wod, that we maye make oure lande the wider. The thought and deuis e of the wodd was but vayne and nothyng worth, for the fyre came and con sumed the wodd: The thought of the flo udes of the sea came lyke wyse to naught also, for the sande stod vp and stop ped them.

If thou were iudge now betwyxte these two / whom woldest thou iustifie, or whom woldest thou condemne? I an swered and sayde: verely it is a folyshe thought that they both haue deuysed.
For the grounde is geuen vnto the wod, and the sea also hath his place to beare his floudes.

Then answered he me, and sayd: Thou hast geuē a ryght iudgmēt, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For like as the grounde is geuen vnto the wod, and the sea to his floudes: euen so they that dwell vppon Earth: maye vnderstande nothynge, but that whyche is vppon Earthe: and he that dwelleth aboue the heauens, maye onelye vnder stande the thynges, that are aboue the heauens. Then answered I, and sayde: I beseche thee, O Lord, let me haue vn derstanding: For it was not my mynde to bee curyous of thy hye thyn-ges, but of suche as we daylye medle wyth all / namely wherfore that Israell is blasphemed of the Heath, & for what cause the peple whom ŷ eluest hast loued is geuen ouer to bee punisshed of vngodlye nacions: And whye the la-we of our fathers is brought to naught, and the wryten couenauntes come to none effecte, and we passe awaye oute of ŷ worlde as the greshoppers / and our ly fe is a very feare, and we ar not worthy to optayne mercye. What wyll he do thē vnto his name, which is called vppon oure vs? Of these thynges haue I asked question.

Then answered he me, and sayde:
The more thou serchest, the more thou C shalt meruell, for the worlde hasteth fast to passe awaye and canne not compre-hende the thynges / that ar promissed for the ryghteous in time to comme, for this worlde is full of vnrighteousnesse and weakenes.

But as concernynge the thynges, wherof thou askest me, I wyll tell thee.
The euell is sowne, but the destruction therof is not yet come, Yf the euell now that is sowne, be not turned vpside dow ne, and if the place wher the euel is sow ne / passe not awaye, then can not the thī-ge come that is sowne wyth good. For the corne of euell sede hathe bene sowne in the hert of manne from the beginnīg / and how muche vngodlynesse hathe be brought vp vnto this tyme? and howe muche shall he yet brynge forthe, vntyll he came into the barne?

Ponder nowe thy selfe, when the cor-ne of euell sede is cut downe, how greate a barne shal it fyll? I answered and say de: Howe and when shall these thynges comme to passe? Wherfore are oure ye ares few and euel? And he answered me, sayenge: Haste not thou to muche vpon the hyghest, for thy hastines to be aboue him is but vayne, thou makest to mu-che ado.

Dyd not the sowles also of the ryghteous aske a questyon of these thynges in their holynesse, saying: * How * Apoca. vi. b longe shall I hope of thys fasshyon?
When commeth the fruite of my barne, and my rewarde?

And vpon thys Ieremyel the archaungell gaue them answere / and sayde: Euen when the nombre of the seedes is fylled in you: For he hath weyed the worlde in the balaunce: In measure and nombre hath he measured the tyme and moueth it not, vntyll the same measure be fulfylled.

Then

Then answered I and sayde: O Lord Lorde, now are we all of synne, and for oure sake peraduenture it is not, that y barne of the righteous shal not be fylled, because of the synnes of them that dwel D vpon the earth.

So he answered me, and sayd: Go thy waye to a woman wyth chylde, and aske of her, when she hath fulfylled her .ix. monethes, yf her chyld hed maye kepe the byrth any longer within her. Then sayde I: No Lord, that can she not. And he sayd vnto me: In hell the secret places of soules are lyke as the preuy chambre of a woman. For lyke as a woman that trauayleth, maketh haste, whe the tyme & necessitie of the byrth is at hand: Euen so doth she haste to delyuer it that is commytted vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se, it shalbe shewed the from the beginninge. Then answered, I and sayde: If I haue found fauour in thy sight, and yf it be possible & if I be mete therfore, shewe me then, whether there be more to come then is paste/or moare past then is to come. What is past I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon the ryght syde, and I shall expoude the symilitude vnto thee. So I stode and beholde, an whote burning ouē went ouer before me: and it happened that when the flamme was gone by, the smoke had the vpperhande. After thys there went ouer before me a watery cloude and sent downe much more rayne wt a storme: & when the stormy rayne was past the droppes remayned styl: then sayde he vnto me: lyke as the rayne is more then the droppes, and as the fyre exceadeth the smoke, euen so the measure, of the thynges that are past, hath the vpperhand. Then went the dropes and the smoke about: and I prayed and sayde: Maye I lyue (thynckest thou) vntil that tyme? Or what shall happen in those dayes? He answered me & sayd: as for the tokens whereof thou askeste me, I maye tell thee of them in a parte: but as touchynge * thy lyfe, I maye not shew thee, for I am not sent therfore.

Neuerthelesse as cōcernyng the tokens, marke thys: Beholde, the dayes shal come, A that they which dwel vpon earth shalbe taken in agreate nombre, and the waye of the truthe shallbe hyd, and the land shallbe baren from fayth: but iniquitie shall haue the vpperhand, lyke as thou hast sene now and as thou hast heard longe ago. And y lād that y seist now to haue rule, shalt thou se destroyed. But yf God graūteth the to lyue, y shalt se after the thyrd trompete, that the sounde shall sodenly shyne agayne in the night, and the mone thre tymes in the daye/and bloude shal droppe out of wod, and the stone shal geue his voyse, & y people shalbe vnquiet and euen ye shall rule, whom they hope not that dwel vpon earth, ād the fowles shal flye, and the Sadomitysh see shal cast out his fish, and make a noyse in y nyght, which many shal not knowe, but they shal all heare the voyse thereof. There shalbe a confusyon also in manye places/and the fier shal be oft sent agayne/and the wylde beastes shal go their way, and monstruous wemen shal bear monsters, and salt waters shalbe found in the swete: one frende shall fight agaynst another: then shall all wyt and vnderstandyng be hyd and put asyde into their secrete places, and shalbe sought of many, and yet not be found: then shal vnrighteousnes and voluptuousnes haue the vpper hande vpon earth. One land also shal aske another, ād saye: Is righteousnes gone thorowe the? And it shal saye: No At the same tyme shal mē hope, but nothing optayne: they shal labour, but their wayes shal not prosper. B

To shewe the suche tokens I haue leue/and yf thou wilt praye agayne, ād wepe as nowe, and fast seuen dayes/y shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I awaked, & a fearfulnes went thorow all my body, and my mynde was feble and carefull, so that I almoost sowned wyth al. So the aungel that was come to talke wyth me, helde me, comforted me and set me vp vpon my fete.

And in the seconde night it happened that that Salathiel the Captaine of the peo ple came vnto me / saying: where hast thou bene? and why is thy countenaun-ce so heuy? knowest thou not / that Isra el is committed vnto thee / in the lande of their captiuite? vp then, and eate, for sake vs not, as the shepherd that lea-ueth his flocke in the handes of wycked wolues. Then sayde I vnto him: Go thy waye fro me, and come not nye me, & he herde it, and as I saide, so went he his waye fro me.

And so I fasted seuen dayes, mournig and wepinge, lyke as Uriel the aungell commaunded me. And after seuen day-es, it happened, that the thoughtes of my hert were very greuous vnto me a gaine, and my soule receaued the sprete of vnderstandige, and I began to talk with the most hiest agayne, and said: O Lord Lord, of euery wodd of the earth and of al the trees therof, thou hast cho sen thee one onely viniarde: and all the landes of the whole worlde thou haste chosen thee one prt: and of all floures of the ground thou hast chosen thee one lylye: and of al the depthes of the sea ỹ hast fylled the one ryuer: and of al buyl ded cyties thou hast halowed Sion vnto thy selfe, and of al the foules that ar created, thou hast named the one doue: and of al the catel that are made ỹ hast prouided thee one shepe: and among al the multitudes of folkes thou hast got ten the one peple, and vnto this people whom thou louedste, thou gauest a lawe that is proued of al.

And now, O Lorde, why hast thou geuen this one people ouer vnto many?
and vpon the one rote thou hast prep a red other, and why haste thou scatered thy one only people among many? why the treade them downe, yea which haue euer withstāde thy promyses, and neuer beleued thy couenauntes? And though thou werest enemye vnto the people, yet shouldest thou punish them with thyne owne handes. Now when I had spokē C these wordes, the angel that cam to me the nyghte afore, was sente vnto me / and sayde vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thynge that I sayde, and I shall tell thee more. And I sayde: Speake on my Lorde.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed and troubled for Israels sake.
Louest thou that people better thē him that made them? And I sayde: No Lor de, but of verye greate and compassyon haue I spoken. For my reynes payne me euery houre, because I wold haue experience of the way of the most hiest, and to seke out part of his iudgement.
And he saide vnto me: that thou maiest not. And I sayde, wherfore Lorde?
Where vnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers chylde bed then my graue? So had I not sene the myserye and trouble of Jacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israell.
And he sayde vnto me: Nombre me the thinges ỹ are not yet come: gather me togethere the droppes that are scatred abrode: make me the flouers grene age yne, that are wythered: open me the thi ge that is closed: and bringe me forth ỹ wynes that are shut vp: Shewe me the ymag of a voyce, and then shal I decla re thee the thing, that thou labourest to knowe. And I sayde: O Lorde Lorde, who maye knowe these thinges, but he that hathe not hys dwellynge wyth men?
As for me I am vnwyse: how may I then speake of thes thynges wher of ỹ askest me? Then sayde he vnto me: like as thou canst do none of these things ỹ I haue spoken of, euē so canst thou not fynde out my iudgemente, or in the ende the loue that I haue promysed vnto my peple. And I sayde: Beholde O Lord, yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shal they do that haue ben befor me, or we that be now, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyl liken my iudgement vn to a rynge.
Lyke as there is no slacnesse of the last, euen so is ther no swyftnesse of ỹ first.
So I answered and sayd: couldeste ỹ not make those (that haue bene made, and that be now, and that are for to co D me) in one, that thou myghtest shew thy iudgment the sonner? Then answerd he me, and sayde: The creature maye not haste aboue the maker, nether may the world hold thē at once, ỹ shalbe created And I sayd: How hast thou sayd vnto vnto thy seruaunte, that thou lyuing maker maker hast made the creature living at once/and the creature bareit? even so might it now also bere them that be pre sent/at once. And he saide unto me: Like the childbed of a woman/and saie unto her: If thou bringest forth childrẽ why doest thou it not together, but one af ter another: Pray her therfore, to bryng forth ten children at once. And I sayde: she can not, but muste do yt one after another.

Then sayde he unto me: Even so ha ve I geven a chyldebed unto the earth, for those that be sowen upon it by processe of tyme. For like as a yong chylde may not bring forth the thinges that be long to the aged, even so have I orde-ned the world which I made.
And I asked and sayde: Seing thou haste nowe geven me a waye, I wyll spe ke before thee: for our mother, of whom thou haste tolde me, is yet younge, and nowe she draweth nye unto age. He an swered me, and sayde: Aske a woman ỹ beareth chylderen, and she shal tel the.
Saye unto her: wherfore are not they ( whome thou hast now brought forthe) lyke those that were before thee, but les se in stature? and she shall answere the:
They that be borne in the youthe of strength, are of one fashion: and they that are borne in the tyme of age (when the chyldbed fayleth) are otherwyse. Consy-der now thy selfe, howe that ye are lesse of stature then those that were before you, and so are they that come after you lesse then ye, as the creatures which no we begynne to be olde, and have passed over the strenght of youth. Then sayde I: Lorde I beseche thee, yf I have founde favoure in thy syght, shewe thy servaunte/by whome doest thou visite thy creature?

The. vi. Chapter.

A And he sayde unto me: In the begynnynge when the ground was made: before the world stode, or ever the wyndes blew, before it tho dred and lyghtened, or ever the foun-dacyons of Paradyse were layed, before the fayre flowers were seine, or ever the moveable powers were stablysshede, before the innumerabell multitude of angels were gathered to gether: or ever the hyghnesses of the aier wer lifted up, afore the measures of the firmament were named, or ever the chim neis in Sion were hote, and or the pre sente yeares were sought out, ãd or ever the invencyons of them that now synne were put asyde, befor they were sealed that now gather fayth for a treasure: then dyd I consydre & ponder all these thinges, and they al were made thorow me, and thorow none other: by me also they be ended, and by none other.
Then answered I ãd sayde: which shal be the partinge a sunder of the tymes?
Or when shalbe the ende of the fyrst/& ỹ begynnyng of it ỹ foloweth? And he sayde unto me: From Abraham unto Isaac, when Jacob ãd Esau were born of him, Jacobs hand held first ỹ hele of Esau: for Esau is the end of this worl de, ãd Jacob is ỹ begynnyng of it that foloweth. The hande of man betwyx te the hele and the hand. Other questy-on (Esdras) aske thou not.
I answered then, and sayde: O Lord Lord yf I have founde favoure in thy sight, I beseche the, shewe thy servant the ende of thy tokens, wherof ỹ shew-dest me parte the last night. So he answered and sayde unto me: Stande up upon thy fete, and here the parfect voy ce and sounde. There shall come a grea te mocion, but the place where thou stã-dest shall not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest the wordes, be not a frayed: for of the ende shal the word ãd foundacion of the earth be understand.
And why? the worde therof trembleth ãd quaketh, for it knoweth, that it must B be chaunged at the ende. And it happened that when I had hearde it, I stod upon my feat, and herkened: ãd behold there was a voyse that spake, ãd the so unde of it was like the sounde of many waters, and it sayde. Behold, the daies come, that I wil beginne to drawe nye, and to vysyet theym that dwell uppon earth, and wyll begynne to make inquy sicion of them, what they be that have hurte

hurte equite to vnrighteousnes, & whē the low estate of Sion shalbe fulfylled: and when the worlde, that shal vanishe away, shalbe ouersealed, then wyl I do these tokens.

The bokes shalbe opened before the firmament, and they shal se al together, and the chyldren of a yeare olde shal speake with their voyces: the wemen with childe shal bryng forth vntimely children of thre or foure monethes old, and they shal lyue, and be raised vp: and sodenly shal the sowne places apeare as the vnsowne, the ful store houses shal sodenly be founde emptye, and the trompet shall geue the sound, which when euery man heareth / they shalbe hastely afrayed.

At that tyme shall frendes fyght, one agaynste another lyke enemyes, and the earthe shall stande in feare wythe them.

The sprynges of the welles shall stande styl, and in thre houres they shal not renne. Whosoeuer remaineth from all these thynges that I haue tolde the, shal escape, and se my saluacyon / and ŷ ende of your worlde. And the men that are receued shal se it, they that haue not tasted death from their birthe: and the hert of the indwellers shalbe chaunged, and turned into another meanynge: for euel shalbe put oute / and dysceite shalbe quenched. As for faith, it shal florish, corrupcyō shalbe ouercome: and the trueth which hath bene so longe without frut, shalbe declared. As it happened when he talked with me, that I loked demurelye vpon hym, before whome I stode / and these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shew thee, the tyme of the night for to come.

Yf thou wylte pray: yet more and fast seuen days agayn, I shal tel ŷ more thinges, a greater then before: for thy voice is herde before the hyest: for why? The Mighty hath sene the righteous deling he hath sene also thy chastyte whiche ŷ hast had euer sence thy youth: and therfore hathe he sente me to shewe thee all these thinges, and to saye vnto thee: Be of good comforte, and feare not, & haste not with the tymes that are past to thinke vayne thynges, and make not hast of the latter tymes.

And it happened after this: that I wepte agayne, and fasted seuen dayes in like maner, that I might fulfil ŷ thre C wekes, which he told me. In the eyghte night was my herte vexed within me again, and I beganne to speake before the hyest: for my sprete was greately set on fyre, and my soule was in distresse, and I sayde: O Lord, thou spekest vnto thy creature from the begynnyng (euen the fyrst daie) and saidest let heauen and earth be made, and thy word was a perfect worke. And then was ther ŷ sprete and the darcknesses were yet on euerye side, and silence: there was no mannes voice as yet from toe. Thē commaundest thou a faire lighte to com forth out of thy treasures, that thy work might apeare and be sene.

Upon the seconde daie thou madest the sprete of the firmament, and cōmaundest it to part a sunder, and to make a deuision betwixt the waters, that ŷ on part myght remayne aboue, and the other beneth. Upon the thyrd day thou broughtest e to passe, that the waters weare gathered in the seuenth part of the earth:

Sixe partes haste thou dryed vp / and kepte them to thintent that men might sowe and occuppe husbandry therin.

As soone as thy worde wente forth / the worke was made. For immediatly there was greate innumerable frute, and many dyuerse pleasures and desires of tempracion, floures of chaungeable coloure and smel, and thys was donne the thyrde daye.

Upon the fourth daye thou cōmaundest that the sonne shoulde geue his shyne, and the moone her lyght: the starres diddest thou set in ordre, and gauest them a charge to doo seruice euen vnto man, that was for to be made. Upon the fyfte daye thou saydest vnto the seuenth parte (wher the waters were gathered) that they shoulde bring forth diuerse beastes, foules and fishes. And so it cam to passe, that the domme water & without sole brought forth liuing beastes, at ŷ cōmaundement of God, that all people myght prayse thy wonderous workes. Then dydest thou preserue the soules, the one thou calledst Enoch & the other

Leuiathan

Leuiathan, and dyddest separate the one from the other: for the seuenthe parte (namely, where the water was gathered together) myght not holde them both.
Unto Enoch thou gauest one part, whiche was dryed vp the thyrde daye, that he shoulde dwel in the same part, wherin are the thousande hylles. But vnto Leuiathan thou gauest the seuenth parte, namely the moyst and hast kept him to deuoure what thou wylt, and whan.
Upon the syxte daye thou gauest commaundemēt vnto the earth, that before thee it shoulde bryng forth beastes, catel, and al that crepe, and (besydes this) Adam also, whom thou madest lorde of al thy creatures: Of hym come we all & the people also, whom thou hast chosen specyally vnto thy selfe. Al thys haue I sayde now and spoken before thee, that I myght shewe/how that the worlde is made for our sakes. As for the other people whych also come of Adam thou hast sayde that they are nothyng, but be like a spitle, and hast lickned the abundaūce of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) frō the rofe of the house.

And now/O lord, the Heathē whyche haue euer bene reputed as nothīge haue begonne to be lordes ouer vs, ād deuoured vs: but we thy people (whom ẏ hast called the fyrste borne, thy onelye begotten and thy feruent louer) are geuen into their handes and power. Yf the world now be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possession wyth the worlde? How long shal this endure?

¶ The Angel sheweth Esdras many thinges to cō

The.vii.Chapter.

A AND it happened after that I had spoken out these wordes, there was sent vnto me an aungel, which had bene by me also ẏ nyghtes afore and he sayde vnto me: Up Esdras, and heare the wordes that I am come to tel thee. And I sayde: speake on lorde my god. Then sayd he vnto me: The sea is set in a wyde place, that it myghte be depe and greate: But the entraūce is narow ād smal lyke as a riuer. For who wroulde go into the sea, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? If he went not thorow the narow, how myght he come into the brode?

Item another: A cytie is buylded & set vpon a brode felde/and is full of all goodnes: the entraunce is narow ād so dayne, lyke as if there were a fyre at the right hand/ and a depe water at ẏ lyfte and as it were only one strate path betwyxt them both, so smal that ther cold but one man go there.

Yf thys cytie now were geuen to an heyre, and he neuer went thorow the parelous waye, how woulde he receaue his enherytaunce? And I sayd: It is so lord. Thē sayd he: euen so is Israell also a porcion. And why? for their sakes haue I made the world: ād when Adam trangressed my statutes, then was the thing iudged that was done. Then were the entraunces of the world made narow, ful of sorow and trauaile: They are but few and euel, full of parels and labour. For ẏ entraunces of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortal fruite.
If they now whiche are entred into thys worlde, maye not comprehend these streyte and vayne thynges, muche lesse maye they comprehende and vnderstande the secrete thynges: Why disquietest thou thy selfe then, seynge thou art but a corruptible man? And what wouldest thou knowe, where as thou arte but mortall? And why hast thou not receaued into thine herte the thynge that is for to com, but that is presente?

Then sayde I: O Lord, Lorde, thou hast ordeyned in thy lawe that the right- B uous shoulde inheret these thynges/but ẏ ẏ vnfaythfull & vngodly shuld perysh. Neuertheles the ryghteous shall suffre straite thynges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodlye and suffered straughte thynges, shall not see the wyde.
And he sayd vnto me: there is no Iudge aboue God: and none that haue vnderstanding aboue the hyghest. For there be many that perysshe, because they dispise the lawe of God that is set before them. For God hath geuen strayte commaundement dement to soche as cõe, that they know what they do/and how they shuld lyue: ⁊ if they kepte this they shoulde not be punyshed.

Neuerthelesse they were not obediẽt vnto him/but spoke agaynst him: ymagyned vayne thinges, and pourposed to synne, and sayde moreouer that ther was no God, ãd that God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowne, his lawe haue they despysed, and denyed his promyses: in hys statutes and ordynaunces haue they not bene fayth ful and stedfast, and haue not perfourmed his workes.

And therfore Esdras vnto the ful, plenty: ãd to the empty, emptynesse. Beholde, the tyme shal come, that these tokens which I haue tolde the/shal com to passe, and the bride shal appeare, ãd the earth that now passeth away, shalbe shewed: and whosoeuer is delyuered frõ the forsayde euels, shall se my wonders. For my sonne Jesus shalbe openly declared, which those that be with hym: ⁊ they that remayne, shalbe mery in foure hundred yeares.
After these same yeares shal my sonne Christ dye/and al men that haue life, ⁊ the worlde shalbe tourned into the old silence. vii. dayes, lyke as in ẏ fore iudgmentes, so ẏ no man shal remayn. And after seauen dayes the worlde that yet awaketh not, shalbe raysed vp, and shall dye corupte. And the earth shal restore those that haue slepte in her, and so shal the duste those that dwell in sylence ãd the secret places shal delyuer those that C be committed vnto them. And the most hyest shall be openly declared vpon the seate of iudgement, and all mysery shal vanish awaye, and long suffryng shalbe gathered together. But the iudgement shal continue, the treuth shal remayne, ⁊ faythe shal waxe stronge/the worcke shall folowe, and the rewarde shalbe shewed, the righteousnesses shal watch, and the vnrighteousnesses shall beare no rule.

Then sayde I: Abraham prayed fyrst for the Sodomites, ⁊ Moyses for ẏ fathers ẏ sinned in ẏ wyldernes, ãd he ẏ cam after him for Israel in ẏ tyme of Achas and Samuel: and dauid for the destruction, ãd Salomon for them that came into the Sanctuary, and Helyas for those that receaued rayne, and for ẏ deade that he myght lyue, and Ezechias for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: and diuerse other in lyke maner, which haue prayed for many.

Euen so nowe seinge the corrupte is growen vp, and wickednesse increased, ⁊ the ryghteous haue prayed for the vngodlye, wherfor shall it not be so nowe also?

He answered me, and sayde: Thys present worlde is not the ende, there remayneth much honour in it: therfore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of dome, shall be the ende of thys tyme, and the beginning of the immortalytie for to come, wherin all corrupcion vanisheth, al voluptuousnes is lowsed, all mysbeleue taken awaye, ryghteousnes growen/and the veritie sprong vp. Then shal no man be able to saue him that is destroyed, nor to oppresse hym that hath gotten the vyctorye.
I answered then, and sayd: This is my fyrst and last saying: that it had bene better/not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam/or els when it was geuen hym, to kepe him that he should not synne. For what profite is it for men now in thys present tyme to lyue in heuynes and after death to loke for punishment? O ẏ Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that sinned, thou art not fallen alone, but we al that come of the. For what profite is yt vnto vs, if there be promised vs an immortal tyme, wher as we doe wyth dayly workes? and ẏ there is promysed vs an euerlastynge hope/where as we oure selues are euel and vayne? and that there are layde vp for vs dwellinges of health and fredõ, where as we haue lyued euell? and that the worship of the hyest is kept to defend them, which haue led a pacient lyfe, wher as we haue walcked in the most wicked wayes of al?

And that there shalbe shewed a paradyce, whose frute endureth for euer, wherein is fredome and medicyne: where as we shal not go in? for we haue walked in D vnpleasaunt places: And that the faces of theym whych haue absteyned, shall shyne aboue the starres, where as oure faces shalbe blacke and darcker?

For whyle we lyued, and dyd vnrighteously, we consydered not, that we shold suffre therfore after death?

Then answered he me, and sayde: This is the consideracion and thought of the battell, whych man hathe vppon earth: that if he be ouercomme, he shall suffre as thou hast sayde. But if he get the victorye, he shall receaue the thynge that I saye. For thys is the lyfe, wherof Moyses spake vnto the People, whyle he lyued, saynge: Chose the lyfe, that thou mayst lyue. Neuertheles they beleued hym not, neyther the Prophetes after hym. No nor me whych haue spoken vnto them / that heuynesse shoulde not reache vnto them to theyr destruccyon lyke as ioye is for to come ouer those, ẏ haue suffred them selues to be informed in saluacion.

I answered then and said: I know Lorde, that the hyghest is mercyfull / in that he hath mercy vppon them, whiche are not yet in the worlde, and vpon those also that walke in hys law: and that he is pacient and long suffring, toward those that haue sinned in theyr workes: and that he is lyberall to geue where as it requireth: and that he is of great mercye, for he multiplyeth hys louing kindnesses towarde those that are present, and that are past also and to them which are for to come. For yf he multiplye not hys mercyes, the worlde shall not be made lyuinge, wyth those that dwel therin: He geueth also, for yf he gaue not of his goodnesse / that they whyche haue done euell myght be eased, the ten thousande parte of menne shoulde not be made lyuynge. And yf the Judge forgaue not those that be healed ẇ hys Worde, and yf he woulde destroye the Multytude that stryueth, there shoulde be very fewe lefte in an innumerable Multitude.

Esdras prayeth God rather to loke vpon hys own mercy then on the synnes of the people.

And he answerd me, saying: The most hyest made thys worlde for many, but the worlde to cōe for few. I wil tel the a simylitud, Esdras: As when thou askest the earth, it shall saye vnto the, that it geueth moch moulde, wherof earthen vessels are made, but lytle of it that golde commethe of. Euen so is it wyth the worcke of thys world. There be many created, but few shal be preserued. Then answered I & sayde: Then swalowe vp the wytte (ẏ soule) and deuoure the vnderstanding, for thou art agreed to herken and to geue eare / and wyllynge to prophecye: for thou hast no longer space geuen ẏ, but only to lyue. O Lord / wylt thou not geue thy seruaunt leaue, that we maye praye before the, and that thou mayst geue seede vnto oure herte, and bulde oure vnderstandynge that there maye come frute of it: ād that euery one which is corrupted, and beareth the state and place of a man: maye lyue?

For thou art alone, and we al are one workmanshyppe of thy hādes, lyke as thou haste sayde, and lyke as the body is fashioned now in the chyldesbed, and thou geuest the membres, and thy creature is preserued in fyer and water: & ix. monethes doth thy worcke suffre thy creature, which is fashionde in her: but the thing that preserueth, ād it that is preserued shal both be kept togither: and when time is ẏ childebed delyuereth ẏ thing that is kepte ād growne in her.

For thou hast commaunded the brestes to geue mylk vnto the frute / that the thing which is created and fashioned, maye be norished for a tyme: and thenꝰ dysposest and ordrest it wyth thy mercy bringest it vp with thy rightuousnes, nurturest it in thi law, and reformest it with thy vnderstandinge mortifyest it as thy creature, and makest it lyuing as thy worke. Seynge then that thou destroyest him, which with so greate labours is creatid & fashyoned thorow thy commaundement, thou couldest lyghtly ordeyn, also that the thing which is made, myght be preserued.

And this I spake nowe of all men in generall generall as thou knowest: but of the pe ople, for whose sake I am sorye: and of thy enheritaunce: for whose cause I mourne: and of Israell, For whome I am wofull: and for Jacob/ for whose sa ke I am greued: therfore begynne I to praye before thee, for my selfe and for them, for I se the fal of vs/euen of vs that dwell vpon earth. But I haue her de the swyftenes of the iudge/ whyche is to come: therfore heare my voyce, & vnderstande my wordes, and I shall speake before thee.

This is the beginninge of the wor des of Esdras, before he was receaued: O Lorde/thou that dwellest in euerlas tinge esse, whose eyes are lyfte vp in ye ayre/whose stole is exceading hye, whose glorye and maiesty maye not be compre hended, before whome the hostes of hea uen stande wyth trem blynge, whose ke pyng is turned in wynde and fyre/who se worde is true whose talkinge is sted fast, whose commaundement is strong, whose ordinaunce is fearful, whose loke drieth vp the depthes, whose wrath ma keth the mountaynes to melt awaye, and whose trueth beareth wytnesse: O heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and marcke wyth thyne eares the petition of thy cre ature.

For whyle I lyue, I wyll speake, & so lounge as I haue vnderstandinge, I wyll answere. O loke not vpon the si nes of thy people, which serue in the tru eth. Haue no respect vnto the wycked studies of the heathen, but to the desyre of those that kepe thy testimonies wyth sorowes. Thincke not vpon those that haue walcked fayneldy before thee, but vpon them, whych wyth wyll haue kno wen thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyl to destroy the, which haue had beastly maners, but to loke vppon them that haue clearly tau ght thy lawe. Tak thou no indignaci on at them, which are worse then beast es: but loue them, that al way put their truste in thy rightuousnes and glorye: for we and oure fathers haue all the sa me sycknes and dysease, but because of our sinnes thou halte be called mercy full.

For if thou hast mercy vpõ vs, thou shalt be called mercyfull, where as we haue no workes of rightuousnesse: for the ryghtuous, whych haue layde vppe many good workes together, shall oute of theyr dedes receaue rewarde. For what is man, that thou shouldeste take displeasure at hym? Or what is the corruptible Mortall Generacion that thou shouldest be so rough toward hym?

For of a trueth theare is no man a monge them that be borne/ but he hath dealte wyckedly: & among the faythfull C there is none, which hath not don amis.
For in this (O Lord) thy rightuousnes and thy Goodnesse shallbe praysed and declared . yf thou be Mercyfull vntoo them, which are not ryche in good wor kes.

Then answered he me: and sayde:
Som thinges hast thou spoken a right and acordinge vnto thy wordes it shal be. For I wyl not verelye considre the worckes of them, whych haue synned be fore death, before the iudgement, before destruction, but I wyl reioyce ouer the worcke and thoughte of the rightuous.
I wyll remembre, also the pylgrymage, the holy making and the rewarde. Like as I haue spoken now, so shal it come to passe. For as the husband man sow eth muche sede vpon the grounde, and planteth many trees and yet alwaye the thinge that is sowne or planted ys not al kepte safe, nether doth it al take rote: Euen so is it of theym that are sowne in the world, they shal not all be preser ued.

I answered then and sayde: If I haue founde grace, then lett me speake.
Lyke as the husbande mannes sede pe risheth, if it receaue not rayne in due se son, or if there come to much rayne vpõ it: Euen so perissheth man also, which is created with thy handes, and is lyke vn to thyne owne ymage and to thy selfe, for whose sake yu hast made al thynges and lickened hi vnto the husband mãs sede. Be not wroth at vs/ O Lord but spare thy people, and haue mercy vpõ thine owne inheritaunce: O be mercifull vnto thy creature.

Then answered he me and said: Thin ges present are for ye present, & thinges to come for suche as be to come. For ye wantest yet muche, seing thou mayest lo ue thy creature aboue me: I haue often tymes drawen nye vnto thee but neuer to the vnrighteous. In thys also thou arte marueilous before the hyghest, in y thou hast humbled thy selfe, as it becom meth thee, and hast not regarded thyne owne selfe, that thou art had in such ho noure amonge the rightuous. Therfore shall great wretchednes and myse-ry come vpon them, that in the latter ty me shall dwell in the worlde, for they ha ue walked in greate pryde.

But vnderstand thou for thy selfe, & seke out glory for suche as be lyke thee: for vnto you is paradice opened, the tre of lyfe is planted, the tyme to comme is prepared, plenteousnes made readye: a citie is buylded for you, and a rest is pre pared, yea perfecte goodnes and wysdo me. The rote of euell is marcked from you, the weakenes and moth is hyd frō you, and into hell flyeth corruption in forgetfulnes. Sorowes are vanished awaye, and in the ende is shewed the tre of immortalyti. And therfore aske thou nomore questions concernynge the mul titude of them that perysh. For they ha ue taken lybertie, despysed the hyghest, thought scorne of hys lawe, & forsaken his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe hys rightuous, and sayde in theyr herte that there is no God, yea and that wit-tyngly, for they dye. For lyke as the thynge that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Euen so is thyrste & payne prepared for them: for it was not his wyll that man shoulde come to naught but they whych be created haue defyled the name of hym that made them, & are vnthanckfull vnto hym, whych prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iud gemente nowe at hand. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vn to few: namely vnto thee, and to suche as be lyke thee.

Then answered I and sayde: Be-holde, O Lorde, nowe hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, whyche thou wylt beginne to do at the last, but what tyme and when thou hast not shewed me.

¶ Esdras hath visions shewed hym.

The .ix. Chapter.

He answered me then & sayd: A Measure thou the tyme dyligently in it selfe, when y seyste that one parte of the tokens com to passe which I haue tolde the before: so shalte thou vnderstande, that it is the very same ty me, wherin the hyest wyl begynne to vy set the worlde, which he made. And whē there shalbe sene earthquake and vpro are of the people in y worlde, then shalt y wel vnderstand/that the most hyeste spake of those thinges, from the daies that were before thee, euen from the be gynnynge.

For lyke as all that is made in the worlde, hath a begynnyng and ende, ād the ende is manyfest: Euen so the times also of y hiest haue playne begynniges in wounders and sygnes and the ende in workynge and in tokens. And euery one that shalbe saued, ād shalbe able to escape by hys workes ād by fayth wher in ye haue beleued shalbe preserued frō the sayde parels and shal se my sauiour in my lande and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from thee worlde.
Then shal they be in carefulnesse which now haue abused my wayes: and they y haue cast them out despyteully shal dwel in paynes.

For soche as in ther lyfe haue recea-ued benefyts and haue not knowen me ād they y haue abhorred my law whyle they had yet fredome and whē they had yet open rowme of amēdment and cōuer sion, and vnderstode not, but despysed it the same must knowe it after deathe in payne. And therfore be thou nomore car ful, how the vngodly shalbe punished, & how the rightuous shalbe saued, & who se the worlde is, & for whome the worl-de and when it is. Then answered I B and sayde: I haue talcked before and now I spake also hereafter, that there be many moo of them whiche perysshe then shalbe saued, like as the floud is greter then the droppes.

And he answered me, saying: lyke as the felde is, so is also the sede: as the flouers be, so are y colours also soch as the workman is, soch is also the work
and

and as the husbande man is him self, so is his husbandry also, for it was yͤ tyme of the world. And when I prepared for them that are nowe, or euer the worlde was made, wherin they shoulde dwell, then was ther no man that withstode me.
Now when euery one was, and the ma ker also in the worlde which is now pre pared, and the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe whyche is vnsearchable, there maners were corrupte. So I con sydred the worlde, and beholde/there was parell beause of yͤ thoughtes that were come into it. And I saw, and spa red them greately, and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes, ād a plant frõ amonge many generacions. Let the multitude perish then, whyche are gro wne vpp in vayne, and lett my Grape and wyneberry be kept: Euen my plante for wyth greate laboure haue I made it vp.

Neuertheles yf thou wilt take vp on the yet seuen dayes mo (but yͧ shalt not fast in thẽ) go thy way then into the feld of floures, where no house is buyl ded, and eate only of the floures of the feld, taste not flesh, drinke no wyne, but eate floures onely. Praye vnto the hiest continually, so wyl I com, and talke wͭ thee.

C So I went my waye and came into the felde which is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I sat amonge the floures and ate of the her bes of the feld, and the meate of yͤ same satysfyed me. After seuen dayes I sate vpon the grasse, and my herte was vex ed wͭ in me lyke as afore: & I opened my mouth and begann to talke before the Hiest and sayde: O Lord, thou that she west thy selfe vnto vs, thou hast decla red and opened thy selfe vnto oure fa thers in the wyldernes in a place wher no man dwelleth, in a baren place, whẽ they came out of Egipt, and thou spa kest/saying: heare me O Israel, & marke my wordes thou sede of Jacob. Behold I sawe my lawe in you, and it shal brig frut in you, and ye shalbe honoured in it for euer.

For our fathers which receaued the lawe, kepte it not, and obserued not thy ordinaunces and statutes, ād yͤ frut of thy lawe was not declared: for it myght not, for whyt it was thyne. For they that receaued yt, peryshe, because they kepte not the thinge that was sowne in them.

It is a custome when the grounde receaueth sede, or the sea shipp, or a ves sel meate and drynke, that when it pery sheth or is broken wherein a thynge ys sowne, or wherin any thinge is put: the thynges also peryshe and are broken, which ar sowne or put therin. But vn D to vs it hath not happened so: for we that haue receaued the lawe peryshe in synne, and oure herte whyche also rece aued the lawe: Not wythstandinge yͤ lawe peryssheth not, but remaineth ĩ his laboure.

And when I consydred these thiges in my hert after this maner/ I loked a bout me wyth myne eyes, and vpon the right syde I sawe a woman whych mo urned sore, made greate lamentacion, & wepte wyth loud voyce: her clothes we re rent in peces, and she had asshes vpõ her head.

Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, ād turned me vnto her, & said: wherfore wepest thou? whye arte thou so sorye and discomforted? And she say de vnto me: Sir, let me bewayle my sel fe, and take yet more sorowe: for I am sore vexed in my mynde/and brought very lowe. And I sayd vnto her, what aileth the? Or who hath done any thin ge to thee: tell me. She sayde/ I haue bene vnfrutefull and barren and haue had an husbande thyrtie yeares. And these xxx yeares: I do nothyng els day and nyght, and al houres, but make my prayer to the hyest. After thyrtie yeares God herde me thy hand mayden, loked vpon my mysery, consydred my trouble, and gaue me a sonne/and I was glad of hym / so was my husbande also and all my neyghbours/and we gaue great honoure vnto the myghtie. And I nori shed hym wyth great trauell So when he grewe vp, and came to the tyme that he shoulde haue a wyfe/ I made a feast,

Esdras and the woman that appeareth vnto hym, commen together.

The. x. Chapter.

A And it happened that when my sonne went into his chāber, he fel downe, and dyed: then ouerthrewe we all the lyghtes/ and all my neighbours rose vp to comforte me. Then toke I my rest vnto the seconde daye at night: and when they had al rested, that they myght comforte me, I rested also/ and rose vp by nyght, and fled, and am come hyther into thys felde, as thou seest: and am purposed not to come in the citie/ but to remayne here, and neyther to eate nor drynke, but continuallye to mourne and to fast, vntyll I dye.

Then left I my meditacions ād thoughtes that I was in, and spake to her in displeasur: Thou folysh woman, seest thou not our heuynesse and mournynge/ and what happeneth vnto vs? how Sion our mother is all woful and sorye, and howe she is cleanne broughte downe and in myserye? seinge we be all nowe in heauines, and make our mone (for we be all sorouwfull.) As for the heauynes that thou takeste, it is but for one Sonne. Demaunde the earthe, and she shall tell thee, that it ys she, whych ought (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many, that grow vpon her.

For from the begynninge all men are borne of her/ and other shall come: and beholde, they walcked al mooste all into destruccion, and manye of them shall be roted out.

Who should thē (by reason) make more mournynge, then she, that hathe loste so greate a Multitude? And not thou, which arte sory but for one. But if thou wouldest saye vnto me, my mourninge is not lyke the mourninge of the earth, for I haue loste the frute of my bodye whiche I bare wyth heauynes: but the earth is according to the manner of the earth, and the present multitude goeth agayne into her, as it is come to passe: Then saye I vnto thee: lyke as thou hast borne with trauell and sorowe, euē so the earth also from the beginning geueth her frute vnto manne, for him that made her. And therfore wyth holde thy sorowe and heauinesse by thy selfe, and loke what happeneth vnto thee, beare it strongly.

For if thou iudgest the marck & ende of God to be ryghteous, and good/ ād receauest his councel in tyme, thou shalte be commended therin. Go thy way then into thy cytie to thy husband.

And she sayde vnto me: that wyll I B not do, I wyl not go into the cytye, but heare wyl I dye. So I commened more wyth her, and sayd: Do not so, but be coūceled, and folow me: for how many falles hath Sion? Be of good comforte because of the sorowe of Ierusalem. For thou sayst that our Sanctuarye is layde waste, oure aulter broken, our temple destroyed, our playing of instrumentes and synging laide downe, ÿ thanckesgeuyng put to sylence, our mirth is banyshed awaye, the lyght of our candelstycke is quenched, the arcke of ÿ couenaunt is taken from vs, all our holy thynges ar defyled, ād the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishonoured: our children ar put to shame, our priestes are brent, our leuites are caried awai into captiuite, oure vyrgins are defyled, and oure wyues rauyshed, our ryghtuous men spoyled, and our chyldren dystroyed, oure yong men are broughte in bondage, and oure strong worthyes ar become weake: and Sion (whych seale is the greatest of al) is lowsed vp from her worship: for she is deliuered īto the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore shake of thy greate heuynes, and put awaie the multytude of sorowes: that the Myghtye maye be mercyful vnto thee/ and that the hyest may geue the rest from thy laboure and trauayle. And it happened, that whē I was talkinge with her/ her face did shyne and glister, so that I was afraide of her/ and mused what it mighte be. And immediatly she cast oute a greate voyce, very fearful, so ÿ the earth shoke at the noise of the woman: and I loked, and behold/ the woman appeared vnto me nomore: but there was a citie buylded, and a place was shewed frō ÿ gro- C unde and foundacion.

Then was I afrayde, and cryed wyth a loude voyce/ and sayde: Where is Vryell the aungell, whyche came to me at the fyrst?

For he hath caused me to come in many consideracyons and hye thoughtes, and myne ende is turned to corrupcion/and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me/ and I laye as one that had bene deed and myne vnderstandyng was altered and he toke me by the right hand, and comforted me and set me vp vpon my fete/and sayd vnto me: what aileth the? and why is thine vnderstandyng vexed? and the vnderstandyng of thy hart, and wherfor art þu sory? And I sayde: Because thou hast forsake me: and I haue done accordynge vnto thy wordes, I went in to the fylde: and there hade I sene thinges that I am not able to expresse. He sayd vnto me: Stand vp and be manly, and I shal geue the exortacyon.

Then sayde I: Speak on to me my Lorde, forsake me not, lest I dye in vayne: for I haue seane that I knowe not, and herd that I do not knowe. Or shal my vnderstanding be disceaued, and mi mynde? But now I besech the, that thou wylt shew thy seruaunt of this wonder. He answered me thē and sayde: heare me and I shal enforme thee, & tel the wherfore thou art afrayed. for the Hyest hath opened manye secrete thinges vnto the.

He hath sene that thy waie is right/ and that thou takest sorowe contynually for thy people/& makest great lamentacyon for Sion: and therfore vnderstande the vysyon which thou sawest a lytle while ago after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mournyng, and thou hast comforted her: Neuertheles now seyst thou the lykenes of the woman nomore. but thou thoughtest ther was a cytie bulded: and lyke as she told the of the fal of her sōne, so is this the answere: The woman whō thou sawest is Sion: and where as she tolde the, that she hath bene thyrtye yeares vnfruetfull and baren, those are the xxx. yeares wherin there was no offeryng made in her.

But after. xxx. yeares Salomō bul-D ded her, and offred, and then bare shee baren a sōne. And where as she told the that she norysshed him with labour, that was the dwellyng of Jerusalem. But where as the sonne died in her chamber, that is the fal of Jerusalem. And thou sawest her lyckenes, howe she mourned for her sonne: and what elles happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And now god seeth, that thou art sory in thy mind and sufferest from thy herte for her, and so hath he shewed the her clerenesse/and the faynes of her bewty.

And therfore I bad the remayne in the felde, wher no house is builded. For I know þ the Hyest wold shew this vnto thee/therfore I commaunded thee to go into the felde, where no foundacion nor buylding is. For in the place where the Hyest wyl shew his cytie, ther shalbe no mans building. And therfore feare not, & let not thyne hert be afraid, but go thy waye in, and se the glorious and faire building, and howe greate it is, & how gret þ thikest it after þ mesure of thyne eyes, & then shalt thou heare as muche as thyne eares maye comprehende. For thou art blessed aboue manye other, and art called wyth the Hyeste, as the fewe.

But to morowe at nyght thou shalt remayne here, and so shall the hyest shewe the visions of hygh thinges, whyche he wil do vnto them, that dwel vpon earth in the last dayes. So I slepte the same nyght lyke as he commaunded me.

¶ In this Chapter, and in the two next ensuyng he entreateth of certeine visions and of their interpretacions therof.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

Then sawe I a dreame: and I beholde, there came vp frō the sea an Aegle, which had xii. wynges and thre heades: And I sawe/and beholde/he spred hys wynges ouer all the earth/and all the wyndes of the ayre blew in them, and so they were put together agayne. And I behelde, and out of hys fethers there grewe other lytle contrary fethers: the heades rested/ the heade in the myddest was greater then the other, yet rested it wyth the resydue.

Moreouer I sawe/that the Aegle flew wt hys wynges, & rayned vpō earth: & ouer all them þ dwelt vpon earth and I sawe that all thynges vnder he-auen were subiecte vnto him, and nomã spake against him, no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also that the Aegle stode vp vpon hys clawes and gaue a sounde wyth his fethers, and a voyce saying after this maner: watch not al to gether slepe euery man in hys owne pla ce and watche for a tyme, but let the hã des be preserued at the last. Neuertheles I sawe, that the voyse went not out of his handes, but from the myddest of his body. And I nombred his contrye fethers, and behold, there were eight of them. And I loked, and beholde vppõ the righte syde there arose one fether, & raigned ouer al the earthe. And it happened that when it raygned, the ende of it came, and the place therof appered no more. So the nexte folowing stod vp, B and rayned, and had a greate tyme: ãd it happened, that when it rayned, the en de of it came also lyke as ye first, so that it appered nomore.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, ãd sayde: Heare thou that hast kept in the earth so long, this I say vnto the, befor thou begynnest to appere nomore The re shal none after the atteyne vnto thy time. Then arose the third, ãd raygned as the other afore, and appered nomo-re also. So wente it wt al the reasydue one after another, so that euery one ray ned and then appered nomore. Then I loked and beholde, in processe of time ye fethers that folowed were set vp vppõ the right syde that they myght rule al so: and some of them ruled, but within a whyle they appered nomore: for some of them were set vp but ruled not. After this I loked, and behold the xii. fethers appered nomore, and the two wynges: and ther was nomore vpon the Aegles body, but two heades that rest, ãd syxe fethers. Then sawe I also, that the six fethers were parted in two & remained vnder the head, that was vpon ye right side, for the four continued i their place.
So I loked / & beholde they that were C vnder the winges, thought to set vp th-selues and to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp but shortly it appeared nomore, and the seconde was sooner a waye then the firste. And I beholde and lo, the two thought also by them sel ues to raygne: and when they so thought, behold there walked one of the heades that were at rest, namely it that was in the myddest, for that was the greater of the two heades.
And then I sawe, that the two heades were fylled with him, and the head was turned with them that were by him, and ate vp the two vnderwinges, that wold haue raygned.
But thys head put the whole earth in feare, and bare rule in it ouer all those that dwelt vpon earth wyth much laboure, and he had the Gouernaunce of the worlde, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After thys I loked, and behol de, the head that was in the myddest, so denly appeared no more, lyke as the wi ges: then came the two heads, which ru led vpon earthe, and ouer those dwelte D therin. And I beholde, and lo, the heade vppon the righte syde, deuoured it that was vpon the lefte syde. And I hearde a voyce which sayde vnto me: loke befo re the, and consydre the thyng that thou seyst. Then I saw / and beholde, as it we re a lyon that roareth / runnynge haste-ly out of the wod, and he sent out a mãs voyce vnto the Aegle / and sayde: Hea-are thou, I wyll talke wyth thee, and ye hyest shall say vnto thee: Is it not thou that hast the victory of the foure beastes, whome I made to rayne vpon earth & in my worlde, and that the end of their tymes myght com / thorowe them.
And the fourth came, and ouerwan all the Beastes that were paste, and had power ouer the worlde, wyth great fearfulnes, and ouer the whole compas se of the earth wyth the most wycked la boure, and so lounge Tyme dwelte he-vpon ye earth wt disceate, & the erth hast thou iudged not wyth trueth. For thou hast troubled the meke / ye hast hurt ye pe ceable & quiet, ye hast loued lyers, ãd destroyed the dwellinges of the ye brought fourth frute, and hast cast downe ye wal les of such as dyd no harme. Therfore is thy wrongeous dealinge & blasphemy com vp vnto ye hyest, & thy pryde vnto ye myghtye. The hyest also loked vpon ye proude times, and beholde, they are ended and theyr abhominacions are fulfylled

And therfore appeare no more thou Aegle/and thy horrible winges,& thy wicked fethers,and thy vngracyous hea-des/and thy synful clawes/and all thy vayne body:that the earth maye be refreshed and come agayne to her self wh an she is delyuered frō thy violence, ād that she maye hope for the iudgmente & mercy of him that made her.

The.xii.Chapter.

A And it happened when yͤ Lion spake these wordes vnto the Aegle, I sawe/ and be-holde, the heade that afore had the vpperhand, appeared nomore:nether dyd the foure wyn-ges appeare anye more,that came to hi & were set vp to raygne:and their kyngdome was smal and ful of vproure: B And I sawe,and beholde,they appered no more, and the whole body of the Aegle was brent,and the earth was in greate feare. Then a waked I oute of the traunce of my mynde, and from greate feare and sayde vnto my sprete: Lo/this hast thou geuen me,in that thou searchest out the waies of the hiest:lo,yet am I wery in mynde and verye weake in my sprete,and lytle strength ys there in me,for the greate feare that I recea-ued this nyght. Therfore wyll I nowe beseche the Hyest/that he wyl comforte me vnto the ende: and I sayde, Lorde Lorde/ yf I haue founde grace befor thy syght,and yf I am iustifyed wyth yͤ before many other,and yf my prayer be come vp before thy face,comfort me thē and shewme thy seruaunt the interpre-tacion and playne difference of this horrible syght,that thou maiste perfectly comforte my soule: For thou haste iudged me worthy ,to shewe me the last of tymes.
And he said vnto me:this is the yn-terpretacion of thys sight. The Aegle B whom thou sawest,com vp from the see is the kingdō which was sene in the vy-sion of thy brother Daniell,but yt was not expoūded vnto hī,for now I declar it vnto the. Behold,yͤ daies com,yͤ ther shal rise vp a kigdō vpon earthe and it shalbe feared aboue al kigdōes yͤ were before it. In yͤ same kingdō shal.xii.Kinges raygne,one after another. For the seconde shal begin to raigne, and shall haue more tyme then the other,and this do the.xii.wynges signifie whyche thou sawest as for the voice yͤ spake & yͤ thou sawest go out from the heades but not from the Bodye,it betokenethe,that after the tyme of that kingdom ther shal aryse greate straungers,& it shal stand in parel of fallig:neuertheles it shal not yet fal,but shalbe set into his beginnig.
And the eyght vnderwynges whiche yͤ sawest hange vnto the wynges of hym, betoken,that in him there shall rayse ey-ght kinges whose time shalbe but smal, and their yeares swyft,and two of thē shal peare. But when the myddest tyme commeth,there shalbe foure kept in the time,when the tyme beginneth to come yͤ it maye be ended,but two shalbe kept vnto the ende.
And where as thou sawest the hea- C des telling,this is the interpretacyon: In hys last shal the Hyest rayse vp thre kyngdomes,and call many agayne in to them,& they shal haue the domynion of the earth,and of those that dwel therī, withe muche laboure aboue all those, that were before them. Therfore are they called the heades of the Aegle: for it is they that shall brynge for the hys wyckednes agayne,and that shall perfourme and fynish hys last. And where as thou sawest that the greate head appeared nomore,it signifyeth,that one of them shall dye vpon hys bedde,and yet wyth payne, for the twoo that remayne shalbe slayne wyth the swerde. For the swerde of the one, shall deuoure the other/ but at the laste shall he fall thorow the swerde hym selfe.
And where as thou sawest the vnderwynges,vpon the head that is on yͤ ryght syde, it signifyethe that it is they, whome the hyest hath kepte vnto theyr ende:thys is a small kyngdom,and ful of trouble. The Lyon whome thou sa-west rising vp oute of the wod,and roa-rynge/and speaking vnto the Aegle,& rebuking hym for his vnrighteousnes/is the wynde,which the hyest hath kept for them and for theyr wickednesse vnto the ende:he shall reproue them,and ren-te them asunder before them.

For he shal set them lyuyng before the iudgement, and shal rebuke them: for ÿ residue of my people shal he delyuer wᵗ trouble, those ÿ be preserued ouer myne endes: ād he shal make them ioyful vntyll the commynge of the daye of iudgement, wherof I haue spoken vnto the from the begynnynge. This is the dreame that thou sawest/and this is the interpretacyon. Thou only hast bene mete to knowe the secretes of the Hyest.

Therfor wryte al these thynges that thou hast sene in a boke, ād hyde them, and teache them the wise in the people, whose hertes thou knowest maye cōprehende and kepe these secretes. But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seauen dayes mo, that it maye be shewed the, what soeuer it pleaseth the Hyest to declare vnto thee/ & with that he went his way.

And when al the people yet craued, ÿ D the seauen dayes were past, & I not co me agayne in to the cytye, they gathered them altogether from the lest vnto the most, & came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offended thee? and what euell haue we done agaynst thee, that ÿ forsakest vs, and sittest here in this place? For of al people thou onlye art left vs, as a grape of the vyne, and as a candel in a darcke place, and as an hauen and shyppe preserue from the tempeste. Haue we not els aduersite ynough, but thou must forsake vs? Were it not better for vs that we had bene brent wᵗ Sion? For we are no better then they that dyed there: and they wepte wᵗ loude voyse: Then answered I them, & sayd: Be of good comforte O Israel, and be not heuy thou house of Iacob. for the Hyest hath you in remembraunce, & ÿ mighty hath not forgottē you in tētaciō. As for me, I haue not forsaken you, nether am I departed from you: but am come into this place to praye, because of ÿ mysery of Israel, ÿ I myght seke mercy for ÿ lowe estate of your Sanctuary. And now go youre wai home euery mā, and after these dayes wyl I come vnto you. So the people went their waye in to ÿ citie, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned styll in the felde seuen dayes, as the Angell bad me: and I ate onely of the floures of the felde/ ād had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

The .xiii. Chapter.

And it happened after the se uen dayes, that I dreamed A a dreame by night. And behold there arose a wind frō the sea, that it moued al the flondes therof. And I loked, and beholde, the man was stronge and increased with the cloudes of heauen: and when he turned his contenaunce to considre, al the thynges trembled that were sene vnder him: and when the voice went out of hys mouth, all they brent that harde hym, lyke as the earth when it feeleth ÿ fyre.

After these I sawe, and behold, ther was gathered together a multitude of men out of nombre from the foure wyndes of the heauen, to fyght agaynst the man ÿ came out from the sea. And I loked/ & beholde, he graued him selfe a greate mountayne, and flew vp vpon it. But I wold haue sene ÿ border or place, wherout the hyll was grauen, and I coude not.

I sawe after these/ that al they which came to fyght agaynst him, were sore afrayede, and yet durste they fight. Neuertheles when he sawe the fea rse-nes and vyolnce of the peple, he nether lyft his vp hand nor held swerd, nor any weapen: But onely (As I sawe) he sente out of his mouth as yt had bene a blast of fyre, and out of his Lyppes the wynde of the flamme: And out of hys tonge he cast out sparkes and stormes, and they were all myxte together: The blaste of fyre, the wynd of the flammes, and the greate storme, and fell wyth a russhe vppon the peple, whych was prepared to fyght, and brent them vp euerychone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothynge sene, but onely dust and smoke. When I saw this I was afrayde.

Afterwerd saw I the same man com downe from the mountayne/ and callig vnto him another peacable people: and there came much people vnto hi: some were glad some wer sory, some of them were bounde, so that they were caried & brought forth.

Then was I sycke thorow greate feare, feare, and I awaked, and sayde: ꝥ haste shewed thy seruaũt al thy wonders frõ the beginning, and hast coũted me wor thy, that thou mightest receaue my prai er: shew me now yet the interpretacyon of this dreame. For thus I consydre in my vnderstanding. Wo vnto theym that shalbe lefte in those dayes: & moch more, wo vnto them that are not left be hynde: for they that were not lefte, were in heuynes.

Now vnderstande I the thynges ꝥ are layde vp in the latter dayes, which shal happen vnto them, ãd to those that are not left behinde. Therfore are they come in to greate parells, and many ne cessities, lyke as these dreames declar er. Yet is it easier, that he which suffer eth hurte, come in these then to passe a waye as a cloude out of the worlde, and now to se the thynges that shall happẽ in the law.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The interpretation of the syght shal I shew thee, and I wyll open vnto thee, ꝥ thynge that thou haste requyred. For thou hast spoken of them that are lefte behynde, and thys is the interpretacyõ. He that taketh awaye the parel in that tyme hath kepte him selfe. They that be fallen in to harme, are such as haue wor kes and fayth vnto the most hiest. Know this therfore, that they which be left behinde, are more blessed, then they that be dead. This is the meanyng of ꝥ vysion. Where as thou sawest a man commyng vp from the depe of the sea, the same is he whom god the hyest hath kept a greate season, which by his owne selfe shal delyuer his creature, ãd he shal ordre them that are left behind. And where as thou sawest, that oute of his mouth there came a blast of wynde, fyre and storme, and how that he left vp nether swerde nor weapon, but that the rushinge in of him destroyed the whole multitude, that came to fyght agaynst
C him: it signifieth, ꝥ the daies come, whã God wyl delyuer them that are vppon earth, and in a traunce of mynd shal he come vpon thẽ ꝥ dwel in the earth. And one shal vndertake to fyght agaynste a nother, one cytie agaynste another, one place agaynste another, one people a gaynst another, and one realme agaynst another. When this commeth to passe, then shal the tokens come, that I shew ed thee before: and then shall my sonne be declared, whom thou sawest clymme vp as a man. And when al the people heare his voyce, euery man shall in theyr owne lande leaue the battayll that they haue one agaynst another, and an innu merable multitude shalbe gathered to gether, as they that be wyllyng to com and to ouercome him by fyghting. But he shal stande vpon the toppe of the mo unte Sion. Neuerthelesse Sion shall come, and shalbe shewed, beyng prepa red and buylded for all men, lyke as ꝥ sawest the hyl geuen forth without any handes. But my sonne shall rebuke the people that are come for their wickednes with the tempest, & for their euel imma ginacions: & their paines, wher wyth they shalbe punished, are lykened vnto ꝥ flã: & wout any labour shal he destroy thẽ, e uẽ by ꝥ law, which cõpared vnto ꝥ fire.

And where as thou sawest that he gathered another peaceable people vn to him: those are the ten trybes which were caryed away presoners out of theyr ow ne lande in the tyme of Oseas the king whome Salmanasar the kynge of as siria, toke presoner, and caryed them o uer the water, and so came they into an other lande.

But they gaue theym thys councell, that they shoulde leaue the multitude of the heathen, and to go forthe into a farther countree, where neuer mankind dwelte: that they myght there kepe their statuters, which they neuer kept in their owne land. And so they entred in at the narowe passages, of the water of Eu- D phrates and God shewed tokens for them and helde styll the floude tyll thei wer passed ouer: for throw that countre there was a greate way, namely of a ye re and a halfe iourney, for the same regi on is called Arsareth. Then dwelt they ther vnto the later tyme: and when they come forth agayne, the hiest shall holde styl the sprynges of the streame agayn ꝥ they may go throw, therfore sawest ꝥ the multitude with peace. And they that be lefte behinde of thy people, are those that be found wtin my border.

Now when he destroyeth the multytud that is gathered together, he shal defend his people that remayne, and then shall he shewe them greate wonders.

Then sayde I: O Lorde Lorde, shew me this: wherfore haue I sene the men comyng vp frō ẏ depe of the sea? & he sayde vnto me: Like as thou canst ne ther seke out nor know these thinges ẏ are in the depe of the sea, euen so mayst ẏ not se my sonne, or those that be wyth him, but in the tyme of the daye. This is the interpretacion of the dreame why che thou sawest, therfore thou only arte here lyghtened: for thou hast forsaken thine owne lawe, and applied thy dyly gence vnto myne, and sought it. Thy lyfe hast ẏ ordred in wysdom, & hast cal led vnderstanding thy mother, and ther fore haue I shewed thee the treasure of the hyest. After thre daies I wyll shew the more, and talke with the at mo re large, yea heuy and wonderous thin ges wil I declare vnto thee.

Then went I forth into the felde, ge uyng prayse & thanckes greatlye vnto god, because of his wonders whyche he did in time because he gouerneth ẏ sāe & such as is in tyme, and there I sat thre dayes.

¶ God apereth vnto Esdras in the bush, & sheweth him what he shal do.
